UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1942

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT

Important Notice

At the request of the Toronto Transportation Commission, it has been decided that University and College classes will begin at 8.30 a.m., and continue until 4.30 p.m., instead of beginning at 9.00 a.m., and continuing until 5.00 p.m.

Thus, classes which now begin on the hour will, under this new arrangement, begin on the half-hour preceding; and classes which begin ten minutes after the hour will begin at twenty minutes to the hour.

This change will come into effect on Wednesday, September 23rd. The President's Address in Convocation Hall will take place at 3.45 p.m. on that day, instead of 4.15 p.m., as announced.

The hours for military training and physical training will be adjusted in accordance with this change.

C.O.T.C.

For complete and detailed information about military training at the University of Toronto, see pages 2 and 3.

Military Training

REGULATIONS OF THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO RESPECTING MILITARY TRAINING FOR THE SESSION 1942-43

1. 2. The undermentioned categories of students will not be required to take military training in the U. of T. Contingent C.O.T.C.:
   (a) Students who are members of active or reserve units of the Canadian Navy, Army, or Air Force.
   (b) Students who are certified by the University Health Service to be medically unfit for military training.
   (c) Conscientious objectors.
   (d) Enemy aliens.

3. (a) All students who are required to take military training in the U. of T. Contingent C.O.T.C. will register not later than 12 noon on Saturday, September 26th, 1942, with the First or Second Battalions, according to directions to be published in The Varsity.
(b) Students who desire to take Air Force training will register with the University Air Training Corps also according to directions to be published in The Varsity.

A Message from the President

We meet again at a time when this greatest of world wars has entered upon its fourth year. We are at last beginning to realize the strength of our enemies, the ruthlessness and cruelty of their methods, and the stern fatefulness of the conflict. It is a "life and death" struggle. It is also a struggle between life and death, between all that makes for a worthwhile life and all that tends to individual and national death. As University students you remember that universities live and flourish only in the lands of freedom. All you are and have and hope for is at stake in this critical hour. "Awake, arise, or be for ever fallen!"

In such a time as this we begin a new year of study and discipline. I bid you welcome to these halls and laboratories. No one now dares to be slack and frivolous. Work your hardest and waste not time, energy or money. The reason why you are allowed to attend the university is that you may become better trained to serve your country and the cause of human freedom and human decency. Your instructors are your friends and helpers; they are glad to give you advice and guidance. Do not hesitate to consult them. The University is giving you its best and is not lowering its standards of instruction. Give it your best.

You will need recreation; but I earnestly hope that your social activities may be simple, inexpensive, and informal. Neither public opinion nor your own sense of fitness will approve of extravagance or of too many social interruptions to your serious academic work and to your necessary war service duties.

The details of military training are fully set forth in this issue. In addition to the Officers' Training Corps there is being established a University Air Training Corps. Courses are also being set up for the women students of the University. Never were universities made more responsible for our war effort than they are to-day; and never, I trust, will there be a more prompt and wholehearted answer than you will give. I want every member of this University not only to do his academic work with all his might and mind, but also to do some extra work related to the war effort and preferably to national service. Your active military service is postponed only on condition that military training is taken here, and with the purpose that you may be the better fitted for every duty which your country lays upon you. The University is not a haven of refuge for those who seek to avoid their solemn obligations, but a place where men and women alike are prepared for the better discharge of these obligations.

The exigencies of the war may still furtber modify our practice and our programme. We may have to begin our classes earlier in the day; we may have to readjust our accommodation; we may have to curtail our use of electric power. But any and every sacrifice of comfort or convenience is a small price to pay for the continuance of our faith and freedom.

We have not yet won the victory; but we have escaped defeat. As some one has said, "after three years we have little to celebrate and a long way to go." But we have some things to give us heart of hope. We are stronger in numbers and in purpose. We know we must win, or go under. God helping us, we shall go on and not go under.

We Canadians now realize the cost of victory. The attack upon Dieppe has made that Channel Port for ever famous in our annals. Men whom we knew in this University have given to the cause all that men can give—life itself. Their memories challenge and inspire us. No one to-day looks at life as he looked at it three years ago. Make it better, stronger, worthier. Make the most of your opportunities "to acquire the disciplined poise which is the hall-mark of genuine education." God bless and keep you!

My best wishes for the coming year.

H. J. CODY,
President.

University Health Service

The Health Service for men and the Health Service for women have been amalgamated into the University Health Service with a full time Director in charge. The Women's division is under the control of a full time Assistant Director. The facilities of the Health Service have been extended to all students registered in the University.

The Health Service provides for:

1. An annual physical examination of all undergraduate students in the University. This includes a routine urinalysis and tuberculosis test.

2. An X-ray film of the chest of all first year students and of such students in other years as may be indicated.

3. Consultation facilities from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 43 St. George Street for men and at 44 Hoskin Avenue for women.

4. Visiting service for students taken ill in residence or lodgings who have no private physician. A nominal charge is made for this service.

5. First aid attendants are on daily duty at 43 St. George Street and from 4 to 6 p.m. at Hart House for men. A nurse is in attendance at 44 Hoskin Avenue for women.

6. Infirmary service for students in residence or lodgings with minor illnesses requiring bed care for a few days to a week. It is not intended for serious illness requiring hospitalization for longer periods nor for students living at home where bed care is readily available. This service will be available as soon as the infirmary quarters are ready. When ready due notice with full particulars will be published in The Varsity.

7. It has also been found possible to provide for a measure of financial assistance to students injured while engaged in athletic activities. This assistance is provided only by authority of the Director.

Physical Examination Instructions

MEN

Early appointments for physical examination should be made by the following:

1. Students previously examined by the Health Service and placed in a military category lower than C_2 or who, not having been examined, believe that their category is such as to exempt them from military service.

2. Students in the age group for military service who have not previously been members of either battalion, C.O.T.C.

3. Students in the first and second years for whom physical training is compulsory.

4. Students in any year who desire to engage in athletic activities.

All other students are to be examined but are requested to defer their appointments until the second week in October. Such students may be attested in the C.O.T.C. on the basis of their previous categorization pending examination by the Health Service.

WOMEN

Early appointments for physical examination should be made by the following:

1. All first year students for whom physical training is compulsory.

2. Students in any year who desire to engage in athletic activities.

Students in the second, third and fourth years are requested to defer their appointments until further notice.

University of Toronto Contingent C.O.T.C.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The role of the C.O.T.C. for the academic year 1942-43 differs considerably from that of previous years and is three fold:

(a) To select potential officer material (P.O.M.) to proceed to Officers Training Centres (O.T.C's) in order to qualify as officers in the Active Army. Such members must be not less than 19½ years of age when recommended.

(b) To provide undergraduates with military training in order to comply with regulations of the National Resources Mobilization Act, and of the Board of Governors of the University.

(c) To conduct the training of those in (a) above so they will be able to take their places at O.T.C.'s with trained N.C.O.'s of the Active Force without handicap.

It is pointed out that since the change in the role of the units of the Reserve Army there are now to be two sources of supply for potential officers for the Active Army:

(a) Those recommended from the Active Army in the United Kingdom and Canada, and

(b) Those recommended from Contingents of the C.O.T.C.

To fulfil the above role the University of Toronto Contingent of the C.O.T.C. is divided into two battalions: the 1st Battalion (formerly the Officers Training Battalion) and the 2nd Battalion (formerly the Training Centre Battalion).

The 1st Battalion

The 1st Bn. will consist of present members, and students (other than medical and dental students) who:

(a) Have completed one year's training in the Training Centre Battalion (with or without Camp), or

(b) Have completed one year's training with a reserve unit including camp and are continuing in the same arm of the service.

Students when registering for training in the 1st Bn. will select one of the following arms of the service, in which they wish to train: Artillery, Engineers, Signals, Infantry Rifle, Machine Gun, Army Service Corps, and Ordnance Mechanical Engineers.

Those wishing to join the Armoured Corps when they enter the Active Army should register in the Machine Gun Wing of the C.O.T.C.

In so far as possible students will be trained in the arm selected but transfers to other arms may be made if candidates are found unsuited for the arm selected or as exigencies of the service require.

The 2nd Battalion

The 2nd Bn. will consist of:

(a) Students who have not completed one year's training in the Training Centre Battalion or one year's training (including camp) in a Reserve Unit.

(b) All medical students except those in the 4th, 5th and 6th years.

(c) All dental students except those enlisted in the C.D.C.

(d) Students 18 years of age, i.e. those born between Oct. 1st 1923 and Oct. 31st 1924, who apply to take the training voluntarily and are accepted by the Officer Commanding.

Instruction will be conducted on a syllabus which is common to all arms. Medical and dental students who have completed one year's training will follow a syllabus of more advanced training.

Attendance at Parades

All members will attend all parades of their companies. Leave may be granted for medical or emergency reasons but leave so granted will not count toward the training required. In other words time so lost must be made up.

Medical Examination

The physical examination of the Medical Health Service of the University will also establish the Medical Category for the C.O.T.C. since examiners are officers of the R.C.A.M.C. In this way an additional medical examination is avoided.

Students are referred to instructons elsewhere in The Varsity with regard to medical examination. The medical category established last year will be adhered to until there has been time for re-examination. Any student who believes he should not take military training on medical grounds should arrange for an appointment for examination without delay.

Physical Training

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on physical fitness. A "hardening" is essential for the requirements of the Army today. Your attention is directed to the requirements of the Athletic Directorate elsewhere in The Varsity. But whether you are required to take P.T. or not, you are urged to take full advantage of the Athletic facilities of Hart House—one of the finest plants for Athletics on the Continent.

Training in the C.O.T.C. will no longer be accepted by the Athletic Department as complete credit for compulsory P.T. during the first and second years. It is however, expected that the required number of hours will be less for members of the C.O.T.C.

President's Opening Address

The opening address by President Cody to the students of all faculties will be given in Convocation Hall on Wednesday, September 23rd, at 3.45 p.m.

They will not have to wait for vacancies on quotas as has been the case in the past, but in the spring and summer will be sent direct to O.T.C.'s in so far as accommodation will permit and the remainder will be taken on strength of the Active Army as cadets and proceed to O.T.C.'s as accommodation is available.

REGISTRATION

Present members and new members of the 1st Bn. will register at 119 St. George Street, between 9.00 a.m. and 5.00 p.m. 21st to 25th of September, and 9.00 a.m. to 12.00 noon 26th of September, by which time all registration must be complete.

Before you answer "yes" to the question "Do you wish to be considered as Potential Officer Material—Active Army" be frank with yourself. Do you possess the qualities of leadership, energy, tact, appearance, and ability to accept responsibility and inspire confidence which are essential to the leaders of men in battle today?

SELECTING AN ARM

The following information is given to assist members in selecting the most suitable arm of the service:

Artillery

The Artillery arm includes Field, Anti-Tank, Anti-Aircraft, Heavy Artillery, and Artillery survey. Instruction in this Unit while applied to field artillery is fundamental to all branches.

Applicants should be interested in mechanical equipment and should like working on simple surveying problems. It is preferable that applicants be mathematically inclined and have a knowledge of elementary trigonometry and the use of logarithms.

Engineers

This arm is open to undergraduates in Applied Science and Forestry. A limited number of Mechanical and Electrical Engineers will be accepted for engineer training but generally Mechanical Engineers are recommended to register in Ordnance (O.M.E.) and Electrical Engineers in Signals.

The Engineers are responsible for the building and demolition

Air Force Training

It is anticipated that training in Air Force subjects will be available to undergraduates who are interested in joining the R.C.A.F. Details of the scheme for this year are not available but will be announced in The Varsity at the earliest possible date.

In the meantime all students interested in Air Force Training should report at 119 St. George St. or the 2nd Bn. Orderly Room in Hart House and sign the rolls which are being prepared in connection with Air Force Training.

At the same time they should register with one of the two battalions of the C.O.T.C. and commence training. This training can later be discontinued by those accepted for Air Force Training.

Members of the Air Force Wing during 1941-2 who are returning to the University will register at 119 St. George St. and await further instructions.

Two courses of training will be provided for students enrolled in the 2nd Battalion, U. of T. C.O.T.C., during the session 1942-43.

(1) An advanced course for medical and dental students who were enrolled in the Training Centre Bn. during the last academic session 1941-42, and who completed the prescribed 30-days training either at camp or by official leave of absence in order to work in essential war industry or to continue their academic courses.

(2) A basic training course for students who were not enrolled in the Training Centre Bn. last session or who did not complete the prescribed 30-day training.

REGISTRATION

Students taking training with this Battalion must register at the Orderly Room in Hart House, between the hours of 9.00 a.m, and 5.00 p.m. from 21st to 25th September. All registrations must be completed not later than 12.00 noon, Saturday, 26th September.

ORGANIZATION PARADE

The organization parade of the 2nd Battalion will be held on Saturday, 3rd October, 1942, at 2.00 p.m., on the Front Campus of the University. All those required to take military training as set forth in the regulations of the Board of Governors, and all those who have enrolled in the 2nd Battalion will attend this parade. This does not include students who have enrolled in the 1st Battalion.

UNIFORMS AND EQUIPMENT

On attestation, members of this Battalion will be given a form which will later be used as authority to draw equipment at 119 St. George St., but they will await instructions to be issued in Battalion Orders before attempting to do so.

ORDERLY ROOM

The Orderly Room of the 2nd Battalion is located in Hart House, where complete information may be obtained.

There will be no occasion for members of the 2nd Battalion to use the Headquarters of the 1st Battalion, 119 St. George St.

Bandsmen Attention

The University of Toronto Contingent C.O.T.C. Brass Band and Pipe Band will be organized again for the coming year. All previous members of the Brass Band and Pipe Band who wish to continue with either Band, and any male undergraduate, including freshmen, who are interested in playing in either the Brass or the Pipe Band will leave their name and address on the list provided in the Second Battalion Orderly Room, Hart House.

Organization of both Bands will begin immediately. There is room for more players in the Pipe Band and the Brass Band, and thorough instruction in the playing of the Pipes will be given to new members. Pipes will be provided. Members of the Brass Band must be able to play some Band instrument.

Registration for both Bands starts today at the Second Battalion Orderly Room, Hart House.

of Bridges, Buildings and structures, Roads, Aerodromes, and Tunnels; and the building, equipping and operation of Railways (Standard and Light), Workshops and Water and Electrical supply systems.

The ability to handle large groups of men is essential.

The experience gained is invaluable in general engineering practice in civil life.

Signals

The "Signal Corps" provides all communications, other than postal, for the Army down to and including the headquarters of infantry battalions, armoured regiments, artillery batteries, etc. The methods used are telephone and telegraph, wireless and radio, and message carrying agencies. The actual equipment varies from simple to highly complex, and includes ultra-short wave, radio location, frequency modulation, facsimile, teletype, carrier and varioplex systems.

Appointments are available in (a) Field Units and in (b) Instruction (c) Research and Design and (d) Coastal Defence Establishments. Candidates for Field Units must be Category A and under 30 years of age; for other duties candidates may be as low as Category C and up to 45 years of age. As far as is practicable at the time, candidates may select the branch of work preferred.

The work of a young officer in a Field Unit is essentially tactical, not technical. He is in complete charge of about 50 men who provide the communications for an infantry brigade or similar formation. He is the Brigadier's adviser on Signals, and must be able to accept responsibility, be of good appearance, energetic, tactful and have fair mechanical ability.

Senior Matriculation standing in Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry and Physics is necessary. He does not need to be a Science or Engineering student although in the past students in Mathematics and Physics, Natural, Pure or Applied Science have constituted most of the candidates.

Canadian Armoured Corps

This Corps deals with Armoured fighting vehicles and tanks. A mechanical aptitude and physical stamina are essential. Those intending to join the C.A.C. should register in the Machine Gun Wing of the C.O.T.C.

Infantry Rifle

Infantry is still the essential arm to occupy and hold ground. Qualities of leadership, good physical condition and stamina are required. Open to students in all faculties except medicine and dentistry.

Infantry M.G.

The Machine Gun Wing provides instruction in the mechanism, fire control, and practical handling of the Vickers Machine Gun. The Training, though special to arm, for Corps Machine Gun troops, is basic for any branch of the Armoured Division involving medium machine guns.

Army Service Corps

This arm deals with mechanical transport and army supply. Applicants should have an aptitude for driving and maintenance of mechanical vehicles.

Ordnance Mechanical Engineers

This Branch of the Ordnance Service is responsible for the inspection, maintenance, recovery and repair of all artillery equipment, armoured fighting vehicles, motor transport vehicles (except A.S.C.), instruments, and radio and other technical equipment of the Army.

This arm is restricted to Mechanical and Electrical Engineering students, preferably in the 3rd and 4th years.

Physical Training

By order of the Board of Governors each man proceeding to a Bachelor's degree must take Physical Training during the first and second years of his attendance at the University.

For men taking military training the minimum requirement at these Physical Training classes is 28 periods; for other male students the minimum requirement is attendance at 40 periods.

Credit for Intramural sports will be granted only for such activities as may be specified by the Athletic Directorate.

Before October 15th each student required to take Physical Training must apply for a medical examination by the University Health Service at 43 St. George Street, and subsequently register for Physical Training at the office of the Athletic Association in Hart House.

Students of all years who wish to take part in any form of athletics or physical exercise must first undergo a medical examination by the Health Service.

SWIM TEST

All Freshmen on entering the University must take the swim test, and if unable to swim satisfactorily must enrol in a learn-to-swim class. These classes must be attended twice weekly during the fall term.

Report to the Swimming Pool, Hart House, and enrol immediately.

Failure to observe this regulation will prevent the student from securing standing in Physical Training.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

(Approximately 60 hours for the academic year)

The growing conviction on the part of women undergraduates that they should be playing their part in the national emergency in line with the service that is now being required of all women by the Government has led to the introduction of this series of courses in Training for National Service. This programme is designed to make possible a measure of national service without interfering with the completion of the student's academic course and so impairing her future value to the country as a fully trained university woman.

There is no requirement for students in professional courses nor for students in the first year.

Students will register with their respective Deans of Women on September 23, 24 or 25 on official forms to be provided.

Students will indicate four courses in order of preference and will be allocated at the discretion of the committee in charge.

Instruction will for the most part occur on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 4-6 p.m., when academic lectures and laboratories give place to military training for men. Practical work will be arranged in accordance with individual timetables.

ORGANIZATION

The Canadian Red Cross Corps is a recognized part of the Canadian Red Cross Society and is a voluntary national organization, the purpose of which is to provide in Canada a trained and disciplined body of Red Cross workers, wearing an identifying uniform, who will be available for Red Cross and other forms of national service in time of need both in war and peace.

The Red Cross Corps operates through five sections: Transport; Nursing; Auxiliary; Office Administration; Food Administration; and University Training. A Detachment of the latter section has been established at the University of Toronto since October, 1940.

MEMBERSHIP

Members of a University Detachment are not full members of the Corps, in that their time available for service and training is relatively limited. Three extra-curricular hours a week during term, amounting to approximately 60 hrs., is the time prescribed at the University of Toronto. Each student recruit must promise loyalty and obedience to the Corps and take an oath of allegiance to the King. She must also be passed by the University Medical Adviser. First year students will only be admitted under special circumstances.

TRAINING COURSES

Members of a University Training Detachment are required to take the basic courses common to all sections of the Corps, viz. Red Cross History and Organization, First Aid, Civilian Defence (A.R.P.), and a minimum of military drill. Advanced training required for later admission to other Corps Sections or other Services is provided where local conditions permit.

UNIVERSITY REQUIREMENT

Membership in the Canadian Red Cross Corps fulfils all requirements of the University of Toronto National Service Training programme. Any course offered in the latter programme may be elected by a Corps member who has already completed one of First Aid or A.R.P. and her application for enrolment will be given the same consideration as any other student. Arrangements will be made for exemption from other Corps training where any clash is involved.

ENROLMENT

Old members and new applicants will register with the Commandant in the Students' Administrative Council Office, Hart House, at any time from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, September 21, 22 and 23. Appointments for medical examination should be made immediately with the Medical Adviser.

UNIFORM

Members must provide their own uniforms except that in the University of Toronto the cost of accessories is borne by the Women's Athletic Association as is the cost of maintenance of the Detachment. The charge for new, light-weight uniforms is $5.00. In most cases arrangements may be made to purchase uniforms from graduate members at a reduced figure.

'WORK FOR THOSE WHO HAVE FALLEN'--CODY

Students' Military Status Virtually Unchanged

U. of T. Registrar Says No New Orders Received Regarding Student Call-Up

Students Who Failed Last May Permitted to Re-Register if University Regulations Allow; No Specific Rules Laid Down Regarding Term Tests, A. B. Fennell Reveals to Varsity Reporter

FLAGRANTLY IDLE STUDENTS REPORTED TO BOARD

Status of university men in relation to Canada's compulsory military service system is virtually unchanged from last year, The Varsity learned this week.

Reports circulated from Ottawa through usually reliable press channels early this month said students failing to pass academic examinations and tests might be required immediated by the compulsory recruiting branch of the national war services department to leave university for military training camps.

Commenting on these reports, A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University of Toronto, said Tuesday that he had received no information regarding students who failed at the last annual examination other than has appeared in the public press and that any of these students desiring to repeat the year were being dealt with in accordance with the regulations of the University and are, in most cases, being readmitted.

"Whenever a student receives a call to undergo compulsory military training, and desires deferment of such training," Mr. Fennell said, "he applies to the registrar for a certificate in support of his application for deferment. This certificate gives complete information regarding his academic status and his military training. If he should have failed at the previous annual examination, a statement to this effect appears on the certificate."

Mr. Fennell explained that, although the University had laid down no specific rules in regard to standings in term tests, it would be impossible for students completely to ignore their studies during the pre-examination months of the school year.

"If a student should be reported by his college or faculty as having flagrantly neglected his academic work, the national war services board concerned would be notified immediately," he said.

New Fee Plan Proved by Trial

A new fee-payment plan designed by C. E. Higginbottom, Bursar of the University went into effect this year. Recommended by Mr. Higginbottom as saving time and energy for both students and the staff of Simcoe Hall the plan provides for payment of all fees before registration.

An essential element of the new plan is the composite fee system adopted last year whereby all incidental fees are paid as one sum. Formerly Hart House, library, medical and other fees were paid separately and necessitated a bookkeeping program which was not completed until the end of November. Under the new plan it is expected that ledgers will be complete in a matter of a few days.

A teller staff numbering eight as compared with two employed last year took care of the queues of fee-paying students in a matter of minutes this year as compared with the half-day waits often experienced by late-comers in former years. Work was further lightened this year by a policy of encouraging students to remit fee checks and registration forms by mail. Penalties for late payment have been avoided completely and the tendency to switch from one course to another at the beginning of the year is expected to be reduced this year by the necessity of paying all charges connected with a course before registering in it.

Brown Defends Arts Course In Wartime

Victoria Chancellor Tells First Year Students Education Is Citizenship Training in War or Peace

500 GRADS IN FORCES

The test of the worth of an education in these times is whether or not it fits you to assume the responsibility of a citizen, Chancellor W. T. Brown told first year students of Victoria College at the Convocation in Arts of the college held yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Brown granted that if education is thought of as a veneer or a luxury, it has no place in wartime. "But that is not the conception which the founders of this institution had. They thought that education should train a man for citizenship in war or peace."

"You come to college in difficult times, it is not easy to study in this atmosphere—but it is a great discipline," Dr. Brown continued. "If you can do it you will get the training of a citizen and when you go out, whether in war or in peace, you will pick up your duty and do it as a man."

While admitting that engineers, doctors and technicians are necessary to our civilization, Dr. Brown pointed out that this nation to-day needs Arts men in war as much as scientifically trained men, as a leader must be one who has a sense of responsibility, one who can be trusted in difficult times, and that one should get that training in an Arts education.

Dr. Brown paid tribute to the 500 graduates and students of Victoria College who have enlisted in the armed forces and revealed that of this number, eight have died and three are missing.

The speaker pointed out that this year marks the 50th anniversary of the removal of Victoria to Toronto from Cobourg and the 101st anniversary of its establishment as an Arts institution.

At the conclusion of the Chancellor's address presentation of the various awards given by the college took place as well as the presentation of the men's and women's senior and athletic sticks.

Staff Lack, Expense Reduction Limit Hart House Improvements

The policy of replacements and improvements in Hart House has been restricted even more this past summer than in previous war years, W. R. Cowan, Acting Comptroller of the house, said yesterday.

"Due to a combination of the lack of overhauling staff and reduction of expense, the repairs this year were much more limited than in previous years", Mr. Cowan said.

The major improvement in Hart House is the new decoration and lighting in the billiard room. The House Committee spent a good part of last winter trying to arrange more suitable lighting. The chief difficulty was to avoid shadows under the cushions. After much sampling of fixtures, the distribution of light under the present system was found the best available. In addition, painting, and new burnt-orange drapes have transformed the dim, smoke-laden depths of the 'pool room', to a new modern daylight, smoke-laden, billiard room.

The second important improvement was the job of making prominent the new lights in the library. Formerly, the new lights were placed on top of the book-cases. The work of putting the lights actually in the book-cases involved the task of ripping up the floor to put the cables in place. At the same time, the wiring was completed for new lights for the reading room which will shine, when the war is over.

Maintenance was not as extensive this year. Ordinarily, the music room would have been painted, as well as the squash courts. But all the floors have been redone, and a new coat of paint has added glamour to the Tuck Shop.

President Cody Believes Peace Without Defeat Now Germany's Only Aim

University Called Place Where Individuals Become Fitted for National Service as President Welcomes Students to Varsity's Fourth Wartime Session; 4,300 Recent Graduates on Active Service, 183 Staff Members on Wartime Leave

ASKS AUSTERITY IN SOCIAL PROGRAM

The increasing proximity of the battlefield to the university was stressed by President Cody yesterday afternoon in an address of welcome in which he dedicated the University and its students to the war effort.

"War has come to us," the President told assembled students of all faculties in Convocation Hall. "In the lists of casualties . . . we read the names of men who were here among us as fellow-students. These are the messengers whereby the challenge comes to us clothed vividly in the flesh. Work in the memory of these men."

President Cody expressed his belief that the German war effort is sustained today by hope for a peace without defeat.

"I fancy the Germans no longer hope for an outright victory. . . . Their only hope is that the democratic countries cannot play the struggle through to the final act," he said. He went on to warn that although the end may come sooner than we expect, the soonness of its coming depends on our willingness to carry on with full vigor for an indefinite time to come.

Tradition of Sacrifice

After a brief welcome in which he emphasized the long traditions of the University for the benefit of the first year classes, Dr. Cody stressed the spirit of sacrifice which is exemplified by the University war memorial. Quoting the words of Pericles for the fallen men of Athens which are cut in the memorial cloister he reminded his audience that it has fallen on them to defend our heritage of freedom.

Explaining that the University, following the policy advised by the government since the beginning of the war, has not thought it necessary to accelerate the arts courses as yet, the President passed on to the subject of military training.

He dealt briefly with the subject which he found well covered in The Varsity's special supplement, adding only that a special committee would be set up to deal with the question of compulsory training for women.

Students' Obligations

Dr. Cody mentioned the part to be played by university men and women in the difficult days of reconstruction which would follow the war, and stressed the necessity, meanwhile, of dedicating themselves whole-heartedly to the war effort. He reminded his listeners that they were in university only by a government concession, not by right, and had solemn obligations. "Let none be subject in days to come to the reproach, I was free, I was of age and I scamped my duty," he said.

"This is a place where you become better fitted to serve your country in a grave crisis of state, even to the extent of laying down your lives," he continued. Then, statistically illustrating the extent of University participation in the war effort he revealed that 4,300 recent undergraduates were now on active service. Of the staff approximately 183 were on leave of absence for the duration of the war, and 1100 former members of the C.O.T.C. now held commissions in the forces.

War Consciousness

Stressing his advisory capacity the President warned against the criticism university students, in their privileged position, might experience from outside sources. In order to avoid criticism from outside sources and misconstruction of their actions he advised students to pursue a policy of greater austerity in all they did.

"I hope that all your courses and the news you read every day and the general seriousness of the times will make you war conscious," he said. Although he recognized that this was difficult in Canada he stated that a consciousness of the war for the future of humanity now in grim progress was necessary for the discharge of a student's duty to the sacrifices made by his state, his parents and himself.

In opening his discussion of material measures adopted for the greater efficiency of the war effort he sympathized with students who would now have to rise a half-hour earlier than usual, and pointed out that the necessity of saving electric light made it advisable to make the change in time requested by the Toronto Transportation Session a half hour earlier instead of a half hour later than previously.

Social Simplicity

Approaching what he termed "a delicate subject" he suggested that social gatherings which are necessary and would not be denied undergraduates, should be as simple, inexpensive, restorative and informal as possible.

Stressing informality, he also recommended that social functions be held on University property in order to avoid criticism from people with little understanding of the University's function and a disproportionate view of its activities.

The President also asked that the starting times of all functions be advanced so that they might close earlier. By way of illustration he drew laughter from his audience with the story of an undergraduate who, early one evening, found himself all dressed up, but with no place to go for a few hours and sat down to await the fashionable time for the affair, fell asleep and missed out on most of his evening.

He revealed that some activities, including those of Hart House Theatre, might have to be curtailed this year.

Universities for Individual

Comparing education in the free countries with that in Axis dominated lands he described universities as subject to two schools of thought. The first works for the benefit of the person taught. The second is concerned only with the benefit of the state and the mass production of yes-men leading to the ultimate deterioration of brainpower. "Keep your vigor and enthusiasm", he exhorted students.

"And keep your faith," he continued, "If we have nothing to fall back on except materialism we are in a sorry case." He went on to praise the work of the Student Christian Movement and the Varsity Christian Fellowship in uniting the student body spiritually.

The Fourth Year, . . .

Dormant since last March, The Varsity today begins another season of service to its readers. Since the curtain rang down on publication six months ago, the world has entered the fourth year of the greatest and most shocking war in all history. We have witnessed events which could not have been foreseen then; and before this year is out we will hear news of events equally startling. We live in the most tumultuous of all epochs—the structure of our world is at white heat in the crucible of change.

Since last The Varsity appeared, we have been told of the tremendous drive of the German war-machine into the vital oil-fields of southern Russia; magnificently courageous resistance of the Red Army fighting in bitter and unsparing defence of its home-land; astounding resurgence of Chiang Kai-Shek's forces, aided by American Flying Tigers riding the Chinese sky, turning the Japanese advance into China into a retreat; British and Canadian bombing raids on the industrial centres of the Reich; American naval successes in the Pacific; hard-fought Japanese gains in New Guinea; fighting in the ice-bound Aleutians; bloody battle on the burning sands of Egypt; grim aud deadly submarine warfare in the sea-lanes of the Atlantic; simmering unrest in India flaring into bloodshed; famine and terror in tortured Europe.

We have thrilled to the raw courage of the Russian defence of Stalingrad—we have been down-hearted at the sudden fall of Tobruk, and uplifted shortly after by the spectacle of the embattled Eighth Army of Englishmen and Anzacs clinging doggedly to the Suez lifeline and blunting the thrusts of Rommel's tank columns—we have been exalted by the grandeur of Canadian gallantry at Dieppe, and have realized with the mounting casualty lists of the engagement that we are fighting for our lives—to the finish.

The war has been costly and will be more costly. Already Canada has sacrificed many of her finest young men. And the University of Toronto has given generously of the blood of her sons in the great mass-sacrifice. In particular, today, The Varsity remembers two of its own former staff members who have passed through the gates of Valhalla. They are Paul McGillicuddy and Les MacKay. With brilliant futures assured, they chose to die in defence of their country's ideals. They have joined another former Varsity staff member of recent years, Doug Elliott, in a land reserved for gallant gentlemen. They are not dead.

. . . the First Year? . . .

Meanwhile, with the Second Great War entering its fourth momentous year, and changes of far-reaching consequence taking place on far-flung battle-fields overnight, the situation to which students are returning on this campus—except for the advancement of lecture hours and the concomitant inconvience involved—is largely the same as that which they left last May.

Changes rumoured during the past month, involving the transfer from campus to compulsory training camp of any able-bodied male students within the military age group who fail in their academic examinations have been given undue stress by the press at large. As in the past, when a student is called up for compulsory military service, and wishes deferment of the call until he completes his course, he will apply to his divisional registrar for such deferment, and accompany his application with a statement from the University registrar outlining his academic status.

It is reasonable to suppose that if the statement shows him to be a good student his request will be granted; if it shows him to be a poor student—his request will be denied. And it must be borne in mind that all decisions respecting deferments are made by government authorities, not by university heads. In other words, as the Registrar of the University said recently, he has received no instructions to "pluck" any student from his course and ship him off to the army. Such transfers are entirely at the discretion of the war service officials concerned.

On the other hand, the University is making it a concern to ensure that no student uses his relatively sheltered state to shirk his duties as a Canadian. The government has granted permission for the time being for students to continue their work here. But they must honestly work. The Registrar is quoted elsewhere in this issue as saying "If a student should be reported by his college or faculty as having flagrantly neglected his academic work, the National War Service Board concerned would be notified immediately." Action taken in the case of such students would then presumably be up to the war service board, and the onus of prevention of such neglect of work could not be said to fall upon the University.

Mr. Fennell's statement of this matter is a clear-cut rebuttal of insinuations made by certain university-baiters that this campus is a hiding-place for duty-dodgers. The President's remarks yesterday substantiated the statement.

But since the vast majority of students—both men and women—were already completely serious about their studies, the provisions outlined above probably will prove necessary in only a limited number of cases. A Canadian Press dispatch datelined from Ottawa Sept. 1 said in part: "If the federal government has anything to say about it, and apparently it will, the 1942-43 student crop in Canadian universities and colleges will be a serious-minded lot." We suggest that this will not be the first year in which "the student crop" is "a serious-minded lot."

. . . and the Sixty-Second Year

In common with other Canadians, university students may be said to have three major obligations—to join in fighting a war to win a just peace; to preserve, during the fight, the principles for which we are fighting; to prepare, through clear thought and controlled sentiment, for a reconstructed world in which honour and decency are not accounted luxuries.

Under the pressure of day-to-day life on this campus we must lose sight of none of these long-range objectives. And it will be the object of The Varsity to remind the University of them constantly and to promote their furtherance wherever possible. Under the first heading we will publicize undertakings on the part of this University and other Canadian Universities which are directly connected with the war, and when we feel it necessary we shall respectfully but unhesitantly offer constructive criticism of them. With the second objective in view, we shall support any move which we believe to conform to the broad outline of just democratic principle, and oppose any steps which we consider to tend toward unnecessary curtailment of individual right or public prerogative. Thirdly we shall endeavour to assist our readers in the formation of views which will enable them to judge as clearly as possible the questions which must be answered in the post-war settlement.

Such, in brief, are the main planks of our editorial platform for the coming year. But the editorial page of a newspaper should not be its most important. The first task of a daily journal is the recording of news, as accurately and rapidly as is humanly and mechanically possible. It is by our success in presenting in print the University's daily life, in giving fair coverage to all University organizations, in faithfully chronicling what students are saying and doing and thinking, that we will be judged. As in the past, The Varsity will strive for complete and unbiased reporting of University activities.

An informed and honest press is generally considered to be an asset to the democratic nations at war. It may blunder, it may be untactful, it may upon occasion become the unwitting instrument of the unscrupulous; but the value of its role of service outweighs these defects. And we believe that as The Varsity goes forth into its sixty-second year of vigorous life it also is of value, in the small-scale world of this University. Youthful and comparatively inexperienced, we are the first to admit we are humanly liable to error; but we honestly believe ourselves to be, nevertheless, a potent force for good.

The Undergraduate Newspaper will continue to serve.

Student Billed In Fees Riot

One student was billed and several hundred were indignant in a stormy riot which marred the opening of the 1942 Fall session at the University of Toronto yesterday. The name of the unfortunate student is Twilkington X. Thropnadel Jr., son of the noted explorer and nutrition expert.

The trouble started when young Thropnadel leaped to the platform of Convocation Hall as students were assembling to hear the President's message and started to harangue the assemblage concerning an alleged graft ring said to be operating in Simcoe Hall.

Claiming that he had succeeded in registering at Simcoe Hall for the small cost of only one dime, (ten cents) Thropnadel raised a storm of demands for the refund of tuition money which continued unrebated for two hours until the sobered students dispersed after the Bursar called in the services of a strong collection agency and had the leader of the uprising billed.

In his speech to the students young Thropnadel explained that, awed by threatening letters, and the presence in Simcoe Hall of strong arm men, euphemistically called Marshals, the majority of students had followed directions and paid enormous and unnecessary sums for the privilege of registering at the University of Toronto.

"And what is more", he screamed, "they expected you to make all checks out in duplicate!"

Choruses of "That's right", "Dirty Bursar", "Burty Dirsar", "Dirty Berty", and "The Code of the Woosters", interrupted him at this point.

Thropnadel went on to explain how he had registered for so small an amount. "The real place of registeration was carefully concealed from you and carefully guarded, but while my friend Miss Hebe G. Bease gracefully straightened a stocking seam in the middle of the rotunda (an action calculated in these times to attract the attention of both sexes) I slipped through to a wicket on the East, not the West side of the rotunda. There a genial gentleman asked what he could do for me. I replied that I wanted to get registered, and he asked what I wanted registered and I replied "me".

"'O.K.', he replied, with a strange smile on his face (he probably hadn't been getting his rightful business for years), "as long as you can pay for

A. J. Casson

The Sketches and Paintings of Ontario by A. J. Casson are a fitting exhibition in Hart House Art Gallery for students returning from summers spent on holidays and at work in Ontario's northland. But even over and above the beauties of summer there are the added splendours of autumn—smoky autumn hazes, and vivid autumn tinges.

Mr. Casson has the ability of making realistic as living pictures, scenes in Haliburton and Georgian Bay regions which are held long in memory as outstanding scenery. To a great extent this is due to the natural design of his paintings. No attempt has been made, as landscapists like Van Gogh have done in the past, to strive for an overly personal perversion of nature. What has been done, sometimes admittedly in a simple fashion, is to portray actual scenes. This may sound like a contradiction—it is usually understood that a painter paints what he sees—but rarely can this quality be found without a photographic effect.

The very essence of his work can be analysed, only summarily, as giving a broad and sweeping effect, leaving at the same time a feeling of detail which actually is not there.

Russia Regards Student As Essential to War; Universities Carry On

Efficiency at High Level Says Leader of Russian Delegation to International Student Assembly on Visit to Toronto; No Universities Have Been Closed, Though Some Withdraw Behind Urals

STUDENTS DO PART-TIME WAR WORK

"Russian universities are carrying on at a high level of efficiency," Nikolai Krasavchenko, 25-year-old leader of the Russian delegation to the International Student Assembly, told The Varsity Monday. "No universities have been closed, although many of them, including over 500,000 students, have been evacuated from enemy-occupied territory to safe locations east of the Ural mountains." Krasavchenko and two other Russian delegates visited Toronto early this week.

"Last spring," he continued, "117,000 young experts were graduated from our Universities. Some of them have curtailed their curricula, but there has never been any thought of closing them." In Russia, he explained, the university student is considered to be as essential a member of society as the munitions worker and soldier. The Russian government feels the need for graduating large numbers of trained men, in war or peace, simply because they are useful to the state. However, because of the exigencies of wartime, all students also do part time work in factories, hospitals and construction projects. Krasavchenko graduated from the University of Moscow, where he wrote a thesis on German fascism. Before he was sent to this continent he was Youth Leader in Moscow, and was Commissar in charge of supplying fuel to the beleaguered Russian capital.

The two other members of the delegation are Senior Licutenant Vladimir Pchelinstsev, and Senior Lieutenant Lyudmilla Pavlichenko. Both are snipers who have achieved great fame through their exploits. Pchelintsev was the organizer of the Young Snipers movement in Russian. Fighting on the Leningrad front, he killed 152 German soldiers with 154 bullets. He holds the highest military decoration of his country, "Hero of the Soviet Union", along with 86 others in the various armed forces. He learned to speak German during his operations behind the enemy lines.

Miss Pavlichenko had been engaged in post graduate study of sociology at the University of Kiev when her country was invaded. She left her studies to join the snipers' movement, and has been credited with killing 309 German soldiers. She plans to return to the front when she gets back home. "You make the guns," she said to a young war workers who was present at the interview, "I'll make good use of them." After the was she intends to return to her studies.

Short Course for Dentists

Undisturbed by this week's confusion and excitement of registration and the joys and hand-shakes experienced on meeting old friends, are the hard-working boys of the Dental Faculty. For more than a month the young dentists and their professors have been back in school as a result of a speed-up in the course as requested by the Dominion Government.

The first knowledge of this acceleration came in the latter part of April when Dean Arnold D. Mason summoned the entire student body to a meeting and issued the simple statement, "Owing to war conditions, and the need for dental officers in the Canadian Dental Corps, the course in Dentistry at the University of Toronto will be accelerated, at the request of the Dominion Government. It is expected that this accelerated program will be in effect for the duration of the war."

Dr. Mason elaborated by saying that all Years except the First would return on August 24 and complete the academic session on April 10, 1943. Successful students would then proceed immediately to the next higher year of the course, beginning April 12, 1943. While the new program will greatly hasten the graduation date of each class, the academic year will continue to extend over almost the same length of time. To accomplish this the vacation period has been reduced to a minimum. Thus students now in Third Year will graduate in 1944 instead of the same time in 1945.

In anticipation of the difficulties which some students might experience through the accelerated program, the government instituted a Loan Committee whereby those students in the Second and Third Years in need of financial assistance could obtain aid. After much consulting among the Government, the Dental Corps, the University, and the Dental Faculty, it was decided that the Fourth and Fifth Year students would be permitted to join the Canadian Dental Corps on Active Service and be granted leave of absence until their course was completed.

International Assembly Includes Axis Victims

Ten Canadian Delegates, Seven From Toronto, Attended Conference in Washington Early this Month

MRS. ROOSEVELT PATRON

Students and ex-students from 56 countries including refugees from Axis-dominated countries gathered together in Washington, D.C., from the second to the fifth of this month to take part in the International Student Assembly sponsored by the United States Committee of the International Student Service.

In the words of the credo which they expect to publish soon: "We, the students of many lands, diverse races, cultures and religions, assembled at this critical hour from the battlefronts of the world to consider our responsibilities in the present war and our tasks in the coming peace and social reconstruction."

Canada sent a delegation of 10 students and former students, seven from the University of Toronto and three from McGill University. John Coleman, Fellow on the mathematics staff of this University, and Secretary of the International Student Service committee for Canada, headed the Canadian delegation. The six other Toronto delegates were Gordon Bell, Vice-President of the Students' Administrative Council, Stan Best, Stu Robinson and Bob Harris of Meds; Don Moore of Dentistry; Eileen Acton of Vic and Nancy Fraser of U.C. Don Delvin, Mary Millar and Ian Stevenson were the McGill representatives, and five other Toronto students, one from McGill and two French Canadians were present as observers.

Besides student delegates from the 29 United Nations, there were refugees from Axis-held countries, including representatives of Italy, Germany and Japan. Also present were a delegate from Afghanistan, a Persian, a Chinese delegate who flew from Chungking, and a Nationalist Indian group, who presented strongly India's cause for freedom.

Most colorful of the Russian representatives was Sr. Licutenant Lyudmila Pavlichenko, girl sniper, and a figure of the hour here in Toronto. Widely acclaimed, too, was the British delegation, which included three men from the fighting fronts.

From Britain's Air Force came Wing Commander David Scott-Maldon, who was specially decorated for his work at Dieppe. He had made a score of trips in his solo-fighter during the raid. When questioned about it, he replied "Yes it had been a busy day." Coming from the Army's fighting front was Captain Peter Cochrane, who had been wounded and captured by the Italians in Libya, then recaptured by the British and sent home on sick leave. And to speak for the Navy, came Lieut. Richard Miles, who had been serving on a destroyer.

The program of the assembly was planned so that the past was considered under the theme, "The End of Imperialism", while the present and future were discussed in sessions on "The People's Century" and "The Peace of Interdependence". These themes were first discussed by noted speakers at the Plenary Sessions of the Assembly and then at round table discussions at which the students were split up into smaller groups each containing as far as was possible some delegates from most of the countries represented.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, a patron of the assembly, welcomed the different delegations at the White House, entertaining them at various functions. The Britishers and Canadians had breakfast with her one morning. A Roosevelt garden party was given for the entire Assembly.

President Roosevelt himself assisted in this International Student Assembly. His address to them in a quiet chamber of the White House, was carried by every broadcasting station in the United States, relayed all over the world, including Occupied countries.

A continuation committee was appointed by the assembly to carry on its work among students, and each delegation was urged to publicize the student credo which the assembly worked out.

navigator was shot down by a Focke-Wulf 190 and broke in two as it crashed into the sea. Both McGillicuddy and the pilot were found unconscious in the fore part of the plane by their rear gunner, Sergeant Air Gunner Clarence Scott of Tisdale, Sask. Scott kept their heads above water while he inflated their "Mae West" jackets and the plane's rubber dinghy. He shoved them into the dinghy in which the three floated until picked up by a rescue launch.

Pilot Officer McGillicuddy had been on service overseas since October 1941 and was a veteran of the huge raid on Cologne and many other raids on German-held territory.

Pilot Officer McGillicuddy was born in Toronto on February 12, 1918. His undergraduate life began in 1935 when he enrolled in first year architecture. The following year he transferred to first year social and philosophical studies and entered sociology in his second year.

As an undergraduate he was vice-president of the Students' Administrative Council, president of the University College Literary and Athletic Society in 1940-41, and national secretary of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. He wrote the brief on national scholarships for submission to the Rowell-Sirois Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations. This brief has been implemented in part in most of the provinces of Canada. He was also one of the Canadian Student Assembly in 1938.

New Requirements By War Board Announced

Only Physically Unfit, Objectors, Members of Active and Reserve Units of Armed Forces Exempt

AMERICANS INCLUDED

Extension of University military training regulations in accordance with new requirements of the Department of National War Services has been announced by University authorities. All male students, graduate and undergraduate, who were born on or before Sept. 30, 1923, whether or not they are British subjects, will be required to take military training, it was revealed in an article submitted to a special supplement of The Varsity by the Canadian Officers' Training Corps earlier this week.

Only students exempt from training are those certified as medically unfit by the University Health Service, members of active or reserve units of the Canadian Navy, Army or Air Force, conscientious objectors and enemy aliens. American students of military age are thus, for the first time, included among those required to take training.

No compulsory training for women has yet been established, although President Cody announced yesterday that a committee has been formed to discuss the advisability of extending the activities of the University detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps, until now a voluntary organization, to include compulsory training schedules for women of the second, third and fourth years.

The syllabus of the Red Cross Corps has been enlarged and now provides advanced courses in transport, nursing, office administration and food administration for members who have taken a year's training besides a basic training course for newcomers.

The Canadian Officers' Training Corps has been reorganized, the Training Centre Battalion and Officers' Training Battalion becoming the 1st Battalion, for all students who have taken a year's training, whether or not they are considered potential officer material; and the 2nd Battalion, for all who have taken no previous training. Details regarding registration have been published in the special supplement of The Varsity which may be obtained at faculty offices or either battalion orderly room.

The First One Rolls

This scene in The Universty Press marks the end of one issue as far as the editorial staff is concerned. Within a few hours the paper will be spread to all corners of the campus, keeping students posted on university news.

But there are 99 more issues to follow—issues requiring a large and representative staff of men and women to keep them filled with all the news that interests The Varsity's readers. Feature writers are needed as well as reporters to cover the lighter side of university life. Sports reporters are required, to cover the many events embraced in the interfaculty athletic program. Opportunities for art, music and drama criticism, for humorous and editorial writing are also provided.

Experience in journalism is not necessary. All that is required is a few hours on one or more days during the week. In return, the reporter receives a grounding in the essentials of news style, a better knowledge of the campus and the enjoyment of sharing in the production of his own newspaper.

The Varsity's editorial staff is entirely student-controlled, although many of its masthead members have had outside experience as newspapermen.

Students interested in making The Varsity their extra-curricular activity are invited to call The Varsity's offices as soon as possible for further information. The men's office is located in the west wing of Hart House; the women's office is in Room 42A, University College.

FORMER THEATRE MANAGER AMONG MISSING AT DIEPPE

Among University casualties in the Dieppe raid was Captain Willard B. Thomson of the Royal Regiment, listed as "missing, presumed dead." Captain Thomson was a former manager of Hart House Theatre.

Capt. Thomson left his position at Hart House Theatre in June 1940. He was educated at Oakwood Collegiate Institute and Queen's University. After working as a salesman for several years, he joined that staff of the theatre as Secretary in September 1934, becoming Manager in 1936.

During his managership, Capt. Thomson acted in "A Murder Has Been Arranged" and "This Mad World," the latter for the Dominion Drama Festival.

Speaking of Capt. Thomson, Mr. Delafield, Secretary of the University Drama Committee said, "Willard Thomson, as Manager of Hart House Theatre and President of the University Drama Committee, was always loyal to the ideals upon which the committee had been founded.

YOU LUCKY PEOPLE, YOU—never before have hither readers faced a year of such promise for there will be this year not one, not two, not three, but FOUR regular contributors to this column. So maybe we all together won't make one really good columnist, but you're lucky there isn't a fifth one . . . and besides, variety is the spice of life . . . but don't read Variety, read The Varsity, it's free (advt.).

These four people writing this melange will be (a) Harriet Leigh-Mallory, our Canadian University Press editor, (b) Doc Savage, (c) Henry Z. Sable, Feature Editor, and (d) the above by-lined News Editor who has been more or less keeping his eye on exchanges and whatnot this summer.

Ringing in the new term, the Soldiers' Tower Carillon pealed forth about two o'clock on Monday with a brief snatch of a popular Western type song about spurs and what they do . . . then it as unexpectedly stopped. Three intrepid Varsity reporters who were within dash distance, dashed up to the tower, surrounded it, posted a guard on the door to the carillon stairs which was locked and then started making queries in Hart House.

There they were told that the University Carillonneur was the only one who had a key to the door. He was contacted and swore that he had been nowhere near the instrument at the time, nor could anyone else have been, and suggested that it was just a story that "they" were trying to start. . . . I'VE GOT EARS THAT JINGLE JANGLE JINGLE!

Last spring The Billboard, a well-known amusement weekly which passed under our eyes at the time, held a poll on college prom orchestras. The Colby College Echo up in Maine announced that the local choice for first place was Big Milt and His Brookline Grenadiers.

'Way down the list in third and fourth places were a couple of obscure stick-wavers named Gleun Miller and Tommy Dorsey.

Big Milt hit the top of the poll as favourite male vocalist, and his combo was called the band most likely to succeed.

The editor of The Colby Echo last year was a Milton W. Hamlit, known around those parts as a campus band leader . . . BLOOD, they say, IS THICKER THAN WATER.

Low tide in the field of high-and-dry gags is this by-product of the current theatrical season:

Two down-town journalists met. One enthused, "Say, have you seen 'My Sister Eileen'?"

"Your sister Eileen?" screamed the other. "Snakes, man, I didn't even know you were married!"

The lads who live in one house at the University of Washington now have to come clean when false fire alarms are rung in. Suspecting the lads of being responsible for a wave of false alarms, the powers that be flooded the alarm box with indelible ink . . . as Mr. Bartlett said in his "Familiar Quotations", OUT, OUT, DAMNED SPOT!

"Gentlemen of the Press" is no term to be spoken sneeringly, as a high-ranking suavie of The Varsity's masthead demonstrated recently when a waitress bearing his dessert of milk and a chocolate sundae maladroitly spilt the milk almost in his lap. Pausing not a moment to shed tears over the lacteal flood, and losing not a jot of his savoir faire, this young gentleman sought to assist in wiping up the milk, meanwhile managing deftly to invert his chocolate sundae.

"You will find",, he remarked blandly to the delighted waitress as the chocolate mingled with the milk in a marbled pool, "that I'm nothing, if not tactful."

Well, that, bless you for your strained smiles, is that for now. Tomorrow we will return with advice for Freshmen, mainly concerned with a few illustrative anecdotes concerning those baffling creatures WIMMEN!

Speaking of Sport

By Bill Quigley

NO VOICE FROM THE GRAVE

For the past two years it has been the futile and discouraging policy of the editor of this page to beat the drums frantically for a resurrection of intercollegiate sport. But the dead have not so much as stirred. They must be very comfortable in their ashen cloaks. The death of intercollegiate competition was, if you will recall, rapid and painless. It was no slow strangulation.

Why the death sentence was pronounced has never been fully comprehended by many prominent both in sport and military affairs. Suffice it to say that reasons were advanced. A university-at-war had no time for intercollegiate competition and yet her sons performed numerous and gallant deeds on city gridirons and hockey rinks. A university with a vast military scheme, such as Toronto has, had no time for major sports, yet on Saturday afternoon our famed R.C.A.F. and Royal Canadian Navy will battle on Varsity's green sward over a tiny pigskin, while the University of Manitoba prepares to meet the R.C.A.F. out in Winnipeg in the near future. But then again the unceremonious burial may have been due to an anticipated, yet untried, public opinion. Take your choice, yet the last of the three explanations appeals to us.

PHYSICAL FITNESS

However, no longer will we pound a typewriter with perpetual obituaries. The issue is plainly dead and will be so for the duration and perchance for some period after the Axis is crushed. At the moment Varsity students must face athletics in another light. No longer can they be mere spectators, growing soft on a diet of hot dogs and cokes. All must get in the swim in one active capacity or another.

Mere military knowledge gained from a comprehensive C.O.T.C. training is not sufficient. The heads of all three armed services have realized this and have noticed a definite handicap in the training of recruits, whether officer material or not, who present themselves in a soft and weak physical condition. The figures denoting the percentage of unfit men across Canada is alarming.

To overcome this condition among the men who will be leaving Varsity each year for the armed forces, the Athletic Association has provided facilities for a wide program of physical hardness. The athletic plant at Hart House is open to all men, thorough P.T. and swimming courses have been arranged for first and second year men especially, and the interfaculty sports program will soon get under way. That third avenue to fitness cannot be overstressed. A high ranking U.S. Army officers has this to say,

"I must take time out to go on record that there is nothing which we can do in the educational field with our youth which will do more toward winning this war than the production of leadership qualities, courage, initiative, force, and all the other things that got to make a man. That as a mechanism for this education, there is nothing which can touch competitive athletics and, among this group of sports, nothing which can touch football."

There is our invitation to get into interfaculty sport, to take physical training seriously and to take advantage of the facilities in the Athletic Wing at Hart House.

Physical Examination Instructions

MEN

Early appointments for physical examination should be made by the following:

1. Students previously examined by the Health Service and placed in a military category lower than C_2 or who, not having been examined, believe that their category is such as to exempt them from military service.
2. Students in the age group for military service who have not previously been members of either battalion, C.O.T.C.
3. Students in the first and second years for whom physical training is compulsory.
4. Students in any year who desire to engage in athletic activities.

All other students are to be examined but are requested to defer their appointments until the second week in October. Such students may be attested in the C.O.T.C. on the basis of their previous categorization pending examination by the Health Service.

WOMEN

Early appointments for physical examination should be made by the following:

1. All first year students for whom physical training is compulsory.
2. Students in any year who desire to engage in athletic activities.

Students in the second, third and four years are requested to defer their appointments until further notice.

HEALTH SERVICES COMBINED

The University Health Service, amalgamating the Health Service for men and the Health Service for Women, has been formed this season with Lt.-Col. R. W. I. Urquhart, in charge as full-time director. Dr. Glen Mulock, Assistant Director, is in charge of the women's division.

The Health Service now provides an annual physical examination for all undergraduate students, including tuberculin test. Chest X-rays will be taken of all first-year students and of others as may be indicated.

Infirmary quarters are to be established for students in residence or lodgings with minor illnesses requiring bed care for a few days to a week. (Health Service officials pointed out that this service is not intended for serious illnesses requiring hospitalization or for students living at home.)

Service officials have also announced that a measure of financial assistance will be provided to students injured while engaged in athletic activities. This assistance will be provided only on the authority of the Director.

Consultation facilities and provision for first aid will be available as in the past. The Health Service building for men is located at 43 St. George Street and the building for women is at 44 Hoskin Avenue. Consultation hours will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. First aid attendants will also be on duty at Hart House from 4 to 6 p.m.

The new service is the outcome of the extensive reorganization of University health facilities carried out last winter under the direction of Maj. C. D. Gossage, who has since returned overseas after three months' leave of absence from the 1st Canadian Division during which he directed the removal of the men's service to its present location from the small set of offices in Hart House which served as its former quarters. At that time the University Health Service took over the duty of examining members of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, previously performed by army doctors.

Instructions regarding physical examination appointments for both men and women are reproduced elsewhere in this issue.

Course Now Compulsory For C.O.T.C. Members

First and Second Year Trainees Require Reduced Number of Hours in New Physical Fitness Drive

CONDITIONING STRESSED

The University of Toronto Athletic Association, headed by Warren Stevens, popular Director of Athletics, has announced an accelerated and more thorough program of physical training for students in their first and second years. The new and improved set-up has been designed with a view to physical toughness for many of Canada's potential soldiers.

Most notable change from past years is the fact that membership in either of the C.O.T.C. Battalions does not exempt men from physical training. However for those in C.O.T.C. the minimum requirement is 28 periods as against 40 for all others. It must be noted, however, that during the Fall Term credit for only one period a week will be granted, but this will be raised to two credits a week in the Spring. It must also be realized that P.T. credits for interfaculty sport participation may only be granted for certain specific sports and then only as directed by the Athletic Association.

The Association has long realized the need for physical preparedness, which is so necessary in carrying out the activities of modern warfare. The new syllabus for P.T. as well as that for the various swimming and life-saving classes will stress conditioning and hardness rather than a mere loosening of the joints. Details concerning either of these two courses may be obtained at the Athletic Office.

INTRAMURAL MEETING

Organization meeting for the Intramural Sports Committee will take place on Monday at 5 p.m. in Hart House.

Seriously Wounded

Pilot Officer Lou Somers, tricky running half on Varsity senior football teams and winner of the Cody Trophy in 1940, was seriously wounded recently in action over enemy territory.

P. O. Somers, a University graduate of 1940 in Commerce and Finance, received the Allen award for the student attaining first honors and deemed most worthy in his course. He went overseas in December, 1941.

RUGBY ADMISSION

Students will be admitted free to all scheduled O.R.F.U. rugby games on presentation of their University registration cards at the south gate of Varsity Stadium.

Students Cut Breakfast Short To Accommodate Transit Control

The drastic news that lectures are due to begin at 8.30 in the morning under the newly-established "staggered" hour system seemed to leave the bulk of the University unmoved when students were questioned—at a late hour yesterday afternoon. There were scattered groans at the prospect of meeting the sun halfway, but most early lecture-goers seemed content to cut down on time spent in breakfasting in the interest of the war effort.

Exclamations of "Fine thing," "I think it's splendid," and "The least we can do" were volleyed by eds and co-eds at a Varsity reporter in quest of student opinion. Barbara McQueen and Phyllis Rawlings, U. C., just arrived from the University of British Columbia, were unimpressed, however. "We always start lectures at 8.30 out there," they explained, "so this is no novelty for us."

An inmate of Whitney Hall proves by intricate mathematical formulae, based on the two plus two equals five principle, that "8.20 lectures and nine o'clocks boil down to the same thing anyway." Joan Galligan, Commerce and Finance, strictly maintained ,"I don't mind it all" —but later confessed she had no early lectures.

A less cheerful angle was submitted by J. Greer, S.P.S.I. "I got up all summer for work, counting on later hours at Varsity, and look what happens!" And a certain freshie vociferated, "I never liked the Toronto Transportation Commission and now I like them less!"

Co-eds unanimously agree on rationing sleep. "Why cut down on dates? Men are scarce!" they say, and "forty winks of an afternoon goes a long way."

On the whole, students intend to be "big and patriotic about the whole thing." The general tone of campus thoughts is vote for "serious-minded co-operation." Moreover, one professor is worrying about "the waste of electricity."

Which leaves no more to repeat but the sceptical inquiry of two questioned S.P.S. men, "Who's iniating you?"

Applications for football, soccer, lacrosse, volleyball and swimming referees are now being received at the Athletic Office, Hart House.

it, I don't mind." He took my right hand and stamped it smartly with a box-like stamp, wrote a number in the box in indelible pencil, made an entry in a book, gave me a slip of paper which he stamped with the date and postmark, and said, 'That will be ten cents.'"

"At first I thought there must have been some mistake, but I have completed my enrolment and attended my first classes, so I feel you should all know what suckers you have been made."

It was at this point that the students streamed out in anger and started besieging the bursar's office.

Although all is quiet on the campus at present, semi-official word says that it is feared that the disorders have been merely driven underground and may flare anew at any time.

Young Thropnadel has taken no action regarding his billing, and it has been thought unwise to contact his father who is recovering from injuries received in a landslide of dirty dishes in Hart House Great Hall last summer.

The Bursar has notified young Thropnadel that he will take steps to have his class enrolment cancelled unless he completes University Registration in the required way. Meanwhile a majority of the professors concerned have expressed the belief that this would be unconstitutional. "Although it all seems a bit irregular", one pointed out, "and the young man is unable to produce an Admit to Lectures card, it is nevertheless impossible to deny that he is registered at Simcoe Hall. He has the slip to prove it."

Another staff member pointed out that, being registered with a department of the dominion government, namely the post office, Thropnadel could, if he wished, force the Bursar's Office to enter a test case in Dominion-University relations.

SPORT WRITERS WANTED

A number of sport reporters are urgently needed by the Varsity to assure complete coverage of intramural and intercollegiate activities for the coming year. Any student, man or woman, is eligible to serve on their university daily newspaper.

All men interested are asked to sign a special list to be found in the Varsity Office of Hart House. Prospective women reporters may register at Room 42A, University College. Please state preference as to branch of sport when making application.

Trinity's Supremacy on Links Is Threatened by Promising School Squad; Mel Jones Is Tennis Favourite

GORD BALL LEADS SCHOOL

Mae McCutcheon's Interfaculty Athletic Loop makes its initial bow of the year on Oct, 22 when the intramural golf tournament takes place out on the green sward of Woodbine Golf Club. The entry fee is 25 cents and all divot-diggers are urged to hand in their entries to the Athletic Office up until the day before the tournament.

The individual championship last year was snared by Gord Ball, School's freshman ice star, with a 71, while the team title went to the Trinity team composed of Paul Boddy, Don Boxer, Rod Laidlaw, and Ralph Gibson. Having suffered the loss of both Boddy and Boxer, the Anglicans will have difficulty retaining their title against the challenge of the Ball-led Schoolmen who finished high up last year.

Entries for the University Tennis Tournament, which takes place during the week of Oct. 5, must be handed in to the Athletic Office not later than noon on Oct. 2. The Tournament this year should be a wide-open affair as both Bruce Hall and Jack Mullett, finalists last year, are no longer here. Hall defeated Mullett in a protracted struggle for the singles title. Mullett teamed with Ian McCallum, who has also graduated, to take the doubles title, winning over Murray Thompson and Chuck Saba. Mel Jones, of Trinity, looks to be the favourite this year unless a star arises from the freshmen.

Student Soldiers Learn Science Of War at Camp Niagara

The University of Toronto Contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps went to Camp Niagara in June for two weeks of intensive training, but its numbers were somewhat reduced this year by the large number of students granted leave to work in essential war industries.

The whole contingent embarked from the Docks at the foot of Bay street Sunday, June 7 to the tune of martial music, and the S.S. Cayuga steamed them across to Niagara-on-the-Lake in two hours. An advance party which had gone over the day before had everything ready so that each company could march right into its tent lines which were all pitched.

After an easy afternoon getting equipment the boys were off duty for the rest of the day, but starting the next morning at 6.00 a.m., all took part in the daily round of training lasting as a rule until 4.30 p.m.

Practical training was the order of the day, with very little ceremonial battalion drill. Considerable equipment was available for both battalions, so more time was spent working in the field than in previous years. The various arms of the C.O.T.C. took training special to their arm while the Training Centre took basic training. At the end of camp several companies of both contingents staged a realistic mock battle, commando-style, which included the construction and the blowing-up of a bridge by the engineers, an infantry charge with fixed bayonets across a river and the heavy use of smoke and tear-gas. Major B. E. Tolton, responsible for this scheme, said he thought that few units in training even in England could boast of as much inter-arm co-operation.

Weather throughout the two weeks was milder than was the case last season and comparatively rain-free. When off duty, many members of both battalions toured the Niagara peninsula. A few were enabled by new border regulations to visit relatives and friends in United States border cities.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Another year of sport has come to our campus to relieve weary students and Red Cross enthusiasts—and with it a cheery "hello" to all our readers, old and new. We shall all miss our athletes who have graduated and will dedicate our next column to them for whom we once made the rafters ring.

Meanwhile, let us explore the new field of golf and of tennis. It's U. C.'s turn to issue the official golf invitations in the near future, but all freshies who can keep within putting distance of par will be welcomed with open arms by their college representatives. Let's make this year's tournament bigger and better than ever!

Betty Hungerford of St. Hilda's will be in charge of the tennis tournament for the University and we'll hear more from that quarter in the near future. Meanwhile, practise up on backhand and make grandmother happy by preparing squads of "aces."

THE FUTURE IS YOUR JOB

Campus life has changed. The co-ed of the 'thirties and her frat brother are entering the fourth---and we hope, final---year of war-conditioned College life. Gone is the mad scramble of crowded social doings . . . the pleasant dormitory life-apart-from-the-world . . . the cramming bouts just before examinations.

You---the College Crowd of to-day---know a different campus life where there is a new seriousness---an awareness of the vital part Youth must play in post war conditions, in guiding the future course of this great Canada of ours.

Even your clothes are different---less collegiate---more efficiently simple. Naturally EATON'S had that in mind in its 1942 ration-minded collection of College wearables assembled in the College Toggery and the Grads' Department. Then, too, you are walking more. It's partly a war measure, of course, but it's also proving healthful fun. And EATON'S anticipated the new cry for sensible heels in its newly opened Campus Shoe Shop.

Yes, Campus life has changed. It's more absorbing, more intense---more world-real. And you, the students, are facing up to the challenge it offers . . . learning to work and live and play in such a way as to be ready to take your rightful place as leaders in that bright to-morrow that must come---and perhaps even sooner than we expect.

GOVERNORS ORDER COMPULSORY WOMEN'S WAR TRAINING

To Set Up One-Year Course In Mathematics, Physics For Men Under Draft Age

160 Candidates To Be Accepted for Course Covering Work in Arts and Applied Science Faculties

TO LIVE IN BURWASH

A special one-year course for young men enlisting in the army, offered jointly by the University of Toronto and the Department of National Defence, has been announced by President Cody. Based upon work in the first year Mathematics and Physics course in the Faculty of Arts, combined with the first year Engineering Physics course in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, the course also offers studies in magnetism and electricity leading to work in radio and regular S.P.S. work in engines and surveying.

Major W. S. Wallace, University librarian, will also give a course in military writing.

Those who wish to enter the course must be at least 17 years old, and only students under draft age will be accepted. All candidates must have Grade XIII (Upper School or Senior Matriculation) certificates from Ontario or British Columbia, or the equivalent Grade XII from other provinces. Preference will be given those with good standings in algebra, geometry, trigonometry and physics.

The number of candidates is restricted to 160, and men of ages 18 or 19 are preferred. Students will be housed in Burwash Hall, and will be provided with free tuition and textbooks, as well as board, lodging, medical and dental attention. They will be under military supervision and receive standard pay—70 cents a day if under seventeen and a half, $1.30 if seventeen and a half or over.

All boys under 18 applying for admission must have their parents' written consent. Those interested should send their applications at once — by mail, telephone, or telegraph — to Professor E. F. Burton, head of the department of Physics.

The University of Toronto will give due credit towards a degree to those wishing to complete a course at the University at a later date. Announcement of the exact nature of the credit may be made shortly, Dr. Burton said yesterday.

The course, which will open as soon as arrangements have been completed, will run 33 weeks, and will include from

Dr. Cowling, long a member of the University senate, first joined the faculty in 1913. He is a member of the Canadian Dental Association and other similar professional organizations.

He is an associate editor of the University of Toronto Monthly, editor of "Oral Health," and an associate editor of the Journal of Dental Education.

Dr. Cowling holds an M.A. degree from McMaster University and the degrees of Doctor of Dental Surgery and Bachelor of Pedagogy from the University of Toronto.

S.C.M. Secretary To Speak Sunday Night

Rev. Arnold Nash, recently appointed General Secretary of the Student Christian Movement will be guest speaker at the opening university service Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in Convocation Hall. Mr. Nash, a graduate of Liverpool University and the London School of Economics, will be making his first appearance here. His topic is "What will College mean to you?"

The service will be conducted by President Cody, assisted by Gordon Bell, vice-president of the Student Administrative Council, and Miss Eileen Acton, associate-president of the Victoria College Council.

New students are invited to a reception in the Women's Union following the service.

A. J. Norquay, of Coniston, who graduated last spring in philosophy from Victoria College, has been elected president of the Student Christian Movement at the University of Toronto. At present he is back at Emmanual College.

The associate president-elect is Margaret Dillon, a Victoria student entering her graduating year. Rev. Arnold Nash, who was appointed last April as the general secretary of the Movement, and John Coleman is assistant secretary.

During the summer, the outstanding S.C.M. activity was Spring Camp held at Camp Onawaw, on Lake Vernon, near Huntsville. Some 60 Toronto students attended. The leaders were Rev. Arnold Nash, and Rev. For members in the city during the summer months a discussion group was held each week, where the Archbishop of Canterbury's book, "Christianity and Social Order," was used as a general theme.

The S.C.M. Book Exchange is again operating in Hart House. This year a new policy has been inaugurated whereby co-eds may also buy and sell used text books at a desk in the rotunda of University College.

Wallace Expresses Faith In Coming Age

Principal Anticipates Broader Interpretation of Democratic Ideals; Pays Tribute to Late Professor Smith

CODY ANNOUNCES AWARD

Students in University College were addressed by Principal Wallace at Convocation yesterday evening in the West Hall of the college. President Cody also spoke to the gathering.

In his speech Dr. Wallace enunciated his reasons for optimism in face of the trials of today. Pointing out that the world's great ages had always been times of instability and change, he anticipated a new and broadened interpretation of the democratic ideal.

"I can wish you no better than a share in the building of the new world to rise out of the ashes of the old," he said.

To accomplish such a task, however, idealism was necessary, stressed Dr. Wallace. He urged the cultivation of the humanities for the light they threw on present problems as "the genuine form of patriotism."

"Unless the scientist familiarizes himself with the great ideas of the race to which he belongs, he is disqualifying himself for the greatest service he can render his country after the war."

Tribute to the memory of Professor Oswald Smith, member of the department of Classics and at one time college registrar, was paid by the principal.

The message of Dr. Wallace was emphasized by Dr. Cody. The task of the Oath To King Not Required Of Americans

2nd Battalion Adjutant Explains Ruling Under Which Non-British Students to Serve in C.O.T.C.

ENROLMENT SAID 1300

Students other than British subjects, who now have to enroll in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, will not be endangering their citizenship by doing so, authorities of the C.O.T.C. announced yesterday.

"Friendly and neutral aliens must take the training, but they will not be asked to take an oath of allegiance which would affect their citizenship," stated Lieut. J. C. Evans, Adjutant of the 2nd Battalion.

According to new regulations, published in the special supplement of The Varsity, all male students, graduate and undergraduate, who were born on or before Sept. 30, 1923, are required to take military training, whether or not they are British subjects. The only exceptions to this rule are student members of active or reserve units of the Canadian Navy, Army or Air Force; those medically unfit; conscientious objectors and enemy aliens.

Since the C.O.T.C. is a part of the Canadian army, enrolling members must take an oath of allegiance to His Majesty. However, this is impossible for American students, whose constitution forbids their taking such an oath under penalty of losing their citizenship.

Enrolment is proceeding rapidly and estimates place it at well over 1300 with enrolment yet incomplete.

FRESHMEN WEEKENDS HELD NEW CROP SHOWN CAMPUS

Chapel Services, Fashion Shows and House Parties for Freshies; Wallace of U.C. and Brown of Vic Speak

WOMEN SEE HART HOUSE

In spite of a few minor changes Freshman-Senior activities this year went on as scheduled.

University College seniors had to content their Freshies with a day instead of a week-end due to military housing conditions. Monday morning a tour was made of Hart House at which time the Warden spoke to both freshies and sophs in the Great Hall. Principal Wallace addressed the classes after luncheon. A fashion show was then presented by Dorothy Gray in which the Seniors modelled. In the evening, skits and songs comprised the entertainment. A vesper service completed the days activities.

At Victoria College the seniors held their annual Freshie house party last week-end. It commenced with a reception at Annesley Hall followed by a tea and fashion show at Wymilwood. The upperclassmen modelled their own clothes. Dr. Brown, principal of the College, addressed the Freshmen class at a chapel service Sunday morning. Panel discussions followed a tour of Hart House in the afternoon. Monday was devoted to registering the freshies in their respective courses.

McAndrew Addresses U. C. Frosh; Vic has 5-Day Program; Provost Speaks at Trinity

HAZING LIMITED

Usually this is a season of snipped ties, tappings and similar unpleasantries, but though the old spirit still flares up on occasions, it is quite subdued this year. As a result, while some poor undernourished frosh were forced to tote gigantic trunks by heartless upperclassmen, their introduetions to this thing called college were mainly of a more sedate nature.

At U.C., the Frosh had a get-to-gether on Tuesday evening when Prof. McAndrew, the College Registrar addressed them, stressing the fact that "The students are even closer to the war than the staff."

There was a Freshman Weekend House Party at Vic, lasting from Friday till Tuesday. This consisted of a series of dinners, tours about campus, and brief addresses by representatives of campus organizations. Monday afternoon there was a reception for the First Year Students by the staff, and on Tuesday they held their elections and took part in a Convocation in Arts in Burwash Hall.

At Trinity College, the frosh were given a tea by the Provost on Monday night. There are to be two class meetings—one called by themselves, and the other at the order of the sophs, both scheduled for Friday, Sept. 25.

Ruling Exempts Freshies; Training Work Voluntary In Professional Courses

Most Instruction To Be Conducted Tuesday, Thursday Afternoons; Committee on Special Exemptions Created

EIGHT COURSES OPEN

War training will be compulsory for undergraduate women in the University this year, President Cody stated last night, following a meeting of the Board of Governors. The requirement for each Undergraduate women is approximately 60 hours training for national service in the course of the year.

For students of the first year there is no requirement. For those in professional courses, such training will remain purely voluntary. To deal with all problems of exemption, there has been formed a committee consisting of A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, Miss Ferguson the Dean of Women in University College, Miss MacPherson the Dean of Women in Victoria College, Mrs. Kirkwood the Dean of Women in Trinity College, Dr. Victoria Muller of St. Michael's College, and Miss Parkes Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C. Applications to this Committee should be made by all those students who desire exemption from National Service Training.

As far as possible this instruction will be given on Tuesdays and Thursdays 4-6 p.m. so as not to interfere with the academic timetable of the students and encroach noticeably on their free time.

The eight courses of instruction set down in the Military Supplement have been endorsed by the Board of Governors, and it is hoped that all Undergraduate Women will be enrolled in courses of their own choice.

The University Detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps organized on this Campus two years ago will continue as one of the eight choices. This

Enemy Strafing Misses Warden

J. Burgon Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, now on active duty, narrowly escaped injuries when German bomber strafed the car in which he was riding somewhere in England, Claire Wallace, Toronto radio commentator revealed recently.

Details of the incident are as yet unknown, but will be published in the Varsity as soon as the news arrives.

Warden Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House since 1921, is now Director of British Army Education, having been appointed to that post late last spring.

A graduate of Oxford University and the University of Paris, he won his "Blue" at Oxford for association football and captained the university team during 1910-11. He served during the first World War with the Royal Dragoons and was awarded the Military Cross and Bar.

In 1919 he joined the staff of the University of Alberta. Two years later he came to Toronto to become Warden of Hart House.

His father was the canon residentiary of Canterbury and chaplain to the King.

School's "Blonde Bomber" of 1939 Returns to Campus Minus Razor

By Ray Jackson

"Haven't we heard that before?"—that's the greeting a reporter must expect from the S.P.S. freshettes who have been surrounded since Tuesday by well over five hundred infant engineers.

The adventurers in this enviable position are the first women to don the green tie in Chemical Engineering since 1939 when two women started in this course and Sally MacDonald started in Engineering Physics.

Asked for comments on the men behind the green ties, Kay Taylor, Toronto, flashed a broad smile and said, "They're the friendliest bunch of people I've ever met." Phyllis Pugh, from Chatham, the most serious of the three, contributed, "They've been awfully nice to us." And Marg Beedham, from out Leaside way, anaesthetizing the reporter with her big brown eyes, "perfectly swell."

Asked why they registered in engineering Kay replied "Of the courses recommended, Chemical Engineering wsa the only one interesting to me with good openings assured, and I am convinced that there will be good opportunity in this line for women."

"I'm air-mined," said Phyllis, and speaking of airplanes made of plasties, she added, "Since Chemical Engineering offers instruction in plasties and synthetics, I am naturally attracted to it."

From Marg, "I decided to enter engineering after discussing with graduate engineers and chemists the relative merits of both Honour Science and S.P.S. courses. I believe the engineering field holds many opportunities for women since the war has made it necessary for men in many industries to be replaced."

And Sally MacDonald, mentioned above, is back. Sally became a legend on the campus three years ago when she led bands of S.P.S. frosh on raiding parties "with her razor blade shining in the sun." After interrupting her course to work for a year in a war industry, she has now returned to third year Engineering Physics. Questioned about her activities for the coming year, she has, she says, reformed. She intends to be inconspicuous. Whether such a thing is possible for Sally in S.P.S. remains to be seen.

The change she most noticed this year is the early mornings. "It's terrible," she says, "I can only just make it if I get up at 8:10."

Our Right To Free Thought

As the fourth year of the war begins with full registration at this and other Canadian universities a survey of the campus scene around the world is not out of place. We all know, from looking at our university, how Canadian institutions of higher learning are affected by the war. More emphasis is being placed on courses in sciences. A plan for an increased number of bursaries for science students was worked out during the summer and seems to be in a large part responsible for the increased registration this year in the science faculties. The science courses in the arts colleges also have a large enrollment.

The Canadian war effort needs efficient technical men . . . ergo, the universities will supply them

A similar trend of events is taking place in the United States. In Russia and in China the students work on desperately against time. They pack up their protractors and microscopes and move as the enemy advances on the university cities, but the needed men are trained and trained in time.

England has adopted a different scheme but the result is much the same. The systems of compulsory employment and conscription, not yet in force here, have taken the civilian student out of the universities into industry or into the armed forces. The English universities are not idle, as this would seem to show. Oo the contrary they are busier than ever, but their classes are made up of men in uniform, who are taking special short courses in subjects, mainly sciences, connected with the fight against totalitarianism.

News of the universities in Germany is scarce, but recently a rumor leaked out that some of the opposition to Hitler within his own country was being led by the students; that at least some had stopped believing in the benefits of rule by brute force, and had begun to question the sacred Nazi doctrines. While their ability to change the existing order is certainly little better than nil it is heartening to other students to hear that our confreres in the greatest totalitarian state have not entirely forsaken the ancient right of the scholar: the right to free thought.

We in Canada and especially on this campus are fortunate to be able to continue our studies scarcely interrupted by the waging of the war. We have military training for the men, war work for the women, added responsibility and calls on our time, but we still have freedom to think what we wish and study what we wish.

In the increased hurry of our days let us not forget that.

No End Of Fun

In his address to all the faculties on Wednesday afternoon, President Cody asked that the social functions of the members of the university be simple and that they be confined to the campus. This request came as a shock to most of his audience, even if it was not entirely a surprise. Puzzled and sometimes indignant discussion resulted from this part of the President's speech. Most of the argument centred on "Why, when we have given up so much on account of the war, do we have to give up our fun?"

The reply to that is "We are not giving up our fun."

As the President pointed out, informal parties are generally more enjoyable than the formal affairs where the men students swelter in tails and boiled shirts. The social order for the campus this year should include enough "Joe College" parties to keep everyone happy. The sacrifice of formal feminine finery for the duration is not too great if it will help make good will toward our war effort.

It is almost impossible for university students to understand the attitude of the general public toward them at the present time. We know and many other people know that the need for trained technical men is more urgent now than it has ever been before. We also know that to discontinue any of the university courses would be to disrupt some part of the post-war reconstruction program as it was disrupted after the First World War. Our work is vital even if it does not bear immediate fruit. Because of these things we have speeded up our program to suit the tempo of the times.

The other half of the picture, the public's view of the matter, shows the man on the street inclined on the slightest provocation to look on all university students as slackers. Most of us are of military age and subject to call-up. That we are not exempt but only deferred from it until our training is finished is not generally recognized.

The parent who has lost one son and had his second son drafted is not likely to be ruled by cold intelligence when he sees university students disport themselves in public. He is more likely to see red and become convinced that he is looking at a privileged class.

While this state of affairs lasts and while the war lasts it is better that public emphasis be placed on our war effort rather than on our relaxation, and for some reason the public finds it easier to see a large undergraduate party at a down-town hotel than the members of the C.O.T.C. and of the Auxiliary Battalion on a route march.

Co-ed With A Gun

The exploits of one of the most remarkable women of modern times have recently been given wide publicity in the press throughout the United States and Canada as a modern Annie Oakley visited both countries. Senior Lieutenant Lyudmilla Pavlichenko came to this continent as the colorful representative of the youth of the battling Soviet Union and won the popular fancy and the hearts of the two nations before she had been here more than a few days. The Varsity joins in the acclaim of this girl student turned sniper.

Lieutenant Pavlichenko's feat of picking off 309 German soldiers one at a time and single-handed could scarcely be equalled by any record set in modern war. Eveo more interesting to the student is the fact that this deadly sniper was a student at Kiev University at the time when the Soviets were attacked, and she intends to return to her post graduate work in sociology when the fighting is finished.

Miss Pavlichenko is admitedly one of the outstanding members of our generation in Russia. But according to her own statements the young people of Russia are following a course similar to hers.

Russian university students, like their counterparts in China, Canada and in the United States, are continuing their studies, although many have had to move from the areas invaded or threatened by Hilter's armies. The need for trained experts keeps the universities flourishing. The need for workmen in war industries keeps young Russian students busy winning the war more directly during their spare time.

Others among the students have enlisted voluntarily along with Lyudmilla Pavlichenko, preferring to put all their efforts into direct warfare and to go back to their studies later. The representative they sent to the International Student Assembly held this month in Washington typified them and brought a heartening message to the students of the United Nations on this continent.

Toronto Promenade Concert

As last year, Hans Kindler made an outstanding success of his guest appearances as conductor of the Toronto Philharmonic Orchestra. Last night, he upheld his tradition, leading his musicians through a program that, perhaps because of its lightness, and certainly because of the way it was played, was completely enjoyable.

The most skillfully executed orchestral number was Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusic, which, in spite of the numberless times it has been performed, is still welcome when it is played with the finesse that Dr. Kindler gives it. Finnese, that is, exeept in the last movement which was marred by several muffed passages in the violins. The tempi of the various movements was exeellent.

Liszt's Les Preludes was well played, and the orchestra put real interpretation into it. It is not Liszt's best work and it suffers from formlessness. Its chief interest is in its tone colours, well brought out by Dr. Kindler.

Most of the audience seemed to be there, and rightly so, in pleasurable expeetation of the guest artist, Zara Nelsova. Miss Nelsova has been watched and listened to with interest by Toronto music lovers at her position as leading 'eellist of the T.S.O. Her solo work there has always made one want to hear more. Last night she played the Saint-Saens Concerto in A Minor, a technical tour de force. She exhibited a technique which can be compared and not unfavourably, only with Raya Oarbousova who appeared here several years ago. And Garbousova was then billed as the greatest woman 'eellist.

In her solo group, Miss Nelsova was accompanied by Leo Barkin. Suitable compliments will be paid to them both in the review of Miss Nelsova's recital in Hart House Theatre Saturday evening.

Sniper Court-Martialled

RECENTLY VISITED CANADA

MOSCOW, September 25, 1942—(CUP)—A report from a battle station, somewhere in Russia, tells us of the arraignment before a military tribunal of Major Ivan I. Feodorofovistsisteh, noted sniper, whose accredited seore of dead German soldiers is larger than the Varsity's Masthead. An official count states that he killed 1049 Germans with 1050 bullets.

Feodorofovistsisteh had been operating simultaneously on the Caucasus and and Murmansk fronts, commuting every morning from his summer home in Magnitogorsk (the Pittsburg of Russia), in the Ural mountains. Accompanying him every day was his faithful girl friend, pack mule and ammunition reservoir, Olga-from-the-Volga.

Major Feodorofovistsistch recently paid a visit to Canada. During his stay he was the victim of a ceremony at which Premier Heartburn presented him with a gold plated Bren gun, three schoolmen and a Link Trainer.

It is reported that, following a deep inspiration, the proseeuting attorney began: "Ivan Ivanoviteh Feodorofovistsistch, you have proven yourself to be a menace to the war effort. We do not require witnesses—it is just a waste of time. What have you to say before we shoot you?"

"Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori . . ." Feodorofovistsisch began, but was cut short by a volley of shots from a firing squad, commanded by his star pupil, Captain I. Bumpimoff.

"The official charge laid against Feodorofovistsisch was wasting ammunition," Bumpimoff told reporters in an interview, immediately following the impromptu execution. "That bullet contained a whole ounee of lead; there was at least an ounee of powder in the cartridge. A worker (think of it—a worker!) had to work (think of it—work!) 2¼ minutes and use 1/16 of a kilowatt of electricity to produee it. Furthermore," he continued indignantly, "it eost six kopeeks! It was a clear ease of sabotage and counter-revolutionary activity! Down with sabotage! Vive le sport!"

American Colleges Aim To Maintain Major Sports

HART HOUSE P.T. EXPERTS PLAN RACE OF SUPERMEN

By Bud Smith

According to Army authorities the physical condition of young Canadians reporting for service is very poor. We gather from their remarks that the average undergraduate is barely able to totter from the "bash" hall to MacDonald's and back without collapsing. Well this year apparently something is going to be done about it.

First of all there is the foreboding fact, announced in yesterday's Varsity, that everyone in first and second years must take P.T. in addition to whatever military drill they may be undergoing. Gone are the wholesale credits handed out by easy-going managers for team practices whether attended or not.

Participation in muscle-building sports such as wrestling, boxing and gymnastics will be widely encouraged this year. In this connection Hart House is well prepared for a busy session. In fact the staff is eagerly anticipating this long-awaited chance to add bulging biceps to the equipment of the undergrads.

Charlie Zwygard, who for years has watched his beloved gymnastics take a back seat to such customer sports as basketball, is ready to show all comers the body building benefits of such gay diversions as the rope climb (strongly recommended by those Who-lived-through-Brockville) and the flying rings. Such exclamations as Mats! . . . Highbars! . . . Ladders! . . . flow from his lips as he dreams of hordes of bemuscled behemoths heading Hun-ward from Hart House.

Wrestling enthusiasts will once again be crushed in the gentle embrace of Chesty Martin. Now a Lieutenant in the army the erstwhile terror of the gym class will be on hand to give instruction in the niceties of the grunt and groan art. A repeat on last year's successful wrestling season should be in order.

The boxing boys will again be under the beneficial tutelage of that destroyer of the English language, Mel Glionna. Mel's Men held their own with the best talent from Toronto's Y's, and trimmed O.A.C. in a brilliant assault last season.

For anyone desirous of improving their muscular co-ordination, the fencing room will as usual be presided over by Charlie Walters, who has coached Varsity teams for many decades now. The majority of his combinations walked off with Intercollegiate titles and he has lost none of his old-time tutorial skill. Anyone who needs training in timing and co-ordination should see the "Man in the wire mask" right away.

Sportswoman

We have managed to find out gleams of information about some of our former associates after much conniving, bribing, and general coaxing—and, anyway, we promised you athletes a little insight into their progress along life's merry way. So here they are: DOCTOR DAVIES, of Hoskin Avenue fame, has given up having potential university athletes touch their toes ten times in favour of the Royal Canadian Air Force. In the old days she was well known around intercollegiate tennis circles.

FREDDIE BAXTER, is now a stauncher part of the Lillian Massey staff. She it was who won the coveted gold medal in life saving whilst swimming merrily along. We wish her happy days in her new home!

JEAN CRAWFORD, the little girl with all the pep from Vic. is now teacher in formation and can be found around the famed O.C.E. halls most any day.

BERYL POLLOCK, known in days of yore for her tenacity in basketball, not to mention her voluminous sportswriting in these here columns, told us—in all confidence—that she hoped the bard year ahead in O.C.E. would not keep the old spirit down. We'll hear more from her come next Monday.

BOBBIE MCDONALD, one of the greatest all-round athletes ever known around these part is now spending her talent on the youth at Danforth Tech. Good luck, Bobbie!

HELEN GUERNEY, also from U.C., and a star Inter-collegiate basketball player, who could often be seen passing a fast and furious ball to "Bobbie," is now posted at Runnymede Collegiate.

KAY BRYDON, from the ranks of the St. Mike's co-eds (better known for her basketball prowess and tests of shooting with WILMA PERRY of Pbysio) is now gracing the Selective Service Office where she likes to juggle the odd bit of stationery.

With this short glimpse of those who have left us, but are not far away, we will leave you to a good weekend of practice, fun, and such—and hope to have some news from the golf and tennis front round about next Tuesday.

Transportation Proves Biggest Difficulty For Smaller Colleges

By Bill Quigley

A recent poll, conducted by the Central Office News Letter, of all the major colleges of the United States, has revealed that the majority of athletic directors favor a continuance of intercollegiate competition. In order to carry on in a world at war, with a service which they believe to be essential to the health and morale of prospective soldiers and of the nation as a whole, the directors are studying the various aspects of the complex intercollegiate picture.

The greatest difficulty encountered has been the war-time factor of transportation. This problem is particularly acute among the smaller colleges. This is due to the fact that the Office of Defense Transportation has ruled that the chartering of buses for the purpose of transporting teams from place to place is taboo. The question of freshmen playing varsity sport is also a main issue, with the majority of colleges favoring freshmen participation.

These problems, however, are mere corollaries to essential requisite of maintaining as many men in the finest condition possible. The most categorical statement of the survey was, "that compulsory participation in physical fitness programs should be required of all male students in every month of the academic year by every college in the United States. These courses must reach maximum efficiency and enrollment if the college athletic association is to make its full contribution to the war effort."

Main questions of the survey, together with the replies from the nation as a whole, were as follows:

1. War factors causing greatest difficulty in maintaining your athletic program:
   - (a) Transportation problems 89%
   - (b) Insufficient number of candidates because of decreased enrollment 33%
   - (c) Inability to obtain types of equipment 9%
   - (d) Decreased revenues 42%
   - (e) Lack of coaches 10%

2. Have you dropped any major sports from intercollegiate competition?
   - (a) Yes 13%
   - (b) No 87%

3. Will you permit freshmen to compete on varsity teams during the next 12 months?
   - (a) Yes 76%
   - (b) No 24%

4. What effect do you believe transporation difficulties will have on your home football attendance in 1942?
   - (a) Will reduce 62%
   - (b) No effect 27%
   - (c) Will increase 7%
   - (d) Undecided 4%

5. If you foresee greatly reduced attendance, do you plan to transfer your home games to population centers?
   - (a) Yes 20%
   - (b) No 80%

6. In general, are you optimistic or pessimistic about the future of your athletic program for the duration of the war?
   - (a) Pessimistic 54%
   - (b) Optimistic 43%
   - (c) Undecided 3%

These were the major questions, though not all, contained in the poll. They indicate a determination on the part of U.S. athletic directors to carry their student charges to the peak of physical fitness. Together with the inauguration of new intramural programs in each college, fashioned after the vast scheme which Toronto's Athletic Association has maintained for a number of years, the American colleges have deemed it advisable to save intercollegiate sport from the fate which struck Canadian colleges.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bill Quigley

Tomorrow afternoon at Varsity Stadium, the R.C.A.F. will tangle with the Navy in the Toronto opener of the O.R.F.U. For students enrolled in the C.O.T.C. this will probably be the first and only chance for them to catch that big-time football fever. Hundreds of Varsity students, with mustard and hot dog debris spread from ear to ear, will swell the near capacity crowd to add their shrieks to the din of old. About the only tangible contact Varsity has left in major football is the Bloor Bowl. And who knows how soon the bailiff will lift that? There should be no favorite for Saturday's tussle. Together with the Army, tomorrow's contestants are the best bets young Canada has ever produced. At that the gobs might surprise and fry a few choice wings.

Varsity Seeks Student Aid In Distribution

Because of wartime labour conditions it has been impossible so far for the management of The Varsity to obtain the services of a boy to deliver the papers.

The governing student body of each college and faculty is being asked to co-operate for the present by arranging for a student to pick up the Varsities from the University of Toronto Press each morning. The papers will be tied in bundles and will be divided in several bundles so that they will not be too heavy to carry.

Commencing Monday, September 28th, the Varsities will be obtained at the NORTH door of the Press, facing the driveway between the Press and the McLellan Laboratories. Students MUST use this door when calling for the papers.

On Monday the papers will be available as follows:

10:30 a.m.: Medicine (1st Bundle); Engineering (1st Bundle); Dentistry; U.C. (1st Bundle); Forestry; Optometry; Loretto; Hart House; C.O.T.C.; Simcoe Hall.

11:30 a.m.: Victoria (1st Bundle); Occupational Therapy; St. Joseph's; St. Michael's; Emmanuel; Household Science; Social Science; Trinity; Wycliffe; Knox; Physical & Health Ed.; O.C.E.; Nursing; Pharmacy; Physiotherapy.

12:30 p.m.: U.C. (2nd bundle); Victoria (2nd bundle); Medicine (2nd bundle); Engineering (2nd bundle).

The student president of each college and faculty should give the messenger instructions as to where he or she should leave the Varsities when they have been brought from the Press.

How News Is Handled

Here's a typical scene in The Varsity Night Office as the newspaper which serves staff and students of the University goes to press five nights a week.

A group of senior staff members is pictured above busy at the job of rewriting and editing the flow of copy. Not shown are the small army of men and women who have gathered the news for the next day's issue.

The Varsity reportorial staff is drawn from all faculties and colleges on the campus and is largely composed of students who are really interested in learning something about how newspapers function. An unofficial school of journalism, The Varsity ranks second to no other collegiate paper in Canada as a training ground for young newsmen. Recent graduates from the newsrooms of The Undergraduate Newspaper are now holding responsible positions in the offices of newspapers across Canada and are scattered throughout the bureaux of The Canadian Press from Vancouver to London.

Of the present Varsity masthead, 12 out of 17 editors have had outside journalistic experience. Tricks of the newspaper game which they have learned during summer vacation-periods will be passed on to reporters both through the personal contacts which the daily routine of The Varsity involves, and through a series of news lectures to be conducted shortly.

To students interested in finding out just how a campus paper serves its University, to men and women who would like an extra-curricular activity which will be both informative and interesting, The Varsity extends a cordial welcome. Those who want to join the staff—and be among those students who know what is going on around campus—are asked to report to either the Men's Office on the second floor of the west wing of Hart House, or to the Women's Office, Room 42A, University College.

The University Library has changed its opening time from 8:45 a.m. to 8:15 to allow students to return books before 8:30 classes. The Medical and Law reading rooms, however, will not be open until the usual 8:45. Meds and Law students may hand in books at the main desk before this time.

"We don't expect many readers at the early opening hour, so we are using few assistants then," said W. S. Wallace, Head Librarian. "The change is merely being made to facilitate the returning of night books."

The library will continue to close at 10:00 p.m.. Night books must be in by 10:00 a.m. sharp or the usual fine of fifty cents per book will be charged.

The library staff will again conduct tours of instruction in the proper use of the library. Undergraduates wishing to learn the mechanics of library usage should make appointments for these tours at the desk.

So this was the day we promised to tell you about women, mostly all of whom we thought were very deep, but since it's such a long time since we knew one, and we never, never were one, we had more or less forgotten how naive the Freshie section of the sex can be.

Well, the other day we were brought up with a jolt by a Saint Hilda's Senior who swears that she showed up in time's nick to prevent one of her Freshie charges from tendering, o-so-trustfully, to the Bursar two identical checks made out in full for her fees. . . . And that inane alien Kratkoye thought he was being utterly absurd on that subject in yesterday's Cat.

But when women seem the screwiest they actually make sense . . . sometimes. At the University of Washington one group of co-eds had a whee of a time cutting cards , , , right in half. Fearing a shortage of playing cards they thought they could make them last longer that way. LOYAL CITIZENS DO NOT HOARD.

It can only happen in exam time even with women. Passersby at Bloor and Yonge one day last spring were amazed to see a History sophomore blithely curtseying in the best St. James's manner bang in the middle of that busy intersection. Her explanation after her miraculous escape from annihilation was that she was curtseying to the moon for luck in her fast approaching finals. It works, because she's now a Junior . . . AND BESIDES, SHE MIGHT HAVE GOT AN AEGROTAT.

Never break a date with a woman! It leaves her with time on her hands, and a woman with time on her hands is apt to start thinking. At least that is what a rueful fratman at the University of Texas found out.

This ditched demoiselle schemed well and for two months deluged the lad with unwanted commodities and services. Leading off with a carload of fertilizer she quickly sent him a termite exterminator, four plumbers, a crew of men to sandpaper the frat house floors, a phone message to call what turned out to be the Texas alcoholic sanitarium, a woman who called on him at lunchtime to measure him for a surgical corset, a gallon of well-mixed cherry and pineapple ice cream and a veterinary who wanted to care for his poor little dog Punkin. She also had a taxi company call him every half hour from 4.30 until 7 o'clock one morning, and prevailed upon the secretary of the local boy scout association to invite him to become a member.

Eventually the lad tumbled to the gag and took her on a date . . . in a conspicuous commercial truck.

Then there was the merely considerate lass at the University of Washington who called a lad at 4 a.m. to let him know she couldn't make a 10 o'clock tennis date.

Yup, there's no understanding women, but then it's comforting to think that they don't understand men either. For instance, a young man-about-campus of some musical pretensions thought it very deft when he apologized for stepping on his dancing partner's toes by saying, 'I'm so sorry, but, you see, I keep following those subtler little rhythms which you probably don't hear." AND SHE STILL DOESN'T APPRECIATE IT.

So now we bit you a fond farewell untill next week some time, meanwhile we are turning over this space to our colleague of the news department Doc Savage. Doc, for you whose memories have lapsed during the summer, is an intrepid journalist of the Stanley type, who last year was sent out to interview a horse and ended by actually riding the beast.

Doc pulled his ligaments together in time to put in a summer's work on the New York News down in fabulous Gotham, and up from those meadows rich with corn he comes to regale you on Monday.

year there will be less drill required, and a wider variety of courses are being offered to those enrolling for the second and third years. Those entering the Detachment for the first time are required to take basic courses in Red Cross History and Organization, First Aid, Civilian Defence (A.R.P.) and a minimum of Military Drill. Advanced training is given in the second and third years under four sections: Transport, Nursing, Office Administration, and Food Administration.

Two courses in which preference is given to students of the third and fourth years are Training as Hospital Nursing Aids, and as volunteers in Civic Day Nurseries. The first of these consists of 20 hours lectures and 60 hours hospital ward duty. The second gives 15 hours instruction with additional practice. This course constitutes only one-half the total requirement and must be taken along with one of the other short courses.

There are also courses offered in Nutrition, Recreation Leadership, Civilian Defence, Home Nursing, and First Aid. Red Cross Sewing under the University Women's War Service Committee is another choice for one-half the requirement.

43 R.C.A.F. Cadets Take Training at Borden

Described as keen and "very bright", 43 University of Toronto C.O.T.C. Air Force Wing Cadets went to Camp Borden last May to supplement their 96 hours of ground school training gained during the school year with a two week camp period. They went north in three groups, the first entering camp on May 3 and the others following on May 17 and May 31.

At camp they studied and applied their work in navigation, wireless, armament and signals, and in addition the Camp Borden authorities arranged to have each man put in two hours' flying time.

Committee On Exemptions From Women's War Training To Meet Early This Week

Professional Courses and First Year Arts Take Training on a Voluntary Basis Only in Various Branches

DECISIONS UP TO BOARD

A committee dealing with exemptions and allocation to the various courses in the syllabus of war training for women is expected to meet some time this week, it was announced Saturday. A meeting of the Board of Governors last week made training compulsory for all undergraduate women except first year students and those enrolled in professional courses.

The term "professional courses" was defined as all courses other than pass or honour arts. This includes students in Occupational Therapy, Physiotherapy, Nursing, Engineering, Physical and Health Education, Social Work, Teachers Courses and Ontario College of Education. Students in these courses may take training on a voluntary basis.

Regarding choice of courses of training Miss Parkes said that as far as possible students will be allocated to courses of their own choosing. The eight courses of instruction, which have been endorsed by the Board of Governors, are the Canadian Red Cross Corps, hospital nursing aid, civic day nursery volunteer work, nutrition, recreation, Red Cross sewing, home nursing and civilian defence.

While Red Cross regulations do not permit compulsory membership of the C.R.C.C., Miss A. E. M. Parkes, commandant of the University detachment of the C.R.C.C., pointed out that membership in the corps is regarded as the equivalent of compulsory training in any Canadian university.

CORRECTION

Meds, Science Quota Increased at Queen's

Kingston, Sept. 27—(CUP)—Under pressure of an unprecedented number of applications Queen's University has raised the limit for admission to the first years of Medicine and Applied Science, Dr. W. E. McNeill, Vice-Principal and Treasurer revealed.

In Medicine the first year quota was raised from 45 to 50 leaving about 100 applications over. In second year there were nearly 100 applications for the ten vacancies left by first year failures.

In the Faculty of Applied Science the normal limit of 160 has been boosted this year to 240 by the university authorities. Enrolment is now close to this maximum.

A slight increase in the volume of freshman registration in Arts is also indicated.

Faculties Must Remedy Varsity Delivery Problem

Because of wartime labour conditions it has been impossible so far for the management of The Varsity to obtain the services of a boy to deliver the papers.

The governing body of each college and faculty is being asked to co-operate for the present by arranging for a student to pick up the Varsities from the University of Toronto Press each morning. The papers will be tied in bundles and labelled. Those for the larger faculties will be divided in several bundles so that they will not be too heavy to carry.

The Varsities will be obtained at the NORTH door of the Press, facing the driveway between the Press and the McLennan Laboratories. Students MUST use this door when calling for the papers.

The papers will be available as follows:

9:30 a.m.: Medicine (1st bundle); Engineering (1st bundle); Denistry; U.C. (1st bundle); Forestry; Optometry; Loretto; Trinity; St. Joseph's; St. Michael's; Victoria (1st bundle); Library; Hart House; Simcoe Hall; C.O.T.C.

11:30 a.m.: U.C. (2nd bundle); Victoria (2nd bundle); Medicine (2nd bundle); Engineering (2nd bundle).

The student president of each college and faculty should give the messenger instructions as to where he or she should leave the Varsities when they have been brought from the Press.

From Tuesday to Friday each week the papers will be obtained at the times listed above. On Mondays they will be ONE HOUR later.

ARNOLD NASH OF S.C.M. ADDRESSES OPENING SERVICE

Rev. Arnold Nash, Secretary of the Student Christian Movement in Toronto, addressed a large gathering at the all-University service Sunday evening in Convocation hall. The service was planned by the Ceneral executive of the S.C.M. and conducted by President Cody.

"God has placed us here in the University to fulfil part of his purpose," Rev. Nash explained. "This age is waiting for the appearance of another Galileo. He may be here in this university, and then, he may not. But the fact remains, we must be prepared as students as well as Christians for his arrival, no matter from where he appears."

The speaker explained how to fulfil this duty by stating that, "it involves study based on Christian principles. It is not to be expected that an answer is to be found in each chapter of the Bible from Genesis to Revelations for all scientific and sociological questions. But God is at the very origin of all creation."

What he stressed, was the Christian spirit at work in learning.

Rev. Nash went on to say that all great scholars were connected with their seats of learning—Paul of Tarsus, St. Thomas of Aquinas, and Banting of Toronto. For that reason we should all be sensitive to the fact that we are privileged to teach or be in attendance at this University.

"We are indeed fortunate to be able to pursue our studies at the University, but other teachers and students in foreign countries are not so favoured." This was the basis of an appeal for the work of the World Student Christian Federation. "It is hard for students in Toronto to realize that some hundreds of teachers, professors, parsons and students are suffering acutely from tuberculosis in Greece."

The service was followed by a reception in Trinity College, for first year students, and for students whose first contact with the S.C.M. was this service.

Two Survivors Of Ottawa Describe Tragic Death Of Surgeon-Lieut. Hendry

Exhausted Doing Emergency Operations Before Battle, Unable to Cling to Raft to Await Rescue Craft

HERO OF DISASTER

Heroic manner in which Surgeon-Lieutenant George Hendry, former captain of Varsity's intercollegiate hockey team, and medical officer aboard H.M.C.S. Ottawa, met death in the icy waters of the Atlantic has been told by Lieutenant Lunn Lantier of Montreal, a brother officer aboard the lost ship.

Torpedoed Sept. 13, while on convoy duty, the destroyer went down with two-thirds of her crew. Before she sank, Hendry had performed two major operations and had gone through four sleepless days and nights aboard the battle-torn vessel, caring for wounded men. When the time came to save himself, he was too exhausted to cling to a life-raft until rescue came.

Interviewed upon his arrival at an eastern Canadian port, where rescue vessels carried the Ottawa's survivors, Lieut. Lantier told reporters that be rated Hendry as one of the two heroes of the engagement in which the Ottawa was lost. The other was the vessel's commander, Lieutenant-Commander C. A. (Larry) Rutherford of Montreal.

"Both of them had been without sleep for four days and nights," he said, "Larry commanding his ship in a running battle with subs and Hendry working like a Trojan on two cases that he would have been lucky to save if be had had a city hospital's facilities at his disposal.

"When the time came to save them-

STUDENTS ACROSS CANADA ATTEND COUCHICHING CAMP

Over 50 students from universities all across Canada attended the Student Christian Movement Conference held at Lake Couchiching, Sept. 12-19, this fall. This number, including 12 undergraduates from Varsity, was representative of nearly all the major universities in the Dominion.

Headed by Dr. Lawrence Sears, professor of philosophy at Ohio Wesleyan University, the leaders of the Camp included many well-known figures. Rev. Robert Mackie led discussions involving the World's Student Christian Federation. Professor Jomes Wade, Queens University, presented the topic, "Canada and the World of Natious," while the problem of "The Church in the World Today" was investigated by a group led by Mr. Edwin Espy, General Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, New York. Professor A. G. Dorland, University of Western Ontario, and Rev. Arnold Nash, General Secretary of the S.C.M., University of Toronto, and Mrs. J. D. Hutchinson of Sherbourne St. United Church were also present.

Discussions on labour issues in Canada were led by Sam Lawrence of Hamilton.

In the many periods devoted to recreation, the degelates played baseball, tennis and basketball, swam nearly every night," said Frances Aitken, Chairman of the Conference, "with lots of singing led by Murray Brooks of the local Y.M.C.A.. And sometimes we had folk dancing, too."

Among many interesting personalities present were Jerome Davis and Dale Brown. Mr. Davis, a graduate of Yale, investigates conditions among Nazi prisoners of war in Canada and assists in providing them with educational facilities. Mr. Brown is particularly interested in securing sponsors for foreign students interned in this country.

To Form Committee On Reconstruction

Winnipeg, Sept. 27—(CUP)—Economics professors from the universities of Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba confered here with Dr. F. C. James, chairman of the National Reconstruction Committee, last June 27, in an effort to work out a system of co-operation between university professors and the national committee.

The committee seeks one man from each university to engage in research work with present members of the committee. All professors present expressed willingness to co-operate, but the final choice is to made by the university authorities shortly.

The June meeting was merely for organization purposes and no proposals on post-war problems were advanced.

NEW UNIVERSITY OPENS EVENING CLASSES FOR WAR WORKERS

Without fanfare or opening ceremony of any kind, Carleton College, Canada's newest institution of higher learning, opened its doors in Ottawa last week.

Since most of its 200 students are engaged in government work or are otherwise employed, the college gives evening courses only. Its quarters are located at an Ottawa high school of commerce.

Plans for the formation of the college date back to 1938, when a group of university minded Ottawa residents first discussed the need of establishing a non-sectarian institution in Ottawa. War interrupted their plans, but it was decided that the need for the college was increased rather than diminished by wartime conditions in the capital.

Training given by the college is largely designed to make war workers more proficient in their jobs. Students may specialize in one particular subject related to their daytime activities. The courses are equivalent to the first two year of a regular university curriculum, although more advanced courses may be given later if sufficient demand arises.

Subjects taught are those of a regular faculty, including languages, science, mathematics, political science and economies and others. A course in Russian is being offered, under the direction of Dr. L. I. Lalkow of the Canadian Censorship Bureau.

Members of the teaching staff have been "drafted" from many divisions of the government service and include many former staff members of Canadian universities. C. D| Rouillard of now on leave of absence while engaged the University College French staff, in war work, is one of the college's instructors in French.

President of the college is Dr. H. M. Tory, D.Sc., LL.D., F.R.S.C., F.R.H.S., former president of the National Research Council and of the University of Alberta. In the closing years of the First Great War Dr. Tory directed the "Khaki" College, otherwise known as the Educational Services, Canadian Overseas Forces.

Students at Carleton College hail from all provinces of Canada and from many other countries. But the majority hail from Ottawa and district.

Among the first students to register was Joan Lanipel, a Modern Language graduate of University College last June.

No social or athletic program is on the university program as most of its students are busy with war jobs. As yet no fraternities or students' councils have been organized and there is little likelihood of any large-scale extra-curricular activities for the duration of

Help Wanted

The University of Toronto is playing an important part, together with other Canadian universities, in the prosecution of the national war effort. It is producing doctors, dentists, scientists; carrying out seeret and highly technical laboratory work; conduet-ing scientifie courses for men in uniform; training officers and men for army and air foree service upon graduation; providing compulsory war serviee courses for women; and assisting in a number of minor war activities.

Largest of the Canadian universities so engaged in war service, this institution has done much for the nation since September, 1939. We believe it can do still more. And we believe that The Varsity, as one of the few integrating agencies on the huge campus, can help the University increase the value of its effort—not perhaps in scope, but eertainly to some extent in efficiency.

Because of the very size and diversity of the undertakings carried on at this University, it is essential that they be eo-ordinated and correlated. And as one of the major links whieh exist between the separate faculties and colleges, The Varsity feels a responsibility to bring to staff and students engaged in a certain type of war work news of how others are engaged, in order that all parties may profit by example and precept.

In order to carry out this function, The Varsity today respectfully solicits the co-operation of staff members and students. Such co-operation will prove of immense value to us, and will, we believe, become of no little value to the University as a whole.

From the Staff

In the past The Varsity has received a great deal of co-operation from certain members of the staff, and at least a sort of amused tolerance from others. Many staff members however have chosen to rebuff representatives of The Varsity with distrust when approaehed for information or advice. To those in the latter category, we would gratefully point out that The Varsity in recent years has been treated with invariable eourtesy and confidence by the President, and would humbly suggest that he is more properly qualified to pass judgment upon our worth than are they.

The eo-operation we ask of staff members is merely this: that they make information whieh is not secret readily available to us when we seek it. In return, we want them to feel free to tell us about anything whieh they believe would profit by publicity in our eolumns, and to offer any suggestions or criticisms they consider worth while.

From Student Groups

Co-operation sought from students, and particularly from the leaders of student groups and organizations, is of a more complex character. In addition to seeking aid in relation to distribution, we are asking them to help us in providing fair and representative eoverage of their activities. As was pointed out on this page a year ago, the provision that campus organizations can make for helping to ensure such eoverage may be divided into four methods:

(1) the organization may appoint a press relations or liason officer who is preferably a member both of the organization and of the staff of The Varsity;

(2) The Varsity may supply a reporter who makes that organization a "beat" and keeps in close touch with key officials;

(3) the organization may supply prepared press releases or "handouts" for publication;

(4) executives may inform The Varsity by telephone when important or interesting news is already available or is believed to be breaking.

Of the above methods, experience has shown the first two to be usually the most effective; but in certain cases the latter two can be of considerable value. In any case, we urge that student leaders take eare, at the earliest opportunity, that adequate provision is being made for their organizations to receive proper publicity. Special problems in relation to spreading the news about eertain groups should be discussed with The Varsity's News Editor, who will make every effort throughout the year to see that no organization is given less spaee in these columns than it deserves.

From Individual Students

Finally—and in these days of shortage of manpower perhaps most important—comes an appeal for eo-operation on the part of individual students. As usual, in the early days of the autumn term. The Varsity is campaigning for an inereased staff of reporters. We realize that when there is a more serious application than ever to the demands of serious study, when both men and women are undergoing eompulsory war training, when courses are streamlined and students handpieked, that spare time for extra-eurrieular aetivity is at a premium.

Therefore we base our appeal for recruits this year not on the chances for good-natured daliance which a position on The Varsity used to afford; but on the distinctly valuable opportunity of an education in things journalistic which is offered.

At one time being a Varsity staff-member was regarded by many as a mild form of game which filled odd hours here and there, gave one a chance to pretend one was Haywood Broun, wear one's hat at a rakish tilt, travel to Montreal and Kingston for football weekends, and view life with half-baked synieism. In consequence, during the years preceding the war, The Varsity had staffs far larger than its present skeleton entourage. But with the advent of military training and all that goes with it to the campus, the staff dwindled; and the process has eontinued until now we are probably as weak numerically as we have ever been at this time of year since The Varsity became a daily nearly 20 years ago. Because almost the only students now who eonsider it worth their while to work for The Varsity are those who are seriously interested in newspapers as a career.

Which means this: The Varsity's present staff is putting more work into its publication, man-for-man, than any previous staff did; and in eonsequenee is learning more about practical journalism. This is not a boast. Proof lies with the record of the number of recent staffers who have graduated to big-time newspapers and press services. Several of Canada's important dailies—including all three of Toronto's metropolitan papers—have men and women in their editorial departments that learned about news with The Varsity. There are other alumni of the Hart House newsroom scattered throughout the burcaux of The Canadian Press. To have worked seriously for three or four years on this paper is to be a capable young journalist.

We will mention only one name—that of Ross Munro, ace war eorrespondent of The Canadian Press, whose epie reporting of the recent combined operations raid on Dieppe has won him a reputation as one of Canada's greatest newspapermen.

This University offers no course in theoretical journalism. But if you want to learn about the practical side, here is your ehance. It is on this ground that we are asking for reinforeements this year. Because we can't offer the pristine pleasures of all-expenses-paid trips to McGill, or the former insouciant atmosphere of casual bustle. Anyone who want to place in this year's Varsity staff will find a lot of hard work ahead.

Although we don't deny that we enjoy it.

ART MUSIC Drama

Perfect

Zara Nelsova

It is hard for a critie to be faced with the problem of writing about the same musician in two consecutive reviews. Even when he eurtails his first attempt, in order to leave something for the second, his lot is diffieult. Zara Nelsova is perfect, and any superlatives whieh might be offered are unnecessary.

The elimax of Miss Nelsova's program was the Beethoven Sontat in A Major, played with exactly that degree of feeling which it needed, and no more. It may be remarked that her 'eello never eloyed; no matter how mueh feeling she produeed, it was always free from any hint of saeeharine sentimentality. This was again noticeable in the Haydn Sonata in C Major, where Miss Nelsova showed how real was her sympathy for the music.

Technically, the program was flawless. Miss Nelsova leaves nothing to chance: she is always perfectly in tune, even in the most outlandish positions; her bowing is always precisely what is required; and her tone colour is subject to the most subtle varitions, far beyond the capability of the ordinary artists. Not once was there the slightest feeling that anything could have been improved.

It would be imposible to close this review without some mention of the credit due to Leo Barkin, accompanist. Too often, the critic hears an otherwise perfect recital marred by the pianist's ineptitude. It cannot be too much to say that without Mr. Barkin's assistance Saturday night, Miss Nelsova's program could not have been the perfection it turned out to be.

FRESHMAN VANISHES ON CAMPUS

Was on Way to Hart House Pool Room to Carry on Research in Physics

O'MALLEY SUSPECTED

Somewhere on St. George St., Sept. 28, 1942—(CUP)—The disappearance of Sidcpocked Fitzfizzwater, first year M & P student was reported late Saturday afternoon by officials of the Tau Sigma Kappa Tau Sigma Kappa fraternity (known also as TSK TSK), to which young Fitzfizzwater had pledged himself shortly after his arrival at the University of Toronto, early last week.

Fitzfisswater, after a hearty lunch, had set out for Hart House poolroom, following a map given to him by two senior fraternity brothers. He was engaged in a study of the angles of incidence and reflection of billiard balls, in order to be able to complete his Physics Problems, which are due Wednesday at noon, on the top floor of the McLennan Labs.

Well informed quarters close to the Law Building have intimated that they suspect foul play, and believe that the disappearance should be considered as a kidnapping. They base their belief upon several facts, the chief of which was a notice that appeared in The Varsity two days preceding the alleged snatching. In addition, the absence of a ransom note strengthens the opinion that the kidnappers are hiding Fitzfizzwater in an effort to starve him into submission and force him to sign a contract to report for The Varsity.

A press-gang, headed by Shamus O'Malley, Editor in Chief of The Varsity has been seen operating in the neighborhood where the youthful physicist was last seen.

Legal eagles from the Faculty of Law intimated that as soon as corroborating evidence could be obtained, O'Malley would be held for questioning. When informed that O'Malley was attempting to have issued a writ of non compos mentis they merely shrugged and said: "Huh! He should talk!"

Victim Of Ottawa Sinking Was Member 1934-35 Of Athletic Directorate

selves, there in the water hanging on to rafts, they just had nothing left. They slipped away before the rescue vessels could reach us.

"The men of the Ottawa just about worshiped Dr. Hendry. He was their sports officer and one of the most popular men on board. The survivors feel his loss terribly.

"The first man he operated on was a merchant seaman we had picked up after his ship was torpedoed. An iron bolt had been blown into his stomach by the explosion. All Dr. Hendry had for a 'hospital' was a small cabin. He operated on that seaman twice, and the first time the patient had to be lashed to the table to keep him in place, the seas were running so high, and it was all the rest of us could do to keep our footing. Later, Dr. Hendry gave him a blood transfusion and he seemed to be doing fine.

"The second operation, an emergency appendectomy, was on one of our own men, Able Seaman 'Pooch' Buckeski of Windsor, Ont. He was making a good recovery on the night when the torpedoes sank us and I remember seeing him after the attack. He had been brought on deck and two men were looking after him. He had an inflated life-belt on, and was very cheerful. They were going to put him in one of the whale-boats but both were smashed, and we never saw him again. As for the doctor, I never saw him either."

"I did," Warrant Officer Gunner L. I. Jones of Vancouver interrupted. "He was on my float. I remember he was full of good spirits, trying to cheer the rest of us. But after a while we drifted out of the oil-covered area and a big sea came up. The raft capsized three or four times, and we all had to scramble in the dark to get back to it. Lieut. Hendry was able to get back and hang on the first three times, but the next time we got overturned he just didn't get back."

Lieut. Lantier told how Lieut. Hendry had worked over the wounded in the moments after the Ottawa was hit by torpedoes. "The first one hit us up forward, under the port bow," he said. "The calm of everybody on board was magnificent. We surveyed the damage and decided it wasn't fatal, and we could carry on. I'm sure we could have brought her into port of we had not been hit again.

"We extricated the wounded from the smashed bow quarters—about a quarter of the crew were killed by that first explosion — and the medical officer looked after the most serious cases. Then the second torpedo hit, and just about broke us in two.

"That explosion killed more men—about a third of the ship's company were killed by the two blasts—and the order to abandon ship was given. The Ottawa went down two minutes after the second hit, and about 12 minutes after the first. Her stern went up and she slid under."

George Hendry was one of Varsity's outstanding and most popular athletes. For five or six years he was a member of Varsity hockey sextets and climaxed his puck career in 1933-34 when he was elected captain of the senior squad. The following year, pressure of medical studies forced his retirement from hockey but he sat on the Athletic Directorate of the University until he graduated in 1935.

Sportswoman

By Beryl Pollock

Back at it again. This time we shall attempt to tie up a few of the ends of sport from last season. It was an all University College year, with the exception of bowling, which was won by Ruth Publow, who has graduated from O.T.

The golf titlist, Marion Walker, after four successful years at this sport, has passed through the U.C. portals. This year's tournament is expected to be wide open, with a good showing of entries from the freshies.

In the other individual sports, tennis and badminton, the playoffs ended up with the Red and White supreme by the semi-finals. Shirley Geldert won the tennis, and Jill Cavenough, who has since finished her course at the Margaret Eaton School, took the badminton late in March. Margaret Ham led the skiers.

Looking at the team sports, we see that U.C. produced two superior swimming squads, and won that event hands down. Their freshies lost the basketball crown to their more experienced seniors. The U.C. hockey maids claimed the edge over the Vic girls.

And that, my friends, is the end of the U.C. victories for last season. Will they repeat again this year? Let us hope that the other colleges can turn the tables in some of these sports, and balance up the sports programme.

One difficulty they face at the outset, is that U.C. has more athletes from which to choose. Besides its own arts students, U.C. also receives a number of promising stars from courses affiliated with the college, for example the Health and Physical Education students, and Household Science. Many of these arrangements are only temporary, and in a few years these faculties may form their own teams.

The problem has been given considerable thought, and such things as point systems, alphabetical divisions of teams, as well as various other solutions have been recommended.

Another plan that we have heard suggested, was that first and second years of P.H.E. enter teams and probably work in as officials and coaches by their third year. But when the Physical Ed. lad their own swimming team three years ago, none of the other colleges had a chance to come even close. When these girls swam for their own colleges, the meet was much closer.

This problem will, no doubt, work itself out. The large registration in first year leads us to hope that there will be a good crop of freshie teams this year. Some of the girls in the upper years may have to curtail their athletic activities now that they have compulsory training.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

GONE ARE THE DAYS....

Varsity Stadium looked just like The-Good-Old-Days on Saturday except that a couple of new colleges seem to be in the league this year. Another change that stood out was the seemingly miraculous drill demonstration at half time instead of the chariot races and pushball games of yore. But the excitement was no whit diminished. The referees are just as blind as ever (Bill Stukus should go into the Tank Corps after that "Earthworm Tractor" job he performed to hang up the first pigeon touchdown).... An R.A.F. officer stirred up more commotion with a pop bottle than School and Meds have managed to arouse in years.... Girls, with-hearthrobs-in-the-Navy, screamed just as wildly as I-think-Queens-men-are-wonderful girls used to scream.... The usual heavy dew was prevelant; someone in front of us remarked that it was perfect weather for the game—five minutes later we were both floating down the stands on the same piece of driftwood.... Lew Hayman looked even more mournful than he used to.... Warren Stevens still talked for five minutes about whom he thought would win, without giving the slightest clue as to whom he thought would win.... WOMEN are still wonderful things to look at when the game becomes dull—OR EVEN IF IT DOESN'T!

A YANK AT VARSITY

Bill Young, great Harvard star of a few years ago, took in the game on Saturday. Bill played with laundryman George Marshall's Washington Redskins for the last three years (don't menton 73 or Chicago Bears to him) and is now a Canadian Medical Corps Captain. Thought that Elwyn Morris was a great ballplayer and could really go places—with a little blocking. Don't mention that to a C.R.U. executive—he would probably explode in righteous indignation at the mere thought. Young also opined that the Navy's lateral passing must have been the result of a nightmare. (Teddy Morris should instruct his charges that the Bounce Pass is reserved for basketball.)

THE FACE IS FAMILIAR....

Never knew Don Boxer could run till we saw him smear a pigeon play for a twenty yard loss. Last year as a half back he never moved faster than an accelerated waddle.... Surprised to see Frank Buckley, who played a bit of football with St. Mike's interfaculty squad, starting on the Navy half line. Did a fair job at that. Most of the Navy team, in fact, looked as if the game was somewhat new to them.... But their cheerleader at least had the distinction of making the neatest tackle of the day.

NEWMAN CLUB RECEPTION USES COCOA FOR TEA

Cocoa replaced tea at Dr. Victoria Mueller's annual "tea" for the women of St. Michael's College at Newman Club Thursday afternoon.

The purpose of the affair was to get each girl acquainted with forty new friends, and as each girl was leaving Rev. J. E. McHenry, rector of the Club, proclaimed himself their forty-first.

Dr. Victoria Mueller of St. Michael's College and Miss Frances Grimes, St. Michael's alumni president received the girls in the white room at Newman Club.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

cently Dr. Jefferys issued the first volume of a book, A Picture Gallery of Canadian History, which is entirely his own work. Both text and illustrations are the product of his vast knowledge of Canada's past and of his ability as an artist.

From now until October 11 the Toronto Art Gallery is presenting a comprehensive selection of the pictures which make up this book. Many of them are already familiar. The large water-colours: Champlain on Georgian Bay, Cartier Erecting a Cross at Gaspe, 1534, The Founding of Halifax, and others, are all well known in reproduction. The originals hold an exciting quality of authenticity which no reproduction can give.

The other pictures in the exhibition are all black and white pen-and-ink drawings, with the exception of one small oil painting. Most of them show historical scenes from Canada's founding, and the others preserve a wealth of technical knowledge of the almost lost arts of the Indians and the Eskimos and the details of the early life of the white man.

The pictures are of great interest in themselves to everyone. For the student of Canadian history whether amateur or professional this exhibition is clearly a must.

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB TO START SEASON TOOAY

This year, is in the past, the Hart House Glee Club will present an opportunity for all University men to meet for an hour in the fraternal atmosphere of Hart House and enjoy part-singing under expert direction. All those interested should be present at the organization meeting and first rehearsal which will be held at 5:00 p.m. today in the Music Room, Hart House. Previous experience in choral groups is not necessary.

At the preliminary meeting the most convenient time for rehearsals will be decided upon in order that they may clash as little as possible with military training.

The conductor, Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., director of the Coliseum Chorus, enters his eighth season with the Club this year.

Among the concerts given by the Glee Club last year were the programme of Christmas Carols in the Great Hall, a broadeast over the Canadian Broadeasting Corporation, and the final Sunday Evening Concert in the 1941-1942 series.

Organ Recitals Continue This Year

The series of eight organ recitals, given each year by Dr. Healey Willan, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., the University organist, will be resumed this year about the end of October in Convoeation Hall.

In past years Dr. Willan has presented his recitals an alternate Tuesdays, and that custom will be retained this year. Dr. Willan plans to give four recitals this term, and the remaining four in the spring term.

Definite announcements about the possibility of guest organists or the programmes are not available at this time. However, in the past year, Dr. Willan based part of his later programmes on requests by the student body, and he will be interested in receiving suggestions for this year's programmes.

Dr. Willan revealed to the Varsity yesterday that the series of eight recitals is part of the duties attendant to the purely honorary position of Organist at the University.

Soccer And Rugby Players To Meet On Back Campus This Afternoon At Five

Two Weeks' Training Period Must Be Completed Before Active Participation Is Possible in Certain Sports

TO STRESS CONOITION

Warren Stevens, Athletic Director, announced Saturday that the Directorate has ruled that during the session of 1941-42, all men turning out for certain sports and meets to be designated by the Athletic Association, must put in a period of two weeks' training before the first scheduled game or meet. This training, stressing conditioning and the fundamentals of the sports on hand, will be supervised by Mr. Stevens himself, assisted by an able staff.

This afternoon at 5 p.m. all men in the university who contemplate playing interfaculty football or soccer, will report to Mr. Stevens on the back campus. Stevens himself will direct the gridiron aspirants, with "Beefy" McMillan, Jim Murray, Doc Grosskurth, Stew Scott, Dave Ferris, Jack Plaxton and Glen Munro acting as assistants. The soccerites will be headed by such stars as Jim Patten, Art Boyd, Don Clee and Dave Hibbard.

The conditioning program for the rugby players will follow closely that conducted for Varsity's former intercollegiate senior teams, Mr. Stevens announced. This innovation was deemed advisable in order that all participants might start the season in better physical shape than ever before and also to gain a knowledge in the fundamentals, such as blocking, tackling, ball carrying, etc. McMillan and Murray will handle the linemen, while Grosskurth and Stew Scott will aid the backs.

It is expected that the training period will run daily until Saturday so far as sugby and soccer go. At that point all men will report back to their respective squads where they will continue on with their training. For those faculties and colleges where football coaching material is short, an advisory board of experienced players has been set up in order to offer assistants to those who are new to the coaching angle. The Standing Committees in the various sports will have charge of attendance records.

Warren Stevens has stressed that all men participating in such fall sports as football, soccer, track and harrier, lacrosse and swimming must undergo this preliminary training. Hec Phillips, noted Canadian track coach, is ready to receive all track contestants every afternoon after 4:30 p.m. at Varsity Stadium. It must be noted that before a man can participate in a track meet he must comply with certain requirements of training as designated by Mr. Phillips. Further announcements regarding track, swimming, and lacrosse will be made in a day or so.

All men interested in gymnasties are requested to report to Charley Swygard today at 6 p.m. This is a month earlier for the aerialists than in former years and is in keeping with the new streamlined conditioning program which will prevail this year throughout the Athletic Wing.

let's go places

Loew's presents a happily balanced double bill this week with "Crossroads," starring William Powell and Hedy Lamarr, on the serious side and "Born to Sing" with our favourite young actress, Virginia Wiedler and a whole tribe of talented 'kids on the lighter end.

LOEW'S DOUBLE BILL

As Basil Rathbone plays cat to William Powell's mouse in "Crossroads'" extortion plot Powell gets a long-awaited chance to show his ability as a serious actor. Rathbone is at his supberb nastiest in this one.

Hedy Lamarr plays the gentle, beautiful wife of the tortured Powell, and Felix Bressart turns in a fine bit of character work as the loyal physician friend of the couple.

Despite an unjustified and somewhat tedious patriotic finale "Born to Sing" is a refreshing story of the troubles besetting the juvenile producers of a musical show and of the arrival in the nick of time of a fairy godmother in the form of a taxi racketeer. The musical numbers are fast-moving and include a Quiz Kids skit and a conga number which are especially worthy of note.

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD TO MEET ON WEONESDAY

The University College Players' Guild opens its season this year with an organization meeting in the Women's Union this coming Wednesday.

This year's exeeutive, headed by Ken Peck, plans to produce a full-length drama as well as several theatre nights of shorter plays.

The Guild's activities provide scope for anyone interested in the acting, staging, directing, make-up, or writing of drama, and the executive urges anyone interested in any of these aspeets of stage work to turn up from 3:30 to 5:30 Wednesday. There will be refreshments and dancing as well as discussions of the year's plans on drama.

Last year the Guild's activities featured the weekly production of one-act plays. One of the season's highlights was an informal talk by Canada Lee, negro star of Orson Welles' production 'Native Son.'

The Varsity Reviews

The Trinity Review

Leading off with an editorial which asks in its title "Are We All in the Front Line?" and then somehow fails to give a very definite answer to the question, the summer issue of The Trinity University Review offers little for a critic to sink his teeth into. The sixty-page issue is mainly devoted to convocation notes, examination results and active service lists.

One bright bit of journalism by the managing editor, W. L. N. Somerville, is worthy of note. A comprehensive survey of "Life in Trinity's New Residences," it covers the subject with humor and frankness, and (its sole blemishes) a few poor puns.

Three bits of light poetry supply the only items of really creative writing in the magazine. The first, an enthusiastically vindictive voodoo chant "To a Bureaucrat," while amusing, is spoiled by its incongruous see-saw of Longfellownian rhythm.

The second, "On First Looking into Churchill's Homer," applies a hypermolical irony to wartime clothing shortages to become one of the best bits of light verse to pass our way in a good while.

"No Moaning at the Bar" by Lynn Howard deals with the story of an albatross named Hector in whimsical rhymed free verse. Except for a few amusing false rhymes there is little to justify the use of verse in this case.

Great credit is due the staff of The Review for bringing out a summer issue at all, being, to the best of our knowledge, the only campus magazine to do so, and we hope that the winter issues will force us to bestow more pure praise than cautious criticism.

Housing Shortage Acute at Queen's

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 27—(CUP)—Due to the overcrowding of the city with defense workers, soldiers and their families Queen's University students are facing what has been termed the most serious housing shortage in the history of the University.

Male students, for whom there are no residences at Queen's, are the most seriously affected by the situation. A few women have also had difficulty in locating rooms, since the women's residences cannot accommodate them all.

Steps have been taken by the University authorities to combat the situation. Beds secured from the Army have been set up in the gymnasium and are available at fifty cents a night to those who cannot find rooms. During the month of September a campaign was carried out to secure the help of all those who might possibly have rooms in which students could live. Many local residents, including several members of the faculty, responded.

The principal of the University has expressed the hope that the situation will resolve itself, and has assured student that if it does not the University will make every effort to achieve a satisfactory permanent settlement.

ST. MICHAEL'S DAY MASS

Students and graduates of St. Michael's College are invited to attend the annual St. Michael's day Mass to be celebrated in St. Basil's Church at 9:40 a.m., Tuesday, Sept. 29.

From Dusk to Dawn

Pictured above are a Night Editor and his assistant in their office on the second floor of The University Press hard at work on the task of putting an issue of The Varsity together.

From 9 p.m. to 7 a.m. the night editor is on duty at the Press. Working in co-operation with the Managing Editor, he plots the make-up of the paper during the early part of the evening, while reporters turn in stories that have been written earlier in the day and his assistant reads proofs of the copy set up by linotype.

As the office gradually clears of staff members whose work for the night is done, the Night Editor is left in sole command. Together he and his assistant oversee the technical operations involved as The Varsity is put to bed. Headlines have to be written, exact make-up drawn up, proofs checked. By about 6:30 a.m. all the type has been placed in the forms and the issue is ready for the presses.

Senior staff members take regular turns at night-editing; their assistants are drawn from among The Varsity's reporters.

If this sort of work appeals to you—if you're interested in learning the behind-the-scheme details of how Canada's greatest collegiate newspaper operates—now is your chance to join The Varsity staff and satisfy that curiosity.

Or if you don't believe that night work can be squeezed into your time-table without harming your studies, but are still interested in the sort of activity that The Varsity provides, join the staff as a reporter. Cover interfaculty sports, interview students and staff members, work on a regular "beat."

Students who are interested are asked to drop around to the editorial rooms of the Varsity today and sign the lists provided for new staff members. The Men's Office is on the second floor of the west wing of Hart House; the Women's Office is in Room 42A, University College.

S.C.M. Book Exchange Doing Roaring Business

The S.C.M. Book Exchange in Hart House has every indication of at least rivalling the volume of business of the best previous years, according to manager Geoff. Johnson.

"With the large increase in freshmen registration there is every reason to expect a larger turnover than ever before," Mr. Johnson announced. At the same time he pointed out that "the demand however, has up to now far exceeded the supply of used texts, particularly in engineering, science and economics."

"The shortage of labour and materials has made the role of the Book Exchange a vital one," he said. Moreover, "certain texts can be sold at prices far above the average of other years."

Facilities both for the selling of used texts and the ordering of new ones by the coeds are being provided for at a desk in the U.C. rotunda. In past years the coeds had to rely on the men they knew to make arrangements for books in Hart House, where the book exchange in operated.

Pharmacy President Stresses Citizenship

The Ontario College of Pharmacy began its 63rd session as commencement exercises were held last week in the Assembly Hall of the college.

The guest speaker, President Tapscott of the college, introduced by Dean Hurst, urged the students to be true, patriotic, and loyal citizens through their position in the community as druggists.

The medals and scholarships were presented to the students by various members of the faculty. The Lieut. Geo. Parke Memorial Scholarship and the Lieut. Geo. Parke Memorial Medal, awards given to the two students standing highest, were won by M. D. Irwin and R. Gervase respectively. The Joseph Senalnick award was won by Miss O. Northgroves for the highest standing in Theoretical and Practical Pharmacy in the first year.

The Dean's Senior Stick, for the best all-round member of the junior year, chosen by the vote of the students, was presented to M. Irwin.

We View with Alarm Dept.—10 ul B

This also comes under the heading of Sabotage, Inc. The boys from S.P.S. were making game of their frosh one day. Had a goodly number of them trapped in the little red school house, with all the doors locked but the one leading into the side alley. There the boys waited with large vessels of fluids especially prepared for that ancient ceremony of tapping. And they waited and waited. No frosh appeared.

So finally they sent a squad in to chose the rascals out. The building was empty. Seems that one of the faculty, no less, had unlocked the front door for the 4T6ers.

WHICH GOES TO SHOW YOU THAT YOU JUST CAN'T TRUST ANYONE THESE DAYS.

YOU CAN'T blame the frosh for being a bit suspicious, but gosh. . . . One of our valiant reporters was once out after a story concerning frosh. Up at Vic all the innocents were having a Bob practice, so he went to the building. Happened that a large gang of sophs were baying at the portals and getting in was a bit of a problem. He finally succeeded via a group of freshies who were late (these women!) and was promptly surrounded by a large horde of aroused frosh who weren't the least bit intimidated by his wordly bearing. He flashed his press card frantically but all they wanted to see was his registration card, which he just didn't happen to have. He was immediately declared either, (a) a soph or (b) an S.P.S. frosh and the only problem remaining was should they remove his pants there or outside?

Fortunately the sophs made a breach in the defenees so he was spared for the nonce. Only he hadn't moved over ten feet before he was surrounded again. This sort of thing would have gone on all night, possibly with fatal results, were it not for the timely intervention of some seniors who knew about The Varsity and realized that it must have reporters. They kindly escorted him around until he got what he wanted and showed him to the door.

He slunk out into the night, grateful to have both his story and his pants, only to have a large group of sophs intercept him. They, of course, wouldn't believe the press card either. He doesn't remember how he got out of that one, but he was panting heavily when he reached the press.

This same bird is out questing in Trinity, this time, still looking for frosh. Finds a group of the creatures standing in the hallway. Questions same about what sort of treatment they have been receiving from their sophs, and discovers, much to his amazement, that they have been receiving no treatment, good, bad, or otherwise.

"In fact, we hardly ever seen them," says one downy-chinned youth..

Strange this—very strange. Finally one chap thoughtfully adds, "It'll be fun when we do—we outnumber them about 3 to 1."

DISCRETION IS THE BETTER PART OF VALOUR?

IT WOULD BE INTERESTING to know what a certain miss is thinking these days. One day recently a fellow was sitting in the reception room of a certain women's residence waiting for his date to decide that he'd waited long enough and come down. It was a nice sunny afternoon and the house was pretty much vacated, so when the phone rang there didn't seem to be anyone around to answer it but him. Being a helpful soul, he nonchalantly ambled over and picked up the receiver.

"Hello?" he asked in his best baritone.

"What number is this?" promptly replied a startled feminine voice.

He named the residence.

"Oh?" said she, even more startled. Came then a long pause. Finally, in very uncertain tones, "I—uh—guess I must have the wrong number."

And then she hung up before he could explain.

SPEAKING OF WOMEN'S RESIDENCES, considerable confusion is reported down Minnesota way where soldiers had been barracked in a women's dorm all summer. Took the townspeople considerable time to get used to that, but it is taking them even longer to get used to the fact that the soldiers have all gone away now and have given it back to the girls. For instance, one coed who got off a train very much after midnight had a terrific job persuading a cab driver to take her there.

THERE WILL BE EVEN MORE confusion there when they try out that new obstacle course designed to replace vitamin capsules for the musele-less. It is laid out on the football field and goes something like this: a 20 yd. sprint closely followed by a couple of four ft. hurdles alternated with ropes two ft. off the ground that must be slid under, a maze of ropes and stakes, another hurdle, and then the perspiring runner is faced with a 7½ ft. wall and no ladder. On the other side are a few more hurdles, a 12 ft. stroll on a board two ins. wide, a broad jump with ropes stretched across to trip ya if ya don't leap high enough, 30 yds. of boxes to be stepped into, and a six ft. ladder to be clumb up and jumped offa. But he can't go home yet—there is a rope that dangles enticingly from the crossbar of the goal posts. He's gotta go up that so's he can cross the bar hand-over hand and drop to the ground. After that he is supposed to run across a finish line. All of this must, of course, be did at top speed.

They call this self-inflicted slaughter a Portable Obstacle Course. Guess they figger it'll be easier to move the whole works than to clean out the bodies.

Queen's Expand Air Training; 100 Registered

Course Open to Artsmen and Engineering Students Only; Must Go on Active Service After Graduation

GET FLYING TIME

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 28—(CUP)—Air force training, started on a small scale at Queen's University last year, is greatly expanded this season with more than 100 students registered, it was learned tonight.

Intended as a reserve for the Royal Canadian Air Force, the training course is open to artsmen and engineering students only. All applicants accepted are required to declare their intention to go active after graduation.

Training offered covers 125 hours during the winter and two weeks at an air force station during the summer at which time each man is to be given flying time. Engineers trained in radio signals and aerodynamics are being urged to join.

The training is equivalent to that received in an Initial Training School and graduates go direct to flying school. Training is given in aeronautics, air force law, navigation, meteorology, theory of flight and internal combustion engine theory. Advanced navigation will be given to students in the course who remain at Queen's two years.

An expanded air training course at the University of Toronto was announced in a special supplement of The Varsity and students have been registering for the course at the C.O.T.C. Orderly Room. However, no details concerning the new course have been released.

WOMEN'S NATIONAL SERVICE TRAINING

Any students who have not yet registered for this training and are required to do so, must report to their respective Deans of Women immediately.

Any applicants for enrolment in the Canadian Red Cross Corps who have not yet filled the yellow form with the Commandant, must do so immediately in the S.A.C. Office, Hart House. Medical certificates can be added later.

Settlement Aids Charities

The University Settlement is supplying two teams this year for the Community Service Federation campaign which ends October 2. These two teams, one comprised of University College women, the other of Social Science students are Varsity's contribution to the campaign effort.

The goal set is $698,247. "Though the success of this drive could be affected by the new income tax regulation, money is more evenly distributed and the campaign should be a success," said Mrs. F. H. Crowther, head resident of the University settlement.

This settlement provides recreational and educational projects for young and old. A nursery school, a music school, library, and boy's workshop are some of the benefits provided for the children. Adult groups meet at the house where classes are held in sewing and pottery. Every Saturday night there is a dance for the Air Force. The hostesses are volunteers as well as club members.

The Community Service campaign strives to foster organizations of the University Settlement type. In this campaign the whole city is covered in a door to door collection.

Munro Praises Training Varsity Gives Newsmen

By Edgar Simon

"The Varsity gives exactly the kind of training you need if you want to go into newspaper work," Ross Munro told this reporter yesterday.

Munro, former News Editor of The Varsity is the Canadian Press war correspondent who told the world the story of Dieppe. One of three correspondents who landed on the bullet-swept beach, his eye-witness stories of the raid were carried by newspapers throughout the United Nations.

Munro recalled how he and desk mates in The Canadian Press's bureaux who had also been Varsity reporters had felt the benefit of their early training in writing, editing and printing a newspaper.

"I used to write my head off," he recalled. "I'd write stuff that was never published."

"A man writing for The Varsity gets the precise background needed in university work, a broader outlook on his studies," he said.

Munro started his graduating year as Assistant News Editor and became News Editor on Jan. 29, 1936. Shortly after, he travelled to McGill in an intercollegiate debate and returned with a streamered by-line story predicting the early fall of the Quebec government of Premier L. A. Taschereau. The government actually did resign six months later.

Ace CP Reporter Lauds War Work On Home Front

Ross Munro Recalls Number of University of Toronto Men Who Fought at Dieppe, Including Major Brian McCool; Praises J. B. Bickersteth's Direction of Educational Services Overseas

MUNRO, A FORMER VARSITY NEWS EDITOR

By Michael O'Mara

Canadians at home are doing as important a job toward winning the war as are soldiers overseas, Ross Munro, ace war correspondent of The Canadian Press—the man who told the world about Dieppe—said yesterday in an exclusive interview with The Varsity.

"I think Canadians at home are doing a fine job," he said. "They have a big stake in the war. Countries like ours are something to be proud of. It's the second war of the century for us—a young, small, heavily-taxed country. I'm pretty damn proud of being a Canadian."

"When I go back," he continued, "I'm going to tell them over there that the Canadians here are doing just as courageous a job as overseas—and nobody can doubt the courage of the Canadian soldiers overseas."

Refusing to hazard more than a personal opinion on the length of the war, Munro said: "Possibly we're already starting to see downhill now. There may be a grand United Nations offensive in 1943. In any case, when the big scrap starts, the Canadians, British and Americans will be in it up to their necks. The boys get along well together as combat troops, and make a wonderful team."

U. of T. Men in Action

"There were plenty of University of Toronto men in the thick of the fighting at Dieppe," Munro said. "One who particularly distinguished himself was major Brian McCool (U.C. 2T3) of the Royal Regiment. He was principal military landing officer of the operation, charged with the job of establishing perimeter defence on the beach, but as the attack developed a bit differently from planned he became a combat officer. Brian had been engaged in commando work for a year and his knowledge of that type of work was of great value in the beach-fighting. He was taken prisoner, and the last they saw he was throwing his empty revolver at a German. I believe he's being held at Auflag VIIB.

"Another was Sub-Lieutenant Glen (Spike) Northgrave (Trin. 4T0) who commanded a small assault-boat which landed the Essex Scottish when they went in at the east end of the beach.

"Two former Varsity basketball stars —Captain Walt MacGregor (U.C. 3T9) and Lieutenant Jack Prince (U.C. 3T4) —went in with the Scottish and were taken prisoner.

"Another Varsity man there was Major Peter Wright, G.S.O. II (Occasional Student, U.C. ('29-'30), who was attached to general headquarters staff. There were lots more—those are just a few that come to mind now."

Munro told how he had crossed to Dieppe clad in the uniform of Major Cliff Wallace of the Royal Regiment. "They didn't want the war correspondents' tabs showing, because they would have been so numerous that everybody could have seen something big was on," he explained. "None of us knew quite what was happening, although something big was obviously in the air. I ran into Wallace just before we left England, and he laughed at my sudden 'promotion' to the rank of major."

Praises C.O.T.C. Training

Munro praised military training being carried on at Canadian universities. "Students ought to know something about formations, organizations, drills, handling Bren guns and rifles. Military

CO-ED HOUSING A PROBLEM; MEN ALL ACCOMMODATED

Many Denied Accommodation Since Women's Residences Are Filled; Staff Shortages Necessitate Student Help

University women in residence are living on an almost co-operative basis this year, as a result of one of the greatest felt housing problems on the campus for many years. The girls are not only learning waitressing, due to staff short-

Residences Full in August, But Remainder Housed in Nearby Rooming Houses

Despite the drain on housing caused by the occupation of the University men's residence and part of Burwash Hall by the Royal Canadian Air Force during the past two seasons, the Students' Administrative Council reported the University housing situation well under control yesterday.

All the residences on the campus were filled before the S.A.C. started to work on the problem on Aug. 20. However, aided by lists of past years, the S.A.C. compiled a list of rooming houses in the vicinity of the campus. Medical and dental students returning to college early were all accommodated and the S.A.C. has found quarters for all other applicants so far, with accommodation for a large number still available.

The S.A.C. accommodation program under Bob and Jim Murray inspects rooming houses in the university district before drawing up their list. Information regarding rooms may be obtained from the S.A.C. office in Hart House.

The Victoria College Student Christian Movement got underway for this season with a Cider Squash held at Wymilwood last night.

Chancellor W. T. Brown of Victoria College, in a short address, commended the society's growth away from its earlier and much criticized radicalism and stated that he felt that no college can be really great without a vigorous religious movement in its midst.

Rev. Arnold Nash, recently appointed Toronto secretary of the World Student Christian Federation, described the power of the movement in foreign lands and its expulsion from public organization in Nazi and Bolshevik dominated countries.

Study groups for the coming year were outlined. Dr. T. C. Young will lead the discussion on "Christianity and Race," Prof. H. N. Frye on "Comparative Religions" and John Coleman on "The Life of Jesus." There will also be a Freshie group under the leadership of Miss Margaret Grant, a Freshman group headed by Norman MacKenzie and the Doubters' group and a Sunday School Teachers' group conducted by Prof. C. W. Leslie and Mrs. J. H. Hutchinson, respectively.

The evenings program also included songs and skits, and cider and cookies were served.

MINNESOTA DAILY, WORLD'S LARGEST COLLEGE TABLOID

By Helen Bannerman

The Minnesota Daily, student newspaper of the University of Minnesota, with 15,000 readers is the world's largest college tabloid. Originally the Daily was a regular four and six page eight-column paper. Two years ago it became an eight and twelve page, five-column tabloid under the guiding hand of Editor Charles Roberts.

Editor Roberts' plan to change the paper's format caused a raging controversy on the Minnesota campus. The students themselves were allowed to make the choice. In spite of violent speeches and parades with signs, the tabloid, after a two-week try-out, was an easy victor at the student poll.

Change in the paper's format of necessity, brought change in the paper's style. The news became departmentalized. News stories had to be shortened and developed in a quicker, sharper manner. Long, all-inclusive features gave way to short, punchy feature stories relying on trick heads, picture and attention catching leads for most of their effect.

The front page became the editor's pride. He could and did do anything with it, as long as he kept the name banner above the middle fold. Complete illustrated stories began to appear at the extreme top of page one; sharply displayed features with heavy trick headlines were often found at the bottom of the page to balance the top.

This interesting layout was continued inside. The smaller news stories of two and three paragraphs were presented with feature-like and compelling heads. The paper was designed for quick reading.

Since its first frantic days two years ago the Daily has come to be recognized as one of the leaders in the college tabloid field. The paper is now accepted on the campus as convenient to carry, easy to read. All this is the fruition of Editor Roberts' dream, the result of ceaseless effort and experimentation on the part of succeeding editorial workers.

University At War

Continuing and increasing its policy of the greatest possible effort toward winning the present conflict our university has initiated two important new measures which will contribute to Canada's scheme of total war. The system of women's war work, made compulsory by the Board of Governors last week, will train a small army of willing women students in arts which will not only help them do their part in the national emergency, but which will also be useful through their entire lives. In announcing a one-year course of basic training in mathematics, physics and engineering for selected male students in the 17 to 19 year age group President Cody marked another mile stone in the university's history of service to the public.

Already 1,100 former members of the University of Toronto C.O.T.C. hold commisions in Canada's Army, Navy and Air Force. Graduates of the university's one-year course for radio technicians are doing work of a responsible and highly secret nature. The chemistry and physics laboratories of the university are engaged on 24-hour programs of war research. The entire graduating classes in the faculties of Medicine and Dentistry have joined or will soon join the medical and dental corps of the different services. Graduates from the Women's Service Training Detachment have left the campus to help in important branches of war work; one W.S.T.D. member acted as an emergency air raid warden in San Francisco when that unprepared city feared bombings last December. To the existing program these two new coursese have been added.

All this special war-time work does not include the thousands of undergraduate and graduate students who have enlisted in active service, some to win glory and many to find death. University members are not noted for trying to find soft jobs or a way out. In this war they are dedicated to winning victory, at whatever cost.

The new policy for the women of the university and the new scientific course will both contribute to that winning of victory.

The Girls Get Their Chance

Since the start of the war the women of the various colleges and faculties have been contributing to the university's, and therefore to the nation's, war effort. The W.S.T.D., Red Cross projects of knitting and quilting, have been supplied with their quota of enthusiastic voluntary workers. Many of the girls, feeling that this was not enough, worked in war groups outside the university. Last year women's war work became an important issue on the campuses across Canada when McGill University adopted the compulsory system.

University of Toronto women now have the chance to put all their energy to work on their own campus. Although the 60 hours of war work are compulsory the new ruling is only a reflection of popular wishes, which would have brought the measure into force if, for instance, it had been put to a vote. In the matter of war work all thinking students and the National War Service Board are in complete agreement. The way the matter has been arranged the necessary work has been started sooner and that is what counts.

The wide choice offered in the work should certainly ensure that all students get into a branch which they enjoy and for which they are fitted. The University Detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps (the W.S.T.D.) will continue as in the past and will be one of the eight choices offered in the regulations. The courses in first aid and in civilian defence and the advanced courses in transport, nursing, office and food administration are all of practical value in peacetime as well as in the present war emergency.

The same may be said of the courses in nutrition, recreational leadership, civilian defence, home nursing, first aid, and Red Cross sewing.

While the courses are not yet finally arranged and have not yet actually started, the feminine section of the students have welcomed this chance to do their part toward winning the war.

Concentrated Science

Star high school students who have proved their ability in upper school algebra, geometry, trigonometry and physics are also getting their chance at this university to combine technical training with a contribution toward victory. The new one-year course in science announced recently by the President is designed for boys from 17 to 19 years old who are enlisting in the army and who wish to prepare themselves for responsible positions in complex, modern, mechanized war. This concentrated science course will be given as soon as arrangements are complete by the combined faculties of arts and engineering, according to a plan which is the result of the co-operation of the university and of the Department of National Defence.

This praiseworthy work combining essential parts of several courses has been not only carefully designed to fit the boys for the immediate needs of the times but will be put to their credit if, in the future, they decide to return to the university to complete their education.

Honour Graduate

The Varsity today pays tribute to one of its most distinguished alumni—Ross Munro of The Canadian Press.

Munro's coverage of the combined operations raid on Dieppe last month is accounted one of the really great reportorial jobs of the present war. Not only did he reach the beach where Canadians were fighting and dying—where German bullets filled the air and raked the landing assualt-craft—but he stayed on the job when he got back to London, refusing to eat or sleep until he had sent his story humming aruond the world.

The Varsity is proud of Munro—and the University itself can be proud of him.

ART & MUSIC

Undergraduate Record

Etchings of Hart House

The Etchings of Hart House, now on display in the print room of the Art Gallery in Hart House are the only complete set of these pictures. The Acting Warden Mr. J. R. Gilley consented to the exhibition of his collection of the mounted etchings given to undergraduates attending the annual Christmas dinner for house members who are unable to get home for Christmas.

Much of the tradition of Hart House is distilled in these small momentoes. Each picture in itself is a scene of the House, and done by a celebrated Canadian artist. The etchings of the first two years, beginning in 1926, were cut by Fred S. Haines. These two, and the one for 1928 of Great Hall are the only ones where dual tones were used. All this section was pictorial.

The etchings for the following nine years were done by Gladys Cochrane, and introduced a subtle mood, which sets these apart from all the other efforts. In the Stairway by the Main Entrance of 1930, this mood is achieved through lighting and softened shadows. In fact all the hardness of cold stone is softened, not exactly blurred, but mellowed. It seems hard to realize that Gladys Cochrane could capture the tradition of Oxford and translate in to Hart House just one short decade after the House was opened to the undergraduates.

The final phase in the Etchings is due to the skill of Wendell P. Lawson. The first which introduces people is the Library of 1939. The technical difference apart from the substantial increase in the size of the gifts, is that the outlines are more defined, harder, and tactile.

The complete exhibition represents four generations of student life at the University, and the existence of such a collection serves to impress the continuity and stability of principle in Hart House.

WILLIAM NICHOLLS.

Why Cats Go Grey

The President said: "I've received
A letter you'll never believe:
All the year you must cram
For each term exam—
If you fail in just one, you must leave."

Quoth Catitor, "This is not fun,
Everyone has gone home on the run,
My staff is depleted,
To their books they've retreated—
These Cats will just never be done!"

He petitioned the Senate to rule
That for every two hours at pool,
Each freshman must write
Two good Cats overnight
(Except Theologians and School).

But the Senate refused to agree,
And the Catitor's just up a tree.
So he uttered some curses
And brewed these four verses,
Just as you'd brew coffee* or tea.

SPANKY AND OMEGA

C. Wallace Urges Inexpensive Dates

By Rex Wilson

Stressing the social austerity keynoted in President Cody's opening address Claire Wallace told The Varsity in an interview yesterday that she would recommend that co-eds try to steer their escorts toward inexpensive dates. "If a girl can get a lad to save 25 cents that means one War Savings Stamp," she reminded.

Miss Wallace, author and narrator of the popular month-old Public Information radio feature, "They Tell Me," had just returned from Hamilton where the program was presented for a week and will leave this week-end for Halifax for another week, and will later return to Toronto before moving her base of operations to Vancouver and other western cities.

In an interview punctured by offering coffee to the undernourished reporter and passing bread sticks to him as she squeezed in a bit of lunch between today's rapid-fire program and the preparation of tomorrow's Miss Wallace explained the purpose of he new program which seeks to bring a deeper war-consciousness to the women of Canada.

Speaking of co-eds she said, "I think they are awfully lucky. Since I'm one of the unlucky ones who never went to college I'm one of their biggest boosters." Pointing out the advantages of working before going to college, she recommended that co-eds should at least make a clear plan of what they want to do. "They should take a terrific interest in the war, for unless we win that nothing is worth anything."

Having been very unhep for a year and not made the acquaintance of the Midtown Theatre which opened about that time ago, we went out there last night and saw one of the dandiest shows we've ever been treated to or even paid for.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

Judy Canova and Joe E. Brown combine in a super spy-hunt abounding in robust, corn-fed humor. The piece is entitled "Joan of Ozark" and from the time it lets its hair down with the accidental shooting of a homing pigeon in Axis pay by Judy until it closes with her equally accidental capture of a Jap sub commander as she descends by parachute after falling out of a plane, it never ceases to take the Axis over the slapstick jumps.

"The Brooklyn Orchid" starring Marjorie Woodward deals with the embarrassment of a couple of nice lugs, one happily married and one unhappily engaged who rescue a blonde near-suicide (female) who insists then that her life is theirs and where they go, she goes. It ain't refined, but it's funny.

And they have such nice usherettes at the Midtown, too.

Intramural Golf Tourney To Begin This Friday, Tennis Slated For Monday

Golfing Odds Favor Schoolman Gord Ball, Last Year's Champion; Trinity Is Sans Their Best Team

ENTRY DEADLINE FRIDAY

People with an interest in golf, a golf bag and 25 cents should hasten down to the athletic office in Hart House and get themselves entered in intramural golf tournament sometime before it happens on Oct. 2. The rare little pills will be batted around the grass that is greener at the Woodbine Golf Club.

Gord Ball, star of ice from School proved his versatility last year by taking golf clubs instead of hockey sticks in hand and copping the individual championship with a neat 71. A group from Trinity drove, chipped and putted their way to the team championship but since they have lost two of their men, it should be anyone's tournament, with odds slightly in favour of the Schoolmen.

Those whose interests lie with the net pastime should be sure their entries are in for the University Tennis Tournament which takes place on Oct. 5. Entries for this event must be handed in at the athletic office not later than Oct. 2.

This too looks like anyone's fight, since Bruce Hall and Jack Mullet, last years' finalists, are no longer with us.

S.C.M. at U.C. To Start Season At Punch Tonight

The executive of the University College Student Christian Movement are planning a quick getaway for the seasonal activities at an Opening Punch to be staged in the Women's Union, Tuesday evening at 8 p.m.

Principal Wallace has been asked to speak at the gathering to which all University College students are invited.

The program for the season will be explained through short addresses by the Study Group leaders.

Skits, singing, and punch will be injected into the program and it will be a chance for the newcomers to chat with the people who will lead the group and direct the activities for the coming year.

ATHLETIC TRAINEES

There will be a meeting for all those interested in Rugger today at 5:00 p.m. in the East Common Room, Hart House.

Many Athletes Attend Pre-Season Work Out Conducted by Stevens

Yesterday afternoon on the back campus, Warren Stevens' new pre-season conditioning program got under way. A remarkable turnout of more than a hundred athletes for football alone indicated that the scheme will prove highly successful. Attendance is expected to increase with every workout as all on hand were enthusiastically behind the new move to assure better conditioned grid stars.

Following a tough physical drill which had the boys grunting and groaning, Coach Stevens turned the group over to such able assistants as "Beefy" MacMillan, Don Grosskurth, Jim Murray, Glen Munro, Jack Plaxton, and Stew Scott. In the smaller groups the fundamentals of blocking, tackling and ball handling were explained and demonstrated. Forward passing and running attacks also received attention. Crossfield sprints wound up the session for the day, with orders to report daily throughout the remainder of the week.

The University Directory is now being prepared for the press, and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bill Quigley

The introduction yesterday afternoon of Warren Steven's conditioning program marks another advance in the development of interfaculty competition. The intramural sports calendar, which is the pet and problem child of "Mac" McCutcheon, organizer extraordinary, has evolved throughout the years to assume its present high standards. The fact that every male student in the university is encouraged to take advantage of the recreational opportunities offered via interfaculty sport and that well over a thousand of them do participate yearly, is testimonial to the men behind the scenes.

The most recent step is one the value of which will be realized by all athletes at Varsity, especially after regular competition gets under way. In former years, citing more specifically Mulock Cup play, the most glaring criticism, even up to the time of the playoffs, has been the woeful lack of condition on the part of many contestants. This has led, not only to unnecessary injuries and illnesses, but also resulted in lowering the standard of team play. It has usually been the case that the football squad, drilled soundly in the fundamentals and fielding the best conditioned men, have walked off with the Mulock Cup.

Such was the case in the fall of 1937 when Charlie Prince, now in the R.C.A.F. backfield, led Victoria to an 8-6 win over St. Mike's before a riotous mob of students. St. Mike's fans still claim that they were in better condition than their own grid-heroes. They point to a decisive win in a bloody half-time free-for-all. After the half the Double Blue started with a rush, but faded just as quickly and rarely threatened again. Going into that crucial battle, the Irish left at least six first stringers on crutches or hospital cots. They also had left their chances for victory right there.

Last Nomember, Victoria, later crowned champions in a two game playoff with Trinity, disposed of a favored Senior School powerhouse in a sudden death semi-final. Again the deciding factor proved to be superior condition. The Scarlet and Gold showed little weakness throughout their lineup, simply because key positions were filled by well-conditioned, capable athletes. School, on the other hand, performed minus running half Johnny Lucas and with Doug Marshall, among others, favoring wobbling limbs.

A team which gains its laurels because it has that extra something called condition, should be of greater credit to the coach than the squad which has come through chiefly on the breaks of the game. Proper physical condition has always been taken for granted when reviewing the chances of any particular competitive team. The principal gossip always seems to centre, however, on how many stars are included in the team's lineup, and little speculation is ventured as to how many cylinders each athlete is hitting on. Advance dope on horse-racing, track and field, boxing, etc., always stress the stage of conditioning. Why should the case be reversed regarding team sports?

Warren Stevens seems to have provided the answer.

Health Service Booked For Physical Exams Until October 23

Students have been pouring into the office of the University Health Service in such numbers that last night appointments for physical examinations for C.O.T.C. and athletics had been booked solid up to October 23.

To date approximately 600 students have been examined by the staff at the rate of 63 examinations a day.

"Examinations are going on satisfactorily, but in view of the fact that appointments are being made so far in advance, I would like to ask the students to be sure to remember to keep their appointments and to show up early for them, if at all possible," said Lt.-Col. R. W. I. Urquhart, Director of the Service.

He stressed this, saying that while he realized the fact that students might easily forget an appointment made so far in advance, he would like them to make a special effort to remember, because of the difficulties and confusion caused by missed or late appointments. The difficulties are further increased by the large numbers that are being handled.

MOBILE DENTAL CLINIC GIVEN TO DENTAL CORPS

Amidst confusion of hand-clasps and congratulations following graduation exercises last June, there occured a more serious type of presentation. A complete mobile dental clinic purchased by the Dental Nurses Alumnae Association was officially presented to the Canadian Dental Corps.

The presentation of the mobile clinic, made by Miss Anna Lindsay, President of the Association, in the presence of Dr. H. J. Cody and Dean Arnold G. Mason, of the Faculty of Dentistry, was received by Lieut.-Col. D. J. Ferguson, dental officer in charge of Military District 2 on behalf of the C.D.C. The ceremony was witnessed by the crowd of guests, visitors, graduates, members of the faculty, and students which had just poured forth from Convocation Hall. Following the brief presentation the clinic was placed open for inspection.

Later the same day the Granite Club was the scene of another presentation by the Dental Nurses Alumnae Association, when Miss Ruth Piers, one of the day's graduates, received a gold ring in recognition of her outstanding success during the past year. Miss Piers was also a member of the popular singing trio of Dentantics.

Questioned recently about who was responsible for the idea of such a gift, Miss Lindsay stated, "We all appeared to have the same thought in mind and consequently everyone co-operated in the raising of funds." The drive began last October when the dental nurses held a bazaar which netted $850.00 and closed in February with a bridge from which the final $200.00 was received.

Former University Star Aquatic Coach McCatty Dons Air Force Blue

His Position May Be Left Vacant for the Duration, Due to Lack of Swimming Competition

COACHED BASKETBALL TEAM

By Bud Smith

Varsity's aquatic program suffered a severe loss this summer when Winst McCatty, ex-swim star and for the past few seasons coach extraordinary of the Blue and White swimming and water polo teams, left the finny regions to don an Air Force uniform. He also picked up a wife to keep him from flying too high.

Winst started his competitive career at Oakwood Collegiate and foamed his way to Varsity where he proceeded to outshine his Intercollegiate opponents with ease. He captained the Blues to the championship in his final year, during which time he served on the Athletic Directorate.

Shortly after graduating he returned in the capacity of coach and displayed as much talent on the sidelines as he had in the briny deep. In the last year of Intercollegiate competition, 1939-40, Winst mentored the Varsity water polo team to the championship. Most of that team, including captain Ollie Maybee, and Doug Green are now serving overseas.

Last year's swimming team had a remarkably successful season winning all of their exhibition meets. In addition to this achievement, Winst coached the Upper Canada College basketball team through seventeen straight triumphs to the city championship.

So far no one has been appointed to fill McCatty's place, and due to the lack of swimming competitions, the position may be left vacant for the duration.

Sportswoman

It's time to talk tennis again, yes, indeed. At tea-time yesterday afternoon, all the College representatives gathered at St. Hilda's, and Betty Hungerford led the discussion about the coming tournament.

The tentative date—as it was set—for the interfaculty matches is Wednesday, October 14. So let's get in all the practice we can and make it interesting! Volunteers for linesmen — freshies, sophs, or seniors, will be welcomed with open arms and are promised some fast games to keep them happy.

Here are the girls to give your names to as soon as possible if you would like to help us out: Virginia McLeod of Wymilwood; Mary Holington at Ki. E572; Betty Hungerford at St. Hilda's; Aileen McNally at Loretto College; Ruth Carleton at P. H. & E. Please don't forget about us.

If anyone in O. T. & P. or in Nursing is interested in putting over an ace or two in the oncoming tussle, we would be happy if you would contact Mary Hollington of Meds in the near future. A substanital group of these three faculties would be very promising indeed—and the Nurses should be quite at home in "white." With this bit of tennis talk, we will leave you for this p.m. to return anon.

ENGLISH RUGBY MEETING

Rugby and soccer players will please note that conditioning exercises will begin at 4:30 p.m. instead of 5 p.m. on back campus.

Women's Residence Filled to Capacity

ages, but also Dale Carnegie's principles on winning friends and influencing people, in their close quarters as single rooms become doubles, and so on up.

In Victoria College, Wymilwood, formerly official residence of student grads, has been taken over for the undergraduate girls after five other houses were filled to capacity plus. Double-decked bunks are also being introduced into some rooms to provide for as many as possible in the limited space.

Whiteny Hall, University College Residence for women, has been able to accommodate all the Arts students who have applied for quarters there this year, but girls in other faculties who have looked hopefully to it as to their home, are out in the cold. Greatest problem here is the staff shortage, which has been reported to be reduced by a half. Consequently, the girls are taking door, phone, and table duties as an innovation and cleaning their own rooms.

Less fortunate even are girls in St. Hilda's, many of whom had to be refused accommodation. Freshie House, built just last year and partially empty then, is filled; and extra furniture has been placed in some rooms.

Least change has taken place in Loretto and St. Joseph's Colleges. In the former, there was some talk of building another floor to the residence, but this idea being abandoned, the infirmary was transformed into bedrooms. Both Loretto and St. Joseph's have had to turn away many applicants, even after carying out the more-furniture-to-a-room plan.

Daily Routine

In the Men's Office of The Varsity every morning, the ritual of glancing at the newsbook to check assignments is performed by reporters on duty for the day.

A quick look at the assignment, the occasional word of explanation from the News Editor, and they are on their way to get their stories. To the four corners of the campus they go, covering lectures, interviewing professors, questioning students.

And every day another procession of reporters comes and goes from the Women's Office in University College on similar errands.

As the day goes on, typewritten stories fall one-by-one into the news basket. Stories of a university at war, features about motley-tied freshmen, articles on what the student is thinking, saying, eating, drinking or wearing—all are turned in by the reporters for the next day's issue.

If you want to share in the job of producing your newspaper, drop around to The Varsity office today.

TRIM LOCKS OF FRESHMEN AS INITIATION BEGINS AT U.C.

Forcible brush cuts, toe-nail painting, branding, and trouser rolling were the order of the day (or night) as University College Frosh came under the tender surveillance of their Sophomore brothers last night.

A hint of indignities to come was spread abroad a few days ago when all Frosh were warned to get brush cuts or else. Last night at 8:30 following a tour of Hart House the indignities materialized at a meeting in the U.C. Junior Common Room. Frosh were inspected for hair more than an inch long. Those possessing cranial fibres in excess of this measurement were subjected to the inept tonsorial ministrations of four burly Sophs. Branding was done in the manner prescribed by more humane cattle men, by the use of indelible ink and a rubber stamp. Skits were presented, and Freshmen were told the various formulae they must go through until Soph-Frosh Banquet two weeks from now.

Freshmen must wear their left trouser legs rolled during this period, kow-tow to all Sophomores, wear brush cuts and sing "All Freshmen Must Have Brush Cuts" to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne" whenever they pass through the U.C. Rotunda.

As object lessons several of the men were packed off to Hutton House to have their toenails painted.

The evening culminated in a snake dance which wound its way around and around the Whitney Hall quad as Frosh chanted "We Are the U.C. Frosh," starry-eyed Freshies gazed from windows and the University police department stood in the middle and shook its tired old head, saying, "You never can tell what will happen next these times."

Leaving Whitney Hall by the front door the chain wound its way off into the frosty night and was last heard by this reporter chanting hoarsely somewhere in the direction of St. Hilda's.

So you think people don't read The Varsity, eh? Well, we just heard of a fellow who read our big 48-page issue of two years ago from front to back, and all in one night—last night. He said he couldn't sleep.

At one college on this campus education certainly comes liberal and early. We overheard a freshie on a bus describing a meeting she had attended. "It was more fun!" she gurgled, "and right in the middle of it they brought in a soph in nothing but his underwear." OH TEMPORA . . . !

A product of the same college, now on Active Service, found recently how thorough that education sometimes isn't. Seated at a table with five young Canadiens francais at mess one evening he found himself barred from their lively and apparently very interesting conversation by his lack of comprehension. So, deciding to bring the conversation around to his subject, he mustered all his French (1c, 2d, 3c) and burst forth in a volley of nasals and back R's, "Le frrrromaaaage, s'il vous plait!"

One of his French-speaking comrades responded immediately, handed him a match and said, "Certainly, but you may not smoke, le eolonel, he ess not yet lit up."

WIMMEN APPAL US, especially waitresses, and especially the one three schoolmen got mixed up with recently. Seated in a local eatery minding their own business, which was procuring something to eat, one of the schoolmen cracked to a passing waitress, "You'd love it at the zoo, watching the turtles whiz by."

The waitress turned on her heel, cracked him smartly over the head with a menu and said, "For that you will wait ten minutes longer."

But then, speaking of eating, there are some people who get their just deserts. Take the Vic Sohps for instance. Last week they tried to crash a Frosh Bob meeting in Vic. The Frosh cornered them on the fire escapes and subjected them to a water cure administered with a well-directed fire hose. Of course a lot of water got around and messed things up, which caused work, which caused expense. The other day the Soph executive was justly (as any Frosh will tell you) made the recipient of the following decorous bill from the college: "For use of hose—$15.00."

FRESHMEN NEVER GET SMARTER, but apparently this year they are a little less assuming than formerly. For years a hard-pressed hither writer has been able to corral at least one item about verdant innocents who played themselves deep into debt over the green tables in Hart House pool room and then explained worriedly that they thought it was covered by their athletic fee.

The estimable Philip who runs the establishment informed us yesterday that they hadn't showed up this year. "All I've had was a couple who wanted to give me their Admit to Lecture cards to punch," he chortled.

We're expecting tomorrow a fine old hither from our associate and general spy-about-Whitney Hall, Harriet Leigh-Mallory, CUP editor. Like we say, YOU LUCKY PEOPLE, YOU.

training in Canada—of which the C.O.T.C. is a part—is regarded overseas as a necessary part of the war effort. They are confident over there that it will be kept up," he said.

He told of the work being carried on at British Universities—notably Oxford—under the auspices of the educational service of the army, formerly directed by J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House.

"Hundreds of Canadian officers, N. C. O's and men are going there for one-week courses," he said. "I know of a lot of Varsity men who have taken those courses. I was booked to go there myself—to Christ Church—for a week starting Sept. 14, but my trip home prevented that."

"Warden Bickersteth has done a magnificent job in his direction of the educational service," Munro added, "although I know he wouldn't want me to say so. Proof of the excellence of his work is in the tribute paid him by British authorities in making him head of their own educational service. He now directs the educational work for all the troops stationed in the United Kingdom."

The successor to Warden Bickersteth as personal advisor on education to General MacNaughton is G. V. LePan, son of Colonel A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings at this University, he added.

At Spitsbergen

Munro—a former News Editor of The Varsity—won a reputation as one of the greatest of Canadian newspapermen with his epic reporting of the raid on Dieppe, Aug. 19. But even before his cables were flashed round the world by The Canadian Press and The Associated Press following his return from the engagement, he was known to the newspaper world as an extremely capable young reporter.

He was working for The Canadian Press when war broke out and qualified for a commission in a reserve unit of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps. He hoped for a chance to go overseas on active service. But he went overseas in another capacity, when The CP gave him four hours' notice that he was to cross to the London bureau in September, 1940.

He sailed on one of the first destroyers which the United States gave to Great Britain in exchange for naval bases.

Munro's first big beat as a war correspondent came when he was the only newspaper correspondent to accompany the Canadian force which occupied Spitsbergen in August, 1941.

He saw commando operations at close range when he reported the big Canadian commando manoeuvres which were staged overseas in June, 1941. And then came Dieppe.

Worn out from his harrowing experience—men fought and died within arm's reach during the nine-hour fight on Dieppe sands—Munro was back in the London office at The CP Aug. 20. He wouldn't eat or sleep, but sat hour after hour at his typewriter smoking endlessly and nibbling benzedrine tablets to stay awake while he poured out thousands of words describing the Canadian heroism he had seen.

Unshaven, with battledress torn and bloody, Munro stayed at his machine until the great story was told. When he had rested, he went back to the job, visting hospitals, gathering eye-witness accounts of the parts of the fighting he had not seen for himself. Day after day his by-lined stories hit the front pages of newspapers across Canada and around the world.

Nine days after Dieppe he flew home for a month's holiday. But it was no holiday for Munro, who has spent his time speaking to friends and relatives of men who fought at Dieppe, delivering speeches in the home towns of regiments engaged in the battle, delivering messages from soldiers overseas.

Tall, spare, shock-haired, Munro will go back to the London office to carry on his work of reporting the Canadians in action. And when the "big push" starts, Munro will be there.

Munro Praises Varsity Training

After graduation Munro joined The Canadian Press at Toronto, where he worked on the rewrite desk. Later he worked at CP's Winnipeg and Ottawa bureaux. In Ottawa he took time off from political and sport assignments to write a parliamentary column for the newly-formed Canadian University Press.

In September, 1940, Munro left his desk on four hours' notice to join CP's London bureau. In England he spent years with the Canadian troops, writing routine stories of their activities, sending their names back home in training features—and preparing himself, as they prepared themselves, for the action which was to follow.

Dieppe has been his biggest assignment to date, but there are bigger assignments to come.

Women's Fraternities Here May Suspend Operations; To Vote On The Issue

Students Would Continue Living in Fraternity Houses; Similar Steps Taken at Several American Universities

The 10 women's fraternities on this campus are at present planning to hold a vote on whether to continue functioning as in the past, or whether to discontinue altogether for the duration of the war, according to information received by The Varsity last night from a member of Alpha Chi Omega fraternity. Marjorie Norseworthy, President of the Pan-Hellenic Association on this campus, could not be reached at the time of going to press.

The women's fraternities (sororities) at several universities in the United States have already stopped functioning voluntarily as a war measure. The decision to discontinue was made by a unanimous vote and the matter was arranged through the international organization of each fraternity.

Nine of the Toronto fraternities plan to hold a vote on the question next Monday evening at their regular meetings. The tenth will vote on Wednesday.

Since most fraternity houses are leased they would continue to be the Toronto homes of the students at present living in them, in the event of the fraternity deciding to discontinue operations for the duration of the war.

341 C.W.A.C. Recruits Now at Trinity Barracks

The Canadian Women's Army Corps has invaded the University campus in full force it was learned yesterday from Active Service Headquarters. There are 341 new recruits of the Active service force stationed at Trinity Barracks, the former Trinity College men's residence on the corner of Harbord and St. George Street, for one month's basic training in military drill, Air Raid Precautions, First Aid, Military discipline and regulations, and Army Etiquette.

Formerly the Barracks housed C.W.A.C.'s on active service who were stationed in Toronto. Since the Army has recruited women in every-increasing numbers, those who have completed their training have been removed to other quarters, and all those women recruited from military District 2 or Central and Northern Ontario are being quartered at Trinity Barracks instead of being sent to St. Anne de Bellevue, Quebec.

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB HOLDS OPEN MEETING

Hart House glee club attracted some 50 members to the organization meeting held in the Music Room yesterday afternoon. Provision has been made for the inclusion of some of the men in the forces who are studying at present at the University. It is expected they will be around the campus long enough to participate in the Hart House Christmas Carols, broadcast from the Great Hall over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

As in the past seven years, Dr. Charles Peaker will conduct the Glee Club.

CAMPUS TO BE DIMMER BUT STUDENTS DON'T MIND

Blacker nights are descending on the University of Toronto this year as a newly inaugurated staggered system of lighting dims the campus into late twilight, but according to a survey taken yesterday collegians don't mind a bit.

Student comment varied from exclamations of surprise to wisecracks and whistles, but on the whole students agreed there was no call for complaints. As one Commerce and Finance student put it: "After all, if Broadway can blot out the White Way, we can stand a little darkness too."

Residents of Whitney Hall said they had been so occupied recently they had not noticed the dimout, while Mary Mothersill, III U.C., observed, "I notice the crumbling medieval mass of buildings looks picturesque in the moonlight." However, she added, "That's if you notice those things."

Chief D'Arcy, of the University Police, said the dimout reminded him of the semi-gaslit era 23 years ago when all university lamp posts held 25-watt bulbs. "In those day," he recalled, "the campus looked like a village path."

W. R. Cowan, acting controller of Hart House, said that he was trying to eliminate waste of electric power by staggering corridor lights by day. He said that if there was not a large night attendance in the music room and the debate room the occupants would be forced to vacate to nearby rooms.

"We now are using three lights where we used to have five," said E. Scott, superintendent of the University College building, "and we are cutting to the bone all exeess lighting." He said that aside from shadowed corners where there was danger of stumbling, all corridors had been placed on a staggered lighting system.

The shortest quotation the reporter received during the course of his survey was from an occasional student at the Conservatory of Music. Informed of the new dimout, she just smiled and said: "Oh boy!"

U.S. Students Confer With Recruiting Board On Military Problems

Minnesota Students Discuss Reserve Situation with Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard Recruiting Officers

MAY CLARIFY STATUS

Minneapolis, Sept. 29—Students of the University of Minnesota have been meeting with a unified recruiting board of the army, navy, marines and coast guard today in an effort to clear up their problems concerning the various enlisted reserve programs offered.

The board hopes to clarify the confusion now current on many American campi concerning the army enlisted reserve program. At present college men over 20 years of age enlisting in the army reserve are assured of remaining in school during the fall quarter, but probably will be called during the first part of 1943.

Enlisted reserve programs are open to all physically and morally fit men in a number of approved colleges in the United States. These men are granted exemption from the draft but are on call to their various services.

In addition to the army's program and preceding it in point of time there are programs offered by the other three services.

The navy enlists men 17 to 26 in V-1 and they are classed as apprentice seamen in the naval reserve. After two years of college training these men are transferred to naval aviation (V-5) or deck and engineering training (V-7). Students failing to maintain satisfactory grades may be called into the navy as apprentice seamen.

The marines, following the same general plan as the navy, take men between the ages of 20 and 30 who have a degree, or are following a curriculum leading to a degree in engineering, or certain science and arts courses.

The army air corps accepts full-time male undergraduates between the ages of 18 and 21 as privates in the air force enlisted reserve for appointment as aviation cadets. When assigned to duty they will have the choice of entering any of eight branches of the air corps.

ALL-UNIVERSITY DANCE

The House Committee and the Board of Stewards have set Friday, October 23, as the date for the All-University Fall Dance. Details of the sale of tickets will be announced within the next few days.

Will Exhibit Art of Forces

The first Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition to be held in Canada will take place in Hart House from the 14th to the 29th of November. The paintings will be those of men and women in the Armed Forces who have seen action overseas and in Canada, Mr. J. R. Gilley, Acting Warden of Hart House, announced to The Varsity yesterday afternoon.

Last winter a "Forces Exhibition" was held in the National Portrait Gallery in London, England, for troops of the London District. It included a Canadian section, and when this section was shown later in the Canadian area Lieut.-General McNaughton was present and stated that: "the Canadian Army encouraged the objective use of spare time."

Last spring the editors of "Life" magazine arranged a competition for men in the armed forces in the United States. The objectives of this competition were: "to seek out artists in uniform and scenes that only they can create from the depths of an experience totally foreign to most of us; to record and preserve these scenes for all time as part of America's cultural heritage."

Lieut.-Col. Louis Keene of Oakville, Ontario, was one of the top-ranking artists in this exhibition. Col Keene was through the worst raids on British cities when he was commanding a detachment of Lorne Scots more than a year ago, and most of his paintings on display were vivid portrayals of nights of bombs, anti-aircraft fire, searchlights

War Training Compulsory At Queen's

Dean of Women Announces All Undergraduates Must Take War Training; A.R.P. Course to Begin Oct. 6

FIRST YEAR INCLUDED

Kington, Sept. 29—(CUP)—War training will be compulsory for all women at Queen's University this year, it was revealed by the Dean of Women. An A.R.P. course for all undergraduate women will begin Oct. 6.

First year students will also take a St. John's Ambulance First Aid course in the second semester, Physical training is now compulsory for second as well as first year students.

Other war work of a voluntary nature will be carried on in addition to the prescribed courses. The University Women's Training Detachment will continue as before; military drill and instruction in orderly room procedure will be given.

The Signals course in codes will include instruction in various types of codes and semaphore signalling.

The Red Cross Room will continue in quilt making and knitting for the armed forces.

In conjunction with work of hospital visiting, there are new demands for students interested in Occupational Therapy. They will teach the soldiers handicrafts to occupy the long recuperation hours.

Connected with the voluntary blood donations at the plasma centre, students who have studied chemistry are needed as lab technicians one evening a week.

One of the newest activities is helping in the sale of War Saving Stamps under the National War Saving Committee.

Say Shortage Of Labour Not Serious

Skilled Workers Hard to Get as War Industries Given First Choice by Selective Service Board

STILL MINOR PROBLEM

Labour shortages brought about by war time conditions are hitting the various colleges to some extent, but the situation has not as yet reached serious proportions, according to information available last night.

The difficulty lies in the fact that all workers must be cleared through the Selective Service Board and war industries have the first call. Skilled workers are hard to get and in general the help available is of greater age than formerly.

Col. LePan, Superintendent of Buildings, stated last night that the labour condition in the university is "not serious." He said that while he had lost many men due to the war, he has had little difficulty replacing them. He concluded by saying that among the many problems brought on by the war, labour was still a minor one.

Officials at Hart House revealed that while they have had some slight difficulties, the situation should be cleared by next week. The main difficulties that will arise will come in the preparation before and after dances when as many as 600 pieces of furniture must be moved.

The cafeteria system in the Great Hall has helped to reduce the number of workers required there.

All in all, the officials promise that as far as the students will be concerned, Hart House will remain unaffected.

Elsewhere on the campus, the various refectories are having difficulty getting sufficient help. At Burwash, stu-

MEDS SUPPLEMENT COURSE WITH NEW CULTURAL CLUB

New among university organizations is the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society, originated for the purpose of broadening the general cultural outlook of Medical students. "Not that Medical students are utter strangers to culture," the executive are quick to add, but Gordon Bell, VI Meds, President of the Medical Society, who is credited with the original idea, felt that the medical course, despite its difficulty and crowded schedule, was actually only a technical course.

Succeeding and embracing a group of about 20 amateur philosophers, the Arts and Letters Club was formed last May and met at supper time in the Graduate Dining Room at Hart House where between 75 and 100 Meds attended the first meeting.

The first meeting of the Fall term will be held in Wymilwood next Monday evening between 6:00 and 8:30. Dr. Leopold Infeld and Prof. A. F. Coventry will be the guest speakers. The executive hopes that undergraduates of all colleges and faculties will attend.

The supper hour was decided on by the executive because it fitted best into the schedule of the accelerated course, and it was found that the informality of the supper table and a pleasant expansiveness existing after supper led to stimulation of discussion. For each meeting guest speakers were invited and limited to twenty minutes on their chosen subject in order to afford plenty of time for open discussion.

With the coming of the fall term and the opening of Hart House to undergraduate men the House rule of long standing had to be enforeed which prohibits women from being present in the house except on very special occasions.

A new meeting-place was sought by the executive, but due to the present labour shortage no suitable place was available on or near campus which could supply both a room and a meal. At present the club plans to meet in Wymilwood where they expect occasionally to be able to have supper at their meetings.

An imposing list of speakers is being lined up. The executive hopes that the club may attract students from all faculties to its meetings, because it is felt by them that too strong a sectionalism exists on this campus. "We hope that we will be able to leave the University a valuable club," they stated. To broaden the field of membership on the campus the club has been in the habit of inviting several members of the staffs of the various faculties to each meeting and of issuing them standing invitations to all subsequent ones.

St. Michael's Students Hear Superior at Academic Mass

"Our Christian culture will perish unless the women of our nation are determined to save it," said Rev. T. P. McLaughlin, C.S.B., Superior of St. Michael's College, addressing more than 300 men and women of St. Michael's at the annual academic Mass held the feast of St. Michael, Archangel, yesterday.

Father McLaughlin deplored the practice observed in some countries today of training women for actual war combat. He advised the women of St. Michael's:

"Serve your country, yes, but serve it by your works of charity, by assisting in every possible way all those who are the victims of man's brutality."

True university education has retreated before the onslaught of war and must be restored as soon as possible, Father McLaughlin said.

"Instead of being offered a liberal or philosophical education which is the proper function of an university, students are being urged to equip themselves with a technical training which will give more immediate dividends in a way more visible to utilitarian minded people.

"Much more than professional training and technical knowledge is required in these times to understand issues which are at stake and to keep one's balance amid the forces which are at play," continued Father McLaughlin.

"When the last bomb has been dropped the world will sorely need really educated men and women who will be able to direct the public mind, purify the national taste, give true principles to popular enthusiasm and fixed aim to popular aspiration."

The students were advised to "use every day to build up the reserve of moral and intellectual energy which will stand you in need in the day of trial whether it is in winning victories or in reconstructing the social order."

Dean Young Announces Course Overcrowded In Record Enrolment

Lists To Be Posted Naming Students Allowed to Continue in Course; Selection Made by Heads of Departments

TOTAL REGISTRATION 603

Forty S.P.S. freshmen now registered in Chemical Engineering must change to other courses, Dean C. R. Young announced to The Varsity yesterday. This is the result of the record-breaking enrolment in first year which now numbers 603. Mechanical Engineering has the highest enrolment with 151, followed by Chemical with 145. No more students will be allowed to register in Mechanical Engineering and 105 is the maximum capacity of the Chemical Department.

A committee of the heads of the Chemical Engineering department met yesterday afternoon to decide which students should be allowed to remain in the course. Ninety-four students with excellent qualifications will be started at their work immediately. Eleven are yet to be chosen and the remaining 40 must transfer to other departments.

When applying for registration, each student was asked for a letter stating his reasons for choosing Chemical Engineering as well as any special qualifications he possessed such as industrial experience or family connections with the chemical industry. These letters, together with their results in High School examinations, formed the basis for the selection of the students. The marks obtained in the different subjects were weighed according to their connection with chemistry and extensive lists were compiled giving the final standing of each student. The women who registered in the course were treated the same as the men. Lists will be posted today or tomorrow on the bulletin boards giving the names of those who will be allowed to continue in the course.

VARSITY STAFF MEETING

The year's first general staff meeting of all members of The Varsity staff will be held on Friday afternoon at 4:30 in the Common Room of the Women's Union. All staff members and all those interested in writing for the undergraduate newspaper are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Sick 10 Days, Student Dies

Frederick G. Mishaw Jr., 19-year-old Victoria College Second-year student in the Honour Law course, died early Monday morning from an illness which developed from an injury to his finger 10 days ago.

As an expression of regret his fellow-students in Law II are sending a wreath to his funeral today at 2:30.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Mishaw of 231 Soudan Ave., Fred was born in Toronto and attended North Toronto Collegiate. He was an active debater and also played the piano a great deal.

House Board Sets Curfew

The war has changed the closing time of University dances held in Hart House, Mr. W. R. Cowan, Acting Comptroller of Hart House informed The Varsity, yesterday afternoon.

"The Board of Stewards have announced that all functions held in Hart House must finish not later than 1 a.m.," Mr. Cowan said.

The main reason for this change is the staggering of lecture hours in the University, which automatically lengthens the day by half an hour. Moreover, due to the shortage of staff, some older men are filling in; and finally, a concerted effort is being made to "save power.'

By way of compensation, dances can start as early as is desired by the convenors. The University Fall Dance will get under way at 8 p.m. on October 23.

U.C. High Court To Judge Frosh

A new institution, the High Court of University College, will hold its opening session tomorrow from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. in the U.C. Junior Common Room.

Presiding will be Chief Justice World and Justices MacDonald, Cameron, Brown and Katz, all students of fourth year Law. The Prosecutor will be Bryant Kassirer and the jury will consist of 12 U.C. Sophomores.

The court in this first session is to bring to justice such freshmen as have not obeyed the freshman rules decreed at a meeting in the Junior Common Room Monday. Sophomores are urged by the prescutor to report such offences.

The court will be in session from 4:00 to 5:15 p.m. tomorrow, and from 5:15 to 6:00 sentences of the court will be carried out.

The Voice Of Experience

It's a confusing world that greets the University freshman as he arrives on this war-conscious campus. Hurried through the bustle of freshman weekends, pushed through the perplexing complexities of "getting registered," annoyed or even amused by the timeworn puerilities of initiation rites, turned loose in classrooms in which these mysterious things called "lectures" are delivered, he hasn't had much time to himself yet, to think over what the business of coming to college is all about.

And now that his once-gorgeous freshman tie is probably beginning to show definite signs of hard wear, even if it is not already hanging from the war-belt of some brawnier neophyte in the halls of culture, The Varsity, with all the wisdom of its 61 years of seeing classes enter and leave this University, undertakes to explain to him a few of the fine points of college existance.

Clearing its editorial throat and adjusting its pince-nez at a rakish tilt, The Varsity would first point out that whatever else college may do it does not constitute four years of carefree hilarity and riotous living. This observation is so nearly axiomatic that its inclusion may seem a trifle prolix to most students. We would remind them that in occasional cases freshmen will arrive on campus with what we choose to term a "Heidelberg complex"—the impression that the well-known McGill song which ends up: "and we'll raise hell all the year," is to be taken seriously.

Having disposed of this rare but troublesome misconception, we may now turn to the other extreme, and consider the mental state of the man who arrives at college with the creditable but scarcely practicable intention of spending four years cloistered in the Library, only removing his nose from between the book-covers for the purposes of eating and breathing. To him we will merely say that better men than he have tried an unrelenting diet of solid study before now, and have had nervous breakdowns for their pains.

Just One Compromise After Another

With either extreme of the range of mental approaches to college life dealt with oracularily, The Varsity next turns its august attention to the more normal type of student with the more normal type of outlook, who realizes that college — like every other form of life this side of the grave — is something that will involve a long series of compromises between the things that one should do and the things that one has to do.

Hence, we find, pushing the pince-nez back on the bridge of the editorial nose and looking around with a certain air of triumph, that the whole secret of making a college career successful lies with one's ability to make the right compromises in the right places—to "draw the line" with discretion.

Which brings up the whole new question of the divisions involved in drawing the line between four successful years and four wasted years. And it is at this point that The Varsity wipes its pince-nez carefully on the somewhat tattered tail of its long black gown and waits for the individual student to decide exactly what he wants to get out of college. It's his career — a life-time in miniature — and it should be mapped with care and forethought.

The scale of values to be considered by the athlete is different, for example, from that of the scholar. The engineer has other aims than the classicist. The capable all-rounder will not plan along the same lines as the brilliant specialist. Go in for a little quiet self-analysis and think it over.

And when you are quite ready, you may open your eyes again and continue reading. The Varsity is striding stiff-legged up and down the podium now as it warms up to its theme.

Don't Overdo It

If your aim is high academic success, first be sure you don't overtax yourself. Don't try to be Einstein overnight. Study-schedules laid down too arduously early in the year will rebound fatally at examination-time, when the student finds himself, like an overtrained athlete, drawn too fine to do his best work. On the other hand, don't waste the early months of the year with the fatuous notion that you are saving yourself for the final grind of April and May. Keep up with, and where possible just ahead of lectures with your outside reading; turn in essays as good as you can make them without feeling that you are spending more time on them than the subject deserves; and remember that term marks do count when scholarships are awarded.

And while we're on the subject, The Varsity points out, as it shuffles its notes, it is most unwise to suppose that heavy study can be undertaken without a variety of forms of relaxation from its rigours. Both mental and physical pursuits of a nature designed to contrast with the activity of crouching over a book until its type begins to blur should be carried on.

If a student is not in search of academic awards, but wishes rather to avail himself of the cultural and social side of college life in order to broaden and deepen his experience and perception as a social animal, he has another wide variety of possibilities from which to choose. There are all sorts of clubs, groups, organizations, teams, parties with which he may ally himself—or if he is of a slightly original turn of mind, he may form an organization of his own. Nor is extra-curricular activity bounded by the possibilities of formal organizations. He will meet every type of fellow Canadian student—and a few from other countries—during his years here; and it devolves upon him to chose from among them the men and women whose companionship may prove of interest or value.

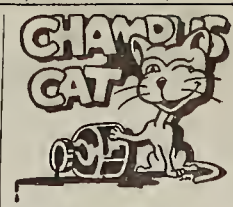
Again The Varsity clears its throat and glances at its watch, looks surprised, then apologetic. It has run over the time allotted, and kept a lot of freshmen from their innocent pastime of tearing one another's cravats off. It really must be getting old, to have talked for so long.

That's enough for today. Go to some more lectures, meet some more people, tear some more ties off. We'll talk more about this later.

Art of Music Drama

Why Don't They . . .

This column made a few rather petulant remarks in the middle of last season about the lack of enterprise in Toronto musical programs. A new season will begin shortly and perhaps a recapitulation is not entirely out of place. Last season saw the presentation of a number of fairly recent works by the Toronto Symphony Orchesta. The highlight of the season was the playing of William Walton's exhilarating Symphony in B minor. This work, although it is not written in the idiom of Brahms or Wagner, and contains polytonal passages, is by no means excessively "modern" or dissonant, and it was well received. Admittedly I heard someone mutter during intermission (enraged no doubt by the jazzy scherzo) "Why don't they give us something soothing?" but as a whole it was well received.



It is a pity that the term contemporary music has been regarded as synonymous with dissonance and lack of melody, whereas music today is far more diatonic and consonant than it has been for a long time, and composers are concentrating particularly on melody, which, after all, is the main thing.

I said that the T.S.O. showed a little enterprise last season. The Hart House string quartet did not. Admittedly it ventured past say the works of Brahms, but, as it turned out, into regions even less profitable than Brahms. Their attitude seemed to be that the only modern works which they could play were those which resembled most closely those of the old masters in style. Needless to say they resembled the old masters in nothing else. There was certainly no Bartok, no Hindemith, no Berg. One would like to hear the Lyric Suite of Berg, which is regarded as a masterpiece of modern chamber music. If it is anything as good as the same composer's Violin Concerto, the suite must indeed be a fine work.

Returning to the T.S.O., what happened to the Seventh Symphony of Sibelius? We were promised it on the advance list two years ago, but it has not appeared yet. Competent critics call it Sibelius' greatest achievement. I hold no brief for Sibelius, who is somewhat overrated, but he is a harmless composer whose music could give qualms only to the most anachronistic ear. He is indeed popular. But still no Seventh Symphony.

No doubt we will get more Elgar instead. Elgar, whose music, however appropriate it may have been to the time of the Boer War, is decidedly unpleasant today.

Prominent Ballet Disappears

CONGA LINE LONGA

The manager of a local theatre reported last night the disappearance of an entire troupe of ballet artistes scheduled to perform in the city this week.

Arriving tired and hungry after a long delay at the border, the troupe was herded into Hart House by an officious flunkey and compelled to stand in line at the entrance of the Great Hall. As women and children died in their tracks of acute starvation, a few staggered to the Tuck Shop, where they managed to keep alive on a diet of ping pong balls and college pennants (wisely ignoring the food supplies).

Leaving the house in a somewhat nourished condition, the survivors were again herded into line nearby and found themselves in the midst of a snake-dance of School frosh. This line vanished northward some time last night and when last heard from had become involved with a conga line operating out of Casa Loma which had been lost since early June.

Amid mingled cries of "one, two, three KICK," "this is hardly the Pavlova technique" and "get that green tie" the procession vanished into the dimmed-out night.

Principal Wallace Speaks at Punch

Referring to the Bible as the most literary of all English works, Principal Wallace addressed the gathering at the Opening Punch of the University College S.C.M. on the subject of the importance of the study of the Bible. The meeting was held in the Women's Union at 79 St. George.

"Today the tendency is to become wordly-minded, to consider the toys of a mechanistic and materialistic kind; but this is not so amusing as we approach the end of the road," Wallace said.

"The Bible is the most influential of all books, and it is simple in phraseology. Of Shakespeare it was said that he could write in every language but a simple one. In addition, the language of the Bible is so beautiful that the Scots, in adopting the translation of the Bible, lost their native Scottish dalect," he went on to say.

Professor T. A. Gouge, and John Coleman, Assistant Secretary of the S.C.M. spoke on the plans for study groups for this fall. Rev. Arnold Nash showed a broader aspect of work of the S.C.M. in Canada by connecting this with the work done for the World Student Christian Federation. Skits, singing and punch served to give the lighter moments to the opening meeting.

Students at Alabama University Form Third of Local Air Patrol

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 29—Students from the University of Alabama form approximately one-third of the local unit of the Civil Air Patrol.

Members of the unit wear the regulation American army officer's uniform with CAP insignia attached. In addition to flying activities they study military subjects at the University, covering most of the material studied by basic R.O.T.C. students and a great deal of that covered by the more advanced R.O.T.C.

Founded last February, the local CAP units reached a peak of activity this summer and expect to remain as active during the fall and winter months.

The two Tuscaloosa flight wings are supplemented by one at Jasper and one at Muscle Shoals. The four form a squadron of which Mr. J. B. Carl of Tusealoosa is commander. His official rank is equivalent to that of a 1st lieutenant in the Army, while that of the members of his staff is equal to a 2nd lieutenant rating.

The local organizations participated in a Tuscaloosa daylight air-raid drill during August by "bombing" the city with sawdust-filled bags. The same procedure of dropping simulated bombs was followed by them in Birmingham and Muscle Shoals air-raid drills. They also took part in a number of "secret" missions, in which flight orders were not issued until 24 hours before departure.

Medical Track Meet, Intramural Golf Tourney Start Fall Athletic Program

Tug-of-War to Feature First Track Meet of Year; Three Events Included for Meds Women

INTERYEAR CONTEST

This afternoon at 1:30 Meds will hold the first Track meet of the year. The meet will be in an interyear contest with provisions being made for the medical girls to take part in some events. Dr. Gallie, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, has donated a shield to be presented to the winning year. There will be a trophy awarded for the individual championship, and prizes for all the events.

Feature of the meeting will be a Tug-of-War between teams representing the various years. The feminine division of the Medical Faculty will compete in a special 75 yard dash and a three-legged race. A list of starting times for the events will be found elsewhere on the sport page.

Keen competition is expected in the sprints with such speedsters as Sol Burger, Bill Blastorah, and little George Lewis leading the way.

Ball and Stuart Are Favoured in Intramural Golf Tourney; Look for Stars from Freshmen

ENTRIES DUE TOMORROW

Golfers are reminded that they have until tomorrow noon to hand in their entry, including the 25 cents entry fee, in the Athletic Office at Hart House. G. Reif of Pharmacy, the head of the golf committee, will aid the ever-present "Mac" McCutcheon in running the tournament.

Ralph Stuart of Dents seems to be Gord Ball's chief rival this year for the individual championship as far as the upper years go. Ralph has finished high up for the past two years and this may be his turn to cop the honours. However the possibilities of the huge freshman class should not be overlooked as it may be teeming with golfing stars.

School will be trying to make it three in a row this year following sophimore Bob Spence's victory two years ago and that of freshman Gord Ball last year.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

A FIRST FOR MEDS

Meds have more or less jumped the gun on the other faculties by holding the first track meet of the year this afternoon. By getting such an early start on the cinder campaign the Medical Athletic Executive hopes to have its contestants in good shape when the Novice and Senior track meets come along next month. Also with the heavy curricular load the embryo doctors are carrying, the authorities feel that they need good physical condition to stand up under the strain. This also ties in with the Keep-Fit program the University is carrying on this year.

Meds have a good supply of able trackmen this year and with the benefit of this early start should give School competition in the fall meets, which the green tie brigade won with ease last year. We hope that this is a forerunner of better things to come from the medicals in the way of athletics. Considering their ability the Meds made a woeful showing in the Reed Race last year and we, for one, would like to see them improve this year. The excuse of not having time to indulge in athletics should not be given too much importance, as most students are carrying a heavy load nowadays with C.O.T.C. plus compulsory P.T., and participation in quite a few interfaculty sports requires very little extra time.

WARTIME ECONOMY

Monday afternoon, at the intramural committee meeting, Mac McCutcheon stressed the need for all faculties to cut down on the buying of any but essential athletic equipment. A step in this direction has been taken by the Pharmacy Athletic Society which bought one set of sweaters for all their indoor sports such as basketball, baseball, and lacrosse. These sweaters must be turned in at the end of every game to avoid losses.

In these times there can be no objections to such recommendations. All non-essential spending must be cut down. At the same time managers should see that their players are properly outfitted with protective equipment in such contact sports as rugby and hockey. Proper shoes for basketball are a much greater necessity than flashy satin sweaters, since an easily-acquired sprained ankle is liable to put a player out for the season.

DID YOU KNOW?

When Wally Halder, City League hockey star, joined the Navy recently his position on the Athletic Directorate was taken by none other than our noble Sports Editor, Bill Quigley. Wally nosed out Bill for the coveted position by the narrowest of margins in last spring's elections. Quig brings a wide knowlege of Varsity athletics to his new position, where he should give sagacious service to Steve & Co.

Sportswoman

By Aileen McNally

Since all the golf-minded co-eds have been busy practicing this summer, the forthcoming University tournament should be a great success. U.C. is in charge this year with Anna Marriette Campbell at the helm.

The date (weather permitting) is October 9—the place St. Andrew's Golf Club. A bus will leave on the hour from the end of the Yonge Street car-line. Lunch will be served to the players from 11 until 2 and all matches must be completed by this time.

Three prizes are being offered—one for the lowest gross, one for the lowest net for those with a Canadian Ladies Golf Union handicap, and one for the lowest net without a handicap. So come on gals—here is your chance to putt for the Alma Mater. Anyone interested please contact your college representative.

All college representatives are requested to hand in their entries as soon as possible to either Anna Mariette or to Marg Stock.

Since basketball is just around the corner, it has been suggested that athletic directors of the various faculties secure eligibility slips for their freshies now. This will be greatly appreciated by the already over-burdened medical office.

Co-ed Houses Overflowing, Rooms Scarce

Long and serious is the face of many a co-ed this year as the problem of finding sufficient sleeping quarters becomes predominant.

"Approximately twenty letters were sent informing students of our inability to accept them in residence," said Mrs. Kirkwood, Dean of St. Hilda's. Since this college does not enroll day students unless their families live in the city those whose names are at the end of the waiting list have transferred to another college.

"We simply have no more room" said the Secretary to the Dean of Women of Victoria College. Even Wymilwood, formerly a graduate residence, has been given over to the undergraduates.

University College, however, has found room in its residences for every Arts student, as the Arts faculty receives priority over all other faculties. Those in Science and Physical Health Education have had to find boarding houses near the university.

At St. Michael's the shortage of space has necessitated St. Joseph's College turning away five O.C.E. applicants and several graduates. Loretto College was likewise forced to refuse numerous applicants as neither college accepts non-residents unless they reside with relatives in Toronto.

No connection has been kept with those who have been refused and the consensus of opinion among the Deans of Women is that these students have been assimilated into University College where they are permitted to board outside the residence. U.C. is the Provincial College and all applicants must be accepted.

FRESHMEN SWIM TEST

All Freshmen on entering the University must take the swim test, and if unable to swim satisfactorily must enrol in a learn-to-swim class. These classes must be attended twice weekly during the fall term.

Report to the Swimming Pool, Hart House, and enrol immediately.

Failure to observe this regulation will prevent the student from securing standing in Physical Training.

Greetings, EDS and CO-EDS, greetings! Although there have already been several issues, and all freshmen ought to be acquainted with the joys of this column, we feel greetings are still in order 'cus: a) this is the first time we have batted out this column ourselves, and b) despite what our associate, bless him, said yesterday about people ever reading our 48 pager, we still believe there will be some new readers who have not yet chuckled (we hope) over our efforts.

And speaking of freshmen reminds us of freshettes, and hence of interesting sidelights of House-party. While making polite conversation to one of her Freshies, a Senior happened to mention that she had a BL in Oriental Literature, to which the awe-struck Freshie replied, "It that a Degree?"

But the tables were soon turned, or nearly turned. Usually it is the custom during initiation, for the Freshies to make beds for Sophs, Juniors, and Seniors. But this year, the Dean called a meeting and asked the Freshies if they minded making them! What will happen next to revolutionize these venerated institutions?

The war, it seems, affected our Co-eds in more ways than one. If you should wander beneath a Whitney Hall window in the early hours of the morning, and have a cloud of dust descend on you, don't be alarmed; it's merely a mop or rug being shaken out a second or third floor window. Besides, it's all for a good cause, and the gals are at last learning to be domestic.

Also along the war effort theme comes this rhyme from the Lariat:

In these days with the world so chaotic;
With metals so rare and exotic;
A lady with zippers
Or gents with their grippers
Just cannot be called patriotic.

What adjutant of what battalion last night said to a young female Varsity reporter over phone—"I'd rather talk to you tomorrow than to ANYONE ELSE"???

Last week our revered head-of-house and a pal of hers went down to pay their fees. They made such a horribly confused mess of their little pink form that the marshall immediately got the situation under control and said, "Of course, you are first year, I'll help you straighten it out!"

People worrying about the housing shortage, might take a tip from the University of Ohio. Several years ago the "under the seats" area of the stadium was converted into HORSESHOE DORMITORIES. On football Saturdays, the students worked selling programs!

Surprised fellows were the men of Brooks hall, Baylor, the other noon. They were served their lunch by no other than the Assistant to the President, the Dean of Women, a Psychology Professor, and the Student Employment Chairman. The article continues to say that after recovering from their initial surprise, they went on eating as if it were the normal thing—and we can tell.

Would you like to exchange your coat for a different, and perhaps a better one? There are two boys on the Campus who could arrange it, I'm sure. They were seen today both approaching the Campus from opposite sides. They met, and after exchanging preliminary greetings, they exchanged coats, promptly about turned, and went off to their next lecture. All we can say is, WE HOPE THEY'RE HAPPY.

Even the Professors can't see why classes are moved forward half an hour to avoid the 8:30 to 9:00 rush hour. Anyone knowing students, knows they seldom make nine o'clocks anyway—except, perhaps, a few ENTERPRISING FRESHMEN.

and wreckage. He and his men carried out rescue work during those raids and his canvasses were eloquent and accurate records of some of these experiences.

One of the most noticeable paintings shows the city of London in flames against a background of searchlight fingers, with St. Paul's Cathedral, black and seared, dominating the sea of flames.

Mr. Gilley has received letters from various camps in Ontario. From one Bombing and Gunnery School came the following words, "A fine incentive to extra effort with a definite goal. We have at least 8 men who have made drawing their hobby," Such letters have poured into the Warden's office to hearten those sponsoring the Exhibition.

Mr. Gilley especially urged that "some of our own dental and medical students who are on active service will have some work to exhibit, as well as members of the R.C.A.F. detachment at the University." Contributions are expected from the United Nations Forces training in Ontario—Norwegians, Poles, and others.

A formal opening will take place in the art gallery at Hart House on Saturday November 14. It is hoped that all the contributors will be present at that time. The Art Committee and the Board of Stewards have agreed upon three vistors' days, when the general public will be admitted to the House.

The exhibition has the support of the various Commanding Officers. The Art Committee of Hart House is receiving full co-operation from the Auxiliary Service Officers at headquarters and in the camps, and the Citizens' Committee for troops in training, Toronto, are making the project possible by shouldering a large part of the expense and by acting as a distribution centre for information and supplies.

The posters and layouts are the work of Charles Comfort, and have been spread throughout all the camps in Ontario. The Navy, Army, Air Force and the Women are represented on a palette, with a hart as an inscription.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS

In view of the fact that all appointments for Health Service Examinations (Men) to October 26 are now filled, no new appointments will be made until Monday morning, October 19.

It is urged that all students who have appointments present themselves for examination in time.

Labour Shortage Not Yet Serious

dents are now eating with a sort of "self-service" system, necessitated by the lack of help.

At Trinity college the students are helping out by making their beds and caring for their rooms. Officials there stated that their policy is to try to run on as small a staff as possible so as not to take workers from war work, but they expect to have sufficient help to carry on at both residences.

"The college is open and meals are being served three times daily." they replied when asked if the reputed shortage had affected them greatly.

There has been a little difficulty experienced at St. Mike's where they have been trying to find another fireman for their heating plant. They finally did locate one, but Selective Service officials decided that he was needed more in a war industry.

Mechanical	151
Chemical	145
Civil	107
Electrical	87
Physics	56
Metallurgy	37
Architecture	16
Mining geology	1

When about 30 architects have returned from survey camp, the population of the little red schoolhouse should be complete. The total will be almost exactly 1400. This is an increase of 524 over last year when the freshman class numbered 470 boosting the total to 1146. Last year Chemical Engineering was the only course affected and about 20 students had to change to other courses. A class of this year's size presents a serious problem to a staff whose ranks have been thinned by the needs of the war effort.

There will be a meeting of all those interested in writing scripts for the Follies at 2:30 in the Women's Union.

260 U. of T. Med Students Now Enlisted In R.C.A.M.C. Under Government Plan

Students Enroll as Privates; Are Permitted to Indicate Armed Service Which They Wish to Join when Officers

WEAR DISTINGUISHING MARK

Two hundred and sixty University of Toronto medical students and internes have joined the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps under a scheme announced by the Dominion government last March. This scheme permits medical students who are within two years of graduation to enlist as privates, and be paid regular army pay plus subsistence (a total of $2.30 per day), until such time as they become medical officers. When enlisting, each man is permitted to specify to which of the armed services he wishes to be attached when he becomes eligible to act as medical officer. If there are vacancies in the Navy or Air Force at that time, they will be permitted to fill those vacancies, otherwise they will remain in the Army.

The announcement of this scheme was welcomed by the students as the solution to their financial problems. Due to the curtailment of holidays, and the fact that they had to pay for 1-1/3 academic years each calendar year, it was extremely difficult for many students to meet their financial obligations. The Medical Society had petitioned the Federal Government to establish a loan fund. From October until January hopes for such a fund rose and fell alternately, as different rumors struck the campus. Finally, the Medical Society petitioned that students be permitted to receive the same status as civilians who train for technical positions in the armed forces. No definite word came as the weeks passed, but on March 8th, it was revealed that the Department of National Defence had summoned representatives of all Canadian medical schools to Ottawa to discuss the acceleration of medical courses. A week later the present scheme was announced, but actual enlistment was not begun until early in May.

Students who enlisted under the provisions laid down were permitted two weeks' holidays, and the rest of the summer vacation was spent in hospital work. The students were allowed to choose the hospitals themselves, some as internes, others as externes. Those who preferred army hospitals, were stationed

Former Students Listed Missing

Two former University students serving overseas with the Royal Canadian Air Force have recently been listed as missing. Pilot Officer John Edwin Gardiner failed to return from an operation five weeks ago, while Pilot Officer LeClarc A. Walker was listed following the Dieppe raid.

P.O. Gardiner, the son of Agriculture Minister Gardiner, began an engineering course at the University in 1939 but transferred to Aerial Navigation shortly after the war began. He enlisted in the R.C.A.F. in August, 1940, winning his wings last Oct. 7. He had secured his private pilot's license two years before.

P.O. Walker had completed his second years at S.P.S. when he enlisted in June, 1940.

U. of T. Offers New Course In Personnel

The University of Toronto, Department of Extension, is planning a course of study in personnel training for personnel workers. The course is being sponsored by the Department of Labour, and will be limited to 40. There is at present no provision for those who are not now employed as personnel workers, but who would like to take such training.

The first such course was given in the summer. The course met in the first week in June, then the workers returned to their plants for the remaining three weeks. The second part opened in the first week in July, then again in August and Setpember. The workers were able to put into practice what they had learned in the sessions, and then could meet and discuss their results. The new course is designed for those who cannot leave their positions, and will be held every Tuesday evening.

"The purpose of the personnel worker is to provide a link between the individual worker, and the management of the factory," Mr. Dunlop said. "Many war workers have never been employed before. One of the personnel workers greatest problems is to combat "absenteeism," and hardly less of a problem is the worker who arrives without breakfast or enough sleep to complete a long and tiring day satisfactorily."

There is no academic standing required and no degrees or certificates are given.

Varsity Girls Serve Country In Uniform

Many former women students of The University of Toronto are now serving in the armed forces of their country. The Women's Division of The Royal Canadian Air Force seems to be by far the most popular branch of the services, among Toronto graduates, with the Canadian Women's Army Corps coming a close second.

Sylvia Boyd and Elizabeth Stone, both former University College undergraduates, are Air Women, Second Class, with the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) at Rockcliffe Park, Ottawa. Miss Boyd joined up early in September of this year after completing two years of the English Language and Literature course, and will soon be finished her elementary training. Miss Stone joined up in the latter part of August, and, as she did not leave College till the end of her third year in English Language and Literature, will be graduating this June

Several graduates of the Margaret Eaton School are also with Canada's Women's Forces. Phillis Gale, daughter of Colonel Gale, joined immediately after Convocation, and is now doing journalistic and publicity work in the C. W. A. C. Barbara Halliday has just finished her course of basic training with the air force at Ottawa, first in a class of ninety, and will be stationed at the Jarvis Depot in Toronto to take an advanced course in administration.

Jean Finch of Winnipeg is now a Corporal in the R.C.A.F. at Vermilion, Alberta. Patsy MacLarne, A.W.2 in the R.C.A.F., graduates from Rockcliffe today.

Annals Of U.C. Revealed In Survey Of Its Past

Sometimes described as "a crumbling medieval mass of picturesque buildings," the University College building is more than picturesque.

The grace and beauty of the old building is a mute testimony to the creative genious of F. W. Cumberland, the architect who designed it, and the main entrance surmounted by the richly carved tower is a monument to the workmanship of Newman Steiner, a Bohemian who did most of the ornate design work.

When U.C. was opened in 1859, it was completely equipped for instruction in all courses. The Croft Chapter House was then a chemistry lab, but later, when the chemistry and physics buildings were erected, the labs were moved out and U.C. was devoted exclusively to Arts learning.

Originally the enrolment was all-male, those being the dark ages before co-education. There were rooms for about 250 resident students in the buildings, which are now used for professor's offices and small classrooms.

There used to be a high board fence closing off the quad, which had a small door in it. This door was locked after curfew time and tardy students had either to rouse the porter or attempt to climb over and find an open window before being discovered and reported. Heat in the rooms was supplied by fires, the students buying their coal from the porter.

Clues to the living dramas of bygone schooldays are in the walls, pillars, the Norman windows and desks of the old building for all to see. These classic windows and pillars won't develge any stories, but there are a few old-timers around the campus who can tell yarn after yarn about the "good old days" at U.C.

Sir William Mulock inscribed his name with a diamond on the center window of Room 40 in his undergraduate days some 70 years ago in case his name should be lost among those of the thousands of students passing through U.C. It wasn't, and his signature is still scrawled on the window.

Fifty-two years ago, fire swept through the East Wing of the College and completely gutted that part of the building. The fire raged up into the tower and the heat melted the huge bell that used to ring the nine o'clock curfew for the resident students of the time. Some of the metal from the bell was saved and part later went to England to be included in the metal used in casting the bells for the carillon in the Hart House Memorial Tower. So now the old bell tolls on in a different form, though the setting is almost the same.

Another fragment of the bell was made into the sundial now standing in the centre of the Hart House quadrangle. The sundial rests on a pedestal made of a pillar from the original building. On the stone is inscribed "Ecce sonans olim mutum nunc auguror hoxras," which, when rendered into English, means "Formerly noisily, now silently I tell the hours."

The current U.C. initiation brings to mind the popular story of a pillar inscribed with the Latin phrase, "Here lies the body of a freshman," which was one part of the hazing that was done many years ago. Freshmen were led to the stone and with their own eyes saw what happened to one fresh Freshman who ignored some grim Sophomore threat equivalent to "brush eut or else . . ."

To Preserve Unity Of Allies Is Avowed Determination Of Student Assembly

Issues Credo Signed by Student Delegates from 56 Countries Expressing Faith in Ultimate Victory

IMPERIALISM DENOUNCED

(This is one of a series of articles dealing with the International Student Assembly, held in Washington early this month. Other articles in the series will be published later.)

Determination to fight until fascism is finally routed was expressed by the International Student Assembly in a credo signed by representatives of all 56 countries sending delegates to the gathering.

"By their ruthless aggression the Axis nations have forged a unity among the freedom-loving peoples which shall be their undoing," the credo continued. "This unity we shall preserve and strengthen."

While expressing confidence in ultimate victory, the document stressed the gravity of the present hour. It praised the youth of Russia, China and Britain for their parts in the struggle and pledged free youth to defeat the enemy on a European battlefield.

"This is not enough," it added, pointing out the necessity of assuring all peoples of equal freedom. "Our actions now are shaping the peace. . . . We must renounce imperialism and all its evils." It went on to advocate freedom for colonials and equal rights and opportunities for national, religious and racial minorities.

The document urged the re-opening of negotiations in India and the granting of political freedom to mobilize the Indian people behind the war effort.

An international organization to enforce order was advocated and co-ordination of the world's economic resources was recommended.

"This can be the people's century," the credo said in conclusion, "if all of us are inspired by the spirit of human brotherhood and equality—if the primary principle of social organization is the subordination of every private interest to the public advantage. These are the goals toward which we aspire."

Food Analysis Undertaken

An analysis of the mineral content of vegetables, designed to remedy faulty eating habits of Canadians, is being undertaken by two members of the Household Science Department, it was announced last night.

Dr. Jessie B. Brodie, head of the department, and Dr. Alice C. Willard are conducting the analysis primarily in order to find new sources of calcium, discovered in a survey of Canadian diet to be the necessary element most likely to be insufficient.

"We hope to show," explained Dr. Willard, "that controlled conditions of production, selection of varieties and improved methods of preparation will add to the amount of calcium Canadians can get from vegetables."

Dr. Brodie and Dr. Willard are working on a fellowship in nutrition to be granted by the Swift Canadian Company, Toronto, the third given to University scientists by the company for work in this field. Both are closely identified with the national nutrition program.

Details Given Of Swim Test

By Sydney Paiken

To clarify the swim test situation for the still bewildered frosh, your Varsity reporter interviewed Mr. Winterburn, vice-president - in - charge-of - giving-frosh-swim-tests.

Mr. Winterburn reported that the University requires all first-year men to submit to a test to demonstrate their ability to swim. "Some," smiled Mr. Winterburn, "exhibit a miscellaneous collection of junk movements—a sort of breast stroke-cum-crawl-cum back stroke—and manage to keep afloat with a minimum of comfort."

The frosh must present himself in the swimming pool armed only with his University registration card which

Balanced And Varied Meals Aren't So Easy To Plan, These Days

By Henry S. Erikhorn

Little do you people realize, when you sit yourself down at a groaning board, to partake of a sumptuous feast, what a lot of worry and travail went into that meal. Even now when all of us are supposed to be vitally conscious of the conditions existing in the world, it is not very often that we really do appreciate the difficulties involved in putting forth a satisfactory meal. Pity the poor dietitian who practically has to create food every day so that she won't be mobbed by a hard of starving student, disappointed at the table.

As everyone knows, there is a definite shortage of meat, and this staple constitutes the biggest problem. It is necessary to go from market to market to buy anything at all in any quantity. Thus when an order for 200 pounds of meat is placed on Monday with one dealer, if the buyer is at all lucky, she may get 50 pounds on Tuesday. And it is a fact that oftentimes nothing is known in the morning, of what the evening meal will consist. And this in these days of efficiency when all our actions are supposed to be planned for us days in advance. Them days is gone —for a while at least. Right now sausage and veal are said to be the easiest meats to obtain.

But apart from the shortage, we must also consider that certain things are totally lacking. Have you seen any dates or nuts or raisins hanging around loose? If you have, kindly contact any one of the numerous food planners in this University. This, coupled with the rationing of sugar, has just about knocked out any hopes or ideas a chef might have of whipping up a succulent dish to please a particular palate. Many of the faculties have cut out baking altogether and what the others do lacks all pretty effects gained by the indiscriminate use of sugar.

And don't expect to get a lot of fruit juices this winter, for grapefruit juice and orange juice are plenty scarce. At Hart House they have come a long way toward meeting this problem by buying up an immense quantity of grapes and making their own. Miss Ransom the dietition said it was quite a job.

Then too the fact that there are more students being fed this year than

Grotesque Fashions Are Featured As Sophs Initiate Freshies

College fashions took a drastic turn to the extreme last week as sophomores initiated trembling freshies to the joys of college life. Odd socks, name placards, startling coiffures, and no make-up were the order of the week. At Vic, freshies donned stiff cardboard Eton collars striped in the scarlet and gold of that college. St. Hilda's girls were more conservative, wearing only a card and a general expression of humility. Freshie-baiters at St. Joseph's cut the finger-nails of the new co-eds who were required to recite nursery rhymes and a list of the sophomores names in alphabetical order when meeting these worthies on campus.

The Physical Ed sophs have added a note of originality by having their freshettes do calisthenics on campus to the singing of "Who Wouldn't Love Me." These also carry with them a tennis raquet, a skate, and a bathing cap. At U.C. where initiation is still going on at full speed, new Falconer House girls wear wide green ribbons, and Cody House thank their exalted sophs for condeseending to notice them. A deep royal curtsy is extended to second year Mulock House.

But the professional courses seem to to have outdone the Arts girls with Dental Nursing freshies wearing green lipstick, red noses and pink bows on the seat of their trousers, and carrying open umbrellas and suitcases. Occupational Therapy are sporting headcoverings made of bath towels and shoe boxes on their feet. The School of Nursing has composed a little ditty for their freshies which goes

Make me humble
Make me good
Make me love my seniors like
I should.

All of which sounds a bit gruesome but they keep telling them its fun to look back on.

Women's Work . . .

The program of compulsory women's war work which is now being arranged on this campus for the women in the arts courses is the result of the wishes of the girl students themselves. Since the start of the war in 1939 there has been growing feeling that we should all do everything in our power to assist the nation's war effort and this opinion became especially strong after military training was made compulsory for all men students of draft age. Last year the conviction grew among both faculty and students, especially in arts, that the women's training should also be made compulsory, as the news came in from other Canadian universities that this course had been successfully adopted.

The result of this discussion and controversy is the 60hour plan, arranged through the summer with the willing co-operation of the necessary university faculties, the Canadian Red Cross Society, the University Civilian Defence Committee, headed by Chief Warden Butlin, and of the University Women's War Service Committee.

It is estimated by those in charge that about 800 women students will be affected by the ruling, and already many from the professional courses, with whom it is not compulsory, have enthusiastically signed up to do as much as their crowded timetables will allow.

President Cody and the Board of Governors welcomed this spontaneous decision on the part of the students, showing as it did that our women students are no less conscious of the great duties and responsibilities of the times than are the men.

. . . Is Useful . . .

All the women and a good many of the men on the campus have read the special suppliment of The Varsity in which the requirements of Women's National Service Training were set forth, and they will by now have a pretty good idea of the immediate needs of the work. What a good many people seem to be wondering is how the 60-hour course will be of benefit to those graduating into war jobs.

Girls who enroll in the University of Toronto Detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps (the W.S.T.D.) will be qualified, on having completed at least the basic courses as undergraduates, to get probationary transfers to any other detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps they may select. The background of general information and drill which they get in the Corps will also stand them in good stead in any of the women's auxiliaries of the Canadian Army, the Royal Canadian Navy, and of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The chief Canadian officers in the army and in the air force are former commandants of the Red Cross Corps.

Nursing aids, both V.A.D.'s, who are members of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, and helpers in civilian hospitals, are being sought by hospital authorities. The demand is more likely to increase rather than to get smaller. The training offered as hospital nursing aids in the women's war work program equips the girls taking this course to work as regular hospital aids.

With so many women now working in war plants the problem of taking proper care of their children has brought repeated requests for government sponsored day nurseries. The university's Institute of Child Study is offering a course for volunteers in civic day nurseries, the advantages of which are obvious. The training in recreational leadership is allied to the nursery work but will be more likely to have a permanent field since playground leaders are needed in peace as well as in war.

Those enrolling in the courses in Civilian Defence will get at least the basic training necessary to be A.R.P. wardens, and will be issued with Ontario Civilian Defence Committee certificates when they have completed their courses. Those girls who have homes or who plan to live after graduation in cities or towns with active Civilian Defence Committees would do well to take one of the A.R.P. courses and so become fitted to take an active role in their community life.

The wide choices in the courses offered to the women students make it almost certain that everyone can be included in the work that interests her most. That the choice is so wide shows the fine co-operation of the faculty members and other instructors who will give their time and talents to this necessary work.

. . . In Wartime

The Canadian government has announced that it wants trained university women who can and will put their talents to work for the winning of the war and for the reconstruction of the peace-time period, rather than partly trained girls who have interrupted their education.

More jobs must be filled than the relatively simple though necessary ones in munition factories. Apart from the purely war-time positions there is desperate need for university graduates in other fields. The shortage of high school teachers at the present time is acute. The need for both civilian and service doctors is extremely serious: in one Ontario town seven of the doctors have joined the forces during the summer, leaving the remaining physicians to pray that the usual number of persons will, through some miracle, not become ill at the same time.

And so the mills of learning turn, geared to grind a little finer and a little more quickly than in peace time, and several new processes are added to the traditional program in order that the finished product may be better suited to a warring world.

ART & MUSIC Diana

Armed Forces Exhibit

One of the finest attempts at interpreting the soldier to the civilian is being sponsored by Hart House. The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition, scheduled to be exhibited from the 14th to the 29th of November, should be particularly interesting to all those who have the slightest aesthetic feeling.

And that will be, if similar exhibitions in the past are any criterion, not because the works lack anything, but because they will be so vivid, so alive, that there will be something in them even for the person who knows next to nothing about art.

Soldiers paint with all their personalities; they are an integral part of the scenes they put on canvas. Whether it be a picture of close actual relationship to the war, or some idealized scene, escapist in tendency, one always seems to feel that this art has a reason for existing, that it is sincere.

Hart House is to be congratulated on its initiative.

At The Alec

Spring Again, a Broadway success of 240 performances last season, brings to the Royal Alexandra next week Grace George and C. Aubrey Smith. Produced and directed by Guthrie McClintic, it is the joint work of Isabel Leighton and Bertram Block.

What happens when the son of a fire eating Civil War veteran, basking in the fame of his warlike ancestor, tells his wife the story of his father so often that her patience is worn thin, is the theme of Spring Again. The wife manages, however, to turn the tale of the defunct general to a profit.

C. Aubrey Smith and Grace George are brought together for the first time in this play. New York critics hailed this as auspicious in itself, and had nothing but the highest of praise for the whole production.

CAT DISAPPEARS

(Believed to Have Swallowed His Principles to Assuage His Hunger; May Be Working as a Veterinary)

CATS MUST EAT*

(The Varsity regrets to announce that the Champus Cat has been missing from his customary place behind the office ink-bottle, for the past several days. Because of this his column must be discontinued temporarily.—Catitor)

It is believed by some of the Cat's close friends that the Cat has been starving slowly during the past few months; ("I'm on a diet," he remarked cheerfully only last week, at a Varsity staff meeting). Because of this it was intimated that he had decided to earn some money, possibly at his former vocation as veterinary. These sources therefore suggest that the Cat's protracted absence is due to the fact that he was called in consultation to see a sick kitten at the Hospital for Small Animals in his home town, and that since that time he has been reading textbooks in an effort to figure out the diagnosis. It is suggested that the Veterinary-in-Chief would be most annoyed if the Cat doesn't know the answers.

An anonymous Varsity reporter intimated that the Cat had returned to the University of Toronto, with the intention of going to lectures. This was excluded by the masthead as being highly unlikely.

"Unbelievable!" said an unnamed managing editor, "and besides, such a suggestion is practically libel."

*Yes, and go to school, too.

Vic Dramatic Club Chooses Shaw Play

"The Devil's Disciple" by George Bernard Shaw will be the main production of the Victoria College Dramatic Society this season, it was announced Tuesday night at the open meeting of the Society.

Earle Grey, the director chosen to produce the play, in speaking of "The Devil's Disciple," said that this is the type of play Hitler would not allow to be produced since it shows the refusal of the individual to be coerced. The action of the play takes place in the period of the American Revolution.

Nominations and elections took place to fill vacant offices in the executive. Rod Johnston was elected Publicity Manager and Garth Legge acclaimed Treasurer.

Ruth Bentley, Associate President of the Society, outlined plans for read-thru groups and the At-Home in the spring. Theatre nights in which Victoria students alone will participate will be held in Alumni Hall, and will replace the afternoon productions of previous years.

Interspersed with the business of the evening were two skits, one a parody on army life and the other a soap opera written by Ralph Hicklin. John Mantley, past president of the society, gave a reading. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Summer Jobs Widely Ranged--- From Life Saving to Making Salads

"What did'ja do this summer?"

I drove an ice-truck. I helped my dad. I picked tobacco or I worked in an office. Perhaps I painted white markers down the middle of a highway, or I made salads at a summer hotel.

One girl watched soup simmering all day in a canning factory. A fourth year political scientist was a postmaster. A third year English student—a girl—worked for a debt collecting agency.

Last spring, the Student's Administrative Council Employment Bureau registered 530 men and 166 women who were seeking summer jobs, and was able to direct them to 350 openings for men and 200 for women. Most students who applied wished to work the whole summer and the majority of them asked for work away from their homes.

Summer hotels took a large amount of student help. Girls are dining-room waitresses, prepare salads, or they act as hostesses. Boys do heavier work, such as carrying bags, and also take turns as night-clerk. Lake boats, too, have long been the college boys' particular field. They start in as stewards and work their way up towards being purser.

Varsity students were taking tickets at the island ferries this summer. A couple of girls showed visitors through the mammoth pile of Casa Loma. There's a fellow who helped conduct sight-seeing tours and proves it by a geyser of guide-book adjectives beginning "on our right we see . . ."

There were a few factory jobs for men, and one munitions plant took girls to work at steam tables and as cashiers in their dining room. Mines and construction camps drew from S.P.S. and sapling Foresters went north to timber country. A small number of girls picked fruit for the farm service.

Playground work occupied both boys and girls, as did camp counselling. Requests were received for companions for invalids and children at summer homes. Also for life-guards at beaches—(girls applied for this, but nobody wanted them).

Clerking in offices and clerking in stores claimed their usual proportion. There was a tendancy, however, to avoid door-to-door soliciting.

Budding lawyers graced the outer doors of law offices. House Ec-ers helped hospital dicticians. Fourteen Varsity staff members worked as "real" reporters. It was a good summer.

Monday Slated For Tennis Draw

The draw for the University tennis tournament to be held Monday on St. Hilda's courts, will be announced in Monday's Varsity, Intramural Director Mac MacCutcheon revealed last night.

Mac warned competitors to be on time for their matches or default, as only one hour will be allotted for each match. The early rounds will be the best two out of three sets, the final going the best three out of five.

A new standing committee under the chairmanship of Tom Jacob, St. Mike's, has been placed in charge of the tournament, with committee members having regular hours of supervision. Committee members who were absent from the committee meeting yesterday are asked to get in touch with Jacobs at Mi. 0773.

Both singles and doubles will be played and the team championship declared by total matches won by the four men of each faculty proceeding farthest in the draw, one point being given for each match won.

Entries close tomorrow at noon. Results for the preceding day and draw for the following day will appear in issues of The Varsity.

Meds' Track Meet Starts New Season

The track season was opened yesterday afternoon when Meds held their first meet in 10 years. Topping the field for individual honors was sophomore Bill Fielding, who amassed three firsts and a second for a total of 18 points. Close behind, Bob Delaney had two first and a second for 13 points, while George Lewis corralled 12 markers. The team championship was captured by Second Year with 59½ points, with Tird and Fourth following with 37½ and 34 points, respectively.

The most colorful event on the program proved to be the tug o' war which Fourth Year took after three pulls. "Little" John Darte in the anchor position provided the extra beef for his class-mates in the strenuous final against the Thirds. Bob Delaney, also Fourth Year, showed his vast track experience in controlling the distance events, when he led the pack in the mile and three mile runs.

Three women's events were included on the varied program and while little real class was in evidence, the girls provided their male admirers with action a plenty and drew round after round of applause. Misses Craig and Wilford took the 7' yd. dash and baseball throw respectively, while Lois Craig and Viv Duggan won the three-legged race.

Speaking Of Sport

By Pete Aykroyd

EXCUSES

It is always difficult at the first of the year to gather enough material for a complete sports page. The literary and other assorted extramural activities get under way right from the drop of the hat and so until the interfaculty sports program gets moving, page three cannot compete with the other pages by volume.

SPECULATION

The colorful spectacle produced on the back campus every evening of multi-sweatered gridiron prospects sets one's rugby heart apoundin'. Consensus of opinion of the groups who stand on the sidewalk facing west from 4:30 to 6:00 seems to be that the makings of a powerful potential intercollegiate squad is hardening up out there. It is inevitable that speculation should take place as to who would be on such a team and what the squad's chances would be.

Five members of last year's all-star team are sweltering on the sward and the basis of any Blue team would be built around them. Glen Munro, Don Grosskurth, Jim Carson, Beefy McMillan and Bob Bundy. Naturally it is too early for the "out-on-the-limb" boys to take a stand and until words of wisdom are whispered from sage seers this column cannot go too far into intercollegiate speculation.

DOPE

Anyone with half a football eye couldn't help noticing the pre-season performance of a couple of potential gridiron warriors. New to Varsity circles are Schoolmen Bill Lawrence and Gus Campbell. Lawrence has had four years with Runnymede and is exceptionally fast and after a summer of hard labor is in tip-top shape. He should be a big boost to the Jr. School team and will bear watching. Campbell is a Stratford boy and looks much like Annis Stukus. He played intermediate O.R.F.U. for Stratford in 1940 when they won the championship. Six foot four and two hundred pounds of solid stock, he should be a cinch for the plunging half spot on Jr. School.

A PLUG

Norm Lea, ace swimmer with the Varsity squad is credited with saving the lives of two airmen this summer. Here's the story. A Coastal Command aircraft crashed in the Atlantic Ocean, off the north coast of Newfoundland and remained sufficiently above the water for the men to hang on. Norm witnessed the accident, jumped into a rowboat, raced to the scene and rescued the boys. They were not more than a hundred yards away on their return voyage when the air was rent by a terrific explosion and the airplane submerged.

By Betsy Gowan

Our column today is going to be mostly about the P. H. and E. girls. They have always been widely known about our campus, but they were particularly in the limelight yesterday afternoon at a meeting in the Women's Union. At it, they heard the arguments, pro and con for their having separate teams. Two representatives from each Arts College aired their views on the subject; and the four chosen athletes from P. H. and E. responded to them. Miss Jackson supervised the proceedings.

The outcome of it all was that P. H. and E. are going to have three basketball teams of their own under U.C. colours and teams of their own in other sports. This seemed to be a happy decision for all concerned. Better all around competition will, we are quite sure, result from this arrangement and more girls, both in U. C. and in P. H. and E. will be able to play in future.

All this goes to show that a lot of things can be settled by a friendly meeting. We can now look forward to some interesting competition in all fields of sport. With this statement ,and a timely reminder not to forget the coming tennis and golf tournaments, we shall leave you sports fans for now.

WALLY HALDER, PUCK STAR LEAVES VARSITY FOR NAVY

S.P.S. Soccer Coach Confident of Team

While making no rash predictions, Dave Hibbard, manager of S.P.S. soccer team, is confident that his team will at least come up to last year's championship standard. He reports few losses through graduation and due to the large freshman class believes that a second team could possibly be formed. Defensively the team should be strong as Hal Seymour is expected to confine his athletic prowess to the soccer field this year.

Jim Paton, speaking for Victoria, declared that no organized practices had been held as yet due to the new conditioning scheme but that he expected almost the same team that bowed to S.P.S. in last year's final game. When queried about new players he mentioned a forward whose drives would stand opposing goalkeepers on their respective ears. His name he said, would soon appear on the scoresheets of the Athletic Office.

Both managers agreed that the team to beat this year is the Medical outfit as it has, on paper, a very strong lineup. In any case, a good year is anticipated.

Another of Varsity's outstanding athletes has added his name to the long list of stars who have enrolled in Canada's armed forces. He is Wally Halder, young hockey sensation, who has been the talk of Toronto amateur puck circles for the past few years. Halder has left Varsity before graduating to throw in his lot with the R.C.N.V.R. and is posted to H.M.S. York in Toronto. It is his intention to complete his university education after the war.

Halder, a Toronto boy, registered in Trinity College in 1939 after breaking into the Jr. O.T.A. with Ed Wildey's Young Rangers the previous winter. From the start he was considered to have a bright future as a pivot man. Jimmy McPherson, coach of Varsity Juniors, looked forward to an exceptional season in 1939 with Halder as the chief incentive. But these hopes were smashed when Wally suffered a serious injury very early in the season and was consequently lost to his team for the remainder of the year.

The following year saw the death of intercollegiate sport and the consequent loss of a great senior hockey sextet for the Blue and White. Halder played with McPherson however, as did many other former Varsity pucksters, and Wally found himself patroling the centre lane for Tip Tops in the T.H.L. That season he topped the league in goals and in total points. Last winter he again performed for the Tailors and ended in second spot for total points, although he again led the league in actual goals. Halder was considered to be the best forward prospect in Toronto and was known to have sidetracked a number of pro offers.

The smooth skating center did not confine his athletic talents to hockey alone. Last fall he performed ably in the backfield for Trinity's football squad, which lost out to Victoria in the two-game Mulock Cup final. During the past spring, Wally was elected to a position on the Athletic Directorate of the University, will be stamped. He must swim, from a dive, at least one length of the pool, using one standard stroke. If he fails to do so he must enrol in one of the learn-to-swim classes. He may attend two of these a week for which he will receive P.T. credits. Men in second year, who cannot swim may also take the classes.

FIRST YEAR SWIM TEST EXPLAINED IN INTERVIEW

Mr. Winterburn reports that 15 per cent of last year's frosh couldn't swim. Indications are that this year's per cent would be about the same. "Schoolmen," reported Mr. Winterburn, "provide the highest percentage of swimmers, while the more timid frosh in Arts and Medicine are at the bottom of the list." He closed the interview by urging the now enlightened frosh to present themselves for their test by the end of next week, before regular U.T. classes start.

MEDS ENLIST IN R.C.A.M.C. BY GOVERNMENT PROVISION

at Chorley Park and Camp Borden Military Hospital, where they assisted the Medical Officers on the Medical and Surgical services.

Recently an order was issued permitting the student soldiers to wear a distinguishing mark—red flashes on the peaks of their wedge caps, and thin strips of the same material under their "Canada" badges, which generally arouse the question "Where did you earn those wound stripes?" To this, and to the nickname "Hagerman's Commandos" (after Col. A. R. Hagerman, District Medical Officer) which was given to them by the self styled "regular Army" most of them have become inured.

DIFFICULTIES FACED IN PLANNING MEALS

any other makes things all the more complicated. Such things as tea and coffee are given out on a percentage basis of what was used last year which doesn't help this year at all.

But what the various dietitians are trying to do is serve well balanced meals with as much variety as can be had. All of them, however, maintain that the variety will have to be sacrificed in order to have the balance.

And so if during the year you should happen to become irked at the food, try to remember that it's good for you and there is a whole host of people working their heads off to keep you healthy.

This one has recently been released for publication by a graduate. It seems that this young man, now of some prominence and bidding fair to become A Success In The World, was, as an undergrad, somewhat dilatory in his attendance upon lectures. One day he came into a lecture after a prolonged absence and the prof remarked, "You have grown, Mr. Blank."

In former days, before the sobering effects of the war were felt, The Varsity men's office was a rough, tough and nasty dive full of ebullient characters who went in for strong cigars and the playing of gambling games. One feature of the office was the quantity of exchange papers which used to be reduced to fragments and scattered about the floor to the unprintable disgust of the pixie from the building staff who used to try to keep the place neat.

Now one day one of these gambling games was in rattling progress behind closed doors when a shocked young reporter slipped out the door and met the pixie in the corridor. "You can't guess," he gasped to the pixie, "what those boys are doing in there!"

"Sure," came the quick reply, "They are tearing up paper."

It must be irritating to be a Prof. and a corporal and have one of your students as a sergeant. Such a situation does exist in one of the local battalions and the corporal has taken to addressing his sergeant in class with some bitterness, saying, "Sergeant, can you tell me (thus and so)." The student with the three stripes put an end to this the other day by replying, "No, sir, I can't, and if you persist I shall have to call you corporal."

We always said the military were sadistic. The Daily Athenaeum down at West Virginia University tells this story. It seems that the government recalled all the real rifles from the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and sent, in their places, wooden replicas. Commanders of the Corps at W. Va. promptly sent the dummy rifles back. THEY SAID THEY WERE TOO LIGHT.

And now they have designed their own wooden rifles which an ingenious Lootenant bores full of holes and fills with lead!

Varsity newshounds will run any risk if there's a story in it. For instance, when things were at their bloodiest on the campus a while back and the sward was flecked with fratricidal gore, two stalwart writers came upon a excited, surging mob in the middle of the campus. "A fight?" queried one. "A debagging?" suggested the other. "Ties being cut maybe?" "Or perhaps throats!" They set off on a run to see what the excitement was all about.

Just as they were approaching the mass of humanity it parted and the two newshounds were forced to flatten themselves in the approved manner for "defense, anti-aircraft, passive" as they were subjected to a strafing attack from a low-flying gasoline-powered model airplane. They never did find out what mob was all about.

This was the second time this terrifying experience had happened to one of the lads. While on a bicycle tour with another reporter this summer he stopped for a swim at a deserted spot on the Lake Ontario shore. The two let themselves down over a considerable cliff on a rope to the beach, and, on arriving there, found themselves utterly cut off from public view, so one said, "I don't see any point in getting our bathing suits wet."

The other replied that he didn't see any point in it either, so they divested themselves of their brief garb, plunged in and had a fine old swim unworried by the problem of how they were going to get their bathing suits dried out. . . .

They were climbing back to the top of the cliff when they heard a roar, and with a terrifying swoosh an R.C.A.F. primary trainer shot past as two grinning faces leered at two helpless reporters caught in a extreme state of nature on a half cliff face.

One section of School's population is screaming about graft and corruption. It seems that a certain text has been used for years and years in one subject, but this year the prof. announced blandly that as he had written a text covering the same subject he was now recommending it in place of the old one. This didn't disturb his class except that it ruled out chances of buying used texts, but when one of them went down to the Press and offered a two dollar bill (which had always been sufficient for the purchase of the other text) he was politely but firmly made to leave tow more of similar denominations before he could leave the store in possession of his pro's newly authed work.

Tomorrow we have a hither from a very remarkable character, a gallant newspaperman, and our boss (all the same guy). He worked this past summer at The Canadian Press in a very exalted position indeed, and always spoke to us who were just a copy boy. And now he has promised to write us a hither all about the funny things that happen on the leased wires of a great news-gathering agency. Ladies and gentlemen—THE BOSS!

Hikers will meet on Vic steps at 5 o'clock or Yonge and Lawrence Ave. at 5:30. In case of rain, party will meet instead at Wymilwood about 7:15 for dancing.

Student Societies Debate Fate Of Formal Dances On And Off The Campus

Medical Students Declare for Informal At-Home Following President's Plea for Unpretentious Student Social Life

QUESTIONNAIRES ISSUED

Most student executives were undecided last night as to the nature of their social functions for the year, a Varsity survey revealed.

The Medical Society, at a meeting held last night, decided that the Medical At Home, major event of the Meds' social calendar, will be informal. This decision grew out of President Cody's opening address in which he suggested that social activities on the campus be of less formal and more inexpensive nature.

While the University College Literary and Athletic Society has taken no definite action as yet, a spokesman suggested that all dances held away from the campus should be informal with formal dances held on the campus.

S.P.S. and Knox College are distributing questionnaires to their students to determine popular opinion on the question. The Victoria College Union and the Dental Parliamen held meetings last night to discuss the situation, but was able to reach a decision, The Varsity was informed.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, and in the office of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary.

The University Directory is now being prepared for the press, and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

More Specialists In Teaching Course

"One encouraging thing about this year's class of O.C.E. is the larger proportion of student teachers who have come with qualifications for specialist's standing," Dean J. G. Althouse, head of the College of Education told The Varsity yesterday. "This," he added, "is more pronounced in the case of women."

Two new features have been added to the teacher's course this year. A national defense program, begun last spring as a voluntary addition, is now a compulsory part of the course of instruction. Also, a short course in vocational guidance under the direction of M. D. Parmenter has been added to the curriculum.

One hundred and thirty-six students are enrolled in O. C. E. this year, 39 being men students. This enrollment is approximately half of the usual quota with a scarcity of men in evidence.

The Library School enrollment this year is up to the average. Thirty-one students are registered, including three from Newfoundland and four from British Columbia.

Women May Act As Blood Donors

Women will probably be able to contribute to the Red Cross emergency blood bank within a few weeks, its director, G. R. Sproat announced yesterday. Only male donors have been accepted to date in the campaign for blood serum to supply the needs of the active forces overseas.

The committee of the blood clinic will meet early next week "to decide whether the matter is feasible" and will make final arrangements, Mr. Sproat said.

Although arrangements have not yet been completed, Mr. Sproat considered it likely that women between the ages of 20 and 50, who are physically fit, will be eligible.

TORONTONENSIS EDITOR RESIGNS ON ENLISTMENT

Resignation of Paul S. Deacon as editor-in-chief of Torontonensis was accepted at a meeting of the Students' Administrative Council in University College Wednesday. Named to the post last March, Deacon resigned during the summer when he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force. His successor has not yet been appointed.

R. G. Bell, vice-president of the S.A.C. and president of the Medical Society, presided at the meeting.

U.S. Loans To Students Speed War

Accelerated Program with Demand for Technicians Brings Substantial Government Assistance

MUST ACCEPT WAR JOBS

Washington, Oct. 1—Twenty thousand students attending 240 colleges and universities throughout the United States are receiving assistance from the $5,000,000 loan fund set up by Congress to speed up the education of technicians for employment in the war effort, the U. S. Office of Education disclosed last week.

About $4,000,000 has already been allotted to institutions which offer an accelerated program—that is, an academic schedule providing over a 12-month period one-third more work than in a normal school year—in these fields: engineering, chemistry, physics, medicine (including veterinary), dentistry and pharmacy. The other $1,000,000 is being distributed to schools which inaugurate such a program this fall.

To be eligible for a loan a student must attend a degree-granting institution which is approved by the Office of Education as having an accelerated program and he must be within two years of completing his education in one of the specified courses. He must maintain a satisfactory standard of scholarship, agree to accept employment in the war effort if offered him and be in need of assistance.

If these qualifications are met, loans will be made to the student in an amount equal to his fees and tuition plus $25 a month and will not exceed $500 to any one student in a 12-month period. Loans are legalized by notes made payable to the Treasurer of the United States and carry an interest rate of 2½ per cent a year. Notes are cancelled if a student is drafted before completing his course or if he suffers total and permanent disability or in case of death.

New Course Unaffected By Draft

Age Limit in Course for Men Enlisting in Army Unchanged By New Selective Service Regulations

TO RECEIVE ARMY PAY

Lowering of the draft age to include 19-year-olds announced by War Services Minister Thorson on Wednesday will have no effect on entrance requirements for the new special one-year course in Mathematics and Physics Dr. E. F. Burton, head of the department of physics, told The Varsity yesterday.

The course, especially designed for young men enlisting in the army, is based on the first year of the Mathematics and Physics course and is offered jointly by the University of Toronto and the Department of National Defence. It is open to men who are over 17 years old and whose twentieth birthday comes ofter Oct. 10 of this year. They are required to have Ontario Senior Matriculation or its equivalent. Preference will be given to those with good standings in algebra, geometry, trigonometry and physics.

The number of candidates is restricted to 160. These men will be under military supervision and will reeeive regular army rates of pay. They will be housed in Burwash Hall. Credit will be given by the University towards a degree to those who wish to return later to complete a course.

The course, which will open as soon as arrangements have been completed, will be 33 weeks long and provide for 36 to 40 hours of leetures a week. Some candidates may return to the University far a second year for more specialized training.

Busy Summer Season Held by Hart House

Hart House boasts a record of summer activities hardly rivalled in attendance and variety by any building.

There were 325 present at the University College Alumnae dinner on June 5. This was followed by the traditional Graduation Ball. In all, 2,300 people attended this function; five orchestras played in different rooms in the House.

On June 9, 800 Alumnae of the Toronto Western Hospital Nurses took over Hart House. A garden party was held on June 25 under the auspices of the International Rotary Club, and more than 1,500 people attended.

On July 7, the R.C.N.V.R., 300 strong, had the facilities of the House at their disposal.

Women's Training Plan Gets Under Way Tuesday As Courses Organized

AIR FORCE WING

Members of the Air Force Wing 1941-42 who have returned to the University are required to parade with the new Air Force candidates on the North Campus at 1400 hrs. Saturday 3 Oct. 42.

Almost All Applicants Enrolled in Courses of Their Own Choice; Only a Few Sophs Shifted

LISTS NOW POSTED

The majority of classes for Women's National Service Training will begin on Tuesday, October 6, it was announeed last night following a meeting of the Women's War Work Committee.

In almost every course the number of applications has corresponded to the number which can be accommodated in that particular course. The senior students have all been placed in courses of their own choice, and the few disappointed ones are in the second year.

Lists of those who have been admitted to the various courses will be posted on the Dean's Bulletin Board in each College on Monday. Students will report at the plaees designated at 4 p.m. on Tuesday.

Names of members who have been accepted in the University of Toronto Detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps will be posted on the Bulletin Board outside Room 82 in University College also on Monday. However those students who are in the Red Cross Corps and have applied to take courses which are a part of the general National Service Training program, should also consult the lists in their own College.

The organization parade for the Red Cross Corps will take place in the Varsity Arena (entranee south door) on Tues., Oct. 6 at 4 p.m. However, those students who have elasses scheduled for this time, will be automatically excused from parade, and will report for their classes instead of going to the Arena.

Those in "professional courses," that is, those registered in all courses except Pass or Honour Arts, and students of the first year are automatically exempt from such training. Those however, who desire to apply for exemption on special grounds should do so immediately with their Dean. The applications will be considered by the Committee on Saturday.

There are still several undergraduate women who have not yet registered, and these are requested to do so at once. Many U.C. women who have applied for membership in the University Detachment have not yet filled out the necessary yellow cards with Miss Parkes in the S.A.C. Office in Hart House. This must be done immediately, Miss Parkes announced.

Health Service Works Overtime

With all appointments booked up to Oct. 26 the University of Toronto Health Servicе has stopped assigning hours for medical examinations until Oct. 19, Lt. Col. R. W. I. Urquhart, head of the Health Services told The Varsity yesterday. "This measure has been taken to facilitate bookkeeping and avoid appointments being made too far in advance," Col. Urquhart explained. It was feared that appointments made for too remote dates would be forgotten.

While allowing 20 minutes for each examination which includes a tuberculin test and urinalysis the Health Services have improved on their previous average of 63 examinations a day and now do an average of 70. Fourteen doctors working three at a time, on duty at 43 St. George Street from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., are engaged in the task of examining 4,000 undergraduates. If examinations continue at the present rate it is expected that 2,000 will have been completed by the end of October.

Students are advised to meet their appointments and be on time. Athletic enthusiasts have been advised to make early appointments. Those who have been unable to do so and are faced with the necessity of taking part in a game are advised to exchange appointments with obliging friends.

Minnesota University Has Labour Trouble

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 1 — Four hundred and fifty non-academic employees of the University of Minnesota have voted to go on strike Oct. 3. The employees, members of the Public Building Service employees' union, complained that hours had been lengthened and they had not received automatic pay increases.

According to union representatives the strike was called after the Board of Regents "refused to co-operate with the Union."

PERSUASIVE QUARTERMASTER GIVES TRAINEES PERFECT FIT

Saturday's organization parades of the University's two C.O.T.C battalions will find half the contingent in uniform, latest advices from the Quartermaster reveal. Operating this year from the new quartermaster stores wing of C.O.T.C. headquarters at 119 St. George Street, Quartermaster Sergeant Major Orr and his staff have issued approximately 1,400 complete uniforms. It is estimated that 2,400 uniforms in all will be issued, a slight increase over last year's 2,300.

Uniforms are issued to members of the contingent who have been examined by the University of Toronto Health Services and have been duly attested. Each man presents a slip bearing his regimental number and date of attestation to the quartermaster. He is then issued with a complete battle-dress uniform consisting of cap, badge, blouse, shoulder badges, trousers, anklets, boots and great-coat.

Sergeant Major Orr emphasized to the reporter that the uniform is the responsibility of the man to whom it has been issued and must be returned by him in good condition at the elose of the year's training. Pointing out the shortage of material, he said that only one uniform could be issued to each member of the contingent. He especially requested that men working in laboratories on drill days when they have to wear their uniforms be careful of contact with harmful acids.

While extra uniforms cannot be issued, exchange is always possible and any complaints as to fit should be referred to Sergeant-Major Orr. He is confident that few exchanges need be made. After a session with him, it has been found, students usually agree that the fit is perfect.

Although newcomers to the contingent will soon hear a good deal on the subject, Seargent Major Orr throws out the helpful hint that highly polished cap buttons will make platoon commanders very happy, and well-pressed uniforms will add greatly to the general morale and smartness of the unit.

Opening Meeting Held By Doubters' Club

The Victoria College Doubters' Club, a Student Christian Movement group, held their first meeting of the year yesterday.

Ben Garrett, president of the Vic S.C.M., addressed the meeting, expressing the hope that many students would be interested in learning "what we, in a Christian democracy, do believe."

STAFF MEETING

There will be a meeting of the staff of The Varsity at 4:30 p.m. today in the Women's Union. All those who have signed reporters' lists, and all those interested in joining the staff are strongly urged to attend. Refreshments will be served.

FROM TRIPOD TO BENCH-MARK, SCHOOLMEN SURVEY MORING-MIST

By Philip Kerwin

"Hey," said a bewildered express-man, gazing open-mouthed out of a truck window, "what goes on? A surveyors' convention?"

. . . And freshies have been known to mistake them for cameramen, these hundreds of silent forms moving around in the murk and mist of early morning, trailing tapes and tripods and lugging steep poles marked at regular intervals. One of them thought the barber-pole of passers-by to determine the average collegiate height.

But it's just schoolmen doing field work, compulsory in all years for Civil and Mining Engineering, and in first year for all branees. In first year, nine hours a week are required, in later years, three.

You'll be seeing them all over the eampus from Hoskin to College, any time from now till Christmas. The rolling hills around the observatory and library seem to lure most of them. Maybe because more freshies pass that way.

As to just what it's all about, few of the engineers seem to be sure. "I think it's levelling we're doing," said one frosh, scratching his head. "But then again it may not be. What are we doing Joe—levelling?"

"No, transit and chain surveying . . . I think."

"Transit?" comes a third voiee. "Couldn't be!"

"Well, how would I know?" wailed number two. "Nobody's told us yet."

Second and third year were more hep, but they hedged about, muttering darkly, "It's difficult to explain to an artsman."

We gathered however that the levellers start with a bench-mark at Hoskin and St. George, 360.68 ft. above sea-level. A tripod with plumb-line is placed dead-centre over this mark and a point A is selected several yards away. The marked rod its set up here and with the aid of this, the level of the new point is obtained. Then from Point A, the boys wend their way through Points B, C and D etc., until the bench-mark is reached again. And if this, by calculation from previous findings, turns out to be 360.68 ft., they know they've done a good day's work.

This training is essential for the determination of ground-levels prior to building or excavation.

As for chain-surveying, the other branch of field work, we could only elicit a few vague replies that it was "for—well, you know, for . . . for measuring distances."

A Word To The Wise

Traditions are fine things, and nurtured in the kindly bosom of the campus they are likely to live long. This University, home of higher learning in Upper Canada for more than a century, has many traditions of which it may well be proud. Scholastically, athletically, its name ranks high.

It has other traditions in which it perhaps feels no particular pride, but which it permits to exist because students apparently take pleasure in them and because they have seemed in the past, relatively innocuous.

In the latter group we would place many of the customs carried on in connection with freshmen initiation. Just why a freshman should be forced to undergo any form of indignity whatever by a group of students one year his academic senior has never been fully explained to us. Certain duties may justly be imposed upon first-year men for the common good of all students—after the fashion of "fagging" in the British Public Schools—but what useful purpose is served by forcing asymmetrical brush-cuts and rolled-up trouser-legs, painted foreheads and inane signboards, upon members of the freshman year remains a mystery.

Even the excuse that such-and-such a pointless practice is permissible "because it has always been done," will not cover certain recent manifestations of the freshman-baiting complex which have cropped up in one of the older and formerly apparently saner colleges. This year's sophomore class—itself subjected to practically no initiation rites—has suddenly burgeoned forth as a court of higher justice and attempted to enforce certain rulings upon freshmen. We suggest that this campus is not the place, and the present era particularly is not the time for any extension of the childish practices to which we have alluded.

But the sophomore-freshman bickering, confined as it is to separate colleges and faculties, does not present as large a problem in the application of common sense as does the question of the inter-faculty fracas. On some sections of the campus in the past there have been kept alive rivalries—fanned by sophomore classes—between incoming groups of hideously-cravatted freshmen. The snatching of the neckwear — trophies almost entirely lacking in aesthetic value—is carried on to the accompaniment of cheers from the sophomores and mildly derisive remarks from members of the more senior years. It all seems innocent enough to this point. But when certain rabble-rousing elements in one faculty or another make a deliberate attempt to start a general melee, in which there may occur actual injury to the participants, it is not innocent. It is criminal.

To date this year, most students deserve commendation on their good sense in not precipitating any large-scale brawls such as marred campus behaviour in the pre-war years. But in isolated instances there have been attempts to stir up some of the old interfaculty feeling, which may start as good-natured rivalry, but too often ends in bitterness. Stupid and dangerous at any time, tendencies toward mob practice in the University assume a new and particularly vicious aspect during a war. We are not here to fight with one another. We are here, as members of one of Canada's most fortunate groups, to train ourselves to fight a common enemy.

If an appeal to good sense and good taste is valueless in curbing some of the more stormy campus spirits, perhaps a quotation from the disciplinary regulations of the University may be worthwhile:

1. (a) There is vested in the Council of each federated university or college, and of each faculty, disciplinary jurisdiction over the entire responsibility arising for the conduct of their students in or upon their respective buildings and grounds, including residences.

(b) Disciplinary jurisdiction in all other cases as respects all students is vested in the Caput. . . .

5. All interference on the part of any student with the personal liberty of another by arresting him or summoning him to appear before a tribunal of students, or otherwise subjecting him to any indignity or personal violence, is forbidden by the Caput and the Councils of the colleges and faculties.

6. No initiation ceremony involving personal violence, personal indignity, interference with personal liberty, or destruction of property, may be held by the students of any college or faculty of the University under the penalty of suspension or expulsion.

As a final word on the subject, we would say to any student who plans the encouragement of student violence that The Varsity has excellent reason to believe that enforcement of the above regulations this year will be carried out rigidly by the authorities concerned.

Let's Get Together

A news story in Wednesday's issue of The Varsity called attention to a vital problem in the life of this University. A member of the Medical society was quoted as inviting members of all faculties to attend meetings of the new Medical Arts and Letters Club, and suggesting that too great a spirit of sectionalism prevailed on this campus.

That sectionalism does exist is undeniable, it is a natural by-product of the federated basis of the University and has a place in its life. But that it should have reached its present extreme where it menaces the value of university education is regrettable.

The ideal picture of a federated University is one of a number of arts colleges each giving its members the advantages of small classes, intimate contact with the staff, closer associations with other undergraduates and relatively better opportunities in extra-curricular activities than could be offered in a larger unit. By and large, the arts colleges of the University seem to fulfil their function and the existence of Hart House, and The Varsity and the use of many University recreational facilities keeps the units from becoming self-contained, self-sufficient little entities, while at the same time the coherence of students in these units keeps the University from becoming mere academic hodge-podge.

The development of the federated college, however, was not one which contemplated the modern development of the scientific faculties which are now necessarily grouped in their own units. The tremendous advance of science now makes it necessary that men in these faculties concentrate almost exclusively on technical subjects to the virtual exclusion of the broader aspects of culture. Thus have arisen the popular, but usually erroneous, pictures of the beer-soaked engineer, contemptuous of culture; the bone-juggling Med, who insists on talking shop even at the dinner table; and the Dent whose pockets are apt to spill forth odd fragments of dentures.

The war has tended to separate rather than unite the faculties of this university. Total war stresses the need for co-operation, but, paradoxically, to a campus engaged to a high degree in producing men and women for wartime duties it has brought a tendency toward greater local pre-occupation. Intercollegiate sport has gone by the board and in its place we have an exaltation of the intra-mural calendar which instead of calling for a university spirit, stirs up college and faculty rivalry.

The co-operation total war demands is being prepared elsewhere. Here, especially in the scientific faculties, the main task is, to teach the individual his own job. This leaves the individual with even less time than ordinarily for the broader aspects of university life and more energetic outlets, often taking the form of more vigorous de-bagging forays on the part of "dirty School," or "dirty Meds," are sought.

Originating among the Meds, but with open invitation extended to all faculties, the new Arts and Letters Club, with its supper-time meetings designed to fit into heavy time-tables, serves a long-standing and recently accentuated need in the University.

Project Planned To Aid Homeless

Papier-Mache Villas to Dot Both Campuses Despite Military, Athletic Protests; No Wattles to Be Had

THROCKMORTON ADAMANT

Students left homeless by the present housing shortage on campus need search no further for accommodation, a Simcoe Hall spokesman revealed in a special communique issued late last night.

"Wartime Housing Inc. has agreed to erect several hundred special student dwellings," he announced to the crowds of shivering students who were huddled together for warmth under the archway of Convocation Hall.

"They will be ready within a week after the first snowfall," he said. "Each house will be built to accommodate one and one-half students and will be supplied with cold and ice-cold running water."

As an interim measure non-students will be evicted from park benches and copies of Toike-Oike will be supplied as temporary eiderdowns for those students forced to sleep in Queen's Par.

Dwelling are to consist of papier-mache held together with scraps of outmoded freshman ties. Originally planned as semi-detached villas of clay and wattles made, the new residences had to be redesigned when Ambrose T. Throckmorton, Federal Wattles Controller, announced that shipping conditions would not permit the use of wattles in the building.

(Substitution of waffles for wattles was suggested by a resourceful compositor of the University of Toronto Press, but the suggestion was rejected on the grounds that the price of waffles was prohibitive.)

Men will be housed on the front campus and women on the back campus, the communique added primly. Maid service for the women's block will not be available for the present.

"Just like home," sighed Millicent (Queenie) Finkbinder, I.U.C., sweeping a stray football from under her bed beneath the south goalposts.

"It looks like a tough season," Bur-

Plan Big Track Season

Possible Meets with Niagara, Buffalo, O.A.C. and Armed Forces Keep Varsity Speedsters on Toes

PRACTICES WELL ATTENDED

By Phil Shackleton

Varsity's dependable track coach, Hec Phillips, admitted that he expected great things of this year's Blue and White cinder-stars. Encouraged by the pleasing results of the Meds. meet Wednesday, Hec is moulding a track program which will provide plenty of action for weeks to come. Over and above the inter-faculty events, two track meets and two harrier races, plans are developing for meets with the armed services, O.A.C., Buffalo, and Niagara University.

No arrangements are definite as yet but Pilot Officer F. Rowell, former Vic man now with the R.C.A.F. at Kingston, has approached the University with plans for an Air Force-Varsity meet in mid-October. Rowell has some fine English and American athletes in his outfit and could probably field a fighting team. Warren Stevens has written to Buffalo and Niagara but again no arrangements are yet official. O. A. C. and the armed forces of Toronto district may also provide teams to face the Varsity runners.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bill Quigley

HELP!

A threatening cloud of pessimism seems to be descending upon two young ladies who pull many of the strings for the intramural marionette show from their positions in the Athletic Office. With arrangements near completion for the opening gridiron and soccer engagements in the near future, the interfaculty picture has assumed a kind of pesade. Despite the fact that all teams are rapidly rounding into shape and schedules are practically completed, Misses Boyd and Lee are more than alarmed at the thought of a dark pestilence—a plague—which is already looming on the horizon. Without a cheque book, what little filthy lucre we have resting in the bank, is of little personal use. Likewise an interfaculty football and soccer league without a referee in sight becomes as inert as a stone. In short, unless there is an early and voluminous rush to fill out those application forms resting on the Athletic Office bar, the interfaculty loops may well establish a record of going through a season without so much as seeing one of the scheduled games completed.

Refereeing, if not a thankful task, is at least an adventurous one and should appeal to those hardy individuals who thrive on arguments but rarely experience the satisfaction of ostentatious victory. Right or wrong the referee is monarch of all he surveys. Two or three hours a week would not prove too much a burden to prospective referees and would aid immeasurable in avoiding the calamity which threatens the inmates of Stevens' Wing at Hart House.

FORE!

Commencing this morning at ten o'clock; the fairways out at Woodbine will undergosome of the crudest surgery it has ever been their misfortune to encounter. Over 75 entries have already been filed at Hart House and if the weather stages an encore to yesterday's performance, at least a hundred shot makers should face the starter for the annual Interfaculty Golf Meet.

Numerous and varied should be the sound effects emanating from the tae and green, not to mention that oasis, commonly termed ye olde nineteenth. Even an unabridge Webster should blush with shame after the initial, conservative "fore" and "I'd have had a par if that slyster had conceded that five-foot putt" have become inadequate terminology. As mid-irons become excavators, the exponents should wax more poetical. After the last I.P.A. has lost it's enticing amber, Gordon Ball should have retained his last year's championship.

Interviewed in his furlined dugout at 119 St. George St. early today, Sergeant-Major "Notamove" Jones commented: "I don't believe the move conforms to military law. They are attempting to obstruct a parade ground. I doubt if there is anything to cover the situation in K. R. Can., but I believe there ought to be. Perhaps it'll all turn our right, when it comes through in Part II orders."

Everything is just about in readiness for the various College tennis tournaments. P. H. and E. are planning to play their games over the week-end, weather permitting, and all the contestants who have signed the list will be notified by telephone as to the time of their matches. The U.C. tournament proper will start on Monday, so we can look forward to a week of good practice tennis for the girls in red and white.

St. Michael's are planning their first tournament in many years which will be run off next week also at St. Joseph's College court. Some 23 co-eds have got out their rackets and balls in expectation. All we hope is that the weather-man won't let us down and freeze our respective fingers.

Victoria College can always be counted on for its tennis players and this year again it has a fairly large entry for the tilts of the coming week. St. Hilda's are also going ahead with their games in the near future, so it looks like some interesting contests all around. What girls will emerge the victors must remain a matter of speculation—but we feel sure that a good time will be had by all. Spectators, as in the years gone by, will be very welcome indeed; but we advise them to bring along their fur mitts.

SPEAKING OF VACATIONS, which we assume you must have been, do let us bore you for a while with an account of ours.

WE HAD A HAPPY TIME, in a hectic sort of way, working from late May to early September in the Toronto bureau of The Canadian Press. And if you didn't know, that newsroom is the very heart of Canada's greatest newsgathering service, a place where thousands of words of copy—on everything from the Battle of Egypt to weddings in North Bay—go whizzing by at an alarming rate, where you become blase about death and destruction, bored about mere murder and extremely sleepy about midnight.

Handling big-time news at high speed and often under considerable nervous pressure is often fairly dramatic, and never altogether dull; but even such smooth-geared organizations as The CP commit a good many minor faux pas in the course of a summer's work, and it has always been our self-satisfied way, in writing this column, to poke fun at our supposed superiors. . . . So we amused ourselves in scattered spare moments collecting a few of the juicier slips that we saw perpetrated, in order to regale you with them now. . . .

WHEN FEELING RAN HIGH, during the closing days of the most recent session of Commons over the Col. Drew-Hong Kong episode, and care-worn Parliamentarians grew ruder and ruder to one another as they sat through a hot Ottawa summer, a scene took place one day in which members on both sides of the house were standing up, waving their tired old arms and making nasty remarks in loud tones . . . an

Uninspired Gershwin

And Exuberant Tschaikowsky

Despite an insistent foot on our back, and extremely loquacious neighbours, we succeeded in enjoying last night's Prom. The obvious attraction for the large audience was the young and attractive star of Gershwin's Porgy and Bess, Anne Brown. This promising young singer has charm and a pleasing personality, but, and when we reach the brick throwing stage, her voice is only mediocre and her choice of solos lamentably uninspired. Admittedly, she had the tastes of the audience in mind, and even though Gershwin and spirituals are her specialties, we soon found them boring. She did the arias from Mozart's Magic Flute and Massenet's Le Cid with fine feeling for the moods to be obtained and her unaccompanied spirituals were effective, partially because her somewhat small voice could then be heard distinctly.

Again, Hans Kindler led the orchestra through an interesting program admirably played. The Brahms Academic Festival Overture which opened the concert is practically an erudite and somewhat humorous arrangement of four popular German student songs, with the joyous Gaudeamus Igitur as a finale. The Boyce Symphony No. 1 which followed is an interesting example of an embryonic symphony, just as it has emerged from the sonata stage. Written in England about the middle of the 18th century, it still possesses a charm and contrapuntal variety.

The well-known and melodious Symphony No. 5 by Tschaikowsky (movements two, three, and four) concluded the program. Dr. Kindler conducted it sympathetically, and the slightly slower tempo of his interpretation was doubtless intended to bring out the lyric beauty of the work and to make possible greater emotional crescendos. The sorrowful brooding of the main minor theme was admirably worked up through the three movements to the exuberant, even bombastic, theme in the major key in the finale—an exuberance not marred even by the cut of seventy-five bars.

JEAN MCNEILL.

at EATON'S

Jean darling,

I'VE JUST DISCOVERED EATON'S COLLEGE TOGGERY!

And am I glad I waited until now before wardrobe-assembling! It's so easy and such fun shopping in EATON'S College Toggery, for they know just what we College gals need. Of course, costumes are practical -but pretty,too- to last for years and years.

Vogue says: "College requirement- a suit you can live with for four years." So I got a houndstooth wool check. (Jacket,I9.95)(Skirt,II.95). See my sketch upper right.

For lectures I bought a shirtwaist-type stunning dress in wool jersey, with a tricky drawstring at waist. Simply heavenly coral colour. And only I6.95. Imagine!

My dear, am I glad I brought my bicycle! Everyone is using them. So I invested in neat but dashing grey wool culottes (6.98), a Shetland wool cardigan in country green (6.95) and knee-high lisle socks in clear red (75¢).

My prize buy is a short black rayon crepe date frock (I6.95)- with sparkling black sequins encrusted on a coloured band. It should knock out Jim's eye, don't you think?

This certainly seems to be all about EATON'S College Toggery and clothes but I know you are interested.

undignified verbal fracas indeed, in which even the usually dignified Prime Minister took part. . . . So word spread throughout the Dominion that Mr. King had termed the members of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition as "mob." . . . Then the House augustly rose for lunch, and apparently the soothing influence of vitamins and calories cooled off the tattered tempers of its members no end, because all was sweetness and light when the gongs rang for the afternoon sitting. . . . The Prime Minister rose and withdrew his term of opprobrium. . . . And here was where The CP stepped in to reduce the whole incident to its proper level. . . . On the relay from Toronto to Hamilton, the story turned out like this:

HONG KONG WITHDRAWAL
OTTAWA, JULY 27—(CP)—AT THE REQUEST OF CONSERVATIVE LEADER HANSON, PRIME MINISTER MACKENZIE KING THIS AFTERNOON WITHDREW AND ASKED TO HAVE EXPUNGED FROM THE HOUSE RECORDS OF THE HONG KONG DEBATE HIS REFERENCE TO THE OPPOSITION AS A "9?."
MOREDAS17P

Sort of silly, wasn't it?

BUT "9?." IS A RELATIVELY LUCID WORD compared with the sort of double talk that happened when mechanical trouble arose in the entrails of the teletype receiving New York copy one day and this happened:

A48

CP NY AUG 7 AC9I7A

Is everything perfectly plain to you?

DOUBLE TALK on teletypes is often the source of much innocent amusement, even when it's not nearly as complex as the foregoing, and one of the choicest examples we recall started off:

A124 THT
BURFORD, ENGLAND, AUG. 8—(CP CABLE)—COL. J. J. LLEWELLIN, XXXISTER OF AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION, DISCEOSED IN A SPEECH CXWT "OORE THAN ONE GFLAUKYY" IN BRITAIN IS TURNING OUT AN AIRCRAFT EVERY TWO WORKING HOURS.

Which prompted a colleague to comment, as he peered myopically at the philological monstrosity: "How green wos my gflaukyy."

ANOTHER SOURCE of glee is the sometimes somewhat shocking terseness with which tragedy is treated. We instance, from an Associated Press dispatch of July 30:

AI58
ADD RIO DE JANEIRO SINKING X X SUNK. . . .

ALSO AMUSING is the painstaking pursuit of accuracy, which sometimes results in this sort of thing:

M28
CORRECTION
IN QUEBEC FORESTS BRIEF READ X X TRAVEL IN THE WODS (NOT FORESTS) OF X X ETC (CLARIFIES).
CP MTL 2-9-42 1215PO

There now, that's ever so much better, isn't it?

BUT DON'T GET THE IDEA that The Canadian Press is the only manufacturer of journalistic malapropisms. . . . While The CP is going about its business of providing them daily world-wide coverage, its member papers indulge in a few mental lapses of their own. . . . We are particularly fond of the grandiose ideas of the Sarnia Canadian Observer, which prints a page headed: News of Lambton County and St. Clair River District. . . . And on that page, one sunny Monday in July, there appeared items dated from Toronto and Ottawa and . . . New Delhi and Canberra.

MEANWHILE, The Kingston Whig-Standard was editorially urging its readers to make, in the field of world affairs, "A calm and impassioned study of the whole situation. . . ." Which seems to be asking rather a lot.

* * *

AND THE BEST BLUNDER of the summer was one hot afternoon when a proofreader on King St. slumbered, blissfully unaware that one of the headlines on the suburban page of The Toronto Daily Star read:

LORNE SOTS UNIT
SHORT OF RECRUITS

When the boys around the desk at CP saw that, they rose to their feet as one man, and cried: "That's the unit for me!"

BUT TO RETURN to the foibles of The Canadian Press, let us consider in closing the happy occasion upon which the following apt remark thundered out along the New York wire, during a morning run of race news:

Milling Mob Made Battalion In 18 Minutes On Saturday As Organization Record Set

About 2,400 Students Attend Organization Parades of Two C.O.T.C. Battalions on Fine Autumn Afternoon

SERIOUS ATTITUDE NOTEO

Within 18 minutes a milling mass of approximately 1,750 students was converted to an orderly battalion Saturday afteroon on the front campus as the Canadian Officer's Training Corps held its Organization Parade.

It is estimated that including both battalions over 2,400 students took part in this parade, though exact figures are not yet available. The First Battalion paraded on the back campus while the Second, composed mainly of students who have had no previous military training formed up on the front campus.

It was a perfect fall afternoon and, while the students stood in the ranks, sounds of cheering could be heard from the Varsity Stadium where a football game was in progress. The only feature that detracted from the militaristic appearance of the battalion was the fact that most of the students had not been issued uniforms. This is because they had not yet been able to take their physical examinations and be attested.

Authorities say that the speed with which the untrained men were organized was due to the efficiency and experience of the staff and the serious attitude of the students.

"Three years ago, it took half an hour to change a mob into an orderly formation; last year it took 25 minutes; this year, dealing with larger numbers than ever before, it only took 18," stated Major G. R. Lane, Chief Instructor of the Second Battalion.

"It looks as though everyone is taking the situation seriously as it should be, and we have great hopes this year of having an even better unit than last year," he added.

All members of the staff and students of other faculties are cordially invited to attend this meeting. A short report of the proceedings of the I.S.A. sessions will be given by S. C. Best and S. C. Robinson, Faculty of Medicine delegates to the assembly.

Ask Leave For Students To Help In Gathering Saskatchewan Crops

President Cody Asks for Further Details on Scheme to Utilize Men in Courses not Essential to the War to Help Solve Critical Prairie Manpower Problem Now Threatening Saskatchewan Wheat Crop

INCLUOES ARTS, COMMERCE AND LAW

Male students of the University of Toronto enrolled in courses not directly connected with the war effort may be granted leave to work in Saskatchewan wheat-fields until Nov. 1, if negotiations now under way between the Department of Labour and the University are completed satisfactorily, A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University, said last night.

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, has telegraphed to President H. J. Cody, requesting that such leaves be granted, and stressing the need for assistance in harvesting the Saskatchewan crop, now threatened by loss because of the existing shortage of farm labourers.

President Cody has replied that the University is "anxious to co-operate," and has requested further information on Mr. Humphrey's proposal, prior to final authorization of the scheme.

Text of Mr. Mitchell's telegram follows:

Government of Saskatchewan reports harvest situation critical and serious loss of wheat crop threatened if labour not made available from eastern Canada stop as you know war and essential industries are taxing manpower capacity in Ontario and Quebec and important as wheat harvest is we must avoid inter-

Dinner Planned For Committees

The Hart House Committee Banquet will be held this year at 6:00 p.m. Wednesday, J. R. Gilley, acting Warden of Hart House, announced Saturday.

Commenting on its absence last year Mr. Gilley explained that the interest shown by those concerned has proved this banquet to be too necessary a function to be deleted from campus life.

Mr. Gilley estimated that this year approximately 100 undergraduates, graduates and faculty members will turn out for the occasion. The actual number of guests is in some question, he said, due to the active part being taken by many committee members in the war effort.

This year a minor mystery is being featured in the form of a programme which will remain unrevealed until actually "sprung."

This year there is a substantial reduction in the cost of tickets for the banquet. Mr. Gilley stated that this reduction was brought about by a simplification of the dinner as a wartime economy. Largely for the same reason—economy—this time of labour, the function is expected to conclude about 8:00.

This is the 14th annual banquet to be held by the Hart House Committee in the 23 years of the House's history, the first one having been held in 1928.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, and in the office of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary.

The University Directory is now being prepared for the press, and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

Varsity Getting In The Scrap By Contributing Odds And Ends

A recent survey of the campus by an inquiring Varsity reporter found scrap from many sources being directed back into useful channels.

Biggest item of scrap is waste paper, which is picked up once a week from individual buildings by a local scrap dealer. Easting-places seem to be particularly fruitful sources of scrap paper. Mr. M. R. Cowan, Comptroller of Hart House, revealed that approximately one ton of paper per month is salvaged and baled at Hart House.

The University Stores Deparement gathers and classifies all other waste material such as old tools, rubber hose, scrap metal, and sells them to the highest bidder. Recently 125 pounds of copper were recovered from the Rifle Ranges and sold for scrap by this department.

An example of what campus cookhouses are doing to save salvage is demonstrated by the Great Hall in Hart House. "There's nothing around here that's wasted" was the emphatic comment of Miss E. Ransome, superintendent of the Great Hall. Grease is used to make soap; garbage becomes pigfood; paper, egg-shells, tin cans are saved for the war effort. Containers have become extremely scarce and such items as bread hampers, fruit baskets, jam tins are returned to local merchants to be used over again.

Most janitors felt that students are very helpful in disposing of waste material. One complaint was that too many empty cigarette boxes were tossed just anywhere. Another source of waste seems to be old Varsities. Students are very vague as to what becomes of them. "I just throw mine away," was a typical comment from a Schoolman surveyor. The University slips up in one regard however, Mr. C. A. Johnston of the Stores Department confessed that all the grass cuttings from Varsity meadows are simply burnt. It has been suggested that a few cows pastured here and there would solve that situation. Not only would it be unnecessary to cut the grass, but also a serious beef shortage on the campus would in time be alleviated.

CASSON TO SPEAK

Mr. A. J. Casson, whose paintings are at present on view in the art gallery of Hart House, will give a short address regarding his work at 1 o'clock in the gallery today. All members of Hart House are invited to attend.

TATTERED GOWNS PASSEE AS PROFESSORS DON KHAKI

by Maureen Murphy

A campus antique, is the proverbial professor of the tattered gown, patched coat and unpressed pants, as a horde of sprightly-garbed professors, smart and trim in uniform, freshly unearthed from their summer hibernation, haunt our cloistered halls with a view to invading the lecture-room of today.

From every college, faculty, and department, they come. Venerable passages now echo with the brisk clip of boots . . . the dim recesses of hallowed nooks now flash with the dazzle of metallic buttons.

Astonished book-worms, and round-eyed co-eds whisper earnestly over their books . . . "what does he belong to?" . . . "how come he's in uniform? . . . but Lt.-Col. H. H. Madill, E.D., O.C. 1st Bn. of the C.O.T.C. has all the answers.

"When the war started, an age limit for men joining the C.O.T.C. was set at thirty-five, which meant we were unable to use many older and experienced men. Now the younger men are on active service, giving place to others. The age limit has consequently been extended, and the whole picture is changed." Questioned as to the percentage of professors attached to the C.O.T.C., Colonel Madill commented . . . "comparatively low . . . the majority have been released for active service, but many new applications for commissions have been received from professors just lately." The Colonel explained further "the men who join the C.O.T.C. are those who fought in the last war."

Asked if he came into personal contact with the students in his battalion, Colonel Madill remarked "not like a platoon commander does!" . . .

"Tuesday afternoon parades . . . Thursday afternoon parades . . . Saturday afternoon parades . . ." is Professor B. Wilkinson's resume of a company commander's life with the C.O.T.C. "Besides all that, I have to be Father, Mother, Brother, and Sister to all the youngsters in the company. . . . They can come to me with all their problems . . . and do they know it! . . . The trouble is, that, being on the Faculty, everyone knows where they can get hold of me . . . even reporters!" Proving reticent about giving further information, the professor suggested . . . "If you want ony dope on me, just ask the boys . . . they'll supply it!"

Lt.-Col. W. S. Wilson, E.D., O.C. 1st Bn., Assistant Dean and Secretary of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, works parallel to Colonel Madill, while other professors from the Fine Art Department include Lieut. C. F. Comfort, Pl. Cdr., and Major W. E. Sarswell, Coy. Cdr.

This brilliant galaxy of uniformed professors covers the whole campus, from Major M. B. Watson, E.D. C.I., Director and Assistaut Professor of the Little Old Red Schoolhouse Is Abode Of Dusty Relics And Reminiscences

At the southern end of the campus stands a red building which has come through the passing of the years to be known as the Little Red Schoolhouse. Over the northern entrance is inscribed "School of Practical Science," which was the name of the present faculty before it became affiliated with the university. Higher up can be seen 1878 A.D., the date when the northern section of the present "Schoolhouse" was built. The southern section was added in 1891 to accommodate an ever-growing number of students.

Throughout the building signs of age are evident. In nearly all the lecture rooms small pipes can be seen projecting down from the ceiling. These are the remains of the old gas lamps formerly used to light the classrooms. Patches in the floor at the ends of the stairways ,give silent evidence of the number of students who have swung on the newel posts as they went up or down the stairs, and whose feet have worn holes in the floor.

At one time a large gas engine in the basement supplied power to the machine shop situated where the Machine Design Laboratory is now. A story is told of an absent-minded professor who hung an arc lamp which had been sent to the university for testing purposes, on the power shaft, and when the engine was started the lamp was smashed against the ceiling.

At that time when the northern section of the building was erected, "School" was a self-contained unit, and just above the top of the fire-escape by the western entrance can be seen a projecting beam which supported the tackle used to hoist material up to the carpenter shop under the rafters. This shop has long since been done away with and the dimly lighted attic is now used as a storeroom. As far as could be ascertained, there never have been any spooks in the attic.

In the basement there is a room which once used to be known as the "clock" room because there was a very accurate clock there which was used in making recordings of the observations of the stars. This clock, or the remains of it, is now in the observatory.

Going West?

The Minister of Labour has requested the Universities of Ontario and Quebec to grant a month's leave to students enrolled in courses not connected directly with the war. The President has expressed himself as "most anxious" to co-operate. Apparently we await only the ironing out of a few details to see the scheme in operation. But unitl the details are fully known, the implications of the suggestion are not obvious.

Wages will be "four dollars and up" a day; the work is healthy but extremely arduous. There remains the question of whether students will think it wise to leave honour course for approximately one-seventh of the academic year; whether any credit will be granted those who do go to Saskatchewan; whether they will be expected to attend special classes on their return; whether, if a sufficiently large number of stopgap workers is not forthcoming, the scheme will remain on a purely voluntary basis; what arrangements will be made for transportation, board and lodging; whether other Universities in the two provinces will agree with Dr. Cody's decision to co-operate fully.

Until we know the answers to these questions, we cannot pass judgment properly on Mr. Mitchell's suggestion. But in the interim, while we await clarification of the picture, we may assume that the President of this University—a man who has consistently shown himself to have the interests of the majority of students at heart—will carry on present negotiations in order to ensure that the best possible arrangement from the student's point of view will be made.

On Parade!

Saturday the men of the University climbed back into their battle-dress and paraded in full number for the first time since their stay at Camp Niagara last June. Back and front campuses were seas of khaki, as thousands of trainees drilled.

The revised University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps set-up—it now has 1st and 2nd Battalions instead of an Officers' and a Training Centre Battalion—looks forward into the fourth year of Canada's participation in history's greatest war, prepared to carry on its task of graduating basically-trained men into the Canadian (Active) Army, to serve as officers or men. Many of those in training here this year, especially among those in the final years of their courses, will enter an Officers' Training Center in June or shortly after. Others will join an Army unit. Before 1943 has been torn from the calendar, there will be more University of Toronto men overseas, to join those from this University who are already distinguishing themselves under enmy fire.

For the men who plan enlistment upon graduation, the C.O.T.C. offers valuable training in the fundamentals of military theory and practice. We have been reminded before that university students are a fortunate class; and the sight of thousands of men carrying on compulsory training within the shadow of their own colleges and libraries if they choose to undergo it here, instead of being forced to give up the things of higher education to serve their country immediately, brings home to us once more the truth of this statement.

University students are fortunate to be permitted to much leeway in choosing the wartime path they will follow; and it behooves them, for purely selfish reasons, if not out of gratitude, to order themselves so that no action on their part will prompt the removal of this freedom of choice.

In the three years of war in which the C.O.T.C. organization has carried on, since 1939, it has grown more efficient, more able to accomplish its huge task of making good soldiers out of part-time trainees. Big steps have been taken since the first straggling campus platoons collided with one another during the sunny autumn when the Germans struck into the heart of Poland. The organization has become larger, more capable; government changes in the training syllabi have facilitated the work of turning out men whose ideas are not those of the 1918 armchair general. The C.O.T.C. has gone a long way towards maximum efficiency.

But perhaps it can go still further. The writer of this editorial can remember occasions when military lectures served to illustrate only that the officers charged with delivering them knew hardly more concerning some specialized subject than did their listeners; moments when supposed experts in parade-ground etiquette gave orders to be found in no drill manual; times at Camp Niagara when what appeared to be gross negligence doubled the physical burden already placed upon men in the ranks.

If there is to be found a single fault in the complex and increasingly-effective mechanism of the C.O.T.C. on this campus, it is that among certain of its officers—and they are in the minority—there is an attitude of smugness toward their work and its relation to the nation's total effort—there is a smattering of Colonel Blimpism.

We stress that such men carrying officers' insignia are few—that they are becoming fewer. Even the most porcine-minded pip-bearer cannot fail to realize that this war has assumed such grave proportions that there is no place left in Canada for complacency. But we point out—and we believe that many who have undergone C.O.T.C. training here will agree, and that they are not all disgruntled cadets or privates—that such men have been placed in positions of military responsibility in the past, and have lowered the standard of efficiency throughout the whole unit. And we suggest that in a Canadian Officers' Training Corps the value and usefulness of which is growing weekly is no longer a place for such appointments to be made.

Nostalgic

Belmont Theatre Group

Typical perhaps of the hundreds of Little Theatre projects found in small towns and sprawling hamlets across Canada is Toronto's Belmont Theatre Group. They have only 16 members. Their playhouse is a musty movie theatre seating 250. Their stage is the size of four ping-pong tables laid end to end. They have cubby-hole dressing rooms. Nevertheless the club keeps in mind that it was tiny groups like their own that started the Munis and Bankheads along the road to Broadway.

In Ibsen's three-act drama Ghosts which they staged every evening last week, the group did themselves proud. It was moving, was sincere, was a hit. And though Ghosts was an amateur production, as serious drama it can well hold a candle to the light-headed comedies that have pranced through Toronto's profesional theatre this summer.

The play itself has grown old gracefully. More than fifty year of age, it seemed comparatively free from wordy cliches and in many passages its eloquence rings true and still timely. Its theme, you will recall, reveals that public opinion, and not the law, is an ass.

Greasepainted to resemble two oldtime characters, Jules Ross and Kathryn Cranston shine out in the cast. Apparently they know their theatre onions. John Peck, chairman of the U.C. Players' Guild, also a Belmont member, produced some fine effects as stage manager, but as actor he seemed to be acting as though he were acting. Which he was. His performance, overly melodramatic, apparently was the only weak one.

A moody intellectual, Jules Ross, develops his characterization in an excellent bit of underacting, while Sylvia Paige as a background for the main theatrical action was capable and comely.

One words perhaps will sum up the scenic effects of Leo Orenstien as it might the production as a whole: powerful.

FRANK RASKY

TRANSIT CONTROL STOPS SURVEY

The Department of Applied Science and Engineering stands aghast at an order from Ottawa recalling and impounding all transits now in use on the University of Toronto Campus. "With the transit situation the way it is," said the Federal Transit Controller in an exclusive interview with The Varsity, "we cannot afford to have such equipment going to waste. We plan to allocate the transits to some place where they will be put to more essential use."

The new move came as a result of confidential information from an unknown source named Umlauf Wiregarters to the effect that the instruments had not been put to their best use on this campus. "We found," said the controller, "that year after year the campus was surveyed and year after year the job was done wrong and had to be done over again by the Freshman class." "This," he continued, "is a frivolity which must be done away with for the duration."

"In view of the manpower shortage," the transit controller maintained, "we cannot afford to lose Freshmen who naively insist on following their own maps. As any fool can plainly see from Exhibit 'A' (See cut—Ed.) this tomfoolery must not be allowed to continue. After all, there's a war on, moron," he concluded with some heat.

"It is all clearly a case of sabotage," said Tangent McSliderool, Mech. '04, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and president of the National Society of Stationary Engineers. "This is obviously the work of an astigmatic Freshman trying to plot a map to help his cross-eyed lab partner to find his way to the corner of St. George St. and Hoskin Ave. They been planted on us! Probably by those ";$-&:$1? Meds," he hazarded cautiously.

Scalpel O'Sawbones, well-know Medical authority and Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, pointed out, however, that the move could in no way be laid to the door of his faculty. "Where are we to get our fracture and dislocation patients if there are no more chains to trip over?"

Neutral observers from the classics department were unanimous in their verdict, "Sic transit gloria Monday. And it just goes to show you!"

STUDENT LOANS AVAILABLE FOR ALL FACULTIES

and $1,000 will be awarded in scholarships. The Foundation's grants, at the suggestion of the Goard of Governors of the University of Toronto, are to provide for women students, and for medical students in their final years who have been rejected by the Army.

The federal system of loans was established essentially to provide government services and the armed forces with technically trained personnel. Thus it provides that loans up to a maximum of $300 for an academic faculty year are available to any student in II, III and IV Medicine: II, III and IV Civil, Mechinael, Chemical, Electrical and Metallurgical Engineering, II and III Dentistry, and in the Departments of Mathematies, Physies, and Chemistry in the Faculty of Arts. Inasmuch as mining seemed to play a relatively unimportant role in war, the Dominion Government declared students in Mining Engineering ineligible to federal financial assistance, but the Board of Governors, having in mind the tunnelling and allied mining operations known to modern warfare, are seeking to have federal aid made available to students in that department.

Students who apply for these loans are required to sign agreements whereby they are to make themselves available to the government after graduation for the type of service in which they have been trained at the University, whether it be in the Navy, Army, Air Force, National Research Laboratories, or other government activities. Provision has also been made for the students in the Faculties of Medicine who, although enlisted in the Army Medical Corps, establish need of financial assistance.

An additional loan fund has been instituted for scholars in I Applied Science (Civil, Mechanical, Chemical, Electrical, Metallurgical, and Engineering Physics) and I Arts (Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry), to which the same post-graduation requirements regarding government and military services apply.

The nominal interest rates on these loans will be reckoned only on time elapsing, after graduation, but not on that spent in school.

Dr. Infeld is well known as the author of "Quest." Originally on the staff of the University of Krakow, Poland, he came to this continent on a fellowship to Princeton in October 1936. There he worked with Dr. Albert Einstein suggesting and acting as co-author of their "Evolution of Physics." He has been a member of the department of physics of this university since 1938.

Formed to help round out what the executive of the Medical Society thought was an almost purely technical course, the Arts and Letters Club began meeting last summer over supper in the Graduate Dining Room in Hart House. The coming of fall and the return of all faculties to the campus has made necessary the enforcement of the House rule against the attendance of women at all except certain very special affairs.

Unwilling to ban women who form a small but highly appreciated minority of the course, the Society sought a new meeting place. Due to the lobar shortage it was imposible to find a place where a meal would be available. The supper hour meeting time has been retained, however, because of its convenience for those with crowded daytime schedules.

It is hoped that suppers may be available from time to time at the new meeting place in Wymilwood.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

VALE CUM LAUDE

The sports staff learned with deepest regrest Saturday that their boss-man and mentor, namely William Quigley, Esq—had resigned. Hard and long hours in the Faculty of Dentistry took their toll of the great Quig's energies and after seven issues he decided much to everyone's regret that the could no longer shoulder the onerous burden of his position.

Tutored by two of 'The Varsity's' greatest encumbents of the office, Quig apprenticed under Owen Prichard, and then under Dave McIntosh, rose to the assistant spot which he so capable filled last year. Then after his years of articling with the fruits of his travail safely in his grasp he had the misfortune to be in training for the Dentistry profession during war years. The fact that he wears a uniform, as all members of his class, shows how important is his training to the war effort. But his absence will certainly be noticed by his subordinates and especially those whom have had to step up and take the responsibility of his department. Personally, it is somewhat terrifying to have to shoulder his heavy job after having only one year's experience in the department. However the job will be considerably lightened with Bud Smith and Pete Aykroyd, fellow sophomores, as assistants. But with the department of the master-mind to keep up the standard—and believe it or not in some places deemed high standard—will require co-operation from all quarters. In the first place we welcome with beseeching arms any and all interested in sports writing, no previous experience is required—the requisite being only a desire to follow the different events like the proverbial burning star. Then of course we can count on the full support of the Hart House authorities.

So, said he with a large tear dripping from his snozzle, we will endeavour to carry on despite the premature demise of our chief and teacher.

AND OUTSIDE THE CAMPUS

It looks like the sports scribes are going for a beating in regards to the World Series—what with the home-stretch Cardinals eking out a close 2-0 victory behind the superb pitching of Ernie White on Saturday and beating the Yankees at their own game on Sunday in a veritable slugfest to the tune of 9-6.

Then those hordes that were organized on the front and back campus last Saturday afternoon evidently did not miss much of a spectacle up in the stadium as the ex-Argos, flying Hurricane colours, mauled a greatly weakened Beaches squad to a 40 to 6 tune—the timer's whistle only saving the Beaches from complete liquidation. The other end of the double bill showed a little more rugby as Hamilton invaded the newly elevated Toronto Indians with a 13-6 score.

Courts to Hum After Draw

With 60 names in the draw today the St. Hilda's courts should be buzzing with activity all this coming week.

Of the quality of this activity we will not venture to predict, but the absence of Mullett and Hall should leave a wide open field for this year's mob to battle it out.

Closer perusal of the list brings to light the names of Waugh, a runner-up of last year, and Mel Jones, a net-ball enthusiast of years standing.

The lists of today's matching follows.

For men taking military training the minimum requirement at these Physical Training Classes is 28 periods.

For other male students the minimum requirement is attendance at 40 periods.

Credits may be secured by attendance at regular gym classes or swimming classes. These classes may not be taken on successive days. Some credits may also be secured by participation in certain specified Intramural sports. These sports will be designated from time to time by the Athletic Association. Team sport practices will not count, but credits will be given for authorized training classes for tournaments or meets. For the fall term, Rugby Soccer, Lacrosse, Track and Harrier, Gymnastics, Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing are so designated.

Men participating in the above noted intramural sports may secure up to 8 P.T. credits for sports in the fall term (not more than 1 per week).

A maximum of 18 credits may be secured during the fall term.

Each man MUST attend at least one gym class or swimming class per week. To be eligible to proceed to the second half of the work which occurs in the spring term, a student must secure at least 14 P.T. credits during the fall term.

SWIM TEST

All Freshmen on entering the University must take the swim test, and if unable to swim satisfactorily must enrol in a learn-to-swim class. These classes must be attended twice weekly during the fall term.

Report to the Swimming Pool, Hart House.

Failure to observe this regulation will prevent the student from securing standing in Physical Training.

Swimming classes start 20 minutes to the hour and end 20 minutes after the hour. The 20 minute period between classes is free for general swimming.

Through the Din of Battle, Radio Unerringly Delivers the Commands

For our fighting planes, RCA Victor has developed and perfected radio communication equipment especially designed to operate dependably under all conditions. An army of skilled RCA Victor workers, a technical corps of RCA Victor engineers wages a ceaseless battle on the home front to produce more and better wartime radio equipment.

ATTACK SUCCESSFULLY REPULSED!

FROM the decks of our aircraft carrier, avenging squadrons of fighters speed to ward off the enemy's attack. To achieve success, all units must have constant, unfailing contact with each other.

Above the ear-shattering roar of falling bombs—the pounding chatter of pom-poms—the surging drum of powerful motors—commands must be clearly given—directions clearly heard.

A ship, particularly hard pressed, needs aerial reinforcement—a fighting pilot needs warning of an enemy attack upon his rear—a squadron leader must relay to his flight the orders he has received from his ship. By means of radio these commands and warnings are given quickly, clearly, surely. Powerful radio receiving and transmitting sets provide the means of communication by which every fighting unit—every fighting man is kept constantly informed.

Designing, perfecting and manufacturing such radio communications equipment for our fighting planes is one of many typical wartime services now being performed in the ever-expanding manufacturing plant of RCA Victor at Montreal.

Labour Department Requests Harvest Aid

fering with wartime economy in endeavouring to secure workers for Saskatchewan stop in circumstances am appealing to universities in Ontario and Quebec to grant leave of absence till about November first to male students in agricultural or courses not directly training for war work as arts, commerce and law so that they might go to Saskatchewan to assist in harvesting stop full details our plans not yet developed but we are considering paying outgoing transportation work would probably last till about November first stop wages per day worked are four dollars and up depending on physical fitness and whether stooking or threshing etcetera stop might I urge your University to agree to co-operate on this scheme as its seems one of few possible answers to meet every serious threat stop please wire your views as soon as convenient.

The President has replied that the University is anxious to co-operate fully in the scheme, Mr. Fennel said, and has requested further information as follows:

1. When will the students leave Toronto, and what arrangements will be made for their transportation to and from Saskatchewan?

2. Will students pay for board and lodging out of their earnings?

3. What supervision of students will be provided?

As soon as this information is secured it will be published in The Varsity, together with the procedure to be followed by students desiring to volunteer for the work, Mr. Fennell said.

hither and yon

with rex wilson

What adjutant of what battalion, as an aftermath to what hither item, accosted what young female Varsity reporter before a crowded orderly room with, "What made you so sure I'd rather talk to you than anyone else? Don't you know I'M A MARRIED MAN WITH TWO LOVELY CHILDREN?"

IT MUST BE A WONDERFUL FEELING! An impressionable little creature was introduced to one of our colleagues down at the Press the other night. Introductions finished she stood with mouth agape drinking in the presence of this near immortal. "Yes," said our colleague, breaking the embarrassing silence, "is there anything I can do for you?"

"Oh, no," replied the creature breathlessly. "This is such a surprise. You see, I thought you were a myth."

Another impressionable creature dropped into the Varsity men's office the other day preceded by a flamboyant cravat and asked, "Is that story in the first issue of The Varsity true—about the jerk who claimed he registered for only a dime?" . . . We might say HOW GREEN WAS . . . but then again we might not.

But some of the little strangers in our midst seem possessed of amazing skills, if a story which blew our way from up Victoria is any indication. Bustling along the street a Freshie accosted a friend and asked where there was a hardware store. "I want some glue," she explained. "I've got to mend a lightbulb!"

Equally resourceful in a less manual sort of way was the Freshie Whiteyite who on the occasion of a formal visit to the Hall by the fifth year Dents, went about from chappie to chappie saying, "Do you smoke?" O course virtually every man said yes, and taking it as a signal to light up, pulled out a wad of weeds, and offered the lass one. She gracefully accepted and before the visit came to a conclusion had a neat little hoard of 13 fags of assorted brands.

Resourcefulness is not lacking in the male half of the new Freshman crop, either. Certain Sophs have been up to the age-old chestnut of dumping poor Frosh all alone in the stilly night somewhere on the fringes of civilization. (Lord knows where they get the gas.) But two frosh called their bluff. One sneaked a road-map into his stocking before the abduction and the other found his way back by dead reckoning based on his use of a ten-cent compass.

But some Seniors are the stupidest people we know. For instance one the other day set down his portable typewriter in the dimmed-out corridor outside the S.A.C. office, went in, transacted his business, came out, light-blinded, and tripped over his typewriter. "What obscenity obscenity left this for people to trip over," he roared loudly. Then, chastened by a sudden flash of memory he remarked, ungrammatically, "What am I swearing at? It was me!" But what are we laughing at? THAT WAS US!

We are getting along into tennis now, and we hope that the weather will oblige us by continuing fair and mild until the games are finished. The news on the subject to date shows that O.T. & P. and Nurses are joining forces with Meds. . . . St. Hilda's have only a few games played in the first round, and are running behind schedule.

Ruth Carleton, III P.H.E., is running both the University College and the P.H.E. tournament this week. She has posted the draw for the Physical Eds. up at the Lillian Massey building, and the U.C. draw at the Women's Union. The girls are asked to post their results of their matches on their respective sheets. The games are being played on the Victoria College courts behind the L.M.

Shirley Geldert, last year champion, drew a bye; she seems to be the main threat in the U.C. lists. Betsy Mosbough represented St. Mike's last year, but is trying for a place on the Red and White team this season. The names of many of the others are unfamiliar and of unknown quality. Two of the U.C. six last year now playing for their own faculty, P.H.E., are Ruth Carleton and Virginia Kitto. Virginia defeated Vic's defending champions of 1940, Virginia Rappell MacLeod, and went into the finals against her team mate Shirley Geldert. Shirley came out victorious in the finals. Any of these girls will bear watching when the Interfaculty tournament gets under way shortly. They all have the best of chances to make their own college teams and go through to at least the third round of the tennis playdowns.

All entries for the U.C. Golf Tournament are to be sent in by Wednesday to Anna Mariette Campbell. The games are being played Friday, Oct. 9 at St. Andrew's Golf Course.

The U.C. tennis draw for Monday: B. Duncan vs. Peggy Garnham 9:30 a.m.; S. Spegel vs. Sarah Socol, 11:30 a.m.; Claire Carrew vs. B. Mosbough: B. Greenleaf vs. T. Hummenrick, 2:30 p.m.; B. Ander vs. M. Manson, 3:30 p.m.; N. Graham vs. E. Flecher 4:30 p.m.; M. Northcott vs. R. Margesson, 3:30 p.m.

Cover Woodbine In 315 To Win Opening Event Of Reed Trophy Race

U.C., S.P.S. FOLLOW TRINITY

Opening the Reed Trophy race as they did one year ago, wearers of the Red and Black of Trinity took their first step in attempting to repeat last season's copping of the award by winning the interfaculty golf championship. Following the Anglicans whose top four shotmakers made it in 315 U.C., winner of two years back, nabbed second spot with 322 while S.P.S. was a close third with 324.

The weather-beaten Woodbine course saw a nip and tuck struggle for individual low gross champion. Ralph Stuart in fifth year Dentistry managed to eke out a close victory with a 73 over last year's winner, Gord Ball of School who was only one shot behind. With par going out at 36 Stuart made it in 39 while Ball carded a 41. Stuart carded 5 par holes and a birdie while Ball got five pars. Coming in par was 35 and the winner made it in one under while last year's champion made it in two under. To do so Stuart needed eight pars and a birdie while Ball almost nipped him making 7 pars and two birdies. W. Waylett, second year Trinity, was third in individual score with a close 75.

The three top teams and individual scores:

Trinity total 315.

N. Y. LECTURER SPEAKS TO UKRAINIAN CLUB SUNDAY

Mr. Myroslav Sichinsky, a lecturer from New York, spoke to the Ukrainian Club of the University of Toronto Sunday afternoon at Newman Hall.

"I expect that after the war the people of the Soviet Ukraine will either be strong enough to organize a more democratic republic or at least gain more freedom of belief, of expression and of information," said Mr. Sichinsky. To the Canadian students of European extraction, he urged that they remember their origin and contribute their utmost to an Allied victory and to the reconstruction period after the war. "The way to combate evil is not to suffer evil, but to fight it."

"Non Anglo-Saxon groups," he continued, "would suffer the most from an Axis victory. We are now all on the same level, free to think and do as we please. Fascism will legalize our being at a lower level than our Axis conquerors."

War, Post-War Problems Not Understood By Students Dr. L. Infeld Maintains

English and European Students Compared; Freer Students Found More Reactionary; Introduced Anti-Semeticism

MORE FREEDOM NEEDED

Toronto students do no know what they are fighting for, Dr. Leopold Infeld, assistant professor in Applied Mathematics, told students of all faculties at the first meeting of the Medical Soeiety Arts and Letters Club, held in Wymilwood, last night.

What he had to say he maintained, was only his impression by way of comparison with pre-war university students in Poland, Germany, and England. "European students are freer, they only have to pay their fees, and write a comprehensive examination after some four or five years of intermittent lecture attendance," he explained. "They were absolutely free from interference, which has been termed the 'freedom of the university.' Yet the amazing fact is that the university in Poland and Germany is the greatest reactionary body in the country, and is absolutely opposed to social progress. In Poland, the students were responsible for the introduction of the anti-Semitic laws."

"Later when fascism became sufficiently strong, free learning, and free universities were its first vietims," he affirmed.

By way of eontrast he discussed the English student at Cambridge. "He is like a baby with every step supervised—in by 10—and not allowed to smoke in his own rooms while wearing his gown. It is the absolute opposite from Europe, for in Cambridge the student is strongly supervised. But the amazing things is that the students are socially progressive, and not reactionary, although they have little to say in the external arrangement of their student life."

Speaking of Toronto, he noted that "the students just don't get interested in anything—they boo and applaud everything. There is nothing spiteful or unjust in their opinion. In fact, there is a great deal of decency and gallantry to be seen. They know very well they have to fight, and they know very well they may die. Now, there is real heroism."

On the other hand Dr. Infeld deplored the students' attitude to the war and post-war problems. "They don't know the problem of modern life or society. The student will say, 'we are fighting to eonserve freedom.' But the thing is we are fighting for the future of the world."

"The common man is doing the suffering and the fighting. His faith must be different in a different world. Much more freedom for the common man is needed after the war," he said.

Observatory Is Historical Site

The Observatory situated on our eampus in front of Hart House has not always been merely a lecture room for Schoolmen, but has a very interesting history extending back over 100 years. In 1836 the Royal Society in London approved plans for the establishment of magnetic observatories at St. Helena, Van Diemen Island, the Cape of Good Hope, and Canada. The Canadian Observatory was temporarily situated at old Fort York on the Toronto Lakeshore in 1839.

Early in 1840 a permanent observatory was built in front of what is now the Physics Building of the University. The pillar and stone marking the site may still be seen there. Here observations of the weather were begun and have been continued without interruption to this day.

The original building made of logs was replaced by a stone structure in 1856. This building remained in place till 1908, when it was taken down stone by stone and rebuilt on its present site in front of Hart House. The present building contains a lecture room with 75 desks, as well as two observing rooms and the dome. In the dome there is a telescope, clock-controlled, for observing the transit of Venus. The building also houses several pieces of geodetic apparatus.

Besides being used as a classroom, the observatory contains a small laboratory in which students in 4th year S.P.S. are instructed in taking precise measurements. Since the beginning of the war some of the equipment has been used to teach navigation to airmen.

Link Trainer Is Reclaimed By Air Force

One of Earliest Canadian Models to Be Used in Training Both R.C.A.F and T.C.A. Pilots

MALTON NEEDS EQUIPMENT

The Link Trainer in the basement of the School building is shortly to be moved to Malton, W. J. Dunlop, University Publicity Director, announced yesterday.

Asked to what use the trainer would be put, Mr. Dunlop said he believed it would be used both by the Royal Canadian Air Foree for initial training and by Trans-Canada Air Lines in refresher courses for their pilots.

"The need for this type of equipment is so great," Mr. Dunlop said, "that the Department of Transport is reclaiming it with the intention of placing it at Malton."

The Link Trainer was loaned to the university by the Department of Transport, to be used by students enrolled in the two-year course in Aerial Navigation which the university discontinued for the duration in 1940.

For the last three years it has been used by students in Aerial Navigation and also by T.C.A. who used it to give periodical tests to its pilots. During the summer months, until 1941, instruction was given to private individuals for a fee.

This trainer was one of the first four in Canada and Mr. Dunlop said that possibly after the war, the Department of Transport would loan a more recent model to the University.

I.S.S. Leader To Speak In Hart House

Allan Booth Will Discuss Wartime Role of British Students and International Student Assembly in Washington

TO ADDRESS FACULTY

What the British student is thinking and his role in the war effort will be discussed by Allan Booth, Secretary of the British fnternational Student Service and General Secretary-Elect of the British Student Christian Movement, at a meeting at Hart House Theatre at 1 p.m. Thursday. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the S.C.M.

Mr. Booth will address another meeting Friday, dealing with the International Student Assembly at Washington, to which he was a delegate. Toronto delegates to the assembly will report. This meeting will be under the joint auspices of the I.S.S. and the Medical Society.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Every University student is asked to make sure, at onee, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, and in the office of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary.

The University Directory is now being prepared for the press, and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

Will Appoint Committee To Act On Govt. Proposal To Aid Western Harvest

President Cody Requests Specific Details; Volunteers Will Probably Be Granted Academic Consideration

NO DEFINITE INFORMATION

No further information concerning the proposal that university students from Ontario and Quebec be released to assist harvesting operations in Saskatchewan has been received from the Dominion Department of Labour, University offieials said yesterday, following a meeting of the Council of the Faculty of Arts at which the proposal was discussed.

Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, replied Sunday to a telegram from Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, requesting specific details on three points of the proposed scheme: when will students leave Toronto and what transportation facilities will be granted them; whether they would pay for board and lodging while in Saskatchewan out of their farm wages; what supervision of students will be provided. Last night he had received no reply from the Department of Labour.

In the meantime, the President will appoint a committee composed of members of the Counell of the Faculty of Arts, he said last night, in order that the Council will be able to aet upon amplified Department of Labour proposals on short notice, without ealling a full Council meeting.

A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University and Secretary of the Council, said last night that academic consideration would probably be granted men who volunteered to work in the prairie wheat-fields when they came to write final examinations.

Plan Favoured at McGill

Montreal, Oct. 5—(CUP)—Dr. Cyril James, president of McGill University, said today that he agreed that some arrangement should be made to relcase students to help with the Saskatchewan harvest. Those most likely to be granted leave are those in commerce, law, arts and agrieulture.

However, before making any final decisions, he is awaiting further information from the Department of Labour.

U.C. Party For Student Relief

International student relief will benefit from the University College First Year party at the Women's Union tomorrow night, it was learned yesterday. Tags will be sold at the dance in aid of the International Student Serviee.

Jim Bottomley's orchestra will provide the musie for the annual "Come Single, Go Home Double" affair and Sophomore President Frank Watson says there will be more novelty danees and better refreshments than ever before.

Tiekets go on sale today in the U.C. rotunda. In aecordance with tradition, they will all be singles. All U.C. undergrads are invited to eome and meet the ineoming class.

No. 1--Army Course

Any undergraduates under 20 years of age desirous of entering this course should apply at once at Room 60, Physics Building. As the Army pays the tuition for this course, fees already paid by such undergraduates will be refunded. Applications have been received from every province in Canada but there are still vacancies for good candidates. No applications can be accepted after Wednesday, October 7th.

STUDENT OPINION VARIES ON HARVEST QUESTION

The entire fourth year law class was reported to be diseussing embarkation en masse on the next Saskatchewan-bound train as a Varsity survey of campus opinion found students generally behind the Government's appeal for help with western harvests.

"I'm surely in favour of it," stated President Don Rowat of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, "but they had better arrange it fast or the harvest will be all taken in by the time the students arrive there."

The educational possibilities of such a mass migration were stressed by Ben Holdsworth, this year's editor of the U.C. Undergrad. "It is a fine idea," he said, "and it will do the students a lot of good."

Vince MaeNamara, If St. Mike's, wondered about the possibilities of using just students of western Canadian universities and in that way avoiding the trouble and expense of sending people half way across Canada. Compbell McLean of Emmanuel agreed with this view, declaring: "If they need us, we should be willing to go; but it seems unlikely that they will take people from as far away as Toronto until they have exhausted the manpower in Western Canadian Universities."

"Sounds all right, provided there is decent food and medical attention," was the comment of Pte. George Parks, a clerk in Hart House Orderly Room.

Phil Giverts, II Political Sciense at U.C., agreed that the plan so far was good, but went on to say that "It is the first indication of the death knell of the Arts College. It's important that the government deeide whether Arts Courses are to function or not. I'm in favour of men being either full-time students or full-time war-workers."

Former Students Are Decorated

Among former University of Toronto students decorated for their part in the Battle of Dieppe was Brig. C. Churchill Mann. Brig. Mann, attached to the General Staff of the 1st Canadian Corps, received the Distinguished Service Order.

Enrolled in Pass Arts at University College in 1923-4, Brig. Mann's home is in Toronto.

Capt. John Blake Gartshore, B.S.A. of 1937, was severely wounded at Dieppe and received the Military Cross for gallantry in action. Capt. Gartshore is a native of Hamilton, Ont.

Lieut.-Col. G. L. M. Smith, graduate of Trinity in 1930, Master of Arts in the following year and graduate in Medicine in 1934, was mentioned in dispatches for his work as commander of a field ambulance unit at Dieppe. Lt.-Col. Smith is an Ottawa resident.

Group Planned By Vic S.C.M.

One of the Victoria College Students Christian Movement groups held its first meeting of the year last Friday when the study topic for the year was decided.

"Christianity and Race" will be studied from Anthropology and the Bible in the first term. In the second term the same subject will be studied from information gathered from various racial groups in the city.

Shorthand Used As Solution

There are some professors who have absolutely no consideration for their students. They make a habit of talkinkjustasfastastheypossiblycan and then get highly indignant when they discover that nobody has anything even approaching a set of notes.

A few students have found one answer to this menace lies in shorthand. But shorthand consists of a mess of bird tracks that seems harder to understand than even the professor. But people seem to do it. So, the logical move was to find out what this shorthand business is all about.

H. J. Russell, A.C.f.S., is a man who knows about shorthand. He ought to, for he has made a life's work out of it teaching the stuff in various schools and having written a goodly number of books and articles on the subject. He is most noted for being the developer of a new simplified shorthand system, the Russell Syllabic Shorthand.

Shorthand, he would have us know, is not a reeent invention made to suit the exacting demands of modern high speed offices. The first known shorthand was seratched on wax tablets by the stylus wielding slaves of the Romans. Tironean Notes, it is called. Came the barbarians, and it went out of existence for a while.

In 1588 a shorthand system was developed in England, on which most European systems have been based. Isaac Pittman's system was invented in 1837 and along with Gregg's, forms one of the two great schools on the subject.

The Duployе shorthand was developed in France and composes the other school. The Russell system is based on this, and for that reason is easily applicable to French and Spanish, as well as English.

There is no mystery or voodoo connected with writing the stuff. Shorthand is all based on straight lines, circles and ovals. These geometrical symbols are segmented and a sound value—not a letter—is assigned to each segment. Now you're all set—you merely put together the segments to make words. Simple, isn't it? As the student gets more progressed, he also can use brief forms for long symbols—a sort of shorthand to shorthand. Simpler, isn't it?

One of the most unique applications of shorthand happened right here in Canada in 1891 when a missionary, Father LeJeune was working among an Indian tribe in British Columbia. The Indians were illiterate, so rather than go to all the difficulty of teaching them to read and write English, Father LeJeune merely taught them shorthand and they were thus able to write their own Chinook dialect.

The Russell System was developed after 20 years of hard work. Himself a winner of many medals for his proficiency in the subject, and also a member of the Royal Society of Teachers, he was not satisfied with the systems then available, so he set out to make his own. He succeeded and it is gradually winning recognition.

What's The Latest?

Students at this University—and at other centres of higher learning throughout Ontario and Quebec—are still awaiting clarification of certain details of the proposal outlined Sunday by the Department of Labour under which those enrolled in courses not directly connected with the war's prosecution would be granted leave to assist Saskatchewan farmers in bringing in their fall wheat harvests.

But while they wait, they are thinking the matter over. Classes are talking of moving west en masse. Professors have been unofficially quoted as saying that if a majority of their students leave for Saskatchewan they will suspend lectures until the itinerant scholars return to campus. Even the Vic "Bob" is reported to have halted rehearsals while students are awaiting developments.

With rumours flying about the campus as to the exact nature of the proposals and the actions that students—singly and in groups—intend to take on the matter, hard facts are still scarce. The Varsity yesterday printed the text of Mr. Mitchell's telegram to Dr. Cody, together with excerpts from Dr. Cody's reply. This data, together with the meagre news which was announced following yesterday's Council meeting—projected formation of a committee to deal with further government proposals, and suggestion from the Registrar that students who volunteer for the farm work will be given some consideration academically—is all the news released to The Varsity to date. In common with other university students, we are still waiting for the full story.

Why Not End It All?

Any interested person watching the campus scene since the pre-war years will have noted the passing of several of the more flamboyant and news-catching features of college life. The rah-rahs have disappeared with the passing of intercollegiate football; the more violent parts of the freshman's initiation into the life of the university have nearly become a legend to the present contingent of students.

The fall after war was declared, when the present seniors were freshmen themselves, the ancient tradition of initiation lost two of its most hallowed ceremonies. The beds in "73" stayed in the residence all year instead of making their usual appearance in the race up St. George St. and the Victoria College push-ball was sent to Camp Borden for the soldiers to play with.

In the next two years the initiations at the various colleges and faculties have lost ground, apparently as a result of the President's expressed wishes, the increasing work and responsibility of all students, and a growing feeling that the whole thing is rather a waste of time.

The result of this decline is shown in the surprising number of whole and sound freshman ties still gracing the necks of their original owners, and in the very subdued array of ribbons, collars, etc. which the first year girls are sporting. Both the length and the intensity of the initiation period have become less each year. As an example of the new order of things, we personally have seen only one freshie go through any ritual on meeting a sophomore on the street, where in past years one bumped into them at almost every other step. At a tie-clipping session in front of one of the fraternities on St. George St. the attackee curled up in a ball like an armadillo and was rolled across the lawn by five or six sophomores until one of the brothers came to the door apparently to tell them that lunch was ready, and the all, including the freshman, ran inside in search of the more substantial pleasures of food. Such a scene would have been impossible even last year.

Since the war and general opinion on the campus have contributed to such an extent to the decline of the initiation ceremonies, why not make an end of the remaining vestiges, at least for the duration? The only real good they ever did: welding the freshman class together into a unified group, is already being accomplished by other means.

The responsibilities of compulsory war training for both men and women, the longer hours, the impact of the daily news from the different war fronts, and, in most cases, a tightened scheme of financing, have all contributed toward making the present day student more conscious of his duties than of his pastimes. The non-essentials have to go by the board. If the inane tradition of initiation also died a natural death it would be no loss to anyone.

Gone . . . The Crammer

It is interesting to note that the frivolous end-of-term crammer is a war casualty. The once swaggering boast "Oh, I never study," is no longer heard. While there is no question that students in their off hours can be even gayer than formerly there is also no question that they come to the university to make the best possible use of the many facilities thrown open to them. Again the war, which has affected changes in every part of our life, is responsible.

Last year the trend in this direction was noticeable when many, even in the first year, settled down to work by the end of the first week. This year a good number started in the first day. The members of the year of 4T6 may be taken aback by the seemingly slighting reference to first year policies made above, but it was not intended as such. The break between high school and the work of the university is so great that it would not be remarkable if it took the first year a month or more to find their feet. That some are well into the swing of things speaks well for the quality of our present freshmen.

Ottawa regulations regarding draft-age students and selective service may be one of the reasons for this quick settling down. In spite of the assurances of the Registrar of the university that the status of university men remains almost unchanged, many students feel that as far as passing is concerned it is "one strike and out." It is quite possible that such will be the case some time in the future. Ottawa naturally does not disclose its plans before making them official and it would be a simple step from the present arrangement to the one which everyone thought had come into force in the summer: namely that all students failing to pass academic examinations and tests might be required immediately by the compulsory recruiting branch of the national war services department to leave the university for military training camps.

If the manpower shortage becomes more acute it would seem logical to a great many people to take the universities off the preferred list for at least as long as the situation remained critical. The same applies to the women students.

After reviewing the situation it looks as though the students have realized the possibility and are putting all their efforts into furthering the war effort by making a success of their immediate job: that of studying.

PIPE BAND ABOLISHED

Venerable Organization of Noisemakers Discontinued as Wartime Morals Measure by Special Order

NO MORE MUSIC*

Dissolution of the C.O.T.C. pipe band as an emergency wartime measure, was announced by Corps Headquarters at an unearthly hour this morning. The announcement came forty-five seconds after two of the healthier bandsmen had blown reveille.

Officially attached to the long-suffering "W" company, the pipe band has been a blowing concern since the onset of the war. The only qualification for admission has been the ability to say: "It's a braw bricht moonlicht nicht tonicht" without a lethal attack of asphyxiation.

Major Shamus O'Halloran, explaining the ban, pointed out that there was really no true music to bagpipes, but merely an aesthetic squeal. He said that there was no truth in the rumor that the pipers would now be reassigned to duty as emergency air-raid sirens, in the event of a power breakdown during a blackout.

Just what contribution the band will play in the war effort is not certain. It was rumored that they might be assigned to drown out the noise that comes from local armament factories, in order to allow people to sleep at night.

Concerning the attempted "reveille" this morning, an unnamed senior medical student said: "It didn't bother me at all—I thought it was my landlady having another attack of asthma."

OMEGA, ALPHA AND SCOTTY O'TOOLE

ART MUSIC Drama

Civil War

Royal Alexandra

The average member of the audience at Spring Again will probably have returned with the memory of the really good last act, or the last two acts, before him. Therefore the critic's memory of a very insipid first act had better be forgotten.

With that qualification, Spring Again, a collaboration of Isabel Leighton and Bertram Bloch, can be highly recommended as good entertainment. The actors are never incompetent and at times they rise to real brilliance. The luminosity of C. Aubrey Smith and Grace George, in that order of brilliance, could make any comedy click.

Spring Again is a well written after dinner piece. It will never be considered a great drama, but its authors never intended it as such. They got their just reward in the longish run the play had on Broadway.

The plot is so insubstantial that it cannot be recaptured outside the theatre. It concerns the tribulations of managing another father, whose name is Carter, this time. The fact that Carter's father won the Civil War in his capacity as an obscure general has given the son a mission in life: that of unveiling as many memorial tablets to his sire's memory as he can finance or have financed.

The result offers a good many opportunities for light comedy, most of them absurd, but many really funny. More laughs per minute fall to one William Auchinschloss (played by Michael Rosenberg), because anyone loves to see Hollywood made fun of in an intelligent way.

The only bad thing about the whole performance is the pit orchestra, a thing which seems to be inescapable if one wishes to see the whole show. I hereby dedicate myself to the futile attempt of having them all liquidated, preferably painfully. They really are terrible.

Trinity S.C.M. Hear Rev. Nash

"The world has no common faith, but the World Student Christian Movement is the one body that has," declared Rev. Arnold Nash, Toronto Secretary of the S.C.M. at the opening meeting of the Trinity College S.C.M. in St. Hilda's Friday.

President Fred Stinson announced that this year's programme would have a few changes: the men and women would for the first time meet together, and every two weeks there would be worship services to which they would give added emphasis. Two topics were slated for the course of lectures which are to be given by Professor Fielding and preceded by worship in the chapel: "What does Christianity mean to you?" and a study of the Archbishop's book "Christianity and Social Order."

Varsity Night Classes For Air Crew Stopped

W. J. Dunlop, director of the Department of Extension, announced that the night classes, which have been held during the past two years for prospective air crew who had not the required educational standing to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force, were being discontinued. In the future such instruction will be given under the direction of the Air Force.

The classes were begun in the fall of 1940, with courses in Algebra, Geometry, English, Trigonometry, and Physics. Five of the collegiate teachers from the city acted as instructors.

"We never had any trouble getting teachers," Mr. Dunlop said. "In fact, they were delighted to help, and we couldn't even reimburse them for their transportation."

"And I never saw a keener lot of students," he continued. "They realized they were being given a second chance."

From Toronto, 572 candidates from the course have been accepted, and in other Ontario centres, 148 are now on active service.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS

In view of the fact that all appointments for Health Service Examinations (Men) to October 26 are now filled, no new appointments will be made until Monday morning, October 19.

It is urged that all students who have appointments present themselves for examination in time.

Tennis Tournament Gets Under Way

McGraw Defeats Schmidt, Waugh Eliminates Stock

Largest Entry List in Many Years; Seeded Players Easily Make Second Round; Competition Wide Open

GRAY OF MEOS LOOKS GOOD

With one of the largest entry lists in history, the Interfaculty Tennis Championship got under way Monday with no upsets to any of the seeded players. Although not all of the 156 players could get their games run off in the opening day because of the rather damp courts and weather conditions, the eight seeded players, namely, Mel Jones, Chuck Saba, Ian Rusted, Bill Waugh, Roger Crane, Owen Gray, Maurice Maurois, and Tom Jacobs easily made their respective ways to the second round.

Due to the absence of perennial title-holder Bruce Hall and runner-up Jack Mullett the competition this year is wide open and little choice can be discerned among the top eight. Mel Jones who was out of competition last year is thought to be able to take over Bruce Hall's throne and started his climb with an easy 6-2, 6-1 win over Hill of School. Owen Gray of Meds also out of competition last year is expected to do some upsetting and reached the second round yesterday by a 6-0, 6-1 trimming of Dehetre of Pharmacy. A hitherto unknown, McGraw of U.C., may be a dark horse in the calculations of the experts as he displayed very good form in reaching the second by defeating a College-mate, Schmidt, with a 6-1, 6-1 score. Bill Waugh, a last-year semi-finalist easily started his climb again by eliminating Stock of School 6-1, 6-1. But for the whole box score in the singles peruse the following:

Brown (U.C.) defeated Boyd-Bowman (Trin.) 6-3, 6-3. McGraw (U.C.) defeated Schmidt (U.C.) 6-1, 6-1. Moffat (S.P.S.) defeated Walker (Trin.) 6-0, 6-1. Berrin (S.P.S.) defeated Hamilton (Pharm.) default. Waugh (Vic.) defeated Stock (S.P.S.) 6-1, 6-1. Rusted (Trin.) defeated Naylor (S.P.S.) 6-0, 6-0. Glaser (Pharm.) defeated Cheeseman (S.P.S.) default. Moses (S.P.S.) defeated Little (Pharm.) 6-0, 6-1. Lamb (Trin.) defeated Blades (Pharm.) 6-1, 6-1. Capper (S.P.S.) defeated Carbell (Pharm.) 6-4, 1-6, 8-6. Jones (Trin.) defeated Hill (S.P.S.) 6-2, 6-1. Moses (Pharm.) defeated Sanderson (S.P.S.) 6-3, 6-1. Hart (Dents) defeated Ander (S.P.S.) 6-2, 6-1. Tseng (Trin.) defeated Little (O.C.E.) 6-2, 6-1. Brown (Vic.) defeated Dewar (U.C.) 6-3, 2-6, 6-1. Whiting (Meds) defeated Goldstein (S.P.S.) 6-3, 6-2. Jacob (St. M.) defeated Thierd (Vic.) 6-3, 6-2. Crane (St. M.) defeated Spence (Meds) 6-0, 6-4. Willinsky (Meds) defeated Mack (Vic.) 6-3, 6-2. Bateman (Meds) defeated Currie (U.C.) 6-2, 6-0. Boyd (Meds) defeated Skinner (S.P.S.) 6-4, 6-2. Weaver (Dents) defeated Phillips (Pharm.) 3-6, 6-4, 6-0. Cousins (Dents) defeated Clifton (Pharm.) 6-2, 6-1. Gray (Meds) defeated Dehetre (Pharm.) 6-0, 6-1. Marios (St. M.) defeated Tomlin (S.P.S.) default.

Keen Rivalry in Doubles

Looking over the line-ups for today's draw one might see some very good tennis if they wandered up St. Hilda's way when Brown and McGraw come to blows. Ken Brown of Vic. had quite a struggle to eliminate big Bill Dewar of U.C. in the first round, but finally did the trick 6-3, 2-6, 6-1. At 11:30 Waugh, Rusted and Saba have a workout and probably will have little trouble in climbing to the third round. For the singles draw of today:

9:00—Kennedy v. Cross; Cleary v. Alpin.

9:30—Brown v. McGraw; Moses v. Lamb; Ainsly v. Hibbard.

10:30—Moffat v. winner Cross and Kennedy; Capper v. winner Cleary and Alpin; Leake v. Hunter; Byrne v. Thomson; McDonough v. Katz.

11:30—Berrin v. Waugh; Rusted v. Glaser; Brace v. Miller; DesRoches v. Tyler; Saba v. Hoyle.

12:30—Andison v. Worsley; Pauling v. Baroditsky.

Brown Defeats Dewar

With an entry of 32 teams the doubles competition gets under way today. Defeated last year in the finals by Mullet and McCallum who have since departed from the campus, Chuck Saba and Murray Thomson appear to be odds-on favourites and are seeded in number one spot. But fellow Vicmen Peter Bryce and Bill Waugh, in second seeded spot, are looked upon in some quarters to put up a real struggle at least, if not being able to nab the championship. Tom Jacob and Maurice Marois of St. Mikes are seeded third while Mel Jones and Ian Rusted of Trinity are in fourth spot. The only looked-for close match appears to be between Bryce and Waugh and Pawling and McGraw.

The Victoria College Tennis Club Trophy seems to be sewn up by either Trinity or Vic. This trophy is given to the college with the best 4 top men who total their points at the rate of a point a win in the singles and doubles tournaments. Vic has Saba, Thomson, Bryce and Waugh who seem, on paper at least, to be heading for the top of the ladder. The Red and Black of Trinity is stoutly sported by Jones, Rusted, Tseng and Worsely who are following closely on the heels of the Red and Gold of Vic. Thus, with the large entry list there is lots of room for surprises but on past performances the die seems to be east. For today's doubles draw note the following:

12:30—Thomson and Saba, Vic. v. Naylor and Anderson, S.P.S.; Joeab and Marois, St. M. v. Wade, U.C. and Duncan, S.P.S.; Petre and Clifton, Pharm. v. Mathew and Cohen, S.P.S.

1:30—Kirkwood and McMillen, Tr. v. McDonough, S.P.S. and Mariscetti, St. M.; Boroditsky and Kerr, Deuts v. Gray and Spence, Meds; Whiting and Boyd, Meds v. Weaver and Cousins, Dents; Burn and Des Roches, St. M. v. Rispin, Tr. and Gall, Wyc.; Bell Irving and Gell Irving, Tr. v. Hill, S.P.S. and Dewar, U.C.

2:30—Rusted and Jones, Tr. v. Goldstein and Gowdy, S.P.S.; Gorfuntel and Somers, U.C. v. Skinner, U.C. and Brown, Vic.; Hall and Farlow, S.P.S. v. Stock, S.P.S. and Allen, Meds; Austin and Carsons, S.P.S. v. Tseng and Worsely, Tr.; Crane and Flyn, St. M. v. Mitchell, Dents and Moses, S.P.S.

3:30—Wolewsky and Moscovich, Meds v. Moffat and Cross, S.P.S.; Dewin, S.P.S. and Brown, U.C. v. Stricker and Morehead, S.P.S.; Bryce and Waugh, Vic. v. Pawling, S.P.S. and McGraw, U.C.

Note—If any of the 3:30 games conflict with military drill be sure to see either Ian Rusted or Pete Bryce before your appointed hour.

Speaking Of Sport

SAFETY IN NUMBERS

With the already completed golf tournament and the already begun tennis championship starts the long race for the coveted T. A. Reed Trophy, emblematic of the interfaculty championship. As most followers of the passing University sport scene already know, the gonfalon is earned by two methods—(a) to nab some individual interfaculty championships and (b) to get a large entry in each event. If you haven't chanced upon page 70 in your well-thumbed little green handbook the method of point getting is stated as, quote, points are awarded according to the proportionate number of students turning out, unquote.

Therefore one can almost term the encounter for the trophy a year-long encounter between the Athletic Directors and team managers of the different colleges—and not a tussle between the athletes themselves. The unveiling should be undertaken and the Reed Trophy should be openly labelled as being presented to the college with the most industrious Athletic Director. In truth all he needs to do is to get more participants out in the games than any other college. Evidently it doesn't matter how many championships you win as long as you get more entrants. As an example of this last year's winner, Trinity only won one championship and that was in golf. School nabbed ten—exactly ten times Trinity—yet came second in the final standing. Knox, finishing a poor third, nabbed the badminton only, yet Vic and Dents who got two championships each weren't within sight of the top rung. U.C., Meds and St. Mike's although winning as many championships as the Trophy winner were so far back in the final standing that it wasn't even humorous.

Profiting perhaps from last year the before-mentioned Athletic Directors in several colleges have determined to climb the point ladder even though it necessitates the use of method B. The golf championship may eventually do Trinity very little good for the simple reason that the enterprising souls in U.C. managed, on top of placing second in the meet, to get twice as many participants, twelve to be exact, to make the round of the Woodbine assault course. And then S.P.S., throwing 31 entries into the fray, may overcome her third placing by sheer weight of numbers. Even Vic and St. Mike's eight and seven entries respectively, may haul down as many points as Trinity who only fielded six. Thus it can be seen that from the opening gong the fight is again to be focused not around the winners of the different sports but around the question of 'How many guys can we get to qualify?' The Hart House Athletic Office no doubt will adjust the point system slightly before the season gets too far under way—but probably only in regards to proportionate registrations in the Colleges. Perhaps a little re-adjustment could be done in the vein of putting a little more accent on winning and not quite so much on entries.

POOR OLD YANKS

A lot of long green will change hands today, especially down St. Louis way. But who'd a thunk the amazing Cards would do it in four straight. But sho' nough behind some neat pitching of Johnny Beazley the Cards put across a couple of runs in the ninth when Kurowski slapped one of veteran Red Ruffing's best right into the stands. You can start counting that foldin' money any time now, brother Jackson.

Varsity Star in England; La Varnway Now Technician

Jack Lavarnway, one of Varsity's greatest ball handlers, is now in England. After a sensational career at Varsity Jack joined the United States Air Corps last February, before completing his course.

Born in Auburn, New York in 1919, Jack first distinguished himself as an athlete at Auburn High School, where he became an outstanding basketball player, staying an extra year to pursue this sport.

Jack then came to St. Mike's Western School, and then entered Dentistry. After one year, he transferred to Pass Arts, and joined Varsity's Intercollegiate basketball squad. In 1940-41 he was top scorer on the Intercollegiate team and it was not unusual for him to outscore the players on both his own and the opposing team.

Not many will forget Jack's hurried trip home to enlist as a private in the United States Air Corps, and then his return to play one of the greatest games in his career—when he scored 20 points in a game with Buffalo State Teachers College. His deadly left-hand push-shot was the cause of grievous woe to many a man, and the envy of many a coach.

Jack played with Hal Axon, Don Finlayson, and Bill Roberts last year, making one of the greatest teams Varsity has known in the last ten years. His sense of fair-play, his modesty, and all-round good sportsmanship made him a general favorite. Besides basketball, Lavarnway was ping-pong champ at St. Mikes, and also played baseball and directed athletics for the double blue.

Although he was first sent to Fort Niagara for 2 weeks, Jack was soon sent to Camp Lee, Virginia, where he entered the Medical Corps. Then after two months, he trained to be an X-ray technician.

He arrived safely in England Sept. 7, and is now stationed at the 48th Surgical Hospital "somewhere in England." In his last letter home, he said "the food is fine, the sun is plentiful, but I miss all my friends."

Our best wishes to Jack who is a credit to his College, his University, and his Country.

Sportswoman

As you all probably noticed, that little old weather man who brings the naughty old rain was with us again yesterday. Hence, our College tennis games were, to say the least, interrupted. If, perchance, it is still drizzling tomorrow, it would help those in charge of the schedules if the players would then play at their earliest convenience—at least by Wednesday.

P. and H. E. did manage to shed a ray of light on our horizon by playing off a few noble sets. Here are the results: Virginia Kitto, last year's ambidextrous star had three good sets with Ruth Christman on Victoria's courts. Virginia emerged the victor, so we will be hearing more from her in the near future. Connie O'Connor, of second year P. and H. E. fame, came out with top score in her three sets with Mary Arnold. Both players displayed some promising tennis and the tally was: 6-8; 6-2; 6-3. Ruth Carleton also moved up a bit in the rounds when she won her first three sets by default.

Regarding he Inter-faculty tournament coming up, it seems that, despite threatening icicles, the date may have to be shifted ahead. Dr. Mulock has intimated that October 14 from 2:30 till 4:30 would be most suitable for her to examine those who will be playing in the Inter-faculty games and have not as yet been examined.

To get back to more sunny topics, let's reminisce and talk about co-ed ushers and rugby games and all such happy thoughts. All you rugby fans may have noticed that fourteen some odd gals brightened the stadium for the first time last Saturday afternoon bedecked in usher's blazers. The reason, if you haven't already guessed, is that more and more fellows are drilling of a Saturday afternoon and Mr. Maxwell has received a good response to his call for co-ed recruits.

Everyone seems to be quite happy abou the new state of affairs. One spectator, on coming in, was heard to remark—"Aye, lady ushers, how nice." Outside of placing the odd person in row F to the left instead of to the right, the usherettes performed their duties admirably and made things in general a little less monotonous whilst enjoying a bit of football on the side.

U.T.S. Practice On Back Campus

Leaning on the north campus fence were two Meds frosh, their battle-scarred faces grim, but with their tattered bits of tie still waving triumphantly in the breeze, watching some little folk in heterogeneous array of football dress scrambling about on the field.

"Yah," said one. "That's School's senior football team in afternoon practice."

"But they're so small," said the other one.

"Oh, Engineers waste away by the time they become seniors," responded the enlightened one.

But they weren't Engineers. They turned out to be junior students of the University of Toronto Schools.

"Football is a must with them," explained C. T. Sharpe, U.T.S. form master, who was in charge of the group. "They play from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m. and miss their first afternoon period."

Divided into two groups of under 110 lbs. and from 110 to 140 lbs., they compete for the League championships using a special set of regulations.

"On the whole they are a keen bunch," reported Mr. Sharpe, "and we find the time well-spent."

Acting officials are junior school members, who, being too heavy to play, drown their sorrows in the delight obtained from gleefully blowing whistles.

Grad Residents To Move

The 16 inmates of University College Graduate House, 49 St. George St., expect to move within the next two weeks. Graduate House, south of the Museum, has been taken over by the Canadian Government for research work.

The former residence of Sir Robert Falconer, former President of the University, 86 Queen's Park, is to be their future home and will accommodate 20 students.

The officers of the Canadian Womens Army Corps, now in occupation, are looking for a new place.

Camera Club Attraces Amateur Photographers

The Hart House Camera Club is designed to fit the needs of amateur photographers who do their own developing and printing, but are without darkroom facilities.

In its darkrooms, the club has a Leica enlarger for the miniature fan, a Kodak Autofocus and a large horizontal enlarger for those members who work with larger negatives, and a Pako Printer for making contact prints. There is also a print dryer and a dry mounting press for finishing the prints.

Each member is given a locker in which he can keep his supplies of paper and personal equipment. The club supplies all chemicals except developing agents (such as metol and hydroquinone).

Those interested should drop around to the camera rooms in Hart House, just across the corridor from the billiard room, and they will be shown around.

The boss's column of Friday last, brought to mind a little nifty we watched pour off the wires of the UP this summer. This was not a fluff, but a straight news story. Due to a memory doddering with age, the names are fictitious, but otherwise the rendering is accurate.

WHICH ALSO calls to mind the allegedly true story that was making the rounds of the Fourth Estate this summer. Seems that the "morgue" or library of one of the more conservative Gotham dailies was short of help one day, so they got a copy boy in from the sports department to fill in.

The chief librarian, a staid old soul indeed, was reading a clipping of an obit and came across a couple of biblical quotations he wanted to check.

"Boy, get me the Bible," he ordered.

The youth promptly scurried off to the shelves and returned with a copy of the racing form.

THE FATE WORSE THAN DEATH DEPT.

Then there was the time the police investigated a complaint and discovered this man sitting on the front steps of his house with a 30-30 rifle in his hands.

"My wife," he explained, "is out riding with another man. I am waiting for them to come back."

The gendarmes were sympathetic, but firm. There are laws, they explained, and that sort of thing just wasn't legal. Couldn't he, perhaps, tontent himself with just beating the Romeo up?

"Oh, I'm not going to shoot him," tho wronged husband hastily explained, "but, boy; the job I'm gonna do on his tires!"

SOMETIMES YOU WONDER DEPT.

One of our more diminutive reporters was crossing the campus when he met a girl he knew who had a freshie in tow. The usual introductions followed, in the course of which it was casually mentioned that he was on The Varsity.

"Are you really on The Varsity?" asked the freshette, with eyes rounded in awe.

He admitted his guilt and then left for his lecture.

As he was hurrying off, he heard the freshie exclaim, "But he doesn't look like a football player!"

Sergeant-Majors are, after all, Sergeant-Majors. There is the sad, sad story of a former Pass Arts student now in service, who was cursed with two left feet and a remarkable ability for doing things wrong. Relations between him and his S-M were always a bit strained and things got to the point where people used to think he was a permanent part of the kitchen crew. One day when he had done something particularly bad, he stood in the ranks with fear and trembling waiting for the wrath to descend, knowing that there were extremely trying details assigned to his company that day.

The sergeant asked for five volunteers and he sighed in relief.

"I want five volunteers," roared the sgt., pausing in front of the lad, "YOU, YOU, YOU, YOU, and YOU!"

There are two fellows rooming together, one of whom is a meds student and the other in electrical engineering. Seems that this electrical whizz has, oddly enough, an electric razor. Anyway, one day this ingenious gadget broke down on the poor guy so he took steps. When the meds stude came home from his corpses and such, he found parts of electric razor all over his bed and the roomie standing there with a baffled expression on his face.

He quickly diagnosed the case and applied treatment, while the engineer stood by helpfully handing him tools a la Doctor Kildare.

If you like modern musicals, don't miss "Private Buckaroo." Harry James and his band are featured along with Dick Foran and the Andrews Sisters on the vocals. It's all about a lad (Dick Foran) who joints the army with a high opinion of himself, but gets taken down a few notches.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

The Andrews Sisters are really swell in "Three Little Sisters" and "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree." This last number is followed by a jitterbug routine starring the Jiving Jacks and Jills, which is quite amusing, if you like that sort of thing. Dick Foran's best number is "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen." Of course, Harry James is superb in all his numbers.

Lots of shooting and killing, together with a vivid picture of post-Civil War Texas go to make the story of "Men of Texas." A big, bad villian wins the sympathy of the patriotic Texans and make them believe his bandid band are trying to win the freedom of their State by robbing the Yankee banks.

The acting is definitely second-rate, with the exception of John Litel who gives his usual fine performanee. Jackie Cooper tries hard to be a tough, young hothead, but doesn't quite make it. Robert Stack plays a Yankee newspaper reporter who finally proves to the Texans that they are wrong. Leo Carrillo provides the humor, and Anne Gwynne the curves for this rather interesting film.

Ectoplasm all over the place doesn't spoil "Spellbound" the British thriller now showing at the Hollywood. Based on a novel "The Necromancers" by Robert Hugh Benson and starring Vera Lindsay and Derek Farr, "Spellbound" takes spiritualism as an established faet and develops a remarkable tension in plot without any attempt at debunking. A slow start and the somewhat disconcerting disregard of photogenies by English producers do not prevent this from being absorbing entertainment.

HOLLYWOOD DOUBLE BILL

Running, in one section, along similar lines in a somewhat lighter vein, "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost" starring Lupe Velez and Leon (Rubberlegs) Errol also has starting trouble. If you like slapstick, however, it soon Warms us to full vigour.

Vic Freshies In Ceremony

Victoria College freshies were officially welcomed as full-fledged members of the college at the traditional Candle Lighting Ceremony last Friday night in the college chapel.

Miss MacPherson, Dean of Women, addressed the assembled sophs and freshies on the symbolism of light, "which has always stood for warmth and truth."

President Brown welcomed the freshies and eautioned them not to become "supcrior" during their college years, but better and richer in spirit.

As the freshics repeated their oath, the "Lamp of Learning" was given into their care and each soph lighted her freshie's candle. Chanting their Candle Lighting song, the two classes descended to the lower hall where they sang their college song before adjourning to Annesley Hall.

J. A. Casson Discusses Canadian Artists, Art

Canadian artists will be painting more and more still-life sketches and city landscapes as gasoline rationing restricts travel to northern districts, J. A. Casson, Ontario artist, said yesterday in Hart House Art Gallery. He was discussing his 89 paintings which are hung on the gallery's walls this week.

"There will be a revival of paintings of baskets of fruit and perhaps even displays showing baskets of kittens," Mr. Casson said.

This Ontario artist, whose colorful landscapes picture the northern territory near Maple Lake and Haliburton, said it was dangerous to sketch territories surrounding city war industries. "Attemps to paint or photograph scenery within three miles of the De Havilland plant is definitely out," he said.

Commenting on slim profits made from painting, Mr. Casson said there were probably 15 painters in England and two in Canada who lived exclusively on sales from canvases. Most Canadian painters, he explained, sketched while away on week-end vacations from commercial arts positions and teaching employment.

Museum Summer School Amuses and Instructs

The Royal Ontario Museum this summer held a school for neighbourhood children between the ages of eight and twelve. The Summer School was directed by Ruth Home and financed entirely by churches, welfare agencies and individual gifts.

By the end of August attendance had reached 250. Average attendance in July was 40 children daily, and in August this figure increased to 50.

Two field trips were conducted in July; one to Grenadier Pond, where the children studied pond life, and one to the Don Valley brick yards where fossils were sought and examined. After these trips, a large mural of a pond and microscopic examination was made, and discussion of the fossils were shown.

Moving pictures on natural history, and cartoons were shown. The children produced an Indian play and built an Eskimo igloo. Parents of the children were entertained at the closing session.

As women are drawn into war work, with consequent disruption of home life, it is the wish of the Division of Public Instruction to be of increasing service to the children of the city. Experience gained through these summer classes is expected to assist in this work.

Arts Discarded for Science and Medicine; Technical Courses Set Up for Pre-Service Men; Students Younger

WILL ADDRESS STUDENTS

By Rex Wilson

No men over 18 years of age and no women over 20 remain in English Universities today unless they are in medical or scientific courses Allan Booth, General Secretary of the British Student Christian Movement told The Varsity in an interview yesterday.

In reply to this interviewer's remark on the contrast of this situation with Canadian and American regard for broad cultural backgrounds Mr. Booth said, "With the Nazis on your doorstep you have to choose between the broad mind and the kind of man who can help keep the Nazis off."

He went on to explain that with the acute manpower shortage in England the Universities were becoming mainly technical training schools. Extra curricular activities have, for the most part, disappeared in the face of course acceleration and military training. There remain only two chief student societies, the Socialist Society and the Student Christian Movement.

Mr. Booth will address the S.C.M. tomorrow at 1 o'clock in Hart House theatre on the subject, "The Impact of the War on the British Universities." On Friday he will speak at a meeting under the joint auspices of the Medical Society and the International Student Service.

Born in Dublin, he is a graduate in law of Trinity College, Dublin, '33. Following his graduation he spent a year qualifying as a solicitor. Between 1934 and 1936 he was Intercollegiate Secretary of the S.C.M. at Liverpool University. He then returned to Ireland, this time to Ulster, to study Theology at Belfast. Followingl his ordination as a Methodist Minister he did work with the International Student Service.

For the past two years he has been General Secretary of the British S.C.M. and will shortly return to England to

Victoria Men Called to Meeting By V.C.U. Head

One Hundred Percent Attendance Expected as Question of Harvesting Is to Be Discussed

INFORMATION OFFERED

A mass meeting of all male Victoria College students will be held at 1 p.m. today in Alumni Hall, Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union, announced early this morning.

The meeting is being held to obtain full student opinion on the Department of Labour proposal that Arts students assist in the Saskatchewan wheat harvest, and to give students any last-minute information in the situation which may be forthcoming this morning, he said.

"This is the most direct issue to university students within the memory of the present V.C.U. executive," he added. "From the interest in the proposal which has been shown around the College in the past two day, we expect 100 per cent attendance."

HART HOUSE COMMITTEES WILL DINE TONIGHT

The annual dinner for all members of Hart House committees will take place tonight in the Great Hall at 6 p.m. Members are urged to be on time and any who have not yet secured their tickets may obtain them in the Warden's office up until 1 o'clock today.

APPLICATIONS TO BE COMPLETED, GIVEN TO REGISTRAR BY NOON FOR COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

Ottawa Telegram Clarifies Government Plan; Urges Early Dispatch of as Many Students as Possible; Transportation to Saskatchewan and Return Provided; Allowances in Academic and Military Training to Be Discussed

COMMITTEE OF ARTS FACULTY MEETS THIS AFTERNOON

Applications from male students wishing to help harvest the Saskatchewan wheat crop should be filed at the University Registrar's Office at Simcoe Hall this morning, President H. J. Cody announced last night.

President Cody made the announcement following receipt of a telegram from V. C. Phelan, Dominion Chief Employment Officer, asking that as many students as possible leave at the earliest possible date and giving details of the Government's plan whereby Ontario and Quebec students are to be sent to relieve the western shortage of farm labourers.

Application forms will be available at 10 a.m. this morning and a committee composed of members of the Council of the Faculty of Arts will sit this afternoon to consider applications with a view to giving the Government an immediate estimate of the approximate number of students available.

No word concerning leave from training in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps had been received last night from Military District Headquarters but applications will have space provided for students to fill in their battalion and company so these forms can be used as applications for leave.

Mr. Phelan's telegram announced that students would be provided with return transportation to either Regina or Saskatoon. Cost of travel in Saskatchewan will be borne by the Saskatchewan Government.

Wages of a minimum of $4 per day with free board will be provided whether or not weather permits the students to work, Mr. Phelan announced.

Return tickets will be purchasable commencing Oct. 31, but men may remain until Nov. 15.

Text of Mr. Phelan's telegram follows:

Women's Training Began Yesterday

The Women's National Service Training Program got under way yesterday with the Organization Parade of the C.R.C.C. and the first lectures in the majority of other courses.

The members of the University Detachment reported to Varsity arena where they were assigned to their platoons, of which there will be five, or possibly six this year, owing to the increased attendance. Then they marched outside, and began the year's drill on the campus behind Trinity.

The first class in the Nutrition course was given in the Household Science building. These classes last for one hour, and there are two lectures a week.

Also in the Household Science building, was the class in Recreational Leadership. However, the numbers were so large that it was decided that those from U.C. would take their training at St. Joseph's next time. The first 20 minutes is taken up by a lecture, and the rest of the two hours is spent in practice.

Those in the Civic Day Nursery option, have two one-hour classes a week in the Psychology building. These will be supplemented later by practical work.

The group doing Red Cross Sewing began their work yesterday also.

The Nursing Aids are having three letcures, after which they split up into groups for practical demonstrations in

Employees Strike At Minnesota

Minneapolis, Oct. 5—Four hundred and fifty non-academic employees of the University of Minnesota went on strike Saturday after a prolonged dispute.

The strikers, members of the American Federation of Labor Service Employees' Union, voted unanimously to strike following alleged lack of co-operation by the university board of regents.

The dispute originated in August when the Union demanded that the university establish a labor board to deal with employee problems.

No. 1--Army Course

Any undergraduates under 20 years of age desirous of entering this course should apply at once at Room 60, Physics Building. As the Army pays the tuition for this course, fees already paid by such undergraduates will be refunded. Applications have been received from every province in Canada but there are still vacancies for good candidates. No applications can be accepted after today.

DENTS ELIMINATE ONE-THIRD OF FROSH

It was officially announced Saturday that the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario has had to eliminate 27 of the 81 provisionally accepted freshmen in the course this year. One of the 54 left in the course dropped out yesterday morning but no announcement has yet been made as to whether another student will be taken in to replace him.

"We very much regret that lack of equipment forces us to eliminate these 27 men," Dean A. D. Mason of the Faculty of Dentistry stated to The Varsity yesterday. "We have to order our equipment through the Priorities Board months in advance," Dr. Mason continued, "and we based this year's equipment orders on our expectation of about 40 new students, the average freshman registration over the last eight or ten years."

"This year we had an unexpected avalanche of 139 applications. We reduced this number to 81 by eliminating men who had also applied for admission to other faculties, some who wished to transfer from other faculties, late applications, and so on."

"To decide on the 54 that we could take in," Dr. Mason went on, "we gave a series of aptitude tests of digital dexterity over a period of five days. The applicants taking these tests were marked by numbers: their names were only referred to after the marking was completed. Their matriculation standing was taken as a measure of mental capacity, and all 80 were interviewed by a selection board."

Dr. Mason declared that the elimination of 27 men was a physical necessity and did not in any way imply that those 27 would not make good dentists if the facilities were available to train them.

MOWER OF 'THE GREEN STUFF' TRAVELS FIVE ACRES A DAY

By Rose Rabkin

Out where the grass begins, there is a most envied man-about-campus who rides a four-wheeled affair mildly resembling a jeep. Tracking him down along a trail of freshly-mown green stuff on the back campus, we came upon Thomas England, official cutter of grass for the University. Mr. England is a shy, mustachioed gentleman who's been riding the electric lawn-mower around these parts for 20 years. He says he cuts nearly five acres a day all the way up to the Muscum. The grass grew so fast this summer that he could take only two days off before the green sward needed a trimming again.

Contrary to student speculation Mr. England does not follow the birds to the sunny south, there to cut grass, but stays around in winter to shovel snow.

He says he likes the air force boys because, though they kid him some, they stay out of his way while he's cutting. But he isn't particularly keen on the co-ed who is so frivolous as to shriek, "Isn't that precious!" when spying him on route. Asked whether it was fun riding the lawn-mower, the master grass cutter declared, "You take yourself riding around in a car from eight to five. Well it gets kinda hard after a while."

At this point, we got up enough courage to beg a ride on the turf trimmer, whereupon we two went on a little jaunt over to Knox College.

Rev. T. P. McLaughlin Speaks at Reception

"Years spent in a university now produce a more mature graduate than former years," said Rev. T. P. McLaughlin, C.S.B., president of St. Michael's College, addressing the freshmen at the annual Freshman Reception held at the school last night.

This event also served to introduce John Casey, the St. Michael's S.A.C. president who was elected by acclamation on Tuesday, replacing Murray Kittle who has left to enter the service.

Editor Missing After Dieppe

Winnipeg, Oct. 6—(CUP)—Pilot Officer Paris Eakins, a former associate editor of The Manitoban, University of Manitoba newspaper, has been listed as missing following the Dieppe raid.

A graduate in arts of 1936, P. O. Eakins was a member of the staff of the Winnipeg Free Press and edited his station newspaper at Yorkton, Man., after his enlistment.

BIKES NOW, HORSES NEXT? AS RATIONING GETS SERIOUS

From horse-and-buggies to bicycles . . . from bicycles to automobiles . . . from automobiles back to bicycles again. There in one sentence you have the evolution of student transportation to and from the campus.

If you don't believe it speak to University Police Chief Robert D'Arcy. He ought to know. He's seen the University's rise and fall of the bicycle vogue since 1919.

"This term there are more than double the number of bicycles wheeled about the campus than last year," he said yesterday. "And if all goes well there will be no thefts this year just as there has been very few bicycles missing here for the past 23 years."

Speaking reminiscently, Chief D'Arcy recalled the University era when a travelling student in distress made for a black-smith shop and not a service station "In those days," he said, "there used to be long rows of bicycle racks standing in front of University College."

A survey taken yesterday revealed that most S.P.S. students had parked their bicycles in the vicinity of the Mining and Engineering buildings. A few machines were huddled beside three motorcycles.

Medical students had parked their two-wheelers outside the Medical building, while many U.C. bicycles were stacked up beneath the archway of the tower and surrounding the west entrance. A miscellany of old-and-new bicycles from a miscellany of faculties were leaning against the Hart House building.

J. D. Welsh, Hart House Hall Porter, said there had been only one bicycle reported missing this term. The machine had been left in the grounds until midnight when Officer Martin Robb discovered it and had locked it in the building overnight.

"The bewildered student reported his loss to us next morning and said it was very important that he find his bicycle," chuckled Mr. Welsh. "Man, was he tickled when we returned it to him."

Time For Quick Decision

Clarification of the Department of Labour proposal regarding students from Ontario and Quebec providing assistance to hard-pressed Saskatchewan farmers has now been made, and the men of the University are faced with the full details of the scheme.

They are asked to drop out of their courses for a month—courses not directly connected with Canada's war effort—and join in the fight to save a record wheat yield.

On the face of it, the decision would not appear to be a difficult one for able-bodied Canadians.

Financial arrangements in connection with the scheme—wages, transportation, accommodation—are apparently adequate, if not generous. University authorities have gone on record that academic allowance will in all probability be made. Problems of military leave for men in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps have not been fully surmounted yet, but we assume they are not insurmountable.

All of which boils the question to be answered today down to this: are the Artsmen—the forgotten men of the University war effort—going to help in a situation which the Minister of Labour has termed "citical"?

There is no point in debating whether it is a "citical" situation—whether the government is unjustified in setting the precedent of calling on Arts students to act as a seasonal stopgap at a time when labour shortages are bound to become increasingly recurrent. The fact is that the government which is directing every other phase of the war effort has made the request. Artsmen now have to decide whether they are going to fall in line with this request or go independently on with their studies. And a mass pursuance of the latter course would be tantamount to admission that artsmen, happily ensconced in an ivory tower with hot and cold running water, are no longer interested in co-operating with the rest of the nation.

Thus, we reiterate, the decision would not appear to be a difficult one for able-bodied Canadians.

A Man With Ideas

The University welcomes a distinguished student leader and spokesman—Allan Booth, chairman of the British delegation to the recent International Student Assembly at Washington.

Quiet, cultured, graduate of several British universities, Booth is a man to whom Toronto students should listen with attention. His ideas on the function and purpose of the university, which he set forth briefly last night at an informal meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, are intelligent and provocative. The picture of wartime university life in Great Britain which he drew in an interview with The Varsity yesterday was extremely informative. When he speaks in Hart House Theatre tomorrow he deserves a large and receptive audience.

Tons Of It

Monday's Varsity reported that current scrap, waste fats and paper about the University are disposed of in a manner consistent with sound economy and in the best interests of the war effort. This situation has not always been so as is evidenced by the accumulation of antediluvian junk which lies about the campus.

Times have changed and new lighting systems have been installed in every building on the campus which dates back before the beginning of this century. While we don't recommend ripping out walls to get at these things, protruding parts might well be attacked with a patriotic hacksaw and contributed to the war effort. Much gaslight-era equipment lies about waiting for this move. Then there are electrical fixtures of a more expansive age—Vic abounds in them—to which a pruning hook might well be taken. Most of their branches might well be disposed of while fittings from one or two could be conserved to supply light for the rooms now served half-heartedly by them.

Many a pipe which starts nowhere and leads nowhere hangs about the ceiling apparently for the sole purpose of supplying exercise bars for leprechauns. Leprechauns, while charming, are an unwarranted luxury in wartime.

More striking about campus is the immense quantity of iron and steel tied up in fences and railings. Vic shuts itself off from the world with a cast iron monstrosity, U.C. cuts off its quad with a wrought iron fence, Trinity does the same. Numerous lawncorners are protected—or someone hopes they are protected—by iron rails angled into them. There are rods and rods of this stuff alone. And they are so easy to climb over.

In all of these cases wood can be used for the job until replacement can be made after the war. In the case of the alleged grass-protectors the job could be done better by a wooden structure. The iron fences are so rigid that climbing them is easier than walking around. Wood lacks the rigidity which makes climing easy and also possesses splinters which should be very discouraging to trespassers. At the corner of Victoria College Library there is an even more effective booby-trap which looks like an innocent hedge. Anyone attempting to cross the corner and jump the hedge, however, runs the risk of being thrown on his face by a wire fence which runs through the middle.

If someone were brave and ambitious there must be a good ton of iron along the ridges of University College. There is at least one unused furnace on the campus, relic of the days before the cenarl heating plant.

These few examples should be sufficient to indicate the amount of scrap iron available on this campus. In less obvious places there must remain a large quantity of scrap both metallic and other kinds, relics of the good, wasteful old day when it was more convenient to replace then to repair and easier to forget an article in a store room than to dispose of it.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

In Union Is . . .

Petrillo

On a bank by a river a little bird moaned,
"Petrillo, Petrillo, Petrillo!"
And I said to him, "Dicky Bird, why do you moan,
'Petrillo, Petrillo, Petrillo!'
Can't you whistle or sing, little Birdie I cried;
Surely no one will stop you, has any one tried?"
With a shake of his poor little head, he replied,
"Petrillo, Petrillo, Petrillo!"

That quotation comes, I believe from the New York Sun, but I have not been able to trace it definitely.

It, however, sums up very well the situation which occurred this summer. The case of one Petrillo, head of the American Federation of Musicians, reached the public this summer with the scandal over his injunction against the making of any electrical transcriptions.

This is only the last of many unintelligent actions taken by this man, a man who claims to have the interests of music at heart. He is, frankly, nothing more than an astute businessman who found himself an unexploited field and proceeded to ride it to the limit.

With the advent of sound in the movies, pit orchestras became unnecessary (though they still torture one at legitimate productions). Musicians fell upon evil times. Petrillo proceeded to force the public to support a whole raft of bad players, under the guise of protecting them from starvation.

Actually most of these musicians would have been better off if they had turned to working with their hands: most of them were definitely mediocre and a few were far worse than that. The world had, actually, no place for such as they in its new scheme.

Therefore, when an amateur musician plays over the radio, it is only after a union member has been hired as a stand-by; when a great orchestra (the Boston Symphony) refused to unionize, it was forbidden (but the ban could not be enforced) to make more recordings or play over the radio. And those are only two of the accomplishments of Mr. Petrillo's union.

Ask any music-lover what his opinion of Mr. Petrillo's action is.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Because of a shortage of reporters, the Champus Cat and the Art Music and Drama service will be combined, since both are of a similar character. Today, as a public service, we present an easy guide to the opera.

Tragic Opera

This is an opera in which the neurotic heroine commits suicide after the megalmonaniac hero has got himself bumped off by meddling in other people's affairs. Thanks to the elimination of these two misfits the rest of the people in the cast have no more worries. This is the tragedy, since the composer knows only how to be morbid.

Comic Opera

This is one in which the same (or similar) megalomaniac hero, after spending two acts in solitary confinement (aided by an eighty-piece orchestra), finally escapes, and by leading a large band of soldiers (must have soldiers in an opera) gets many of them and various other people bumped off—this, in an opera, is screamingly funny. Furthermore, the hero and heroine have both survived and may therefore be married, and have several psychopathic progeny. This will supply the composer with material for a further morbid opera. Such a prospect pleases him, so the work in hand is called a comic opera.

OMEGA.

Editor's Note: Maybe we'd better struggle along and let AM & D and the Cat go their separate wayes.)

Those on the athletic committee include E. W. Rice, D. M. Girard, Jean Stirling, Helen Ricker. The dramatic committee is made up of M. Lacasse, W. E. Mercer, Dorothy Ardley, Sheilagh Ryan. Those on the music committee are J. L. McDowell, P. W. Sherk, Joan Foster, and Grace Tipling. The social committee includes E. U. Durricher, J. C. Toye, Jean Crawford and Beryl Pollock. The Library School representatives to the O.C.E. executive are Theresa Roy and Katherine MacKay.

Political Economy Club Will Live Once More

At 3:30 this afternoon there will be an organization meeting of the revived Political Economy Club in Room 101 of the Economics Building. All interested are invited to attend.

Such a society, for the purpose of bringing students of the Political Science and Economics course and others together to discuss informally what they learn in classes and its relation to what is going on in the world, has existed at this university from time to time in the past, and a group of students and staff wish to revive it this year, since they feel that it serves a useful purpose in these times.

Allan Booth Interviewed

take up the position of Assistant General Secretary. He came to this country as head of the British delegation to the International Student Assembly in Washington last month.

On his return to the United States at the end of the week Mr. Booth hopes to visit the American Middle West.

Military training in England takes up more than one full day of each male undergraduate's time each week, he estimated. In most Universities the students take a full day off each week for the main part of their drill. In other institutions students train for two half days a week with their Students' Training Corps or Air Training Squadron.

The question of acceleration of courses is one only recently introduced in England. The Medical course has been reduced by one year and terms are generally being increased—in some cases to the extent of having four instead of the usual three each year. All-out acceleration, doing away completely with vacations, such as has been introduced on many American campuses has not found favour in England. There is an economic reason behind this Mr. Booth pointed out. Students are now working in vacations where they didn't ordinarily before the war. They are needed, especially on the land. Christmas vacations are generally untouched. "At that time of year," he said, "There's so apt to be a blitz and it makes it very difficult to carry on University life."

One paradox of the age limitation put on university students is that enrolment has not fallen off greatly. Many younger students have enrolled. "Ages of 16½ are not uncommon," Mr. Booth said. Young fellows who ordinarily would be apprenticed on finishing school have felt that they could more profitably get started toward a University degree in the time betwen matriculation and army service.

Despite the effect of the manpower problem on the liberal arts courses, however, such education is being given to a different group—the prisoners of war. Through the International Student Service these men are being supplied with cultural media to fill in their ample idle time in prison camps.

Educational work in the army is being carried on by the Army Educational Council composed of men on the staff of universities. Reading guides are made available to men in the forces and where possible lecturers are sent out.

An Army Current Affairs Bureau has been formed and material is sent to officers to form a basis for the discussion of present developments and post-war problems with the troops. Classes are being organized to help officers carry out this work more effectively.

TODAY'S RIVALRY GREAT

Headline match of the day in the singles was the encounter between Bern McGraw and Earl Brown, both of U.C. McGraw won out 6-4, 6-4, but only after a hard-hitting struggle with his faculty mate. McGraw showed plenty of good tennis in this match and should go quite a piece along the championship trail. Chuck Saba of Vic, last year's doubles finalist, had to go all out to turn back Kenny Hoyle of U.C., also by the score of 6-4, 6-4.

Classes Start For Foil-Fiends

Fencing is a sport uncommon to the average Canadian youth, but nevertheless, there was quite a turnout at the first fencing class on Monday afternoon.

Charlie Walters our fence master is the best known fencer and most outstanding coaeh in Canada. He is an elderly man and does not appear active, but what he lacks in youth, he more than makes up in experienee. Novices or beginners may eease worrying if they wish to beeome fencers. The willingness to learn is all that is required.

Feneing is divided into three groups —Seniors, Juniors, and Noviees. The latter are invited to come to the Feneing Room in Hart House at 4:45 on Mondays and Thursdays. The first Novice tournament is slated for the second week in December, so you have time galore in which to learn, fellahs.

Speaking of Sport

By Bud Smith

TUNNEY'S TIRADE

Not so long ago Gene Tunney took time off from his job, as director of the U.S. Navy's physical fitness program, to speak at a banquet. During his discourse he criticised rather severely the competitive sport program being carried out by the military training camps of the States. Tunney took the view that the football, baseball, and basketball teams of places such as the Great Lakes Naval Training Station are a hindrance, rather than a help, to the war effort. The gist of his argument was that these sports did not help prepare a man for war well enough to warrant so much attention.

Well, Lieutenant-Commander Tunney is welcome to, and we might add, noted for, his opinions. In recent years his chief claim to fame has been his literary campaign against that ugly demon Tobacco, which according to Tunney, is responsible for the majority of the ills of the universe, including the sadly deficient physical condition of American youth. A healthy young American was of definite interest to Tunney then, as he obtained his livelihood by peddling the health products put out by that benevolent association known as Eastern Distilleries Ltd. One might almost suspect that Tunney was influenced in his crusade by a "Dead-men-can't-drink-our-liquor" attitude.

After this lengthy introduction we have aroused enough courage to say that we think Mr. Tunney is all wet—perhaps after falling in a pool of his former employer's products. Mayhap he didn't fall all the way in, as there is a grain of sense in his remarks on the elimination of a great deal of ballyhoo and publicity from the sporting events. But everyone should realize that competitive team sports are essential to the training of soldiers. In the first place they are a pleasant form of exercise, and people work much harder at something that is pleasant. Also most army operations require superlative teamwork. An example of this is afforded by the artillery teams. Gun crew action must be as co-ordinated and as rapid as the most complicated football play. Therefore trainees' team work and co-ordination must be continually improved; and to do so pleasant spare time activities such as football must be fully utilized. A man improves his condition a lot more playing basketball than he does peeling spuds on K.P.

And then there is that hideous cliche Morale. Everyone has heard so much about it, we're sure that they don't want to hear any more—and we're darn sure we don't want to write any more—so let's just forget about it. And having filled up enough space with Tunney let's just forget about him too.

COME NOW!

The first parade of the second battalion took place without too many irritations last Saturday afternoon, within earshot of the cheering crowds in Varsity Stadium. Thanks to the Grace of God, Lt.-Col. Wilson, etc., we were dismissed in the neighbourhood of four o'clock. With screams of delight a couple thousand football-famished students hurried to the Bloor Street Bowl assured of seeing at least half the final game—so they thought! Arriving at the gates of the temple they were met with stony stares and glinty glances. In brusque tones officials informed the cajoling cadets that they were too late, oh very late indeed—they should have been there at 2:15! That is akin to telling a Sing Sing "lifer" how nice Florida is in the winter time, and he really should have been there for the past season.

Now we would like to know just what comes off around the University. We have given up our Intercollegiate sports for the duration —in case you hadn't heard! Is it too much to ask that we be allowed to watch the Navy and Air Force (they seem to be the only ones who have the time) play on our own stadium? Yet I am asking you? The stands were half-empty at the time and the entrance of the C.O.T.C. boys would have caused no confusion—especially since the teams were taking their half-time rest at the moment. We, thanks to our Guiding Genius—The Varsity, saw the last half and we hasten to assure anyone who missed it that it was very, very crumby indeed and not at all worth seeing. But it is The-Principle-of-the-Thing you know, so summoning up all our outraged dignity (Boy, bring us one large outraged dignity—with plain water, please) we say again WHAT GOES ON AROUD THIS UNIVERSITY?

INTRODUCING . . .

Today you will find included on page three a little job known as SOCCER. This neophyte is entrusted to the guiding genius of Jim Paton who will endeavour to keep all and sundry posted on the doings of the shin-destroying sport. Sportswoman

By Aileen McNally

Yesterday "Old Sol" finally smiled indulgently on the tennis courts, to the great relief of harassed tennis directors, who are far behind in their schedules.

Over at U.C. the tournament got into the second round, which is expected to be finished today. P. H. and E. has also completed its initial round. Shirley Geldert—last year's champion—is out again with U.C. this year.

Around at St. Hilda's Lady Luck has not been so kind. The men's tournament is being run off there—and the girls have only been able to play a few matches to date. However Betty Hungerford hopes to get through the first round today. There are thirty-three entries over there.

Down St. Mike's way things are just getting started. Their chief trouble was lack of courts. However they too expect to get into the second round today. For their first tournament there are twenty-three entries no less.

Swinging back around the Crescent to Vic. we find that they, too, are hoping to get under way today. The courts were too wet yesterday. The entries at Vic. are down this year, only sixteen, but they have hopes of a strong team. Most of their oldsters have left but Virginia McLeod is still in batting the ball around.

On behalf of all tournament directors everyone participating is urged to be on time for their matches and to please avoid defaulting as much as possible. While not advocationg cutting classes, never-the-less tennis is one place where the old adage "the play must go on" applies—but definitely. . . .

So with this timely reminder we say tiirty for tonight.

SOCCER

By Jim Paton

Just by way of instruction we would like to point out that this column will endeavour to give complete eoverage to soceer this coming year. It is hoped that soccer managers will avail themselves of this opportunity to grab a little publicity now and then and also to communieate with their players.

FROM THE SOUTH—

Looks like Meds to beat this year. Off to an early start the medieal boys have gone after eonditioning in a big way. If we are not mistaken the doctors had more men out to the pre-season grind than any other team. Art Boyd and Doug Baird perennial all stars of Varsity soccer teams are back in addition to Joe Fyfe, Harry Mikaido and Ian Todd. Last year Meds just failed to make the play-offs by a whisker, having the misfortune to lose a hard fought game to Vic on a muddy rain-soaked field.

PREDICTION—

We hear tell of a couple of Jamaican boys turning out for U.C. If they come close to the style of Don Fonseca, who also hails from Jamaica, the Royal College might come up with a fair team.

NOTES—

Attention is called to announcements appearing in the box ad elsewhere on this page. Parties concerned especially note.

St. Mike's Sophs Defeat Freshmen

The traditional rugby eneounter between the St. Mike's Soph-Frosh took place yesterday afternoon on the back eampus. The Sophs, who were victorious last year as freshmen, once again triumphed, defeating the Frosh by the score of 12-7.

The Frosh seized the lead at the outset, by roughing Sophs on the kick-off. The Freshmen then recovered a fumble, and Moir, who was all-state back at a Detroit high school last year, fired a touchdown pass to Miller. Moir went around the end for the convert to put the Frosh in the lead 7-0.

Tucker blocked a freshman kick early in the second quarter, and Segrue fell on it in the end zone for a major score. Segrue then kicked the extra point. Dunlop led a long soph drive in the third frame, which culminated in his touchdown end run..

Committee Named

The President announced last night that he had named the following members of the Council of the Faculty of Arts to a committee to consider the problem of equivalence in academic standing to be allowed for the period of study which the students who go to Saskatchewan will miss: Dean S. Beatty, of the Faculty of Arts; A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University; W. J. McAndrew, Registrar of University College; H. Bennett, Registrar of Victoria College; J. N. Woodcock, Registrar of Trinity College; Rev. B. F. Sullivan, Registrar of St. Michael's College; and President H. J. Cody (ex officio).

The appeal for student aid in harvesting the western crop came to the University of Toronto Sunday in a telegram from the Dominion Minister of Labour, and the President of the University immediately replied to Ottawa with a telegram requesting specific details on three points of the proposed scheme, points clarifying the situation as regards transportation, allowance for board and lodging while working, and what supervision of students was to be provided.

The other day this tired old reporter was making her way toward the East door of S.P.S. for a lecture, and feeling most unhappy as she contemplated the large mass of door and the great amount of energy necessary to open it. As she reached the top step and hesitated before making the final effort, up rushed two gallant Frosh, who, however, stopped and asked fearfully, "Are you a Soph?" "No, a Senior," replied the U.C.ers, whereupon the door was flung open with great enthusiasm, but not without the added plea, "You won't tell the Sophs will you, that we came in the North door!" . . . No, WE WOULDN'T TELL A SOUL!

And while we're on the subject of Frosh, etc., it seems that last Friday was the day Vic Freshies get down on their knees to noble Sophomores. Three babes were wending their way along by Hart House, when what they had been fearing all along appeared in the form of two imposing young women purporting to be Sophs. "Kow-tow, and say the three times table for us," they crooned, "and we'll tell you a big secret." The poor little innocents got down on their knees to a considerable audience of Schoolmen, Medsmen, etc., and obeyed. . . . "And now for our secret," said the tormentors, "WE'RE SENIORS!"

Oh, the irony of it all!

We have heard tales of enthusiastic students before, but these have a new approach. We understand there are two students in University College who regularly spend the morning in Room 8, regardles of what goes on there. Well, THAT'S ONE WAY OF GETTING AN ALL ROUND EDUCATION.

But there's another who has fallen down on the job—

Across the road from the diggings of a certain Ed who likes his morning sleep undisturbed, lives a defense worker who owns a motorcycle. This intrepid motorcyclist attempts to start his machine evecy morning at 6:30 with such coughings, ehoakings, and protestations as only that Ed can describe. Well, the other morning the Ed gets fed up. (After all he could sleep in till 7:00 and still make his 8:30.) So he writes a little note to his neighbour: "Mr. Janes, my uncle in New Yark is seriausly ill. Would you kindly try to be more quietf"

Wierd and wonderful are the tales which drift into The Varsity offiee of the adventures of innocent young reporters on their first assignments. The latest concerns the gal who was sent to cover the meeting of the Trinity Literary Institute. Undaunted by the total lack of female attendance, the sweet young thing was finally tactfully ejected, but not before being accosted thus: "You are a woman, aren't you?"

(P.S.—It was a closed debate.)

The instructor in the Civic Day Nursery Course told the class yesterday that children's physical environment should be adapted to their size and mentality. In this way, they become self-reliant. Now we're wondering what people had in mind when they cut the legs off the chairs at The Varsity Night Office.

And from the realm of good advice comes this one picked up somewhere along the line: It is better to give than to lend, for it casts about the same.

Saskatchewan Suspends Arts Classes; Consideration in Exams To Be Given to Queen's and McMaster Volunteers

TRANSPORTATION ARRANGED

Kingston, Oct. 7 — (CUP) — More than 200 Arts and Commerce men from Queen's University are heading West to help with the Saskatchewan harvesting, it was announced today.

The warrants necessary for transportation arrangements will be available on Thursday morning. These will be issued either to Toronto or Montreal, which two points will be embarkation centres for students travelling west. Thus the men will have a chance to pick up the necessary clothing, bedding, and so on before leaving. The authorities desire that all students be on their way by Saturday.

Due to the scarcity of rooms in Kingston, the University is paying half the rent of the students' rooms for a maximum period of four weeks, in order to hold them.

The students are to be given credit also for four weeks of military training while in Saskatchewan, and are expected to return at the end of this period. They may stay until Nov. 15 if they wish, however.

No classes are to be cancelled while the students are away, but special consideration will be given in the Final Examinations.

McMaster Students Ready

Hamilton, Oct. 8 (Thurs.)—(CUP) —Approximately 80 to 100 students from other than science courses at McMaster University will leave tonight for harvesting work in Saskatchewan. These students expressed their willingness to do farm work at a mass meeting Monday following receipt of a telegram to university authorities from Labour Minister Mitchell.

A government official will be on hand today to provide the required number of transport warrants to take the students to the Prairies. University authorities announced that it is expected that more students will go later, but arrangements are not yet definite.

The Faculty made an announcement assuring the students that some fair method would be worked out whereby no student would be penalized for responding to this call. "Experience afterwards will guide the authorities," the announcement stated.

Saskatchewan Classes Closed

Saskatoon, Oct. 7 — (CUP) — All classes at the University of Saskatchewan will be suspended until Oct. 19 with the exception of those in Medicine, it was announced yesterday, on the first day of the autumn term.

Many of the male students have been organized in groups for harvesting, while a number of the co-eds are cooking for the harvesters. Others have gone home after attending one day's lectures.

Arts Council Decision Will Satisfy Staff

Professors interviewed on the prospect of students losing a month of their academic year to work in Saskatchewan wheat fields were generally agreed that if the measure was necessary, arrangements to make up for time lost would have to be made.

No department had decided to cancel any lectures and few had any idea last night how many members of their classes had applied. Most department heads declared themselves content to abide by the decision of the committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts.

Rowat of U.C. Calls Meeting

Mass meetings of the University College Literary and Athletic Society and of the Victoria College Union were held yesterday to discuss government proposals to enlist student help for the Saskatchewan wheat harvest. Another meeting of the U. C. Lit. will be held in the Junior Common Room at 1 p.m. today.

The V.C.U. passed unanimously a motion reading: "We are willing and anxious to co-operate with the authorities in this emergency and we are sure that as many Victoria students as possible will go to Saskatchewan if suitable military and academic arrangements can be made."

No definite motion was passed by the U. C. Lit., but a show of hands revealed that approximately 60 per cent of about 250 men present intended to make the western trip.

Nurses Conduct A Refresher Course

The School of Nursing of the university is this week conducting a refresher course in Home Nursing and War Emergencies for graduate nurses who are members of the Red Cross Emergency Nursing Reserve. This is one of several such courses planned by the School of Nursing for the coming year.

A group of 70 nurses from 42 centres in Ontario are enrolled in the course. They are being trained to instruct non-professional members of the Emergency Reserve in the care of their own households and those of their neighbours in the event of an epidemic, disaster or other emergency.

Lectures and demonstrations are being given by specialists in the subject and discussions are being held which will enable the nurses to teach the groups in their own communities.

The Emergency Reserve, a voluntary association, was first organized in British Columbia about a year ago

ALL UNIVERSITY FALL DANCE

The ticket sale for the All University Fall Dance (Oct. 23) will take place in the Debates Room of Hart House Tuesday, Oct. 13. Five Hundred tickets will go an sale at 12:45 p.m. and the balance at 5:45 p.m. The House Committee has ruled that only one ticket shall be sold to a person upon presentation of both his National and University Registration Cards. No person will be admitted to the dance without a ticket and no tickets will be sold at the door.

Pointers For Farmers Come Out Of The West

As a service for the students who have volunteered to help in the harvest, The Varsity has gathered information about harvesting from students who have worked on farms in the past.

Exactly what work the students who may be allowed to go to Saskatchewan will do has not been determined and will undoubtedly rest with the individual farmer concerned. However, the work is fairly standardized, students with harvesting experience said.

Stooking consists of stacking sheaves of cut grain in piles (stooks). It is not heavy work unless the grain is wet, but it requires much bending.

The actual work of threshing depends upon the type of machine used, but it will involve tossing sheaves into the machine and carrying away heavy grain sacks when the wheat comes out the other end.

The working day on a farm starts sometime between 5:00 and 8:00 in the morning and continues until 8:00 or 9:00 in the evening. Temperature varies, ranging from very frosty in the morning to very hot in the afternoon to chilly at night. Snow may be expected, even at this comparatively early date.

Students are advised to base their wardrobes on utility and warmth. Denim or drill trousers are suggested, but "bib" type overalls are especially recommended.

Light full-length underwear, heavy gloves, heavy socks, old sweaters, windbreakers and raincoats are on the must list. Boots, rather than shoes, are advised, because the work will be done in knee-high stubble.

Farmer-students also advise bringing along adhesive tape, iodine and eye wash (because the work is very dusty) and possibly sun-glasses.

Sleeping on the coaches on the way to Saskatchewan will be difficult for many, but it can be done. A good tip to remember is to remove your shoes and loosen all tight clothes before "retiring."

The food situation will loom large and hungrily in the minds of the farming students, and authorities say the food will be plentiful and good. Breakfast is at 6 a.m., lunch at 11, dinner at 1 p.m., another lunch at 4:30, and supper at 8, according to Jim Graham of University College.

HEADS OF ARTS COLLEGES ANXIOUS TO AID PLAN

Heads of the four Arts colleges in the University yesterday indicated that, subject to certain qualifications, each college stands ready to co-operate to the best of its ability with the Government plan to send students to assist in the Saskatchewan wheat harvesting.

Principal M. W. Wallace, of University College, said, "When the government of Canada requests us to help furnish a certain number of workers for the wheat fields, it is our bounden duty to co-operate. This is a most serious move from the point of view of the student. His principal duty is to study. But in a national emergency it is necessary for him to interrupt his studies, a most unfortunate necessity."

"I assume only a small number will be regarded as qualified, by experience or physical fitness," he said. "Men who are not so qualified would be of no use. But even for those perfectly suited, the work will cause a very, very serious interruption of their studies."

Dr. W. T. Brown, of Victoria College, said, "I think the men of this University do not need any encouraging in this matter. They are willing to set aside personal convenience if they can be shown there is real need. I am sure if the University enters into this arrangement, Victoria will send her share."

Dr. Brown, however, did not express unqualified approval of the plan. "Knowing there are many Canadians in the armed services who have not signed for service outside Canada," he said, "it would appear to me that they might have been sent to help the farmers out.

"One thing I do feel: the Arts work of the University is just as important, as a war service, as any other department, and this call seriously disrupts the Arts work. This war is to be won by brains, and it is the function of the Arts course to develop qualities of mind that are needed in officers of war services."

Rev. F. H. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College, expressed general agreement with the plan insofar as it was defined yesterday. "We certainly ought to encourage those physically fit to assist in the harvesting. We will certainly do anything possible to see that they don't suffer academically."

"It is felt that a medical exam should be given to all volunteers before they are accepted, and that the C.O.T.C. should give leave of absence to its members. But I think these arrangements will be taken care of by the committee in charge."

Rev. T. P. McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College, said, "Undoubtedly the farmers of the west require additional help in order to harvest the wheat crop. It is expected that a considerable number of students who are fitted for strenuous work and who, especially if they are out-of-town students, obtain the permission of their parents, will volunteer for the task."

"So far as I am aware, the Chief Employment Officer has not provided for supervision of the student workers," Father McLaughlin continued. "The university authorities should insist upon the need for such."

STUDENTS' VARSITIES AVAILABLE AT PRESS

There will be a small pile of Varsities outside the north door of the University Press for students who find it most convenient to pick up a Varsity there. Such students are asked not to open the bundles which are left there for the various University Buildings.

Professional Students Declared Ineligible By Special Committee

Special Academic Instruction Lasting Three Weeks to Be Provided on Return; Arrangements With National Defence Department Not Yet Completed; Volunteers Must Be Physically Fit

REGISTRAR STILL ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS

Clarification of questions connected with student co-operation in the government request for help with Saskatchewan harvesting operations was made yesterday following a meeting of a special committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts.

Applications for harvesting will be received at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall, until further notice, A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, announced last night.

Chief points of question clarified by the committee were: groups of students eligible to apply for farm work; academic consideration to be given volunteers in the scheme; method whereby military leave for volunteers may be forthcoming; and physical fitness of applicants.

"Since the telegram received from the Minister of Labour specifically mentions students in 'Arts, Commerce and Law' as possible volunteers for the Saskatchewan harvest, and excludes students in courses 'directly training for war work,' it has been decided that students in the professional faculties and Arts students in groups 'C' and 'D' of the honours courses are not eligible to apply," Mr. Fennell said.

Following the meeting of the committee, appointed by President H. J. Cody to consider applications of volunteers and other related matters, Mr. Fennell authorized publication of the following statement on behalf of the committee:

"1. The Department of Labour has been asked to arrange with the Department of National Defense for the granting of leave of absence from military training for students who volunteer as harvesters for the period that they are so engaged, as well as for a period of a few weeks after their return, to assist them in catching up their academic work.

"2. All students will be required to return to the University on or before Monday, Nov. 9.

"3. Special instruction will be provided for these students, commencing Nov. 9, and continuing for a period of three weeks.

"4. The Revising Committee will be authorized to give special consideration in determining the results of annual

Latest Statistics On U. of T. Volunteers

Latest figures available at 4 p.m. yesterday on the number of applications already received from students volunteering to assist in the Saskatchewan harvest were as follows:

First Year Arts	64
Second Year Arts	112
Third Year Arts	56
Fourth Year Arts	47
Other Faculties	25
Total ...	304

Of these applications, 22 were from first-year Pass Arts students, 6 from second-year Pass Arts students, and 15 from third-year Pass Arts students.

Co-eds Commend Western Project

Co-ed opinion today proved to be almost unanimously in favour of the Government's harvesting project. The most frequent comment this reporter received being "It's a darn good idea."

"It's a splendid thing that the boys are going to co-operate but they should be allowed something on the scholastic end," was the comment of Norma Pike, II Vic. Enid Gallie, III U.C., volunteered "It's a wonderful idea. We've got to get the crops in."

Most of the co-eds felt this was the students' chance to "make good" in the war effort. As Gloria Brontman, fV U.C., said, "They're doing one of the

Plea For Harvesters From Varsity Meets With Approval Of Students

Whole-hearted approval, qualified by concern for their military and academic standing, was expressed by most students yesterday regarding the Canadian Government's plea for student harvesters of the Saskatchewan wheat crop.

Don Rowat, President of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, was emphatic in his approval of the scheme. "I hope to be going myself," he remarked, "and urge others to do likewise. The Council of Arts has considered possible difficulties and arrangements will certainly be made."

Tom Nixon, President of the Victoria College Union, who also hopes to go West, warned an enthusiastic mass meeting of the Union that the work would be difficult. "It won't be any picnic," he cautioned. "I understand harvesters work anywhere from 10 to 18 hours a day, seven days a week. For this reason the University authorities will probably allow only men in A1 physical category to take the jobs."

"It is a very practical suggestion," said H. V. R. Short, head of Trinity College, "and it is near enough to the beginning of term that it will not be seriously prejudicial to our academic work."

Jack Casey, President of the St. Michael's Students' Council, felt that only experienced and able-bodied students would be of use in the farm work. Other St. Michael's students expressed support of the government plan, termed "the student's answers to the critics of his 'ivory tower' isolationism" by Vice-President D. G. Rohr.

The Harvest Waits

Students have had another day in which to consider government proposals that Artsmen help in the Saskatchewan harvest. In the past twenty-four hours the picture has cleared considerably, although it remains blurry in some of its details. But the main issue stands as it did yesterday—are the Artsmen going to respond to an appeal from constitutional authority, or are they going to exercise their prerogative of ignoring the appeal and carrying on their sheltered studies while a bumper wheat crop rots in the west?

There are some who question whether the number of students which can be made available for the work from the universities of Ontario and Quebec on notice of less than a week will be sufficiently large to help materially in so large a project. Others suggest that the work should be done by military trainees near the harvest-fields, rather than by students. Others believe that the Artsmen is to valuable a cog in the social mechanism to be used for work more suitable to those with better physical and poorer mental equipment; to which still others reply that there is no place for an Arts Faculty on a wartime campus anyway, and the sooner its students get into overalls or khaki the better for all concerned.

Such debate is interesting and many-sided. But it has no immediate bearing on the issue in hand. If the government did not need assistance from students it would not seek it. The men who are directing the disposition of manpower—both military and civilian—of the nation are more expert in that field than the average student, or, for that matter, the average faculty member. It is their judgment which we must accept in the matter, if we are to count ourselves integrated parts of the nations.

Therefore, the one choice which seems to remain is to comply with the government request—that men "reasonably physically fit for harvesting work" enrolled in "agricultural or courses not directly training for war work" act upon the statement: "It is desired that as many as possible leave at earliest possible date."

It is understandable that students with a college career at stake may be hesitant in sacrificing a month of study which may cost them their academic year. And this hesitancy may well be emphasized upon perusal of the amendments to the National War Services Regulations which are printed elsewhere in this issue. But when Canadians are asked to sacrifice a month of study, or even a whole academic career, they need scarcely hesitate when they compare that sacrifice with the sacrifice of the men of Dieppe and Hong Kong.

And it may well be that the sacrifice involved is not so great after all. The writer of this editorial was permitted yesterday to attend a meeting of a committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts appointed to deal with the government proposal as it relates to the students of this university. He was struck by the spirit which prevailed there. University officials sitting on the committee were unanimously sympathetic to the student view-point, and eager to make every reasonable concession possible in order that students would suffer no academic or military penalty for their co-operation. Although it is impossible, in view of the complexity of the administrative organization of the Faculty of Arts, to lay down in committee full and binding regulations concerning equivalence and concession, The Varsity is in a position to assure its readers that the heads of the University have student welfare at heart and will take every necessary step for the protection of student wellbeing.

Old Enough To Vote

This week students are making decisions affecting their academic career which they have never been called upon to make before. They are gathering in mass meetings and passing resolutions which their own representatives carry to faculty committees. Behind closed doors where university officials decide matters of policy, undergraduates rise to take part in the debate.

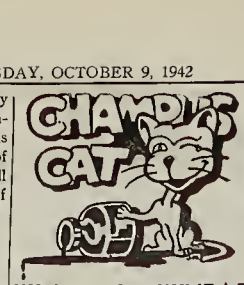
A maturity of judgment is required of every individual today which would have been unheard of even a few months ago. The faculty has decided that the student's relations with the government in wartime are largely his own concern, and have left him to state his own case. The next few months will show whether he is ready to assume his new responsibilities.

The Clouds Lift

Government regulations in relation to student military status are published on page 4 today. They do much to clear the cloud of public distrust which has overhung University students, particularly those students not enrolled in war courses, since the war began more than three years ago.

In the past, those congenitally opposed to universities have utilized the tiresomely trite truism, "There's a war on," to step up their recurrent campaigns against public expenditure on behalf of higher learning. They have implied that college students—particularly students in Arts—are a scatter-brained and useless group at any time, but particularly so when half the world is war-torn, and the other half engaged in manufacturing at top speed the material of battle.

Now the government has drawn a clear line as to which students are worthwhile members of the community and which are not. It specifically mentions Arts as one of the courses of study successful pursuance of which entitles one to enjoy certain privileges in connection with deferment of military training. Other courses so mentioned are those in science and commerce. Students of the professional faculties are grouped in the most roundabout category of those "pursuing a course of studies the successful completion of which, in the opinion of the Board would be in the national interest. . . . "



The government stand is a firm and just one. Students who fail an academic year, or otherwise fail to satisfy the requirements of their university, will be automatically reported to the appropriate governmental authorities and will be called up for service immediately. In the meantime they must undergo satisfactory military training.

These regulations, then, constitute a privilege which cannot be abused. And as long as the government elects to follow this policy in connection with students' relation to the war, there is no call for any member of the public to point an academically-unwashed finger and remark that students have no place in wartime. It is true that there is a war on. Successful students are now officially considered to have a place in that war . . . "in the national interest or in aid of the successful prosecution of the war."

Keeping Them Posted

The war has called many men away from the campus before they had intended to go. Students they knew, professors who used to lecture to them are carrying on here, and the students who have entered the services would like to hear of their doings.

The Varsity carries news of campus activities. Here's a suggestion. why not give a soldier-friend a subscription to his Undergraduate Newspaper? To men on active service the only cost is that of postage. Unfortunately, postal regulations do not permit the service to men overseas; but for men stationed in Canada we believe it would be a gift much appreciated.

WHEE FOR WHEAT

University to Be Closed for Two Months; Co-eds to Work in War Industries

WHESTWHARO HO!

The Champus Cat, it was reliably reported last night in a communique from The Varsity office, has donated seven of his eight remaining lives to the Dominion Government's harvest campaign. (It is understood that the Cat has used up the equivalent of at least one lifetime since he entered the University of Toronto in 1935.) The Cat's seven other lives have joined several hundred thousand University of Toronto freshmen who, by ox-cart* and dog sled*, have undertaken the arduous trek to the golden wheatfields of whestern Canada. "Whe are going to whcap some whcat," a rather young First Year Pass Arts student whas heard to remark to his mother.

It is understood that, since nearly 95 percent of the TTC Carlton route is composed of freshmen, the route whill be discontinued and the street cars put on other runs. Competent observers have declared that in a few days Toronto should resemble the ghost towns of the badlands of Texas. Officials of the Department of Transport have announced that special trains whill be run to carry the patriotic reapers. To alleviate the shortage of coaches it might be necessary to confiscate the rolling stock believed to be in use in the cloakroom of one of Toronto's better known teaching hospitals. (Medical students are asked not to comment.)

One imaginative Varsity feature whriter pictured the University, bleak and cold, whith its empty buildings standing like barren, leafless trees against the dull, cold October sky, with nothing but co-eds to break the dull monotony of a manless whorld. Several hundred co-eds stormed the President's office, shouting "Bring 'em back alive!" "Vive le Sport!" and "Oh, whoe is us!" Some of Whitney Hall's more pessimistic inmates are said to have laid in supplies of arsenic and old lace to help while awhay the wheary whinter evenings.

Premier Heartburn, on being interviewed by Hex Nilssen, News Editor and ace reported of The Varsity, said: "Oboyoboyoboy!!! Think of all the powher whe whill save from guys not burning the midnight oil!!!"

After setting up the government announcement, Etaoin Shrdlu, The Varsity linotypist is supposed to have reached for his hat whith the comment: "Four bucks a day!!! That's more than you guys pay me in a wheek!!!"

Shamus O'Malley, Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, spiked a vicious rumor that whas being circulated among the staff, to the effect that the paper whould be taken over by co-eds and that men whould be barred. The Women's Editor refused to commit herself—"Just whait and see," whas her only comment.

HART HOUSE LIBRARY CLOSES FOR CHECK-UP

The closing of Hart House Library at noon Tuesday which puzzled many students and amazed those who were ousted from their comfortable positions was due to a special checking of the library, Herbert Christie, II U.C., curator of the library, explained.

It is usual to have two checks of the library during the year, one near Christmas and another in May. The current one was thought necessary since the library has been open during the summer.

CO-EOS VOICE APPROVAL OF HARVESTING PROJECT

the U. C. Lit. expressed unanimous agreement on the government harvesting proposal, although several stressed complications which should first be ironed out. John Wood, President of the Fourth Year, suggested that participation in the scheme should be made compulsory for all arts students excepting those in the government-subsidized Honour Science courses. "If the affair were made altogether compulsory, we would be saved a great deal of uncertainty and mental agony," he said.

Geoff Johnson, U. C. Literary Director, was entirely in favour of the proposal. "I think that a great deal of the criticism levelled against the plan is unfair," he said. "I have a great deal of faith in the authorities in these matters and I'm sure we will all be compensated for lectures and C.O.T.C. drill mised. The question marks will be cleared up somehow."

Jim Lillico, U.C. Social Director, stressed the importance of more information regarding the plan and its effects on academic standing. "This whole thing has come through pretty quickly," he stated, "and we have a right to be given more complete information as soon as possible. On the whole, however, I think the plan is an excellent one."

Enthusiasm for the plan ran high in the Faculty of Law where Law Club President Bob Sedgewick estimated that more than half of the students had signed up following a meeting yesterday.

"Scattered opinion from the students seems to show that practically all of them would like to go," Sedgewick said, "but they're worried about what consideration they will receive on their return."

Commerce and Finance students interviewed hesitated to leave their course for a month. Aubrey Lemp, I C. and F., felt the opening month of the First Year course provided a grounding on which the understanding of all the succeeding work depends.

Several Trinity College men felt lost lecture hours should be made up to the student-farmers instead of giving them "unearned" academic credits.

Many students expressed willingness to go if accompanied by enough of their classmates to force cancellation of lectures. School and Medical students interviewed expressed envy of the artsmen and wished applications from men in professional courses could be accepted.

"From an academic point of view I think it's a poor idea," said one student who already put in his application. "I think the trainees out west should harvest the crop."

examination of each student concerned.

"5. Each student applying must satisfy the University Health Service that he is physically fit for the strenuous work which he will be required to do if accepted as a harvester.

"6. A request has been forwarded to Ottawa for a sufficient number of railway warrants which, it is hoped, will be available on Friday, Oct. 9, in time for an announcement concerning them to be made in Friday's issue of The Varsity."

In addition to the members of the special committee appointed by President Cody—Dean S. Beatty of the Faculty of Arts, Mr. Fennell, and the registrars of the four Arts College—two undergraduates took part in yesterday's discussion. They were Don Rowat, president of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, and Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union. Rowat and Nixon presented the student view-point on the harvesting question, stressing general student desire to co-operate, coupled with a desire for further details on the academic and military consideration to be given volunteers.

Student Labour Club To Hold First Meeting

A new campus organization, the Student Labour Club of the University of Toronto, will hold its first meeting in the Women's Union tonight at 7:45.

Bill Hanley, president of the new society, gives as the main purpose of the club the development among students of a greater consciousness of the issues at stake today.

Problems of education, war service, and the function of the university in wartime will be discussed at this opening organization meeting.

The executive invites all interested students to attend this and subsequent meetings.

President Cody Speaks At Committee Banquet

President H. J. Cody gave a short address at the Hart House Committees Banquet in the Great Hall last night, discussing the scheme for student labour in the Saskatchewan wheat-fields and emphasizing the difficulties of running such affairs in accordance with military regulations concerning universities.

He also emphasized the necessity for serious work on the part of students, and he exhorted the Hart House Committee Members to plead with their fellow-students for more concentration on studies.

Willinsky Provides Upset In Interfaculty Tennis Tourney

Medical Student Defeats Crane of St. Mike's; Sol Moses Puts Up Stiff Fight Against Rusted

TODAY'S DRAWS LISTED

J. Willinsky, of Meds, turned a major upset in yesterday's play of the Interfaculty Tennis competition, when he defeated Roger Crane, of St. Mikes, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Crane was seeded No. 5 and had been looked upon as a major threat in the tournament. Another favourite, Ian Rusted, had to exert himself to the utmost to turn back the challenge of Sol Moses. Moses used his powerful forehand to great advantage and had a commanding lead in both sets before succumbing 6-4, 6-4.

Results of yesterday's matches:

SINGLES

Jones defeated Moses 6-0, 6-1. Tseng defeated Brown 6-1, 6-2. Jacob defeated Whiting 6-1, 6-3. Willinsky defeated Crane 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Boyd defeated Bateman 6-1, 6-3. McGraw defeated White 6-0, 6-3. Stricker and Moorehead of School also put up quite a battle against Berrin and Brown winning the first 6-2 but losing the match 2-6 and 3-6. As expected, Pete Bryce and Bill Waugh, finalist favourites, had a bit of trouble with Pawling of School and McGraw of U.C., but made the quarter-finals with 6-1 and 6-2 games.

Speaking of Sport

By Pete Aykroyd

COACHES SUPREME

The back campus has been haunted lately by a man who has travelled in rugby circles around Canada for the past 22 years. This gentleman needs no introduction to Toronto pigskin rooters; he is none other than the great MIKE RODDEN.

Mike has a record to his credit that cannot be surpassed by any other living Canadian rugby mentor. Coach of the Hamilton Tigers for 14 years, he managed to turn out eight Canadian Senior Rugby Champions during that period. In 1928, the Tigers were so good that they used to go around before game time and place bets on the probable score of the game. If they bet the score at 30-0, they would stop as soon as they reached that score and fumble the ball from there.

For 19 consecutive years, concurrent with his other duties, Mike coached the U.T.S. Senior squad, and in 1933, guided them to a Junior Canadian Championship. Among this championship group of youngsters were many boys who later showed true form in Intercollegiate and Big Four circles. Art Stollery, Jack Rayner, Doug MacPherson and the Burkhart brothers are a few who hit the headlines in later years.

Toronto took a crack at professional rugby back around 1934, and it was Mike who was at the helm of both professional teams. The Crosse and Blackwell Chefs were the first experiment in rugby which used "scratch for each match" as its incentive. Lionel Conacher, the "Big Train," and classical example of versatility, was the outstanding member of this squad. Lionel, so the story goes, used to kick the ball so high that it would disappear through the arc of the floodlight and appear again in some unexpected sector of the oval. In a classical tussle with Rochester Packers, the "Big Train" kicked the ball 12 times to average 85 yards. Few people have equalled this performance by the present M.P.P.

Mike organized another team the following year, around Conacher and called them the Wrigley Spearmints. No doubt the backers had something to do with the name. At any rate it is reputed that Conacher received $125.00 a minute for his services on the sward, and, as the strawberry remarked as it was bedded down for the winter, "That ain't hay."

Before the Rodden Reminiscences are closed, it might be interesting to recall that three members of the Spearmint line were pro wrestlers. The artists of the grunt and groan who grappled on the green for the greasy gherkin were none other than Jumpin' Joe Savoldi, Gus "Golden Boy" Sonnenberg and Mayes "Iron-man" McLean.

What's all this got to do about Speaking of Sport? Nothing, except that Mike Rodden will in all probability be coaching Junior School this year.

SOME SPORT

And just while we are speaking of sport it should be some sport out west in harvest time. Someone should donate a Seed Trophy and have the Seed Trophy race. All the Artsmen who go to work with the pitchfork could race to see who pitched the most grain in a day. Those who worked on combine harvesters would have their points doubled to compensate. Such a headline as "VICS POINTS CUT ½ IN SEED TROPHY RACE" might greet the Varsity readers in mid-October.

C'EST LA GEURRE

The interfaculty loop is bound to take a rap on the bean if a large exodus of Artsmen takes place. What of the U.C. team? What of the Vic team? What of Trinity and St. Mike's?

See tomorrow when brother Conant will probably speculate on "What's to do about harvesting."

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Now that the weatherman is on our side, things around College circles are being organized and tennis tournaments are well on their prospective ways. P. H. and E. are ready to go into their third round now that M. Finlayson has chalked up a victory over M. Pelling to the tune of 6-1, 6-2. Today, on that front, we'll see Connie O'Connor play Ruth Carleton at 8:30; whilst Zoie Christie and M. Liston will battle it out at 4:00 P.M.. Come along and give the girls a hand if you can spare the time.

U.C., Vic., St. Hilda's and St. Mike's are all finished their first rounds and have set the times for their second rounds today. Betty Greenleaf won from B. Ander by default; while R. Margeson defeated B. Stanley. Betsy Mosbaugh also advanced into the second round by emerging victorious over Carewe. Agnes Fisher as well has a win to her credit. We are sorry to hear that Shirley Geldert will not be able to play for her team this year to defend her last-year's hard earned crown. Audrey Gibson will carry on for her as arrangements now stand.

Over Victoria way, Virginia Rappell MacLeod defeated Rowena Smith; Shirley Pearse won from Mary Davidson; B. Weall triumphed over Lois Lloyd; Yvonne Baillie defeated Florence Whiting; Isabelle Eastman tallied higher than Eleanor Hammond; while Jean Southworth and Aileen Smith tied and will play again today.

St. Hilda's winners of the first round are Barbara Conway, Dorothea Wedd, Joy Winters, Marg. Alexander, and Marg. Smith. St. Mike's first round found Louise Hart-Smith, Martha Gravelle, Rosemary Cunningham, and Pat O'Donaghue victorious. Which girls will persevere to the end is still a matter of speculation. We shall just have to be patient and await the results. Meanwhile, let's not forget about this Friday's golf tournament at St. Andrew's.

Recommend Gymnastics For Potential Officers

In an interview Tuesday, Charlie Zwygard disclosed the fact that gymnasties is strongly recommended by Major Lane of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps for all men who consider themselves potential officer material. "Most men who go to Brockville from here are sound in the legs, but many are weak in the chest," said Charlie, demonstrating with a playful bear-hug.

Officers-in-training at Brockville are expected to be able to chin themselves 25 times, do a series of push-ups, and climb obstacles 8 or 10 feet high, carrying a 60-lb. pack. Weight lifting, rope-climbing, and gymnastics in general are calculated to devclop the necessary muscles.

Up to now turn-outs at the regular gym instruction classes at 6 p.m. have been poor (no more than 10 per night), but Charlie expects attendance to pick up when regular P.T. classes start. Men who work-out regularly will receive one P.T. credit a week. Any Volunteer Instructors who want to help with the classes will be welcome.

Over Sixty "T" Holders Now On Active Service

List of Former Rugby, Soccer and Hockey Stars Suggests Hypothetical All-Star Varsity Teams

DREAM TEAM

By Jim Paton

Just in case you're interested and we know you will be. Did you know that well over 60 ex-Varsity athletes are now on active service? They represent the cream of Varsity's athletic crop of the past few years and nearly all hold the coveted First Colours of the university. The University letter is only awarded to those athletes who have been a member of a championship intercollegiate team or who have won a place on a senior team in one of the four major sports, rugby, hockey, soccer or basketball.

Glancing down the list of name and it's a long one, a beautiful dream team takes form. Of course these lads weren't in their football prime simultaneously but it's a sweet team. How is this for a backfield? Sinclair, Isbister, Grey, Coulter, Rowland, and Somers. Long John Sinclair, one of Canada's outstanding kickers of all time, is now a Flight Lieutenant in the R.C.A.F. Medical Corps. Cam Gray, popular Varsity team captain for a number of years holds a corresponding rank in the R.C.A.M.C. Bobby Isbister and "Bee" Rowland are both Lieutenants in the Navy while Lou Somers and Bobby Coulter are with the R.C.A.F. as Pilot Officers.

Up on the line we have a couple of smart outsides in Syd Reynolds and Andy Henderson. Syd, no stranger to Toronto football fans, is a Flying Officer with the R.C.A.F. while Andy has three up for the R.C.A.M.C. Just for good measure we have on hand Captain Mel "Shoe String" Elson of the R.C.E. to confound the opposing backfield. As snaps there are Flight Lieutenants Doug Turner and Al Williams both with the R.C.A.F. Doug you will remember was nominated all star snapback of the I.R.F.U. when he played for Argos a few seasons ago. Turney Williams, a great lineman like his brother Al, is a flight lieutenant with the R.C.A.F. Medical Corps.

You can fill in the other positions with Lieut. Don Mumford of the Signals, an outstanding plunging middle; Lieut. Bill Bryers with the artillery; Flying Officer Bill Bodrug; Lieut. Ian MacLachlan of the R.C.A.M.C., member of the '37 championship team; Lieut. Norm Beattie of the R.C.E.; C. M. MacLachlan, a lieutenant in the navy, who also played intercollegiate hockey; B. R. Shuken, a lieutenant with the Canadian Dental Corps; "Chuck" MacLean and George Meen, both late of Argos, and many others.

Don Boxer, spark plug of the Trinity team last year, is now a Probationary Sub Lieutenant with the navy and is still chasing the old pigskin every Saturday afternoon.

best things they can for the war." On this point one sophomore stated, "If University students pitch in the general publie won't have so much to criticize."

Others were worried about the academic arrangements. Margaret Matchett, IV U.C., remarked, "It's a good thing if the profs can arrange it so that the boys won't miss too much," and Mary Lewis, I Vic., replied, "It's a very good idea but for myself I wouldn't consider it."

"Pass arts boys ought to go," was the opinion of Madeleine Armour, II Trinity, or as Barbara Allen, I U.C., said, "Boys from arts and commerce should go. I definitely think it is important enough."

There were some who were against the plan. "It's silly. The army out west should do it" and "The shortage of men is bad enough already," were typical observations.

Jean Battley, II Trin., joined the majority saying, "It's good experience for them." Sonya McMane, II, Trin., also agreed. "It's a good idea, but do you think we have the right to say that the boys should go? It's up to themselves to decide."

Status Of Students Revised By New Regulations

Several Rulings Changed By Order In Council Clarified By Registrar

Students Who Fail to Satisfy Academic Requirements to Be Called Immediately; Certain Courses Subject to Qualification that Their Completion Is in National Interest; Restrict Change of Course

GRADUATE WORK RESTRICTED

New regulations recently approved by Order in Council concerning the status of male university students in relation to compulsory military training were announced yesterday by A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University.

He pointed out that several of the changes included in the new rulings were entirely different from any previous ruling on university men's status.

"Principal changes embodied in the revision," he said, "are as follows:

"Sub-section 1. (a) provides that while enrolment is authorized by the National War Services Board in certain courses of study specifically mentioned, other courses are subject to the qualification that their satisfactory completion is in the national interest or in aid of the successful prosecution of the war.

"Sub-section 3. (c) contains an absolutely new regulation. Those students who may be reported to the District Officer Commanding and the appropriate Divisional Registrar as having failed to satisfy the academic requirements of the university either during the session or at the final examination will be immediately called up for military training.

"Sub-section 5. places a restriction upon a student who desires to change from one course to another, and sub-section 6. places a restriction upon a student who desires to enrol for post-graduate work.

"Sub-section 7. renders every student liable to be called out for military training upon normal completion of the course of studies in which he is now enrolled."

AMENDMENTS
To Section 17 of the National War Students Regulations, 1940 (Recruits)

Approved by Order in Council P.C. 8343 of Sep. 16, 1942

17. (1) In this section

(a) "Student" means a person pursuing a full time course of studies at a Canadian university or college leading to a degree in Arts, Science or Commerce, or a person at a preparatory school pursuing in good faith, in the opinion of the Board, an academic course the satisfactory completion of which is required as a prerequisite to entrance upon a course of studies leading to a degree in Arts, Science or Commerce, or a person at a Canadian university, college or school pursuing a course of studies the satisfactory completion of which, in the opinion of the Board, would be in the national interest or in aid of the successful prosecution of the war.

(b) "District Officer Commanding" means the Officer Commanding the military district in which any university, college or school referred to in paragraph (a) of this section is situated.

(2) At the beginning of each academic year, every student shall be subject to be medically examined in accordance with "Physical standards and instructions for the medical examination of recruits" and, if found physically fit, shall enroll in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps contingent, if acceptable thereto and a vacancy exists therein, or auxiliary training unit of his university, college or school, if available, or in the absence of such contingent or unit, in such other unit as the District Officer Commanding may direct, and shall therein undergo military training to the satisfaction of the District Officer Commanding.

(3) Any physically fit student who

(a) refuses to enroll in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps contingent or auxiliary training unit of his university, college or school, or in such other unit as the District Officer Commanding may direct as required in subsection two of this section, or

(b) fails to perform therein military training to the satisfaction of the District Officer Commanding, or

(c) fails to pass any term or yearly academic examination required by his university, college or school, unless such failure, in the opinion of the university, college or school authorities and the District Officer Commanding, is due to circumstances beyond the control of such student, and that he should be permitted to continue his course of studies, shall be called out forthwith under these regulations.

(4) The university, college or school authorities referred to in subsection one of this section shall furnish the District Officer Commanding and the appropriate Division Registrar with the name, date and place of birth and last known address of every student who fails to pass any required academic examination.

(5) A student shall not change a course of studies entered upon at a university, college or school unless the university, college or school authorities and the District Officer Commanding consent to such change, and such consent shall not be given unless, in the opinion of such university, college or school authorities and such District Officer Commanding, the change in course is in the national interest or in aid of the successful prosecution of the war.

(6) A student may be permitted to pursue post graduate studies in any subject if, in the opinion of the university or college authorities and the District Officer Commanding, the pursuance of such a course of studies is in the national interest or in aid of the successful prosecution of the war.

(7) Subject to the provisions of subsection six of this section, upon the normal completion of his course of studies at a university, college or school, every student shall be subject to being called out under these regulations.

(8) Subject to the provisions of the next succeeding subsection, a person subject to being called out under these regulations shall not be authorized by the Chairman of the Board to whose jurisdiction such person is subject to leave Canada to pursue a course of studies outside Canada if the course of studies intended to be pursued is available at a Canadian university, college or school. Provided that persons who have been pursuing a course of studies at a university, college or school outside Canada shall be allowed to pursue such course of studies to its normal completion, subject to the provisions of paragraph (c) of subsection seven of this section.

(9) If the Board is satisfied that owing to the financial circumstances of a person or for other reasons it is in the national interest or in aid of the successful prosecution of the war to allow such person to pursue a course of studies leading to a degree in Arts, Science or Commerce at a university, college or school outside Canada, the Chairman of the Board may grant permission to such person to leave Canada for that purpose.

(10) Except as otherwise provided in this section the Board may grant a postponement order to a student who has complied with the provisions of this section or to a person who has been allowed to pursue a course of studies to its normal completion outside Canada, or to a person who has been granted permission to leave Canada under the provisions of subsections eight or nine of this section.

(11) No person who is recognized by a Board as a Mennonite, Doukhobor or conscientious objector shall be deemed to be a student for the purposes of this section.

(12) In the case of a conflict of opinion between the university, college or school authorities and the District Officer Commanding arising out of the application of this section, such conflict shall be referred by the District Officer Commanding to the appropriate Board for its decision.

Hart House Glee Club Begins New Season

More than 60 would-be singers, including some boys from the Air Force, attended the first regular meeting of the Hart House Glee Club Tuesday afternoon. Acting Warden J. R. Gilley said he was highly pleased with the turnout.

Dr. Charles Peaker, for the past eight years director of the club, got the boys off to a good start by introducing the well-known "Waltzing Matilda." Most of the lads had never read a note before, but under Dr. Peaker's guidance and humorous cajoling they sang like troupers.

The Club wishes to emphasize that new members need no previous experience in choral work. In the words of Dr. Peaker, "So long as they are not permanent monotones, we welcome them with open arms."

After a dinner in Hart House the lads galloped through an old Russian cavalry song "By the Gate."

In a census taken of those present it was found that Monday was the most suitable day for rehearsal. Since next Monday is Thanksgiving, the next rehearsal will be at 4:40 p.m., October 19.

HARVESTERS LEAVE SATURDAY

1,200 University Men Rally Throughout East To Aid Wheat Harvest

Mass Movement to Saskatchewan Comes in Response to Appeal from Minister Mitchell; Ottawa Promises Leave from Military Training for All Student-Harvesters; Some Already en Route

PROFESSORS, SENIOR STUDENTS, PROVIDE SUPERVISION

By the Canadian University Press

More than 1,200 Ontario and Quebec students rallied today at embarcation points at Montreal and Toronto, prepared to leave for Saskatchewan as emergency wheat harvesters.

The movement came in response to a telegram sent Sunday from Dominion Labour Minister Humphrey Mitchell to heads of McGill, Queen's, Toronto, Western Ontario and McMaster Universities, MacDonald College and the Ontario Agricultural College.

Applications were still being received today by university registrars and government officials were arranging for transportation warrants for those leaving immediatcly.

Enthusiastic mass meetings hailed the government appeal and faculties of the universities concerned immediately made arrangements to provide special instruction for harvesters on their return and promised special consideration in examinations.

Ottawa sent assurance yesterday that the Department of National Defence would authorize leave of absence from military training for student harvesters.

Harvesters are provided with free board and lodging and receive minimum of $4 per day worked. Free transportation to Saskatchewan and return tickets on payment of $10 will be supplied by the Government.

Departure dates of first groups from various Universities varied. McGill, MacDonald College, and McMaster students were scheduled to leave for Saskatchewan last night. Queens, Toronto, O.A.C., and Western expected to send harvesters by Saturday.

There was also variation in dates when students of various Universities are required to be back at classes. A Faculty ruling at McGill stipulated that their students return by Nov. 2, but if necessary would grant extension. Western students are expected back Oct. 31, while those from Toronto are required

Allen Northgrave, Grad Wins Award at Dieppe

Sub-Lieutentant Allen Northgrave, a graduate of the University of Toronto, and Sub-Lieutenant Andrew A. Wedd, former student at Queen's University, have been awarded for "gallantry, daring and skill in the combined attack on Dieppe," it was announced by the Royal Canadian Navy yesterday. Sub-Lieutenant Wedd was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and Sub-Lieutenant Northgrave was mentioned in despatches.

Sub-Lieutenant Northgrave, who was a well-known figure in Varsity athletics, joined the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve in July, 1940, going overseas for Royal Navy service in May, 1941, after receiving his commission. At Dieppe, he was in command of a landing barge with the Essex Scottish Regiment.

Sub-Lieutenant Wedd, also of Toronto, joined the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve in April, 1941, after spending one year at Queen's University. He, too, was in command of a landing barge at Dieppe and accompanied Les Fusiliers Mont Royal.

Economics Prof. Discusses Wheat

"Although wheat is at present a glut on the world market the only thing we can do for the West is to harvest her crop," stated Mr. L. T. Morgan, Associate Professor of Political Economy, in an interview with The Varsity yesterday.

"After the war," he continued, "the people of Europe will be crying out for foodstuffs and some of the world surplus of wheat will then be consumed; but in the long run some agreement will have to be made between the wheat-exporting countries, chiefly Argentina, the United States, Canada and Australia, to limit wheat production to what the market will take. Those countries will have to keep that agreement—not ignore it as they did the 1934 one."

When asked about the possibilities of shipping wheat to Russia, Prof. Morgan pointed out the great dangers involved in shipping it across either the Atlantic or the Pacific.

He said present conditions in Russia make it very unlikely that Russia will become a large exporter of wheat for some time after the war.

OFFICIAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR FARM VOLUNTEERS

Harvesting applications already received have been given to the College Registrars concerned and each volunteer will report at once for approval of his application. Volunteers who have not applied should do so without delay to their own College Registrar.

If approved, he will present the application at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall before 4 p.m. today. Saturday morning Simcoe Hall will issue him a railway ticket and a receipt.

Volunteers from the School of Physical and Health Education will apply to the Registrar of University College for approval and other volunteers not provided for above will apply to the University Registrar.

Each student must carefully preserve the receipt given to him with his ticket and present the receipt to the Saskatchewan Government representative who will meet all trains at Regina and Saskatoon and who will issue free transportation to the final destination. The student must continue to retain the receipt which will entitle him, on payment of $10, to a return ticket to Toronto starting at any date between Oct. 31 and Nov. 15.

Students from Victoria and Trinity Colleges will leave on the Canadian Pacific Railway train at 10:55 p.m. Saturday and proceed to Regina. Students from University and St. Michael's Colleges will leave on the Canadian National Railways train at 10:50 p.m. Saturday and proceed to Saskatoon. Individual exceptions to this general arrangement may be made at the request of the student when he applies for transportation at Simcoe Hall.

It is hoped that all volunteers from the University will be ahle to leave Saturday evening, in order that the complete groups may travel together, hut arrangements will be made for students to leave Sunday or Monday if they are unahle to leave hefore.

Queen's Harvester To Address Meeting

A mass meeting of all men of the Faculty of Arts organized by student societies in the faculty will be held today at 1 p.m. in Hart House Theatre. Purpose of the meeting as announced early today by Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union, is to discuss details of the harvesting scheme in an attempt to clear up any remaining difficulties and to give out any information forthcoming since The Varsity went to press.

A speaker from the Queen's delegation of harvesters which arrived here yesterday will address the meeting. The Queen's volunteers leave for the west tonight.

ALL UNIVERSITY FALL OANCE

The ticket sale for the All University Fall Dance (Oct. 23) will take place in the Debates Room of Hart House Tuesday, Oct. 13. Five Hundred tickets will go an sale at 12:45 p.m. and the balance at 5:45 p.m. The House Committee has ruled that only one ticket shall be sold to a person upon presentation of both his National and University Registration Cards. No person will be admitted to the dance without a ticket and no tickets will be sold at the door.

A survey by The Varsity yesterday found the executives of campus organizations reacting to the current harvest crisis in a variety of ways.

The All-University Fall Dance will take place according to schedule. "We are too deeply committed," stated W. R. Cowan, acting comptroller of Hart House and a senior member of the Hart House Committee. "Five orchestras have been hired and no other night is available."

The University College Follies will be postponed, probably until late in November, The Varsity was informed by John Wood, fourth year president and member of the University College Literary and Athletic Society. Rehearsals, for the women at least, will be carried on.

At Victoria College, Norm Sisco, social director of the Victoria College Union, informed The Varsity, "In view of the situation the annual 'Bob' has been indefinitely postponed and all 'Bob' practices have been cancelled until further notice." As far as the rest of the social program is concerned, he intimated that some functions might have to be modified or possibly cancelled.

General opinion at Trinity is that harvesting will have little effect on

C.O.T.C. Leaves Assured; Health Proviso Waived As Final Plans Announced

Approximately 350 Applications Received Last Night; Majority from U.C., Vic.; Senior Students to Act as Supervisors During Entire Period of Absence from University; Special Instruction to Be Provided

LATE APPLICATIONS STILL BEING ACCEPTEO

(Complete instructions for volunteers are to be found elsewhere on this page.)

Student volunteers to help with the Saskatchewan harvest will leave for Regina and Saskatoon tomorrow night, A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, announced as final arrangements for the trip were completed last night. Volunteers who have not yet applied should do so without delay to their college registrar.

The general requirement published in Thursday's Varsity that each student applying must satisfy the University Health Service as to his physical fitness has been withdrawn.

The Registrar announced that assurance has been given by the Department of National Defence that the Canadian Officers' Training Corps will be authorized to grant leave of absence from military training from Saturday, Oct. 10 to Monday, Nov. 9 inclusive to all members going to Saskatchewan.

Approximately 350 applications had been received by the University Registrar last night, four-fifths of them coming from Victoria and University Colleges.

A senior student from each of the four colleges will be chosen to act as supervisor of his college group throughout the entire period of their absence from the University.

Three weeks of special instruction for harvesters on their return have been arranged by a special committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts and the volunteers may also receive special consideration in examinations.

Students will be paid by the individual farmer employing them and will pay $10 out of their earnings for their return train trip.

The students prepared to leave less than a week after receipt by President H. J. Cody of a telegram from Labour Minister Humphrey Mitchell asking for volunteers to help harvest the Saskatchewan wheat crop.

The Registrar reminded volunteers that they have a journey of two days

Booth Describes Effect of Blitz On English Schools

The Student Christian Movement in Britain looks to the church to find a way out of the inevitable chaos of the post-war period, Allan Booth, chairman of the British Delegation to the International Student Assembly, told a noon hour meeting of the Student Christian Movement in Hart House Theatre today. "This is the one foundation on which man can ultimately find unity."

He described the post-war picture as being less hopeful through British student eyes than it is here. Peace will find Europe raised to a mad pitch of hatred. Already right means different things to different men and in France democracy has become not the name of an abstract principle but the name of an outworn system.

He described the effect of the blitz on English universities as an outstanding phenomenon of the war. He took the case of the decentralization of London University. Many students were evacuated to old Welsh colleges which had been hidden away in the hills for hundreds of years and were "staggered by the sudden appearance of young ladies in slacks sowing The Daily Worker in the streets."

He described the settlement of left wing students in notable old centres of conservative learning as having results highly interesting on both sides.

All men students over 18 and all women over 20 are barred from courses not directly connected with the war effort and extra curricular activity is severely curtailed because of heavy military schedules. Students have all become very serious and are all working hard. So called student apathy is greatly reduced and conferences of the Socialist Societies and the S.C.M., virtually the

The Questions Answered

After two days of clarification of the government proposal in connection with student aid to the farmers of Saskatchewan, the shape of the situation is completely crystallized.

All the questions that students were bound to ask when Mr. Mitchell's wire to President Cody was published Monday morning have now been answered. Will students be granted leave from their C.O.T.C. porodes? The Department of National Defence will grant authorization for such leaves. Will they be granted acodemic consideration or supplementary lectures? The special committee of the Council of the Faculty of Arts, appointed to deal with problems connected with the scheme, has promised that both these steps will be taken. What supervision will students receive while in the west? A senior student from each of the four Arts colleges will be chosen to act as supervisor of his colleagues during the period of their absence. What transportotion facilities will be provided? The government will pay train expenses, with the exception of ten dollars on the return trip, and the cost of meals en route. Who will pay the volunteers' woges and whot will they be? The individual farmer will pay students working on his land, with daily wages amounting to "four dollars and up," on the days when weather permits harvesting operations, plus providing room and board during the volunteers' stay with him. When ore students expected to leove? The majority will pull out of Toronto on west-bound trains tomorrow night. Some will be allowed to leave here as late as Sunday or Monday night, but students should bear in mind that the Chief Employment Officer has asked that "as many as possible leave at the earliest possible date."

Applications will still be accepted at the offices of College registrars—not at Simcoe Hall as in the past two days—before 4 p.m. today. Those who have already applied should go immediately to their College registrar for approval of their applications. All those whose applications have been approved must present their application forms at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, not later than 4 p.m. Transportation will be provided Saturday morning in the same office.

Go If You're Fit

To date about 350 University of Toronto men have applied to join in the exodus of an estimated 1,200 students from the Universities of Ontario and Quebec in the westward drive to save Saskatchewan crops. Applications from students who have been undecided up to now will be considered today, if they are made by 4 p.m.

The Varsity, during the past week, has consistently urged that students take part in the plan and repeats its advice today. We believe that the issue is a national one in which Canadian students must behave as Canadians with a full stake in their country, and act readily upon a government request in connection with their country's wellbeing.

But we do not advise, under any circumstances, that students unable to bear the physical burden involved should apply to assist in the harvest, regardless of how eager they are to do a duty they see before them. Pressure of time makes it impossible for the University Health Services to provide examinations for all volunteers. Thus the individual student is left as his own medical adviser in the matter. We urge students to consider their physical fitness, with special reference to the type of work in which they were engaged during the past summer, and not to make the trip if they are in doubt as to their general health or powers of stamina.

This appeal is based upon two considerations: first, that the government asked for men "reasonably physically fit for harvest work," and there is therefore no moral onus on anyone who does not consider himself in that category; secondly, and more important for reasons of practical patriotism, a student who goes to the harvest field and falls ill, becomes a drag upon the whole project, necessarily impairing the efficiency of those who would be forced to spend part of their time caring for him, instead of aiding the Saskatchewan farmers.

Open Forum

With students doing a lot of serious thinking during the past few days especially, on the function of the university in relation to the nation as a whole, the Editor of The Varsity has received a number of letters expressing views on the subject. The reason that none have been printed is that none have been signed.

Letters to the Editor are welcomed by The Varsity, which tries to record student opinion as well as to guide it. But such letters must be signed if they are to be considered for publication, although the writer's name may be witheld upon request.

If the writers of letters recently received care to drop us a note and identify themselves—initials will not suffice—we will be glad to print those of their letters we consider to be of general interest to our readers.

ART and MUSIC

Perfect, This Time

Helen Traubel

When a critic begins to talk about the past, his days are numbered. Nevertheless, I think it should be in order here to remark that Miss Traubel gave a much finer recital last night than the first time I heard her several years ago. The voice that we have all come to associate with her was there, and the result left very little to be desired.

The first two Schubert songs were the best music on the program and Miss Traubel reached her greatest heights in them. They were sung in German (a blessing upon the singer for that) and the German was perfectly enunciated. It might be remarked here that in her English too Miss Traubel let no word be slurred.

In her first group, by Beethoven, Miss Traubel was not quite smooth and her voice had a slight edge. The translation of the original lyrics in this case was, as it almost always is, inadequately done. Beethoven could never have written his music to the phrasing of the translation.

More modern works, by Wagner and Richard Strauss, gave Miss Traubel an opportunity to show the rich fullness of her voice. She is blessed with a full tone capable of drowning a full symphony orchestra, and even then it is still music. Her voice is truly great.

One flaw which might be noticed was the fact that it was necessary to listen to Oley Speaks' Morning in order to hear the music. Since, however, Miss Traubel can squeeze blood from the stoniest composition, this criticism cannot be taken too seriously. The recital was most enjoyable.

Ballet and Prom

Last night's Prom concert saw Andre Kostelanetz and the orchestra aided by four distinguished ballet artists, Milles. Essenova and Volkova, M. Caton and Mr. Birch. What was lacking in composite effect, because of the few artists and the choppy nature of the numbers chosen, was made up for by the excellence of the individual performances. All four had solo dances, among which Mr. Birch's Chinese dance was given a particular ovation by the crowd. The Champagne Polka, danced by all four together concluded the ballet portion of the program, concluded it three times in fact. The difficult circumstances which attend a performance of this kind, in such an inappropriate setting as Varsity arena, make the success of these artists doubly impressive.

Mr. Kostelanetz played his own transcription of Debussy's Clare de Lune. Debussy knew what he was doing when he gave this work to the piano, immature as the music itself may be, and to transcribe it for orchestra is to commit some violence. It must, however, be added that Mr. Kostelanetz's transcription, in its use of the woodwind, is about the best one could expect to make of a rather bad job.

Tschaikovsky's Pathetique Symphony was the major work on the program. There were some exaggerations of tempi in the phrasing, but as a whole the performance was refreshingly straightforward and allowed one to appreciate directly Tschaikovsky's miraculous control and co-ordination of the various factors which go to make up the orchestral medium.

MILTON WILSON

The Voluntary Reaper

Behold him, single in the field,
Yon voluntary lad from Pass,
Reaping and muttering to himself,
Stop here; we're out of gas.
Alone he cuts and binds the grain
And counts his four bucks, once again
And wishes he were back at school . . .
Playing pool.

At Humphrey Mitchell's kind request,
The Artsmen, staunch, has travelled west.
And there he sings, o'er sickle bending
Will no one tell me what he sings?
The object of his solid sending?
Is it "Velut arbor aevo?"
Or "Would the four were nearer five-O!"
Or is his singing full of eare? . . .
He's spent ten bucks return fare.

L'ENVOI

Under the notes that cover me,
Out of the books around my feet,
I thank whatever gods may be,
For wheat!

It matters not the School-at-Home,
Nor U.C. Follies' fond refrain;
Let others, during lectures, groan.
I'll take grain!

To Dedicate Reredos In St. Thomas' Church

A new reredos has been completed and installed at St. Thomas' Church, Huron Street, and will be dedicated by Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Archbishop of Toronto, at the 11 a.m. Eucharist Sunday.

The design, which is the work of A. Scott Carter, R.A.C., is richly coloured, and includes the figures of nine Saints, grouped about the Patron Saint of the parish.

These statues have been carved by Edward Watson of Toronto.

The reredos is probably the only one of its kind in Canada, if not on this continent, parish officials said yesterday.

His Grace will also preach at the 11 a.m. service, which is the annual Harvest Thanksgiving.

At Evensong the preacher will be the Rector, Lt.-Col. Rev. C. J. S. Stuart, M.C.

Tennis Tournament Nears End

Eight Men Left In Singles And Four Teams In Doubles

Tseng Bests Jacob, 8-6 and 6-1; Boyd Over Willinsky and Boroditsky Tops Gray in Singles Upsets

The long, long trail to interfaculty tennis championship is approaching the end now as only eight are left in the singles competition while four teams remain in the doubles. Of the remaining singles only five are seeded players while three of the remaining doubles teams are seeded.

Major upsets in the singles came when Francis Tseng vanquished Tom Jacob 8-6 and 6-1. The Boyd-Willinsky match lasted over two hours before the former could gain the upper hand. Another major upset was the win of Boroditsky over Owen Gray who was seeded seventh spot. The second set of this match proved very close, taking 18 games for Boroditsky to gain the upper hand.

Actual scores were: Worsley over Hart by default; Jones over Worsley 6-2, 6-2; Tseng over Jacob 8-6, 6-1; Boyd over Willinsky 6-3, 7-9, 7-5; Waugh over McGraw 6-3, 6-3; Rusted over Hibbard 6-1, 6-1; Boroditsky over Gray 6-2, 10-8; Marois over Thomson 6-4, 6-2; Saba over McDonough 6-1, 6-1.

Today's play should all be very interesting and anyone interested in good tennis should wander up St. Hilda's way to get an eyeful. At 10 Boyd and Waugh meet, at 11:30 Marois and Saba battle it out, and at 2:00 Jones and Tseng do battle as well as Rusted and Boroditsky. According to paper talk and seeded positions Waugh, Saba Jones and Rusted should all get by handily but the tournament this year has shown, and may yet show, more surprises.

The doubles tournament saw an upset as Tseng and Worsley defeated seeded Jacob and Marois. But apart from that no surprises appeared. Actual scores were: Crane and Flyn over Moffat and Cross 6-4, 6-0; Bryce and Waugh over Berrin and Brown 6-3, 6-0; Thomson and Saba over McDonough and Cahn 6-4, 6-2; Rusted and Jones over Whiting and Boyd 8-6, 6-2; Tseng and Worsley over Jacob and Marois 6-1, 613; Bryce and Waugh over Crane and Flynn 6-3, 6-3.

Today's semi-finals have two Vic. teams battling two Trinity teams for the right play for the championship. At 12:30 Trinity's Tseng and Worsley meet Bryce and Waugh of Vic. while at 3:30 Thomson and Saba of the Red and Gold meet Trinity's Rusted and Jones.

SOCCER

By Jim Paton

At the Interfaculty soccer meeting yesterday afternoon the committee in charge announced a new team grouping. Group One will consist of Meds, S.P.S., Vic and Knox; Group Two of Dents, Pharmacy and U.C.; Group Three, of Trinity, Emmanuel and Wycliffe. Two teams are to be nominated to the play-offs from Group One and the top teams in each of the other groups.

NEW RULE—

Provision has been made to allow teams to play games even though short-handed. Under the new ruling teams that have the required number of players will be obliged to field the same number of players that the weakened team has on hand, but this number must not be less than nine. (Read it slowly and it'll come to you.) This ruling was thought necessary in order to get the schedule completed; the harvesting was a major factor in the decision.

Are reminded to attend the meeting on Wed., Oct. 14 at 4:30 p.m. in order to run over the rules of the game. The league schedule and referees' appointments will be approved at this meeting.

SATURDAY, OCT. 10

Avoid Blisters By Three Rules

With preparations for departure for the wheat fields under way the question of blisters has been raised by many a worried artsman unaccustomed to hard manual labour. Three brief rules for not getting them have been compiled by The Varsity after consultation with Warren Stevens, Athletic Director of the University, and P. G. Leitch, of the St. John's Ambudance Brigade, tell how, in three easy rules.

1. Buy a pair of heavy-soled boots of the right size. Also a pair of heavy mitts.
2. Wear heavy wool socks, without holes, to absorb perspiration. If you're that kind, change them at noon. Above all, keep them clean.
3. A little boracic powder sprinkled on the feet before the daily stook helps a lot. Also a soaking for the first two or three nights in warm water with a tablet of potassium permanganate dissolved, will harden anybody's sole.

But if in spite of all this, you see the redness and soreness that means blisters, cover it with adhesive. If it does develop—at least keep it clean. Let out the fluid, disinfect with alcohol or iodine and cover with adhesive or band-aid.

Track Opener, Oct. 14, Largest Entry is S.P.S.

Wednesday, October 14, is the date set for the first track meet of the year. Coach Hec Phillips has had some of his freshmen protegees drilling every night after 4:30 and expects a number more out to get in trim for this notable event.

At first glance School seems to have the largest entry and perhaps most experienced one at that. Among others to be noted on School's list are Doug Herron, former distance star for Upper Canada; Wally Brown, ace sprinter from U.T.S., and Frank Fordyce, proven middle distance runner. The Arts Faculties may not show as great a representation as usual for obvious reasons but despite this a large turnout is expected—after all, anyone can enter who has not won a first in a senior faculty meet.

By Betsy Gowan

Today is the big day for all prospective Patty Bergs, and by all reports right now things are beginning to hum up at dear old St. Andrew's golf course. The site of the tournament was changed because of transportation difficulties. St. Andrew's, however, boasts of a very tricky course and has a par round about 72. And what with a good weather forecast we're off to a good start. 1, 2, 3 . . . putt.

The U.C. girls have put a lot of work into making this tournament a success. Years ago, the University at large used to sponsor it, but as it slipped in importance, U.C. volunteered to take it into their hands. A nice silver cup is offered to the winner and several handsome prizes will add interest to the various matches. There will be a prize for the lowest gross score—yes, golf is one game in which you always aim for a low score, and the lower you tally the more likely you are to get a lovely prize. The lowest net among the C.L.G.U. girls will also be rewarded handsomely; as will the lowest amongst the non-handicappers. A feature prize of the day will be one given for putting on the "clock" in front of the Club House. It seems that the clock really isn't a clock at all but a beautiful piece of green on which the players may putt at leisure after having finished their various games.

Speaking of players, there are forty entries in all this year—twice as many as last year. Among them are several players who have a lot of good golf to their credit. Mary Jane Fisher of St. Mike's tallied second lowest last year when U.C.'s Marion Walker won the coveted cup, and she's with us again this year along with her young sister Patty Ann. The School of Nursing has two entries this time—Mary Barrie, who has a handicap of 10, being their strong forte. Trinity has 10 promising entries, while Victoria has Lois Lloyd, with her 21 handicap, and Dorothy Lay with her 23 to stroke for her glory. U.C. has quite a large entry among whom are Betty Rolls and Elicia Simmons of note. Jean Haig will be in there putting for P.H. and E. with her team-mates.

All in all the gals will play 18 holes. The official tee-off will be at 10:00 a.m. at the latest and several are expected to appear on the green before that, carrying their own clubs, since caddies are now conspicuous by their respective absences, or have gone west to the

By Roger Conant

GO WEST, STRONG MAN

With tongues in their cheeks and daring hopefullness in their eyes, the rugby committee, including all the representatives from the Arts Faculties, met yesterday. As is customary at this season the question of schedule was mulled over and it evolved that the same nine entries as '41 were to compete. And what is more, a tentative grouping was drawn up including Junior School, Vic, and Sr. Meds in the first, Jr. Meds, U.C., and Senior School in the second, and Dents, Trinity and St. Mike's in the third. The finals are to be composed of the two top teams in group one and the winners of the other two groups.

With true St. Georgian courage the representatives of the four decimated Arts Colleges rose as a man and with fists clawing chunks from the solid oak table hoarsely cried, "Our colours will never die—we'll field a team even if we have to use Occupational Therapy." With that the respective representatives crawled over to their respective playing fields to attempt to find any of their respective players who were not in the process of packing their respective duffel bags for the badlands. "Oh unhappy day," moaned a U.C. manager when found beating his brains out against the brick wall of Muloch House, "using our water-boys, we're still four men short."

Indeed all coaches and managers seemed to think somewhat similarly. The Mulock Cup Holders, Vic, will be loosing Gord Hay, Harv Rutledge, Tom Nixon and Murray Thompson and several good frosh prospects. U.C. will lose Don Nichol and probably at least six others from the starting line-up. Trinity will be left even flatter than perceived at the season's start—the only returning member of last year being Bill Livingston and perhaps Johnny Aird and Tim Mills who wear Naval uniforms. St. Mike's reports devastating but as yet undetermined losses. Exact strengths and losses will not be known until next week but it is safe to say that the Arts Faculties will carry on and enter teams, however outmatched by the Meds and Schoolmen. Before the schedule gets under way it will probably be necessary to handicap in some way the undoubtedly stronger teams to keep the Artsmen from losing too many points in the Reed race because of their immediate aid to Canada's war effort. One suggestion received is that the Arts Colleges compete amongst themselves with six-man rugby and that the top two teams amalgamate and play off with the winner of the other five team group for the Muloch Trophy.

The important thing at the moment, though, is that no athletes stay behind this coming month for the sole purpose of rugby. That is utter folly and foolhardiness. What matter if your college doesn't win a few rugby games and a big hunka tin. Those are minor considerations in the major struggle. But rest assured that if there is a large difference in strengths because of the harvesters the capable handlers of the intramural sports system will take everything into consideration and rectify any situation.

To Test Rugby Referees Before Appointment

Tom Jacob, St. Mike's representative on the standing committee for rugby, was elected chairman of that body in a meeting yesterday. Jack Virtue of Meds was elected vice-president and Jim Carson of Vic was named secretary.

Among other decisions made was one placing the full committee in charge of referees this year instead of naming a sub-committee as formerly. A new development this season is that all potential referees will be given an examination before their appointment. Each candidate is required to answer 75 true or false questions and 25 questions in which an actual infringement is cited, for which the penalty has to be named. Emphasis is placed on the fact that no tricky questions will be used—only a working knowledge of the rule book is required.

The test is to be written on Wednesday, October 14 at 4:30 in the Intramural Office. Those who drill at this time are to report to the Athletic Office and an agreeable hour will be set. Current rule books are available at the Athletic Office. It is stipulated that failures in the tests must return said books.

PROFESSORS AND STUDENT LEADERS VOICE OPINIONS ON HELPING HARVEST

Professors Approve the Plan; Say Harvesting Now More Important than Texts; Fit Artsmen Should Go

"LESSON IN DEMOCRACY"

Most professors are whole-hearted in their approval of the government's plan to send Artsmen to assist with the harvesting in Saskatchewan. "A very sound idea indeed," stated Professor F. H. Anderson, Department of Philosophy.

"The harvesting of the wheat is a little more important than the reading of texts at this time," declared Professor J. D. Robins of the Department of English at Victoria College. "Besides, I have found that there are a good number of students who consider it a sheer waste of time to begin their studies before Nov. 1." Dr. Robins also stated that he had heard a suggestion that the co-eds be sent to cook for the hungry harvesters.

"Men taking courses which have a direct bearing on the war effort, such as mathematics and physics, should definitely remain at their job," was the opinion of J. Satterly, professor of Physics. "However all fit men taking the pure Arts courses should certainly be sent."

"It will be a splendid experience for physically fit men," declared Professor J. Hedman, of the German Department at University College. "It should be a fine lesson in democracy." Professor Hedman went on to warn that care should be taken that only men who were able to stand the hard job of harvesting should be sent.

Several professors were uncertain whether the present plans of the government were practical. "I am not sure that the required number of students with farming experience and of high enough physical standard will be found in the Faculty of Arts to warrant this action," said Professor E. J. G. Alford, of the Department of Fine Arts. "It would be unwise to expect students who are training themselves for war tasks to disrupt their training," stated Professor N. H. C. Ford of the Department of Zoology.

ACTIVITIES POSTPONED BUT NOT ALL-VARSITY

activities since most important Trinity functions take place in the winter.

University dramatic clubs have been disrupted by the western exodus. The University College Players' Guild is considering what to do with "The Man Who Came to Dinner." The cast calls for 15 male characters. "The solution," said Ken Peck, president of the Guild, "will probably be that we'll have to change the play for one with fewer characters."

The St. Michael's College Players were thinking seriously of doing a play before Christmas but the current situation has caused a delay in any positive announcement.

Jack Coleman, president of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, stated that Shaw's "Devil's Disciple," will be presented as scheduled. He said that the students can learn their lines while harvesting and get down to the business of rehearsing on their return.

Since the Newman Club is an alumni as well as an undergraduate club it would be impractical to curtail its activities, said Rev. J. E. McHenry, Rector of the club.

to be back Nov. 9. Queen's deadline was set at Nov. 15, but no deadline has yet been announced by McMaster.

While telegram from Ottawa specified students in Agriculture, Arts, Commerce, and Law as Harvest applicants, McGill also accepted students in the first three years of Science. At McGill, where over 300 left last night, Law and Commerce students applied en masse and all Agricultural students except Chemicals and physically unfit also registered. First to register was a French-Canadian student; even co-eds asked to be included.

Among the 103 students being sent from O.A.C. are members of the third and fourth years not taking Science options, as well as students of the second year of the two-year practical agricultural course.

Professors or senior students will be put in charge of the groups from their respective Colleges. Accompanying the McGill students is Professor John Culliton, of the Department of Economics and Political Science who will make his headquarters at Regina. Two staff members will accompany the O.A.C. harvesters; Professor J. Laughland of Field Husbandry and Professor M. W. Stapes of the Animal Husbandry Department. At Toronto a Senior student from each of the four Arts Colleges has been chosen to act as Supervisor of his group.

At Queen's, due to scarcity of rooms, the University is paying half the room rent of students going West for a maximum of four weeks. Over 200 are ready to leave.

At Western where 80 had already registered today, Freshmen were not allowed to apply, but no such ruling has been announced at any other University.

University of Saskatchewan postponed opening until Oct. 5, and then suspended all classes but those in Medicine until Oct. 19. Many students returned home, others organized in groups for harvesting. Many Saskatchewan co-eds are cooking for harvesters.

Volunteering Progressing, but Not Well Enough Is General Opinion; Most Fourth Year Law Students Withdrawing

AMERICANS EAGER TO GO

Enrolment for harvesting is progressing, but not well enough, according to the leaders of various campus organizations. Jack Casey, President of St. Michael's S.A.C. was satisfied with today's enrolment.

"The work will be for a worthy cause, and is unquestionably our duty; for the request has been made, not merely by the western farmers or the university, but by the Dominion Government. Students at St. Michael's College consider the cause valid and are enrolling in fairly good numbers. The group who have applied consist mostly of Pass Arts students, and "day-hops"—those whose homes are in Toronto.

"We have a peculiar situation here, for about half of our students are citizens of the United States for whom no provision has yet been made. They seem to be as eager to go as the Canadians."

The general feeling was not all one of rosy satisfaction, however. "The students who could enrol and haven't, are just a bunch of softies," said Don Rowat, President of the U.C. Lit. "What are they afraid of? Hayfever? The students doing most of the crabbing are the ones who skipped half of last year's lectures.

"We're having trouble with people enrolling and then backing down. Fourth Year Law was all for moving west as a body until some started withdrawing their names. Now all have backed down except four."

Bill Somerville, President of Fourth Year Trinity, and Trinity College Literary Institute representative, is looking forward to the work, but with apprehensions. "In spite of the disadvantages," he said, "this is an experience worth having. It will be a chance for Easterners to see new country and meet new people. We usually have a fairly good time here at University, and as a 'preferred class' should do what we can in this emergency.

"In Trinity, most of the discussion is within the courses. There has been little recruiting by the College as a whole."

6--Count 'Em--6 Bands To Play at All Varsity

Six orchestras—not four as previously announced—will provide music for the All University Fall Dance in Hart House, Oct. 23, J. R. Gilley, Acting Warden of Hart House, said yesterday.

Stanley St. John is providing two—one for the Big Gym and another for the Debates Room. Bob Shuttleworth will be in the Great Hall while Gren Hobson will play for dancers in the East Common Room. There will be two rooms set aside for square dancing—the Reading Room and Music Room.

The number of tickets is limited to 1,110 couples. Only one ticket will be sold to a person upon presentation of both University and National registration cards. The University registration card will be punched upon purchase of the ticket.

Sale of tickets will take place in the Debates Room Oct. 13. Five hundred will go on sale at 12:45 p.m. and the balance at 5:45 p.m. of the same day. It has been urgently requested by the authorities in charge that an orderly line be formed proceeding West from the Debates Room down the stairs and out the main west front door of Hart House. Should the weather prohibit this then the line will go along the second floor of the House to and down the stairway leading to the Athletic Wing.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, and in the office of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary.

The University Directory is now being prepared for the press, and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

West Va. Students Harvest Apples

Morgantown, W. Va.—Oct. 8—Helping with the harvest is nothing new to students of West Virginia University, and they don't have to leave campus to do it.

During the past two weeks men in the college of agriculture have filled a gap in the local labour situation by harvesting 4,700 bushels of apples on the university horticulture farm.

STUDENTS CHOOSE CLOTHES FOR THE WHEAT FIELDS

"Warm, rough clothes and plenty of them form the bulk of student harvesters' packing for the westward trip to Saskatchewan, a Varsity survey revealed yesterday.

"Wear your oldest and heaviest clothes," advises Ronald Bates, I Arts, from Vic. Ronald ought to know—he's from Regina. "They've already had three inches of snow on some western district," he said, "but most Saskatchewan farms are now in the midst of Indian summer."

Robert Ferguson, IV Arts, intends travelling in two old sweaters, old trousers, one raincoat and his C.O.T.C. army boots. "Since we're supposed to wear army boots at training camp, I don't see why authorities should deplore the wearing of them in wheat fields," he said.

R. P. Cameron, IV Law, will take thick leather gloves and mackinaw jackets. Other Law students expressed willingness to travel with ski outfits, flannel underwear, electric razors, added supplies of toothpaste and razor blades.

John Wilcox, I Soc. and Phil., said: "I'm going to take along my .22 rifle and shoot gophers."

All this will no doubt add to the interest and enjoyment of all our golfers on this gala day up yonder. We shall all await the results expectantly over our happy week-end, at the end of which we shall also have some news about the last rounds of the various College tennis tournaments.

UNIVERSITY SONGS MINGLE AS HARVEST SPECIAL LEAVES

Staff Photos by Hugh Kenner

Above are scenes from Saturday night's tumultuous sendoff which the University gave its volunteer student-harvesters as they left for the west. Shown at the left are food-conscious Varsity men helping to load aboard lunches prepared for them by college girls under the direction of Miss A. E. M. Parkes of the S.A.C. Centred is a shot of President H. J. Cody surrounded by his students, as he stands on the steps of a coach and joins in a round of "Auld Lang Syne." At the right is pictured the interior of one of the student-laden colonist cars which are bearing the boys westward.

Booth, Bell Deliver I.S.A. Talks

Presence of Russian Students Significant at Washington Conference; Seek Canadian Co-operation

EILEEN ACTON, DELEGATE

The fact of Russian youth sitting in discussion with others of the democratic world was named as one of the most valuable results of the International Student Assembly by Gord Bell, President fo the Medical Society and member of the medical delegation to the assembly. He was speaking before a meeting of students held Friday in Hart House Theatre under the auspices of the Medical Society to acquaint the student body with the work accomplished by the Assembly in Washington Sept. 2-5.

Allan Booth, head of the British delegation to the Assembly was guest speaker and described the changes wrought upon student life in England by the war. "The most significant thing you would see on a British campus is the number of students who are not there," he said, and told how despite reduction of their numbers and intensification of their courses the students were finding their thought stimulated by contact with refugee students and the revived international aspect of the universities.

Eileen Acton, Victoria College delegate, outlined the actual plan of the Assembly and Gordon Bell followed it up with a survey of its achievements.

One of the first things the Russian delegation did, Bell said, was to ask for a special meeting with the Canadians.

Harvesters Get Great Send-Off In Saturday Night Departure; 1400 Men Pass Through Winnipeg

700 YESTERDAY

Winnipeg, Oct. 12 — (CUP) — More than 1,400 harvest-bound students from Ontario and Quebec rolled through here during the week-end, en route for the wheat-fields of Saskatchewan.

For three days special and regular trains have been pouring through Winnipeg as men from every major university and college in the two provinces contributed its share of men to the fight to save Saskatchewan's record-breaking wheat yield.

Saturday morning a Canadian National train bearing 35 men from Queen's University split at Melville, as part of the contingent went to Saskatoon and the remainder to Regina, while 100 McMaster men passed through here to Regina.

Sunday morning a 15-car Canadian Pacific special brough 300 McGill men and 200 from McDonald College through, on their way to Regina.

Hundreds more passed through here today. University of Toronto and Laval University men totalling 80 went to Regina by Canadian Pacific. A special Canadian National train with 16 cars of students and two diners, carried 125 from the University of Toronto, 110 from Laval, 190 from Queen's, 80 from the University of Western Ontario, 75

CUP WIRES WILL HUM WITH HARVEST NEWS

News of student harvesters en route to the west is being flashed to The Varsity by the Canadian University Press, and this coverage will continue until the boys are back at their respective colleges.

Masthead men as well as reporters from the various member papers of the C.U.P. are on the scene of action and these will write all news in duplicate and send by wire and airmail to their home newspaper and to The Varsity, head office of the organization.

As The Varsity is the President of the C.U.P. all news of broad interest will be syndicated here and sent out to member papers immediately.

Representing The Varsity masthead is Vernon Lang, Assistant Managing Editor.

Heading the McGill Daily delegation are William Munroe, News Editor, and Bob MacIntosh, C.U.P. Editor.

From McMaster have gone Harold Wood, Managing Editor, Bill Dilworth, Men's Sports Editor and Jack Osborne, Business Manager.

Tired old trainmen at Toronto's union station have seen plenty, especially since the start of the war, what with the forces of all nations circulating through the big echoing building, but last Saturday night they had their tired old eyes opened.

Around about 10 o'clock Vicmen started to gather and set the record for sartorial flamboyance which was not eclipsed despite some of the whackiest getups Queensmen could devise. Two of the Vicmen had themselves done up just like railroad engineers, hats, while a lot of others sported conspicuous red patches.

One Vicman brought along two of his honeys. He wasn't sentimental about parting. He just wanted someone to carry all his duffle.

Football Days Recalled by College Spirit Shown as Ontario Volunteers Pull Out of Toronto

CO-EDS EN MASSE

In the loudest, gayest, most college-like atmosphere Toronto has witnessed since the hey-day of intercollegiate football, 700 students from three universities set out for Saskatchewan as volunteer harvesters Saturday night.

The Union Station rang with varied university and college songs and yells. There was a pervading spirit of bonhomie and goodfellowship and almost no sign of intercollegiate animosity despite the high spirits of the volunteers.

"Old Toronto" mingled with "Queen's College Colours" and Queen's and Varsity men joined in each other's yells with pre-war enthusiasm. The contingent from the University of Western Ontario was smaller and quieter and only arrived in town in time for an hour's stopover.

President H. J. Cody was at the station which he said reminded him of the scene when the boys went off to the Riel Rebellion in 1885. The President seemed to be enjoying the send-off thoroughly and even joined a group in a round of "Auld Lang Syne."

"I think the boys are in fine spirits," he said, "and their behaviour is remarkable. I know they will all give a good account of themselves and am glad to see so many have gone."

"I will see they are taken care of

The Same---But Different

After one of the most hectic weeks in its news-gathering history, The Varsity today pauses to catch its breath and try to evaluate all the happenings in connection with the mass exodus of 1,400 students from Ontario and Quebec for the wheat fields of Saskatchewan.

There is material there for a year of editorials—drawing sage morals, pointing with pride at the ready response throughout the east to the government appeal, even perhaps viewing with alarm the relatively slender number from this University that went west as emergency harvesters.

But one aspect of the whole affair must have struck anyone who was present at the climax of the week, when Harvest Specials pulled out of the Union Station. It was the old-fashioned college spirit the prevailed there—spirit which hadn't rocked that cindery old station since the pre-war days when other special trains used to leave for football week-ends at Montreal, Kingston or London.

It was the same sort of scene as that of other days—noise, confusion, college yells, college anthems, good-natured intercollegiate rivalry. But underlying the familiar bustle was a deeper meaning than that of the gridiron days. As men from more than one university mingled on the platform and shoved through the ticket-gates they weren't off for a week-end of gaiety watching a football game. Nor were they going to play in that game. They were headed for a month's active participation in their country's war effort.

Times have changed radically throughout the whole country, since September, 1939. And in attitude and action, college students have changed with them.

We Give Thanks

Yesterday as individuals we gave thanks for a great number of blessings which had brightened our lives. Collectively although perhaps unconsciously we appreciated the boon that we lived in Canada, which is the root cause of all our individual blessings. Because we live where we do we could and did enjoy the fruits of the earth at our Thanksgiving dinner, and at all our other dinners; we can and do enjoy a peaceful country where neither nature nor man has been put under the heel by any rigid "order;" we can and do enjoy a fair sense of security in an insecure world thanks to the efforts of those who are giving their time and efforts to protecting us.

The earth's bounty is great this year in Canada and in other parts of the world. Hundreds of our student friends have left for the Canadian prairies to help harvest the greatest wheat crop since 1915, with a yield of twenty-eight bushels to the acre, two more than the record set during that year of the First World War. The heavy fruit and apple crops in Ontario set a record. Even the fish along the British Columbia coast have been caught in greater quantities than before. All our dinners for the coming winter will benefit by this bounty.

We are thankful for many privileges which used to be merely taken for granted: little things like being able to go to the library or the book-store and get any book we want, with no gauleiter to proscribe it; like being able to come to the university, which is now our greatest privilege of all; like being able to discuss the affairs of the day with our friends without fear. For the privilege of being alive in such a country in the best month of its year of seasons.

To those who have made this last boon possible we give thanks: to the unquenchable people of Russia and of Britain, to the modest men of the Royal Air Force and of the Royal Canadian Air Force, to the dauntless fighters on the sea keeping endless watch in the minesweepers, with the convoys, and with the Navy, and to the workers who keep our protectors supplied with the tools of their trade.

And finally we have given thanks to nature which provided us with a perfect October day on which to celebrate our Thanksgiving.

Going To Lectures

By now freshmen will have accustomed themselves to their new-time-tables copied so assiduously into the fly-leaves of their Handbooks, have learned which lectures are interesting, which tolerable and which sometimes a strain on their patience. At this stage, we offer them—and more mature students too— a word of gratuitous advice relative to the advisability of attending lectures.

It is not our intention editorially to advise anything so cavelier as the systematic skipping of even those lectures in the last-named category. It has always been our contention that the time spent at a good many lectures could be much more profitably passed in communion with a text-book over in the Library. Because some texts deal with their subject much more directly than some professors. But the difficulty lies with the frailty of student humanity which makes it very simple to develop the habit of skipping lectures and very difficult to develop the complementary habit of going to the library instead. Students as often find themselves in the Hart House Pool Room or in a drug-store, sipping cokes or coffee, depending on the season.

Rather, this editorial deals with the advisability of attending lectures which are not included in the time-tables at the front of the Handbook. Particularly in the Faculty of Arts, students will have a wide range of interest which they find not altogether covered by the curriculum they have chosen. Honour courses tend more and more to specialize and students enrolled in them, although primarily studying the subjects they include, may feel that a little peregrination in some of the farther fields would be profitable. And sometimes it is refreshing to slide into a classroom off one's beaten path and listen to a lecture which has little or nothing to do with one's own course. No lecture is without interest, and often the very unfamiliarity of a subject will make it intriguing.

So the word of advice which we offer is this: go to as many of your own lectures as you find profitable; and occasionally take the time to go to a few that are not on your course. The professor won't mind and the chances are that neither will you.

If you don't care to look around for yourself, or merely dive into the first full classroom you see, we will go a step further and recommend a few lectures that the average student must find stimulating. First on any list we have ever heard any of his students make comes the first-year lectures on Shakespeare which Principal W. M. Wallace delivers in University College. Then there are the weighty but witty discussions of Plato which Professor F. H. Anderson of the Department of Philosophy conducts with his sophomore classes. Another lecturer whom students unanimously praise is Professor John Satterly of the Department of Physics, whose annual "liquid-air" lecture regularly jams the big lecture-hall in the Physics Building to bursting-point. The list could be expanded, and is not intended to slight those it does not include. It is merely appended as an added stimulant for students to seek a wide field of interest for themselves, and profit by the tremendous opportunities for learning which are theirs.

Art, Music and Drama

Strictly From Russia

Don Cossack Chorus

To a capacity audience of Russophiles, the Don Cossacks under Serge Jaroff presented a program of their usual, unforgettable music. The organization needs no praise of mine to point out how excellent it is; suffice it to say that it is one of a very few which lives up to its advance publicity.

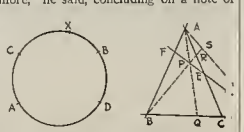
Analyzing the singing is difficult, because it is entirely unrelated to anything which is done on this side of the world. Some of the voices are not even pleasant to our ears; but they nevertheless seem completely appropriate. They manage to sing intervals and modulations which are not included in the standard singer's repertoire.

It is the unity with which every expression mark is given that remains in the mind after the concert. A symphony orchestra might be proud of the crispness of their every attack; of the cleanness of their cut-offs.

Finally the tone colours and tonal effects which they achieve are remarkable. Sometimes their soprano voices resemble nothing so much as the old viols, to cite but one instance. Their basso profundissimo gives one the same feeling of limitless depth as the lowest notes of the contra-bassoon.

The only thing that was bad was the audience. Perhaps the transportation situation made it impossible for some to arrive before twenty minutes of the concert was over, but surely they did not need to talk, rattle papers, and chew gum continuously when they got there.

NEIL MACDONALD.



HARVESTERS TRAVEL IN STYLE

Railway Company Supplies Special Train, Menu, and Entertainment as Student Locusts Entrain

WINE, WOMEN AND SONG

Hostesses, pool tables, and smoking cars* are among the modern conveniences that have been provided for the student volunteer harvesters, it was learned from usually authoritative sources close to the Union Station, last Saturday night. "The wheels on this train," said Mixup McSchedule, popular stationmaster, "differ in no essential from those used on the special train that carried the King and Queen across Canada three years ago. . . . They are round (see cut), they are made of steel, and they are very hard. Furthermore," he said, concluding on a note of hopefulness, "I can see no cause of complaints."

Before — After

As the students ascended the stairs from the station, they were waylaid by a Medical Board, headed by Lupus Vulgaris, well-known Medical Reporter of The Varsity, and given a rapid check-over. All were placed in Category "A," Questioned regarding the requirements for this category, Vulgaris, who was in a surly mood all evening, snarled at your reporter—"We ain't got but two categories—if they're alive, they're category "A," otherwise, they ain't."

Later on the make-up of the train was explained by Barkem N. Punchem, veteran C.N.R. conductor, who was in charge of the special train. The train has no scheduled stops between Toronto and Winnipeg, but Punchem refused to predict whether or not he would call all the stations, according to his custom. "Ahem. . . . We have implicit faith in Old Punchem," said J. Rollingstock Boxxe-Carr, S.N.R.'s vice-president in charge.

Following this rapid interview, The Varsity's Masthead was taken on a tour of the train, conducted by Boxxe-Carr, and head engineer Casey J. Roundhouse. First stop was the engine, known familiarly to the crew as "Old '97," which had been converted from a Diesel to a wood-burner because of the oil shortage. There is no smoke stack; instead, for hygienic reasons, the smoke is piped to each individual coach. This, the crew explained, was a radical departure from conventional air-conditioning systems in use on all Canadian railways, in which the smoke is drawn in at random. The new system will serve to heat the train, as well as allowing a uniform atmosphere to be maintained in all coaches by obviating guesswork.

Two innovation are to be tried on the trip. These are, first, a special diet, and second, hostesses for all the boys. The hostesses have been selected from the prettiest co-eds in Pass Arts, Household Economics, Physiotherapy and Occupational Therapy. The scientifically constructed diet is designed to supply the maximum amount of energy, aid resistance to fatigue, and maintain morale at a high level. It was worked out by internationally famous nutritionists, and, while its components were kept secret, The Varsity's secret service has good reason that its chief constituents are cheese sandwiches and beer, with liberal helpings of soda bicarbonate for dessert. The Catitor expects to hear from these boys very shortly.

*No comments, please, fellas.
Anyway, they used to be.
And they are nice, honest.—Ed.

LABOUR CLUB TO HEAR WOLL, A. F. OF L. LEADER

A question period is planned, if time will permit.

This meeting is sponsored by the Student Labour Club, who have been attempting to line up speakers for this for some time. Mr. Woll is at present attending the annual A. F. of L. Convention being held in the Royal York Hotel.

W. Hanley, President of V Meds and President of the Student Labour Club, will preside.

Wilson Woodside To Talk To Meds

Encouraged by the response of Schoolmen at last week's meeting, not only in attendance, but also in discussion afterwards, the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society have invited Willson Woodside, graduate of the Faculty of Engineering, to speak at their regular meeting tonight, Gord Miller, chairman of the club, told The Varsity. His subject will be The Second Front.

As usual members of all faculties are invited to the meeting which will be held at Wymilwood between 6:30 and 8 this evening. Time will be divided between the guest speaker's remarks and open discussion of the subject.

Mr. Woodside graduated from the Engineering Faculty in 1929 and went to work in a boiler factory. The stock market crash that fall finshed his first job and he returned to the University as an instructor in the Faculty.

The following summer he sought a job with a travel agency as a baggage handler and was accepted. The job turned out to be that of conductor of the tour. Nevertheless he accepted it and set to work to familiarize himself with his field by reading and studying maps.

This tour laid the foundation of his experience which has made him an outstanding Canadian commentator.

Bryce, Waugh Cop Doubles Crown

Oust Rusted, Jones 7-5, 6-4; Saba and Waugh Reach Singles Finals Whipping Rusted and Jones

TO DECIDE TITLE TODAY

The Red and Gold of Vic flew high Saturday up at the Toronto Tennis Club courts as Bill Waugh and Pete Bryce came out victorious in a terrific match that displayed great tennis. Ian Rusted and Mel Jones, Trinity's hopes, put up considerable struggle—in fact they had set point three times in a row in the first stanza but the Vic team came through with the goods and took the set 7-5. The second was just as tight, most of the games going to deuce numerous times, but superb styling and co-ordinated play spelled victory for the new champions.

In the semi-finals of the doubles on Friday at St. Hilda's Ian Rusted and Mel Jones had considerable trouble with Murray Thomson and Chuck Saba of Vic but came out on top 6-1, 3-6, 6-1. The newly crowned champions, Pete Bryce and Bill Waugh, at first had a hard job to master the dark horse team of the tournament. Tseng and Worsely of Trinity put up a great effort making the champs take it to 11-9. The second game they took 5-7 but the third saw the Vicmen walk away with straight games.

Friday saw the elimination of four more from the race for the singles championship and the McEachern Cup. No upsets occurred as seeded players seemed to have little difficulty with their challengers. Mel Jones of Trinity put out Francis Tseng with 6-2, 6-3 scores. Bill Waugh of Vic had little trouble with the Meds. representative, Art Boyd, who was eliminated with 6-2, 6-4 scores. Rusted handily took care of the Dents colour-bearer, Boroditsky. Chuck Saba from Trinity with 6-1, 6-4 easily polished off Maurice Marois from St. Mikes. Thus the four remaining players fulfilled the prognostications of the pre-season experts by being the top four seeded players.

Then up at the Toronto Tennis Club courts Saturday morning the semi-finals were run off. Here upsets did occur. Second place Bill Waugh knocked off Mel Jones who was named number one. Chuck Saba, fourth place holder, put down Ian Rusted who was seeded the position above him. And what is more, although some of the play was up to par, in general the losers were in far from top form and on paper the wins appear clear cut. Score of the Saba win over Rusted was 6-1, 6-4, while Bill Waugh took Mel Jones to the tune of 6-2, 6-3.

The long grind for the throne vacated by Bruce Hall will finally draw to a close today at one o'clock when Chuck Saba and Bill Waugh join battle to decide the McEachern Cup holder and University champion.

This battle will undoubtedly be one of the finest seen around these parts in many years—the contestants being so evenly matched. So, guess we'll see quite an audience up at the Victoria Tennis Club courts today.

U.C. SOCCER

All those U.C. men interested in playing soccer this season turn out to a meeting in the Junior Common room, Wednesday, Oct. 14.

C.O.T.C. Explains Officer Selection

The following statement appeared in the Special Supplement of the The Varsity dated 21 Sep. 42 under the heading of "General Information."

"It is pointed out that since the change in the role of the Units of the Reserve Army there are now to be two sources of supply for potenial officers for the Active Army:

(a) Those recommended for the Active Army in the United Kingdom and Canada, and

(b) Those recommended for Contingents of the C.O.T.C."

This statement appears to be misleading and the following additional information is given to remove this misunderstanding.

Officers of the Reserve Army are still being called upon to go to the Active Army and certain selected civilians are commissioned to the Active Army straight from civilian life.

Don Clee, Intramural Chairman To Continue Past Season's Work

The vigorous visage adorning the sport page today is that of Varsity's newly elected Intramural Committee Chairman, Don Clee. Like last year's chairman, Jack Mullet, Don is in Dentistry and is graduating into the Dental Corps this year.

Don started his athletic career at Riverdale Collegiate here in his native city of Toronto. While at Riverdale he polished up his brilliant soccer game and also indulged in a little basketball. Tennis also came in for quite a good deal of attention from the embryo chairman.

Upon entering Varsity, young Mr. Clee betook himself to the soccer field, and there enjoyed great success. He played on the last great Intercollegiate Championship team in 1940, and is one of the few remaining "T" holders at the University. Don carries Dents' colours in interfaculty competition in such variegated sports as basketball, volleyball, baseball, and tennis.

As for this year's program, Clee and Committee expect to have everything running much the same as last year, subject, of course, to suggestions by the military authorities. A lot of effort will be required to correlate the playing field demands of both sports and military training. Many teams which are relying on freshman material will be hard put for players in the next few weeks, for, due to the scarcity of doctors, medical exams are going through very slowly.

The following heads of standing committees have been appointed:

Rugby—Tom Jacob, St. Mike's.
Tennis—Tom Jacob, St. Mike's.
Golf—G. Rief, Pharmacy.
Volleyball—Bill Rawlinson, Trinity.
Soccer—Bill Rawlinson, Trinity.
Swimming—Fred Swanson, S.P.S.

Speaking of Sport

By Hugh Kenner

WHY I PLAY CRIBBAGE

They were laughing at me as I struggled to pick up one of my flashbulbs the other night and the Sports Ed said I needed a course of games and workouts to build me up until I could lift two of them and the camera besides. He thought football between drill periods, volleyball in the afternoon, and poker in the evenings, would do a lot for me. Then I said that I left those things to the experts and derived (quote) "the quintessence of human enjoyment in beholding from some shaded sideline their Herculean strivings." Then he waxed hot, saying (because he is a philosopher) that no one would ever benefit from athletics under a set-up like that because only the Supermen would play and they didn't need to. And he pounded his fist against my chest in a way he has of driving home his point, and wanted me to show him one good reason why a duffer like me shouldn't play games. So here goes.

SNIFFLE SYMFUNNY

Well, in the first place I never could see much sense to games because everybody gets so tired playing them and what does that lead to? Only stiff legs so that you have to lean on the guy next to you when the platoon commander say "About TURN!!" and an attack of sniffles from some comic monkeying with the cold taps in the showers while you're soaking up warmth. Come to think of it there're all kinds of ways of getting attacks of sniffles while you're playing games: mushing through slush with a slugby ball for example, or taking a deep breath under water because you missed your cue in the relay swim and somebody got impatient and pushed you in. Add ob course whed you hab de snivvles you cabd't hear abythig ad lectures but yourself sneezig.

Then another trouble with games is that you expend enough energy to raise the Hart House tower half-way to the moone, and what have you got to show for it? Only some bulging muscles after you've been flagellating yourself for three years. And what do I want with bulging muscles? If I want to move my typewriter I can call on my roommate, and he carries my flashbulbs too; and they don't impress the girls because we all wear suits now. For a cave man, perhaps. . . .

GONE WITH THE WIND

Besides all that, most games center around a bag of wind that you pound the daylights out of. It doesn't matter if that wind is surrounded with stitched horsehide or the lungs of the opposing lightheavy, you still keep pounding it and kicking it and all the time hoping down in your heart that you don't bust it. Insincere, that's what I mean.

Then I'm tall enough to bump into doors, and so they say "Aha, Goliath" and pit me against the bruisers who've lain awake practicing Dynamic Tension (advt.) and lifted their uncles' tractor with one hand snice they were five. So I don't last long against them because somelow inside I seem to be hollow.

Well, I hope you don't think I'm making all this up because I've really played around quite a bit in my time. I once boxed the managing editor of The Varsity three whole rounds (ask him if you don't believe me) and they said the footwork was worth coming fifty miles to see. And I carried the colours of my old High School into battle, and it was a pretty heavy flag too. And then when the sports editor didn't like all this, I beat him up and made him print it.

I resent that.—Ed.

The Interfaculty Tennis Tournament is planning to get under way this Thursday or Friday. Most of the colleges have decided upon the first three players on each team by this time.

P.H.E. draw has reached the semi-finals; and Ruth Carleton, Virginia Kitto, and M. Finlayson, are slated for berths on the team. U.C. is able to name N. Graham, R. Marjesson, and Bobbie Greenleaf for its team. Ruth Carleton, who is running both these playdowns, is hoping to run several challenge games before the Interfaculty starts. When the six members of each team are named, any of the other competitors may attempt to challenge in. We haven't heard of any of the other colleges planning to do likewise; most of them feel that they will be lucky to get all their games played off in time to name their teams.

Virginia MacLeod, Vic. II and Betty Weall, Vic. III, will be among those representing the Scarlet and Gold. Two freshies, Marjorie Chantler and Aileen Smith, will meet each other in the semi-finals today.

Maureen Murphy is seeded first at St. Mike's. Betsy Gowan, Pat O'Donahue, M. Cunningham, and Florence Cooper have also been named. There is only one place left, before this squad is completed.

A call has gone out again for linesman. If you want to do someone a big favour, while you observe the Interfaculty tennis matches, give your name to Virginia MacLeod at Wymilwood, Mary Holington, Meds, Betty Hungerford, at St. Hilda's, Aileen McNally at Loretto, or Ruth Carleton, P.H.E. . . . Another reminder is also added: get your medical eligibility slips before Thursday, if you are in the Interfaculty tennis tourney.

Ex-Rugby Star Keefer Returns

Montreal—Oct. 12—(CUP)—Flying Officer Bob Keefer, a former star backfielder for McGill in the good old days of intercollegiate rugby, recently arrived back in Canada. Interned in Eire after a crash near the coast he tried several times to escape and only succeeded last August accompanied by Flight Lieutenant Grant Fleming.

Tweny-five year old Keefer had been among the Canadian fliers in many raids over Germany. Hamburg, Cologne and Essen had been among his targets but, he remarked, "I haven't had time to include Berlin."

After a successful stay at McGill where he sparked his team to the intercollegiate championship a few years ago he went overseas before the war and received his commission in short order. He was active in the Transatlantic Ferry Service and has received the Distinguished Flying Cross for actual combat with the enemy.

His flying boat crashed close to Erie in December, 1941, and it was only last August that he could make his successful escape. Numerous attempts were undertaken but proved difficult—on one occasion his makeshift scaling ladder with which he was attempting to surmount the surrounding wall, broke, resulting in recapture plus some slight injuries.

BOOTH, BELL REPORT ON STUDENT ASSEMBLY

The exchange of students after the war and the exchange of correspondence now were discussed. Steps are now being taken to put these plans into operation.

He stressed the importance of continued student contact with Russia, pointing out how that country had been cut off from the rest of the world for over 20 years.

Application to this campus of the findings of the Assembly, it is expected, will be the observance of an International Students' day on Nov. 17 the anniversary of the shooting of the students of Prague, continued contact with delegates from other countries, especially with the Russians, formation of discussion groups here, co-ordination of these groups by I.S.S., and local student relief work.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO REGISTRATION CARDS MUST BE SHOWN

Annual Novice Track Meet To Take Place Wednesday

By Phil Shackleton

The annual novice track meet will get under way at one-thiry tomorrow afternoon when a full program of events including 100, 220, 440, and 880 yard runs, one mile, three miles, 120 yards low hurdles, running broad jump, high jump, pole vault, 12 pound shot put, discus, and javelin will be run off. The meet is open to all freshmen and to any other students who have never won an event. At a meeting of the Standing Committee on Track and Harrier, held last Friday afternoon, it was decided that managers of each faculty's team must care for his team's entry list. In view of the difficulty encountered with the medical examinations the committee decided that students other than those in their first year may compete if their medical of last year put them in an eligible category. Officials are at present attempting to place freshmen in medical appointments which are being left open by students leaving for the western harvest. It is hoped that a number of these may be examined today in order that they may compete.

A committee set up at Friday's meeting is expecting to enlist the help of senior students as officials for the junior meet. Team managers are warned that their entries must be in the athletic office by five this afternoon.

The senior interfaculty meet will be held on the 21st, the interfaculty relays on the 28th, the junior harrier on the 31st on the campus, and the senior harrier on the 7th of November in High Park. Post entries will not be allowed in the relay meet and junior harrier. The latter will be approximately three miles in length and a time limit of 24 minutes has been decided on. Competitors must finish under this time to obtain points for their faculties. The senior harrier will be approximately five miles long. Shorts and jerseys must be worn. If the weather is cold sweat shirts and pants will be allowed. The committee further ruled that any student who has finished first, second, or third in a Varsity race of three miles or over will be ineligible for the novice harrier. The first ten finishers in a senior harrier are also ineligible.

Elections at the committee meeting resulted in making Bob Delaney of Meds the vice-chairman and Ken Brown of Vic the secretary.

Warren Stevens has received word from several schools regarding outside meets. O.A.C. is willing to journey to Varsity Stadium for a dual match meet on the 27th of this month, unfortunately the day preceding the interfaculty relays. Niagara University will probably send their harrier team here for an encounter on the 7th of November, the same day as our senior harrier is to be held, and Buffalo State will probably put in their appearance here for a harrier on the 14th of November.

Hec Phillips has formed a team made up of the most part of distance runners and he fully expects to see the Varsity cross country team add the Niagara and Buffalo scalps to the blue and white trophy case. "Yes, sir. Looks like a pretty good year," says Hec.

Led by Mary Barrie, Nurses Win Golf Meet

By Betsy Mosbaugh

Twenty-eight actual contestants out of 40 entries teed off in the Women's Golf Tournament at St. Andrew's Golf Club Friday morning and were rewarded, if not by score, by glorious golfing weather. The turnout this year was greater than it has been for a good many years.

School of Nursing emerged victorious in the low gross, as Mary Barrie holed in with 90. Her ability is seen in her handicap of ten, set by the C.L.C.U.

Trinity claims the honour of being the best represented by good players as Dorothy Fanders took the low net with 105, her 33 handicap giving her a 72. Anne Corrigan also of Trinity was runner up with 82, her handicap being 36. Betty Rolls, University College, was tied with the latter but left before the deciding hole was played.

The laurels of the approaching and putting contest went to Trinity. Helen Johnson was the winner of this event.

U.C. Follies To Carry On

At a last-minute committee meeting Friday afternoon the U. C. Lit. reversed its previous announced decision to postpone the Follies for the sake of those going west.

"Although we will be without valuable men we shall have to go ahead with the Follies on Nov. 13 as scheduled," stated John Wood, fourth-year president. "We should like to put off the show until the end of November but it was absolutely impossible for us to get the use of Hart House Theatre any other Friday night this season." A mid-week show was considered inadvisable for a number of reasons, he added.

In the absence of Social Director Jim Lillico, who is stooking in Saskatchewan, Gray Cowan will serve as Acting Producer. His assistants will include Sandy World, Hal Shuttleworth, and a corps of volunteer script-writers.

Rehearsals are going ahead with the girls and the males who remain, and small parts are being added for the harvesting members of the cast to fill in their return home.

AZINES FOR A WHOLE MONTH, EH?

Queensmen weren't much worried about who was reading periodicals down in Kingston. One lad was consoling himself diversely in a osculatory manner on the platform when a reported approached him. "What do you think of the wheat situation?" "Unnh?" he replied. "Oh, ah, it looks like a good crop! Whee!!!"

Queensmen are gallant though. They won't take no for an answer when it comes to being kissed good-bye, and the mere matter of ripping a co-eds arms out of their sockets is nothing at all to them. But if, in the proeess, she loses an earring they'll all, to a man, grub in the cinders for it. AND THEY DID.

One Queensman had an invention which he was confidentially telling everyone about. It was going to revolutionize harvesting. A water-eoofed pitchfork, equipped with hollow tines. "And guess what," he said. "WE CARRY THE WATER IN OUR HEADS!"

Soon our President arrived on the seene having come down by street car—and paid a double fare. "I haven't been on one at this time of night in some time," he explained.

About 11 the C.P.R. train pulled out, but the C.N.R. special didn't leave for a long time yet. Someone yelled "ALL-ABOOOORD!" at one point and there was a scramble for seats, shouted good-byes, strains of Chattanooga Choo-choo, the Blue and White, and plain wails of "I WANT MY MOMMA!"

But the train didn't budge. So two groups of men tumbled off. One went toward one end of the train and one toward the other. Soon they returned. "Izzer an engine at your end?" queried one group, "Nah," replied the other urbanely, "Any on yours?" "NOPE."

They started to climb back on the train when one asked, "Where's Joe?" "Oh, when he got to the end of the train he kept going, says he's GONNA WALK TO SASKATCHEWAN."

One of the most thoroughly bewildered people present was a Vic professor who was accosted by a Varsity reporter (female) as he wandered dazedly past a group of yelling Queensmen. "Oh," he said as she foscussed on bis overworked eyesight with telling effect, "are you going west?"

And as the scene hit a gawdy and cacophonous climax an exultant voice was heard above all the rest. . . . "This is dirtier football than I played in the S.P.S. game," it shouted gleefully.

McGill Men Reach Winnipeg

from Sir George Williams College in Montreal, 103 from the Ontaria Agricultural College in Guelph, 10 from Kemptville Agricultural College and a few from other colleges. This trainload —largest to date—carried its estimated 700 student-harvesters to Saskatoon.

McGill Men Welcomed

Aboard the Harvest Special, Brandon, Man., Oct. 11 — (CUP)—Five hundred student harvesters from McGill, Queen's, Macdonald College, and Sir George William College were enthusiastic today over the welcome accorded them in Winnipeg. During their one-hour stay in that city they were entertained by a committee of the University of Manitoba Student Union and large hosts of co-eds.

The students were officially welcomed by Fred Tallman, president of the U.M.S.U., and greeted with McGill, Queen's and Manitoba yells by crowds of students.

Later hot dogs and coffee, provided by McGill co-eds, were passed aboard by members of the Winnipeg Tribune Staff and Manitoba co-eds.

The girls interviewed the boys on their opinion of the harvesting project and gave out cards addressed to the Manitoba offices with instructions to send them back telling what they thought of the west.

After being conducted on a brief tour of the city, the boys organized themselves into a parade and marched down the main street and back to the station. The student harvesters were photographed and promised full round of entertainment by the date bureau, should they stop over on return trip. Some of the Queen's students who did stop over were enterained by members of the date bureau.

Arrangements have been made to enterain all large groups of harvesters making the stop-over in Winnipeg.

Co-Eds Donate Harvest Lunches

Twenty-six co-eds gathered in the Hart House Kitchens on Saturday morning to butter, spread, pair, wrap and pack 3,594 slices of bread. As there were to be no diners on the trains carrying the students to Saskatchewan, they had decided to send the boys off with box-lunches of man-sized proportions.

In making the sandwiches, there were used approximately 50 loaves of white and brown bread, 576 eggs, more than 55 pounds of cheese and large amounts of peanut butter and tomato marmalade.

Along with these 1,797 sandwiches were packed 1,000 apples, 1,200 doughnuts, 2 baskets of radishes, salt, and 1,296 pieces of celery.

Out of this stack of statistics may be discerned the approximate amount which each man will receive: four sandwiches, three apples, three doughnuts, several radishes, salt, and three or four pieces of celery.

The food was prepared and packed under the guidance of three Hart House dieticians—Miss E. Ransom, Miss MacLean, and Miss Betty Kettles.

The lunches were taken by truck to the station and were distributed on the train on Sunday by those in charge of the various groups.

Varsity Men Leave For West With Lusty Collegiate Send-Off

from the academic point of view when they come back," President Cody added.

Chancellor W. T. Brown of Victoria was also at the station as was Provost F. H. Cosgrave of Trinity.

President Cody announced that the Canadian National Railways had put their entire medical service at the disposal of the harvesters and that those in charge need only get in touch with railway officials if anything happens.

The Canadian Pacific Railway train bearing students from Victoria and Trinity pulled out on time, but the Harvest Special, carrying the entire Queen's contingent as well as University and St. Michael's Colleges, was delayed 1½ hours, awaiting an engine while the enthusiasm of harvesters and bystanders ebbed and flowed.

The station was packed with relatives and friends seeing the boys off. Toronto co-eds turned out en masse with two big truckloads of food, arranged for by Miss A. E. M. Parkes, acting general secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council.

"We really want to thank Miss Parks and all the girls who helped prepare the food," said Jim McCardle, leader of the St. Michael's contingent. "It should take us well over the first day and after that we'll be running smoothly."

The food put aboard consisted of san of radishes and buckets of celery on ice, cartons of sandwiches and canned goods, two large cartons of doughnuts and seven hampers of apples. Sandwiches were mostly cheese and fried egg as no meat was available. There were also six first aid kits, supplied by University Athletic Director Warren Stevens.

The harvesters' aeeessorics were gaudy and varied. Multi-eoloured flannel shirts, battered straw hats, ski-boots, ear-muffs, parkas, college sweaters and apparently new eorn-cob pipes were in evidenee.

The students rode in eolonist cars, equipped with folding upper bunks and seats that could be pushed together to form lowers. A diner was attached to one train.

A number of German refugee students aecompanied the group. Joe Elias, one of the refugees, said he felt himself somewhat experieneed as he had done some lumbering at an internment eamp in New Brunswick. Many of the St. Michael's volunteers were American who where cleared almost at the last minute.

A party from the Ontario Agricultural College was also on the train. Under the leadership of one of their professors, these students will attend courses in animal husbandry and field husbandry at the University of Saskatchewan and make a survey of western agriculture after finishing their work in the fields.

"It's one of the west ways of beating Hitler," said F. Bolger, '44 O.A.C. "Every man that could go from A.O.C. has gone."

WESTERN GOVERNMENT TO CARE FOR HARVESTERS

Official information on the harvesting scheme released by Simeoe Hall officials Saturday, before the departure of the University of Toronto contingent for the west, was highlighted by news of how student health would be cared for while the volunteers were in the field.

A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, published the text of a telegram from V. C. Phelan, Chief Employment Officer, at Ottawa:

"Please advise University authorities and students proceeding harvest excursion our offices principal points in Saskatchewan ready to render all assistance in cases of illness or other emergency stop students may contact offices personally or by wire or phone collect."

It was announced that representatives of the Department of Labour and of the railway compaines would be at Simeoe Hall from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today to receive applications and issue tickets to any who still wish to volunteer in the harvest plan. No transportation will be supplied after today.

Total number of tickets supplied to volunteers up to when Simcoe Hall closed at 4 p.m. Saturday was 277.

It was announced Saturday that routes of the University of Toronto harvesters had been changed so that all but the men from St. Michael's College went to Regina. Previously University College men where scheduled to go with the St. Michael's contingent to Saskatoon.

Harvest Delays Soph-Frosh Feast

With only a small handful of students in attendance, the University College Literary and Athletic Society held its first meeting Friday night in the Junior Common Room.

With the impending exodus westward of executive officers and students so close at hand, the meeting was marked by many changes in plans for social and athletic activities. President Don Rowat opened the meeting with the announcement that this year's Soph-Frosh banquet will be postponed till sometime late in November.

Mild fireworks marred the nominations of first year executives when several members objected to holding the nominations with such a poor turnout and with so many students preparing to leave for the west.

The retiring Honorary President of the Lit., E. Shortt, addressed the members briefly. He said the "activities of the Literary and Ahtletic Society are of vital importance particularly in time of war.

The University College Soph-Frosh banquet which was to have been held Wednesday, Oct. 14, has been postponed until some time in November.

Queen's Conscripts Lung-Power To Recruit For Harvest Drive

Conseription of Freshman lungpower at Queen's was in part responsible for the large proportion of the university's male registration going West to help with the harvest, Jim Richardson, Senior member for Arts of the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, told a meeting of University of Toronto men in Hart House theatre at noon on Friday.

As part of the hazing this year Freshmen were required to yell, "Yea Queen's!" every time they turned a corner. As soon as student officers heard of the first Department of Labour telegram to the University presidents they added the words "Go West" to the formula. Soon the whole campus was echoing to the ery, "Yea Queens, Go West!"

Richardson said that conditions there were roughly the same as at this University. Confusion followed on news of the government's request. All details regarding military leaves and academic compensation had not yet been thrashed out when they left college, but Stu Webster, President of the Arts Society said, "We don't know what these may be but we have faith that they (the University authorities) will take care of us."

Tom Nixon, Don Rowat, and Jim McCardle, representing Victoria, University and St. Michael's Colleges, sought to bring the men up to date on development in the harvest situation.

The representatives answered what questions they could and deferred others to the men from Queen's.

In an interview following the meeting Stu Webster deseribed the effect of the government's request on his campus. First definite information came with last Tuesday's issue of the Queen's Journal which carried a lead story on harvest leaves. The problems arose regarding leaves from military training—a rumor circulated to the effect that those going might be drafted for failure to complete their training. The housing problem presented itself—how could men leaving be sure of their rooms while they were away?

A guarantee of solutions for these problems and the academic problem came from University authorities on Wednesday. Although the solutions themselves had not been found, Webster said that student opinion swerved over to the attitude that there was a job to be done and they'd better be about it.

As soon as tickets were issued the boys started leaving, he said. Toronto was the assembly point for a large number, although some went through Montreal.

600 Student Harvesters Going To Western Centres Reach Winnipeg, Monday

Men from Varsity and Laval Have Sing-Song in Queen's Coaches; Mass Said By St. Mike's Priest

IN REGINA YESTERDAY

By Canadian University Press

Six hundred student harvesters arrived in Winnipeg from Varsity, Queen's, Laval, Western, McGill, O.A.C. and Sir George Williams College on Thanksgiving day.

"I thought that a long train ride like this would be an awful strain, but with all these different people on board, I find the day just isn't long enough" read a letter received yesterday from Vernon Lang, Assistant Managing Editor of The Varsity. He continued:

"The biggest thing that happened last night was when men from Laval and Toronto all trooped into one of the Queen's coaches and had a sing-song affair. Most impressive, and boy, can those Freneh boys ever sing! I have been having long talks with them in Freneh. They and St. Mike's both have faculty supervisors along with them."

"After a rather heetic two-day trip through the wilds of Northern Ontario," reports Hugh Buchanan, Assist. Editor of the Queen's Journal, "the train bearing the students arrived at Winnipeg only four hours late. Two students have been left behind at Chapleau, but all others were aboard when the train pulled in here."

No serious injuries have been reported from the headquarters of any of the University contingents. However, due to the sudden change in climate, several students have headaches and upset digestions.

"The train stopped for half an hour outside Capreol on Sunday morning and Father L. J. Shook who is accompanying the St. Mike's contingent, said Mass on the train," is the news received from Bob Sheridan of New York, 2nd Year Pass at St. Mike's.

When the train left Capreol the number of cars had been increased from 12 to 18 as they were joined by students from Queen's and MacDonald College.

"The students travelled on ancient colonist coaches which provided no easy trip. Each compartment had its normal quota of four occupants (five were squeezed into some). At night two retired in the upper deck while the other two pulled out the seat and occupied the 'lower berth.' Others just bundled their luggage on the floor and stretched out for the night," reports Lang, referring to the 1,500 mile journey.

Yesterday the students reached Regina, from whence they were distributed in groups varying in size to Filmore, Weyburn, Estevan, Midale, Stoughton, Ernfold, Chaplin, and Mortlach. At these points they will be broken up again into smaller groups.

GILLEY SPEAKS

The Acting Warden, Mr. J. R. Gilley, will speak over CBC at 7:15 p.m. tonight regarding the forthcoming Canadian Armed Forces Art Exhibition which will take place in Hart House.

Economics Series Opened by Coats

"Reconstruction is not so much a job ahead of us at the end of the war, as it is the solution of scores of problems facing us as we go," said Dr. R. H. Coats, speaking on "The General Economic Setting," the first in a series of 10 leetures on reconstruction after the war, in the Economies Building yesterday.

Dr. Coats, who recently resigned as Dominion Statistician and is now on the staff of the Department of Political Economy in the University, was introduced by Professor R. F. Legget, professor of Civil Engineering and chairman of the committee representing the teaching staff of the University.

Dr. Coats emphasized the fact that we are settling many of our so-called "post-war" problems now. Schemes which at the present time are intended to last only for the duration will probably be considered in developing the post-war economy.

Dr. Coats outlined Canada's economic resources and potentialities in the fields of agriculture, fisheries, forests, mining, industry and trade.

Agriculture in Canada is expanding now and should continue to expand, with the ever-increasing interest in nutrition and in prepared foods. Some machinery should be set in operation to deal with periodic agricultural oversupply. Technicians are at present busy with agricultural surveys. A joint economic committee of Canada and the United States is now working on agricultural problems which are of great importance to both countries.

In the post-war timber famine which will face all countries, western Europe will have to look to America, Dr. Coats said, and in so doing, will create a new economic situation.

Mining will be affected by increased consumption and the use of plastics in many articles now made of metal. In manufacturing new and better methods are being developed which will affect Canadian industry after the war.

Last Students Leave Tonight

Three new applications were received from harvesters yesterday, Simcoe Hall announced. Warrants for transportation west were issued for these and two others were issued for previous applications. These late warrants and two others issued at the station Saturday night bring the previous total of 277 men up to 284.

The five men who received transportation warrants today will leave tonight for the west. No further applications will be received, nor will any more warrants be issued.

"I want to thank The Varsity for its assistance in this crisis," Alan Sharp, National Selective Service Officer said. He said that assistance received from the railways in setting up a ticket office at Simcoe Hall was very helpful and saved a great deal of confusion at the Union Station.

History Club Hears Saunders On Russia

Pointed Out that Stalin Regime Wants to Develop Russia, the Nation; Not an International Menace

SAYS WE MUST HELP RUSSIA

The necessity of ceasing to regard Russia as an international menace was urged by Prof, R. M. Saunders, of the Department of History, when he addressed the opening meeting of the Modern History Club at St. Hilda's last night.

He explained that on the death of Lenin, Trotsky, who emphasized the world revolutionary aspect of Communism, was defeated by Stalin, the exponent of the nationalist aspect within the Communistic picture. Stalin maintained that by devoloping Russia, the nation, she would be the perfect socialist state and the rest of the world would naturally follow her example.

Russia needed a long period of peace to aecomplish this, Dr. Saunders continued, and Stalin and his followers were ready to bring about all possible co-operation between Russia and the outside world for this purpose.

The speaker explained that the Rus-

Meds Society Addressed By Woodside

Says Germany Will Be Weaker By Next Year; Stresses Her Internal Disintegration; Our Psychological Superiority

SPEAKS OF SECOND FRONT

The belief that Germany will be definitely weaker next year was expressed by Wilson Woodside, Foreign News Commentator for The Saturday Night, at an open meeting of the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society held at Wymilwood last night.

During his speech and later taking part in an open disеussion, Mr. Woodside stressed the fact that he didn't believe the German resistanee to be of the same quality as formerly. Hilter's recent speeeh, in which the dictator screamed infuriatedly that all his smashing vietories were viewed by the United Nations to be of little importanee in comparison with Dunkirk, Dieppe, the odd advance, bombing raids over Germany—this speech in itself indicated the plane on which this war is being fought —and won. "Not only on the military plane," Mr. Woodside declared, "where the Nazis admittedly have the superiority up to date, but also on a psycho-

University Settlement In Need Of Volunteers

"There is an intense need for student volunteers in University Settlement work," Mrs. F. Crowther, Head Resident of the University Settlement, informed The Varsity yesterday.

"After Christmas, a certain number of students taking preseribed courses which include leadership training, and certain courses in military training for women, supply a great number of volunteers neeessary to carry on the work of the Settlement," Mrs. Crowther explained.

"In the meantime," she pointed out, we are short-handed. The membership of the Settlement is approximately 1,400, of which 750 are children. The largest single national group are of British extraction, but there are 36 different nations represented in the total number. About 150 volunteers are necessary for the work, and on the basis of past experience, about one half have been connected with the University."

"At present the Settlement enables university students to help alleviate one of the worst social problems produced by the war—juvenile delinquency. We can make use of any student who is interested in other people, especially in children.

"The University Settlement was founded by Sir Robert Falconer in 1910. It is a place where University students and staff contribute work in various ways, and where they themselves may learn something of the social and industrial problems of this country. It is first hand experience through personal contact with working class people.

"The volunteer work is of all types," Mrs. Crowther said. "Leadership is fostered in children's groups, and various teen-age clubs. Discussion groups are carried on with industrial workers and university students of a similar age. One branch of the activities is the teaching of English to foreign-born children.

"The Art Gallery is used for Art instruction, and theatre groups give help with folk dancing and singing. In dramatic training. Volunteer pianists other words the variety is appealing to the interests of a great many of the university staff and students."

Speaking of the University Settlement's contribution to the war effort, Mrs. Crowther said: "In the first place it is most obvious that the Settlement provides supervised interests for latch-key children. That is to say, children whose parents are engaged in the war effort. The youngsters need places to go, if they are not to run the streets."

"Then, there is training in citizenship, not only among children, but an effort is made to adjust adults of foreign birth to life in Canada, and conversely to break down any Canadian prejudice against these people.

"Another purpose of Settlement work is to level class distinction. Last year a successful discussion group was held on the 'Empolyers: Trade Union' question and another on 'Canada: Post-War'."

One of the purposes of the University Settlement is to encourage participation in Settlement activities by university students, graduates and faculty. To that end, they should visit the buildings, and see the work done, even if they cannot volunteer for work.

All University students are invited to the Settlement for tea today from 4:00 to 5:30 p.m. The Settlement House is at 23 Grange Road.

HART HOUSE ART CLASSES TO START AGAIN TONIGHT

Tonight at 7:30 p.m., the first meeting of the Hart House Art Classes for 1942-43 will be held in the Hart House art gallery. Carl Schaefer, again the instructor this year, plans to include work in charcoal, chalk, wash and tempera. Men who wish to work in other media will be encouraged to do so.

At the meeting Mr. Schaefer wishes to meet all men interested in such arts and crafts as wood carving, clay modelling, lino cuts or etching, so that a suitable hour for such work can be arranged.

University Labour Club To Hear A. F. of L. Official At Hart House, Today

To Discuss Relation of University Students to Labour; Logan Lauds Club for Capitalizing on Opportunity

SEVERAL OFFICIALS SPEAK

The Student Labour Club of the University has arranged a mass meeting of all students of the University this afternoon at 4:30 in Hart House Theatre, to hear Matthew Woll, Second Vice-President of the American Federation of Labor, and other important labour officials now in Toronto for the annual A. F. of L. convention.

In a statement to The Varsity yesterday, Professor H. A. Logan of the Economies Department, said, "I should like to endorse the action of the Student Labour Club in arranging the meeting in Hart House Theatre to hear representatives of organized labour. It is only onee in a generation that the American Federation of Labor assembles in Toronto and the leaders of the Labour Club are to be congratulated on being alert to capitalize on the opportunity."

Mr. Woll will discuss the relations of the university student to labour.

Carl Birchard, II Social Studies, and meniber of the Student Labour Club said, "This mass meeting is planned to help the students understand what the leaders of organized labour are doing for labour and for the war."

President H. J. Cody yesterday notified the Student Labour Club, "On account of absenee from the university for the purpose of addressing an international meeting of Engineers at Niagara Falls, I shall not be present at the meeting to be addressed by Mr. Woll, Vice-President of the A. F. of L."

"I am glad that an official of so important a body, representing 6,000,0000 workers, is to address the students and set forth the vast contribution of labour to our common war effort," said President Cody. "The A. F. of L. has stood for wise and constructive aetion, and for co-operation with all the other groups who together make production possible."

Speaking with Mr. Woll will be Pat Sullivan, Vice-President of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (A. F. of L.) and President of the Canadian Seamen's Union, and Paul Siren, International representative of the United Auto Worker's Union (C.I.O.).

Mr. Sullivan will discuss the plans set forth by the Seamen's Union towards speeding up Canada's shipping. Mr. Siren will outline the importance and nature of collective bargaining as an instrument for all-out production.

Principal Malcolm W. Wallace of University College will welcome the speakers and Prof. Logan will speak at the conclusion. W. Hanley, V Meds and President of the Student Labour Club,

Reynolds Discusses War, Universities

By George Elliott

Diseussing the value of Officers' Training in the universities with The Varsity on Sunday afternoon, Quentin Reynolds, well-known author and war correspondent, who was in Toronto over the week-end, said that it is the well-trained men of the ranks and the skilled technical sergeants who make up an efficient army. That additional something, he added, that a man reeeives in university, does make him a more finished leader.

Reynolds, a graduate of Brown's University, started his career representing a news serviee in Germany because be had studied German for three years in high-school.

Elaborating on the show the Canadians put on at Dieppe, he said, "the Canadians at Dieppe My God! They were terrific! The only reason so many prisoners were taken was because the Canadians gained so much ground in such a short time in their headlong rushes up the beaches and streets of the city that they didn't have the men to consolidate their foothold."

Speaking of Ross Munro, former Varsity News Editor, Reynolds praised him highly for "a darned good story on Dieppe." The second front, he thought, is "pretty much of a military affair—rather than political—and MacNaughton of the Canadians will certainly play an important part in it. The Canadians are just dying to start the fight."

Universities in Russia haven't been funetioning since before the siege of Moscow, he said. Only the medical buildings were open when he was last in Moscow.

All Tickets Sold For All Varsity

The ticket sale today for the third annual All-Varsity Fall Dance at Hart House brought two hundred male students crowding into the Debates room by 11:00 a.m. even though it had been previously announced that no tickets would be sold until 12:45 p.m.

The ever-growing line wound through the Hart House corridors all noon hour, and when the last of the five hundred scheduled tickets had been sold a great cry of indignation went up. However the Hart House officials stood by their original plans and the rest of the eleven hundred tickets went on sale at 5:45 p.m. A small number of tickets were reserved for graduates.

The committee in charge of the sale thought very highly of the quiet and intelligent manner with which the undergraduates conducted themselves. Three sale wickets were set up in the anteroom behind the Debates Room with two men at each, enabling the line to move through quite quickly.

The last ticket went at 6:18 p.m. Except for the unfortunate few who had forgotten their registration cards all of the waiting multitude were satisfied.

Chinese Students Conquer

Our hats are off to the unconquerable students of China, the bravest and most enterprising of our confreres the world over. If an enemy had invaded and captured our eastern coast, and looted or destroyed all the universities as far west as the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, we would have a situation roughly similar to that in China today. That is, it would be similar if the students from the gutted centres of learning, from Mount Allison, Acadia, St. Francis Xavier, Laval, McGill, Montreal, Queen's, Ottawa, Toronto, Western and McMaster had all packed up a few necessities and some books and instruments salvaged from their laboratories and libraries and had trekked over the new highway north of Lake Superior to a place of refuge in western Canada, where they continued their studying under the sky for want of housing and lived in caves or hastily built shelters.

It seems impossible that this could be done by any students anywhere, that any would have the fortitude to carry on in the face of such terrible odds, but the Chinese students are accomplishing it.

Chiang Kai-shek has explained to them that China needs teachers and leaders more than she needs her students as soldiers.

"Students and educators today must consider themselves as warriors storming forts and braving death, as fore-runners in new social reforms, as founders of a new nation who defy all hardships, as sages and heroes who play decisive roles in critical moments of the nation. . . ."

Since the opening of the "China Incident" in July 1937, 93 per cent of the schools and colleges have been destroyed by the Japanese. Only eight colleges are still functioning in their pre-war location and yet 75 per cent of the Chinese students have gone on with their studies.

United They Trekked

Nankai University, the best equipped in China, was destroyed by bombs at the very beginning of the war; National Peking and Tsing Hua were captured and made into barracks for the invaders. But the students of these universities were far from demoralized: they banded together and moved their universities a thousand miles inland to Changsha in South Central China. Even there the Japanese raiders followed them and they moved on.

There was only one road to the west and no transportation, so both professors and students set out to walk. They walked till they could go no further through sheer fatigue, and then they stopped and studied. Then they continued walking. In this way they covered another thousand miles in sixty days, taking their instruments and books with them.

Many other universities did the same. They live where they can: in the forests or in caves when there are no buildings available. They hold their classes under the sky and cook their own food. In their spare time they build themselves houses.

The Chinese student's working day begins at five o'clock when he gets up. Lectures last from six till four-thirty with two hours off for lunch. After lectures they do construction and farm work until dark. On their free holidays they go out into the countryside to help with the education of the farm people and to tell them how the war is going.

The medical schools have persevered as well as the academic colleges. The great need for doctors has speeded up their work and in order to train medical officers the Guerilla Medical School was organized in mountain caves, safe from enemy attack. The course has been compressed into two years.

Made Their Texts

The universities which have trekked were not able to bring nearly enough text-books with them to supply their students, so they made more of mimeographed sheets. One convalescent artist-soldier and a staff he gathered together reproduced 400 copies of an anatomical chart from the one anotomy book which had been saved. The new medical knowledge which is constantly being discovered through the experience of the army doctors is immediately included in the medical instruction.

The gentler arts are by no means neglected. Lu Hsun Academy, now housed in caves, trains its students not only with guns but also in the use of pen and brush and in music; it then sends out groups of artists, writers and musicians to the firing lines to teach and inspire the soldiers and civilians.

This use for the supposedly "delicately nurtured" arts may seem strange at first. In China none of these arts has been allowed to get out of touch with the people and the music particularly is a great help in teaching the illiterate part of the population to read. Once they know the song by heart they do not find such difficulty in learning the characters for it. The record is inspiring: before the war began China estimated that she had 280,000,000 illiterate persons; by 1941 in spite of war and terrible disaster, 46,000,000 of these illiterates could read and write, and this is due to the efforts of her indefatigueable students and their equally heroic professors.

Need we say more than that our hat is off to them?

October In Queen's Park

Scuffing through the leaves of Queen's Park with the warm October sunlight shining down on your bare head, which you keep carefully bent down so that only the grass and the dead leaves and the tree roots are in sight, you can almost imagine that you are in the midst of a forest and that the swish of traffic is the wind in the tree tops. October is the month of all months to tramp through sun-lit forests and, if time-table and other considerations keep you chained in the city, Queen's Park and a little imagination make a fair substitute.

Nature lovers in England and on the Continent have praised "One impulse from a vernal wood" with Wordsworth, and have urged their readers to turn from the "dull and endless strife" of books, if only for an hour or two, in order to draw strength and wisdom from the land. They wrote of spring, their greatest season, but our own poets, particularly Lampman, have given the same crown to our radiant season of autumn.

The authors whose works we study, men like Thoreau and Whitman and Robert Frost, have all praised this communion with nature, and we read and then turn in our haste to still more books. No one with his nose in a text-book and his spare time carefully allotted has much time to give to nature. The idea is to snatch moments when we can so that we may not become fossilized. We all know the almost unbearable longing to get away from the city at times, and when this is not possible we can count ourselves lucky that, unlike most of the citizens, we have the open piece of land of the Park within easy reach.

While the prospect of enjoying the autumnal beauties of October within the confines of Queen's Park may affect you with the same feeling of compression you felt on hearing of Sir James Barrie's pacing on a hearth rug, the Park can provide a number of amenities which the average forest lacks. The flock of pigeons wheeling and fluttering around the man who feeds them regularly each morning, always at the same bench near the Anatomy Building, makes a sight guaranteed to cheer the most jaded spirit.

We were lucky this year in having the Thanksgiving holiday fall on a fine week-end, so that most of us could get away from the city while the country was at its best. For those who either could not get away or who still feel the need of shuffling through some dead leaves, Queen's Park on a sunny morning can be a good substitute.

Life . . .

On Tabacca Road

I am going to follow in the wake of a good many other critics who have seen Tobacca Raad, jump off the deep end and call the play an important social document. It certainly is all of that and it depicts a seamy side of life than many of us refuse to acknowledge even exists.

But if Tobacca Raad were no more than a social document it would not be worthwhile seeing. It is far, far more than that. It is one of the best-produced plays that has ever appeared in this city. There is not one flaw in it, not one miscast actor, not one over-played line.

From the moment Dude Lester starts chunkin' his ball against the wall of the cabin until Jeeter Lester finally settles down to rest up a bit on the porch of the same shack, you, in you are human, are held in the grip of a drama so intense that it refuses to allow the auditor to relax for one moment. It is the drama of the wreck of a primitive civilization, a wreck caused by progress, but a wreck none the less tragic for that.

I believe advances, and some critics, have called Tobacca Road a comedy. There are humorous touches in it, of course, as there are in even the most sordid life. But Tobacca Road is a tragedy. If you laughed in the wrong places, you did not understand.

As mentioned above, the whole cast is perfect. John Barton, as Jeeter Lester, forms the centre about whom everyone else revolves; Sara Perry as his wife, is only slightly less important. The two of them give unity to the play. It is unfair to let individual notice stop there, but space is pressing.

Many people will hate Tobacca Road because it is a social document, because it is intentionally harsh and realistic, but it must not be approached in that attitude. The play is great, artistically, and with any kind of a fair chance, is so gripping that likes and dislikes turn out to be mere prejudices.

And in case anyone has the happy idea that Tobacca Raad is some far off, misty, unreal place, it should be pointed out that its inhabitants people several communities of my acquaintance in Ontario and Quebec.

Dr. Arnold Walter

Arnald Walter

Doctor Arnold Walter gave the first of a series of five lectures on Modern Harmony last Thursday evening. He speaks simply, and clearly, but—more important than that—what he has to say is not only interesting but also vital.

The greater part of the lecture dealt with the manner in which our blind reverence for music of the past affects modern musical life. "For a long time," Dr. Walter stated, "we have been living in a sort of musical museum, with the old masters more or less permanent." He went on to show that this is so in both the music we listen to and the theory that we study. No one could have appreciated his denunciation of the common methods of teaching theory more than the reviewer, because for a long time he sweltered under these methods and felt their uselessness.

WAUGH CAPS TENNIS TITLE

Downs Saba In Finals To Take Laurels For Vic

Saba Turned on Pressure in Second Set to Win 6-3. But Waugh Took Other Two 6-2, and 6-1

ALSO WINS DOUBLES

Bill Waugh succeeded to the tennis throne vacated by Bruce Hall, when he downed Chuck Saba, a fellow Vicman, yesterday on Vic's courts, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1. Waugh defeated Mel Jones and Saba turned back Ian Rusted in Saturday's semi-final. Waugh also grabbed a share of the doubles laurels when he and Pete Bryce bounced Rusted and Jones in the finals last Saturday.

Refugees from the library formed the gallery as the two Vicmen battled for the University Championship at noontime yesterday. The first set was featured by carefuly playing and excellent placements. Waugh grabbed a 3-0 lead and although Saba then rallied to take two games, ran out the string with comparative ease.

In the second set Saba turned on his hard-hitting, crowd-pleasing style and had Waugh on the short end of a 4-1 count before the latter could recover his game. This proved to be a turning point, as Waugh refused to become rattled and soon had the game in control again. Saba was not to be denied, however, and took the set 6-3.

Waugh swept to a splendid finish, winning the last set 6-1, and thus the University Championship. Saba tried hard, but Waugh made him play his style of game and reached set point rather easily.

So the University has a new Tennis Champion after all the years dominated by the superb play of Bruce Hall, Davis Cup star. As Bill will graduate this year, his reign will be brief. Next year will find Mel Jones and Chuck Saba as chief claimants to the vacant title.

MUSIC & DRAMA

Dr. Walter pointed out that harmony and counterpoint, though once separate fields of composition, are now inseparable, but few modern teachers seem aware of the fact. Today we naturally think in terms of the orchestra, and yet we are taught to write in four part vocal harmony. The method devised hundreds of years ago of teaching counterpoint in five species has certainly out-lived its usefulness. No one now, would ever think of writing a composition even in the fifth species or so-called florid counterpoint, and yet students are forced to spend long hours mastering all the rules which they will discard as soon as they have passed their exams. One of our professors has often told us that the only good in mastering rules is in learning how to break them; but why master rules that are not applicable to our age?

Dr. Walter, however, is not one of those radicals who, realizing the lack of recognition given to modern music, belittles the work of the masters. He does deplore our inverted sense of values when we put the performer above the composer, and our living in the past let alone the future), but he respects the greatness of the masters and cautions us to solve our difficulties as they did —by studying the works of their predecessors.

In Dr. Walters interesting analysis of several classical compositions, and the opening of the second act of "Tristan and Isolde" he showed that classical harmony is based on dominant-tonic relationship revolving around the complete cadence; while modern harmony is based on dominant-tonic relationship, but employs chromaticism.

We are certainly looking forward to Dr. Walter's next lecture, but we hope that, for the benefit of many in the audience who have not studied theory, he will explain some of the techineal terms that he is forced to use.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Tennis is still the topic of the hour around our sports circles—now that the weather has favoured us for three consecutive days or more—and if all goes well, we may get into the Interfaculty field come this Friday. Meanwhile, let's look over our prospective players and see who we have and what they are doing. We tried terribly hard to break through the ramparts of the switchboard which connects us with the girls who play for the blue and grey—but all we heard was buzz, buzz, buzz. . . . But we did glean a few honoured names of gals who are approaching the final round with flying colours. Dorothy Jane Sanders is still a top rank player for our money — or do we hear wheat? Dorothea Wedd and Muriel Chapman are guaranteed to run Alice Marble's proteges a bit of competition; while their team-mate, likely in the person of Barbara Conway, astonish her oponent with ace after ace until all our new linesmen will be fairly dizzy trying to watch ye old play.

St. Mike's are still in the semi-final stage, but are planning to give their blonde star from the rocky shores of Newfoundalnd, one Maureen Murphy, a bit more competition before she treks to St. Hilda's to stroke for the blue and blue along with her prospective (there's that word again) team-mates.

The gals down the scarlet and gold way are still headed by Virginia Rappell MacLeod—and we might add very well headed indeed—what with all the staunch tennis enthusiasts coming up from the freshie's ranks. They still have a few games to complete before completing their team—and we should see a few games played there today. (All prospective spectators should contact the players for the times, since they decide them according to their time-tables.) One of the gals in Marjorie Chantler.

Last but by no means least, we have some news—and quite a goodly number of prospects, from the girls who don the red and white—U.C. and P.H.E.

Gladys Brenner defeated N. Bell 9-11, 6-0; 7-5, to win a place on the team—in addition to the three players we mentioned yesterday—and, as soon as possible, she will play A. Gibson—a worthy opponent indeed—since she, only yesterday, defeated M. Reid 6-3, 6-2. In addition, we expect a bang-up game to be played (so don't say we didn't warn you) by one R. Parkinson of far-flung fame, having defeated P. Garnham 6-0, *-0, just yesterday also. But please don't go away yet—bceause we haven't told you the name of her worthy opponent of the rackets—our own star of last year who cometed to famed over night—one Betsy Mosbaugh, known for her determination and calmness in the face of tennis balls bolting all around her.

And now we come to P.H.E., a real treat to anyone's weary eyes, thoroughbred troopers in the sports world around these "hyar" parts. You may remember that V. Kitto, M. Finlayson, and R. Carleton have been chosen for the team, subject now only to the challenge games. To them, we now add M. Lifton, who won her game yesterday by the score 6-2, 6-1. M. Keir as well has won a place by her good playing against R. Christman; and Connie O'Connor makes up the sixth player on P.H.E.'s squad. That leaves only the last round to be played off by Kitto and Finlayson; Carleton and Lifton. Thirty for now—and let's all guess what will happen when comes the big tournament time.

C.C.F., Women's Co-op Hear J. L. Cohen

"A community which has few civic liberties is not self-reliant," J. L. Cohen, eminent labour lawyer, told a meeting of the University of Toronto C.C.F. Club at the Women's Co-operative Residence at Urwick House last night.

Mr. Cohen said that when a war-time legislation is prepared, all legitimate interests should be allowed to function and should not be crushed out by the specific war need.

Junior School Looms Powerful

According to Junior School's jovial manager, R. A. Ritchie, "It's a breeze." In an enlightening interview the Little Bull confided in this scribe, to the effect that "His boys have enough trick plays up their sleeves to fool the whole Swiss navy."

Just look at the array of fast, sober young talent in the backfield. Vern Booth, Bill Moffat, Gus Campbell, Bill Laurance and Herb Stricker. Every one of these pigskin chasers has an admirable record behind him. Booth with L.P.C.I. and Junior School last year, Bill Moffat with U.T.S. and Junior School, Herb Stricker with Harbord and Argos, Gus Campbell with Stratford and Bill Laurance with Runnymede. Another potential halfback who looks good is Jack McLean who seems to have as much on the balls of his feet as any one out there.

Junior School's line looms as powerfull as any around. Harv. Spence at snap with Doug Aurie and Ken Sharpe on either side of him. Ken is one of the Humberside Sharpes and will be playing with brother Walt who is a middle on the School squad. Both boys were members of the 1940 Humberside City Champs and are tickled pink to be working together again. Gord Hunt and "Sweeney" Cross are two good linemen.

The ends in the line-up are Bob Riddel, an all star from Harbord, and Jim Bromley, a herring-choker from the Maritimes. These characters, from the classy backfield to the hard hitting ends, are all supported by a second-string with plenty of punch on the ball. Jack Stafford, sensational hockey star, is notable among these and may be drawn as one of the regulars the way he is going at it.

Professor Saunders Addresses History Club

sians have not forgotten how the capitalist nations opposed her revolution and that this feeling of suspicion was revived in 1938 when Russia was not invited to the Munich Conference.

He pointed out that Russia entered into a treaty with Germany in order to gain time in which to develop her defenses and also in case the war should end in a stalemate. She would then be holding the whip hand.

In conclusion, Dr. Saunders warned that if we don't do something practical to help the Russians their suspicions against us may revive. He said Russia must be included in any post-war settlement.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

SKOOL!

Well friends, hello mother, the time has come to cast our weary eye over the RUGBY SITUATION, As a matter of fact the rugby situation hardly deserves to have an eye cast over it, but as press time draws nigh one grows more and more desperate for something to cast one's eye over. Last year The Varsity as a matter of course chose Senior School to win the coveted cup, and the grandiose glory. And, also as a matter of course, Vic came along to win the aforementioned cup and the aforementioned glory. That was in no way the fault of The Varsity. The fact that Vic was a better team than School on a certain November day in no way detracted from The Varsity's claims that School should have won. Eleven hundred other people thought that School should have won too. This year of course, due to increased enrollment in the "little red schoolhouse" upwards of fourteen hundred people will think that School should have won. And, as before, so does The Varsity. After all, if we pick them year after year we have to be right sometimes, provided the law of averages is still working. Our natural inclination, by the way, is to choose Aerial Navigation and let it go at that. You say that there is no longer any course by that name, let alone a team? O.K.—so they won't win—but we'll have a perfect alibi!

As a matter of down-to-earth fact, we have a hunch that the Engineers, both Senior and Junior, will do remarkably well this year. They have a couple of ace coaches in the persons of Al Box and Mike Rodden. They have plenty of good material as you will see elsewhere on this page; and they have confidence—but confidence! Due to conditions caused by harvesting the Arts teams will probably be rather weak for a while so that School teams and Meds will likely be grouped together, all previous notices to the contrary. But when the playdowns roll around we have a hunch that Vic will be in there, and taking an important part in the proceedings. But to please the majority of our readers we will once again say School, Senior School in fact, will garner the Mulock Mug this season.

YEARS HAVE GONE BY . . .

Maybe we're at fault, maybe we're getting old (Yipe!) and cynical, but this fall's football games seem to lack the entertainment value that football games used to have. Which probably proves a point long maintained by critics—that football has very little appeal in itself and depends on glamorous spectacles for its attraction. For instance last Monday the only interest we had in the final game was to avoid seeing those awful uniforms of the "Indians." We hoped the Air Force would keep them on the other end of the field continually. Other than that, it was just a scene in which twenty-four "Guys-named-Joe" chased each other without rhyme or reason. The glamour has departed with the bands, cheering sections, and intersectional rivalry. The dullest Intercollegiate game had ten times the crowd appeal of the Thanksgiving day show. Even the Argo-Roughriders' contests were glamourous to an extent. Now all we have left is rugby, plain and simple. And we find it dull—very dull. The opening Navy-Air Force clash was something different. It had all the ingredients of a good football show. But with the exception of that bright incident, the rest of the season has made the C.O.T.C. seem almost (almost, we said) attractive.

Still Chance To Enter Today's Novice Track Meet

To Begin at 1:30 at Varsity Stadium; 120 Yard Low Hurdles and Pole Vault, First Events

All freshmen and other men who have never won an event before are reminded that post entries will be accepted in this afternoon's novice track meet. The meet will get under way in Varsity stadium at 1:30 p.m. sharp with the 120 yard low hurdles and the pole vault. The program has been arranged so that as far as possible there will be a track event and a field event being run off at the same time. The various distance events have been well spaced so that a competitor may easily enter at least two events. The sprints have been treated similarly.

Novice meet officials will be composed of senior students. The officials for the senior meet next Wednesday will be noted track authorities and former athletes.

Hec Phillips said he hopes to have the meet run off entirely by 5:15 p.m. One relay race has been placed on the program but the main relays will be held on the 28th of this month when a meet devoted entirely to realy events will take place.

With such material on hand as Doug Herron, Wally Brown, and Frank Fordyce, all from S.P.S., a fairly successful meet is expected this afternoon. Meds and School are favored but U.C. may surprise.

A time schedule for the meet can be found elsewhere on the page and competitors are warned to make sure of the time of their events.

Menacing Talent In Senior School

So you'rs wondering what kind of a team Senior School is going to field on the gridiron this year? Well between you and me and the Champus Cat, it looks like a powerful squad. If the "Hart House Hardware" were given away to the interfaculty rugby winner, it would probably go to School. We're not saying Junior or Senior, but they both have more talent than any other campus team. In fact since the "Whee for Wheat" episode they have more talent than all the other faculties combined. Yes, even Meds.

Back from last year's aggregation are "Turk" Grosskurth, Jack Plaxton and John Lucas. These three backfielders rank with the best ever to go through School. Lucas has some mysterious ailment bothering him which the doctors cannot fathom. So far he has been only a bystander to rugby workout but, if the medicos find out where the other quarter of his left leg disappeared to, he will be in for the first game.

Naturally, on one need be introduced to the quadruple threat boys, Grosskurth and Plaxton, both of whom have been out since the first day.

Will Henry is recovering from four boils, six earbuncles and a barnacle, and until his system clears up he won't don the School colours.

Luke Hamlin, who showed up so well in the final games last year, and Bob Seymour of last year's Junior School, complete the backfield line-up.

The quarterback duties will probably fall to Brian White who held down that spot for the Juniors last season.

The centre position will be filled by John Mitchell who snaps a lovely ball. "Steam-Roller" Gow will be the mainstay of the line with Keith O'Donald, Doug Zimmerman and Page to assist him.

The wing-line will be one of the most powerful spots on the team. Fleet footed "Weed" Quittenton and lacrosse marvel Frankie Kellam are two mainstays on the end. Doug Wallace, Bob Hamilton, John Brennan and John Orlando are in the running for the reserve spots. All are good men and it is hard to say who rates as "first string" and who doesn't.

With such a colorful squad as this Senior School should place high in the running. Provided the Schoolmen stay away from "The Club," they will do all right.

Red Cross Work Makes Progress At University

University Women Supersede Former Workers Now in War Industries; All Material Supplied By Red Cross

"The University Red Cross workroom in the Household Science building is putting out a tremendous amount of work at great speed," Mrs. W. E. Gallie, director of the workroom, said yesterday. Approximately 48 women students are doing Red Cross sewing, devoting 30 hours a term to the work.

The anticipated scarcity of volunteers caused by the flow of women into war industries, has been counteracted by the number of students who are assisting in the work this year, Mrs. Gallie said.

The workers make a variety of articles, including baby buntings, boys' suits, dresses and coats, quilts, "comfort" bags and minesweeper mitts. Ninety-nine quilts were made last year. This year the quota has been raised to 132. The record quilt output of the workroom is four in one week. As many as 25 girls have worked on one quilt at a time.

Five hundred "comfort" bags, similar to the Navy League "ditty" bags, will be made this year. This will be the first duty of the students. The girls have also been asked by the Red Cross to pack 8,000 additional "comfort" bags.

"We'll get them done even if we have to take all our workers out of every other work," said Mrs. Gallie. "The speediest way is through packing parties —a swift and painless method."

All materials for articles made are supplied by the Red Cross; money spent for thread, trimmings, and the like is contributed by each group.

"Though no more volunteers can be taken for actual sewing in the classes, we'd like girls to drop in on spares to sew and quilt," said Mrs. Gallie. "If you have a spare, work is always ready. We have 20 machines and we want them all going all the time."

Labour Club To Hear Woll

will preside.

In his statement to The Varsity, Pro. Logan said, "Matthew Woll is one of the best-known of labour's standard-bearers. As vice-president of the A. F. of L. he was a trusted lieutenant of Samuel Gompers even before the regime of William Green. He knows the American Labor Movement from the inside, in fact, he has played no small part in controlling its policies. He is a man of positive views and has never been backward in standing for them.

"The Canadian speakers are younger men but likewise stand for things that are definite in organization and in practice. Paul Siren of the Automobile Workers, in contrast with Mr. Woll, is an industrial unionist. Pat Sullivan of the Seamen's Union, whose name has been much before the Canadian public in recent years is a ready and fluent speaker."

Carl Birchard emphasised the fact that attendance at the meeting is open to all students. "It is hoped that attendance will be large," he said, "in view of the importance of the speakers."

hither and yon

with harriet

Not only would it be downright courageous, but well nigh impossible to start any column after the events of the past week without at least mentioning the harvesters. So . . .

From our special spy on the western front comes this little anecdote of Foleyet.

It seems that at all such little villages where the Harvest Special stopped, about 1,000 student poured out and temporarily took over the town. At the above-mentioned whistle stop in Northern Ontario, the mob was confronted with one lone gal on a bike WITH A GUN! Could it be a part of the Nothern war effort or had someone warned her that McGill was on the move?

Did you hear about the student who finally put one over on a professor? Well, he comes from the west (according to the Gateway). It would seem that this certain youth had a five-page essay to hand in; he managed to wring out a first and last page, but at that point words failed him—so to speak. What to do? After carefully investigating the problem from every angle, he finally wrote three pages of "and's," inserted them between the first and last pages, and casually handed the essay in. AND HE GOT 75 ON IT!

From a most respectable don about U.C. we gathered this tale. It seems that a friend of hers doing post-grad work takes a class of Meds somewhere. One of these was preparing to do something with a rabbit, and was clutching it rather gruesomely around its middle. Said the gal 'charge d'affaires' in a stern tone, "Put down that rabbit! How would you like to be squeezed around the middle like that?"

Not only do Seniors at Western exploit poor bewildered freshman by selling subscriptions to the Gazette and Handbook; but, having met with such success in these lines one of their number actually started selling seats in the Library. He was so successful in putting the idea across that one bright member of Arts '46 actually applied to the Librarian the next day (wallet in hand) for ONE ON THE AISLE IN THE READING ROOM. Did he actually want to work, or did he think that the rush of seats would be so great that he might do a little speculating of his own PERHAPS?

But along the true war effort vein is this from the Daily:

"The Lord gave us two ends to use;
One to think with, one to sit with.
The war depends on which you choose;
Heads we win, tails we lose!"

Residence Co-eds Cooperate To Solve Maid Problem

A cry just as familiar to our ears this year as "Get those freshies," is the mournful wail, "What are we going to do for help?" which echoes through every hall of every women's residence on the campus.

Since the passage of the ruling that all permanent employees must be hired through the National Selective Service, all women's residences have been faced with the acute problem of inadequate help. The various dietitians of the colleges assured us that it is practically impossible to obtain employees, and that the situation has reached a very crucial point. The deficiency is remedied by part-time help as far as possible, but this is difficult and does not tend to promote efficiency.

Whitney Hall is the greatest sufferer. Miss Murphy, their dietitian informs us that instead of forty-six permanent staff, Whitney Hall now operates with a staff of twenty-six plus some temporary workers. The students have been called upon to remedy the situation. They have always made their own beds, but now they empty baskets, clean rugs and do general duty. The girls now help serve at mealtime and have taken over a new system of desk-duty. The students take turns answering the phone and door. On Sundays there are three shifts. But the girls claim that it is not too bad as there are about fifty-four of them in the house. No guests may be invited to meals at Whitney Hall any more—not even to Sunday tea.

At St. Hilda's the situation is much happier since the staff is only cut down by two. As breakfast and luncheon have always been buffet style, there is not so much difficulty. One change is the fact that student guests may be entertained at dinner only every other night instead of nightly as previously. However, this change is due to lack of space and not to lack of help. Another innovation St. Hilda's way, is the fact that the girls do desk duty five nights a week. This is entirly new, and the majority of the students find it fascinating.

Miss Van Allen of Victoria described the help situation as "very difficult." She feels that there are many women who would be glad of permanent employment of this type if only the Colleges could advertise for them. But she feels there is not bright future in store unless something radical occurs. As it is, Vic is using much part-time help. While the cleaning of rooms is still done, this has been cut to every other day. One or two girls assist at dinner every evening and also at Sunday tea. This is new to Vie as is the buffet luncheon which has been inaugurated this term. Miss Van Allen stressed what grand sports the girls are, and how willing they have been to co-operate in every instance.

At St. Joseph's College there is still room service but it is very probable that in the near future "dusters and mops will be left for the girls to make use of!" The shortage of labour is felt only in this, and in the fact that the girls now help to serve all the meals. Since the sudents have always done phone duty and distributed the laundry, their routine is not greatly altered.

Lorretto College has been decidedly affected by the shortage. They are having difficulty in obtaining even part-time labour. The rooms are still being done by the maids but this is likely to be discontinued at any time. At dinner one girl from each table of eight assists in serving. The freshies have always done phone duty, taking a night a week, so there has been no change of schedule in this respect.

Woodside Addresses Arts and Letters Club

logical and an economic plane—and there's where we hold the superiority. For, as Hitler says, these multitudinous victories of his don't mean much as long as we win out in the long run."

The internal disintegration of Germany, indicated by the age-old conflict between the Party and the Military General Staff, the numerous purges and executions, and so on, is a factor, the speaker also stated, which, although it cannot be counted on to win the war, is yet not to be ignored. "A hard blow applied to this open fissure is all that is necessary to bring down the Nazi house," he said.

Concerning a Second Front, the great issue of this time, Mr. Woodside predicated the following program for successful allied war policy: 1. Clean up the Mediteranean this winter; 2. Invade from the West next spring; 3. In the meantime, bomb Germany.

Although this offensive will cost a great deal, and war never progresses as fast as one expects it to, this war does seem to be in its 1918 phase

War Prisoners Pursue Studies

Prisoners of war in both Canada and Europe are being given an opportunity to continue their education through the International Student Service. John Coleman, Executive Secretary of the Student Christian Movement in the University of Toronto, explained that camps where British officers and men are imprisoned have been visited by Mr. Andre de Blonay of Switzerland and these camps can now obtain both books and correspondence courses, although with some difficulty.

Among the records of those receiving such courses are the names of six graduates of Canadian universities. Harold Bernstein from the University of Toronto is one of them. British prisoners can carry on these courses with Cambridge and the University of London. It is even possible to obtain a degree from the latter. The papers which the prisoners prepare are sent from Germany to Geneva and then by airmail to the respective universities.

The service originated in Europe with the French and Polish and has extended its work to cover British prisoners of war and internees in England and Canada.

In Canada internees are able to take extension courses at Queens and correspondence courses through the other Canadian universities. They themselves have done the work in many cases after the I.S.S. has helped to arranged courses and lectures. At one camp a professor of Sanskrit gives lectures, in another there are thirty hours of lectures a week in engineering and science. The study of languages is very extensive.

Many refugees and those who have proved themselves anti-Nazi have been released and some are studying at our own universities; while from 100 to 200 wrote their matriculation examinations at McGill University last year.

French And English Students Allocated To Farm Jobs In Two Hours At Saskatoon

Two Cars of French-speaking Laval University Men Make Excursion Truly Representative of East

CANES INSTEAD OF TIES

By Frank Rasky

Aboard C.N.R. Harvest Special en route to Saskatchewan, Oct. 12 — At Capreol, Ont. yesterday morning the Harvest Special took on two cars of French-speaking men from Laval University, Quebec City, to become a train fully representative of Eastern Canada's student population.

Numbering over a hundred, these men are jolly, neat looking and wear their hair in a manner which would give a C.O.T.C. officer apoplexy. They carry black-and-gold canes instead of school ties and discuss politics seriously. They like to break the monotony of the trip by chanting 'Alouette' and have joined the men of other colleges in songfests.

Their lusty yell, beginning "Carabin, ziska, Carabourn, zoska," has been added to the yells of Western, Varsity and Queen's which echoed through Union Station last Saturday night.

After the first half hour of the trip the students settled down, ceased fidgeting and made themselves as comfortable as possible in the unpretentious colonist cars. At least one portable radio was produced, while the skill of Sol Littman, II Sociology and Bill O'Brien, III Pass Arts, on the kazoo and mouth-organ, respectively, have been turned to good account.

950 Students Sent Out from Saskatoon; 1,250 Go to Farms from Regina Over Weekend

DISTRIBUTION EFFICIENT

By Vernon Lang

Saskatoon, Oct. 13—(CUP)—Distribution of the 950 student harvesters who arrived here today from colleges in the East is well under way. An additional 1,250 arrived in Regina over the week-end and have been sent to farms.

Distribution of the Saskatoon group actually began at points east of here. The first group left the train at Watrous where Saskatchewan government officials boarded the train to issue transportation warrants.

Complete lists of locations requiring harvesters were available when the lads from Queen's, Ontario Agricultural College, Toronto, Western, Sir George Williams College and Laval University arrived in Saskatoon and complete allocation of the harvesters was made in two hours.

The train was considerably overdue at Saskatoon. Delay was due in part to a harvester parade in Winnipeg led by a welcoming committee of University of Manitoba co-eds.

U. of Sask. Head Is Toronto Grad

Saskatoon, Oct. 13—W. P. Thompson, M.A., Dean of the University of Saskatchewan's Faculty of Arts, and a graduate of the University of Toronto's Biology Department in 1910, will take over as University of Saskatchewan's acting president Oct. 17, it was learned here today.

Dean Thompson has been authorized to relieve President J. S. Thomson who will leave the university here temporarily to act as general manager of the C.B.C.

After graduating from Toronto in 1910, Dean Thompson took a three-year course in biology at Harvard University, graduating in 1913.

Players' Guild Chooses Cast

The cast as chosen is as follows; Sheridan Whiteside, Murray Davis; Maggie, Meg McLaughlin; Lorraine Sheldon, Frances Louks; Mrs. Stanley, Barbara Davis; Harriet, Darwina Faessler; June Stanley, Norma French; Richard Stanley, Cary Wilson; Bert Jefferson, Bill Nicholls.

Miss Toronto Chooses Campus Instead Of Photographic Fame

By Paul Serson

Miss Toronto of 1942 doesn't wear her hair over one eye, nor does she have an air of weary sophistication, like the glamour girls of cafe society. She Is friendly, unaffected, easy to talk to. Instead of pale platinum tresses and pencilled eyebrows, she has lustrous red hair . . . and freckles.

This beauty queen in our midst Is Marie Forester, first-year Physical Education student. Five foot six tall, and weighing 125 lbs., "Miss Toronto" is not her first title—in 1940 she held the title "Miss Varsity" for figure-skating, and in 1941 "Miss O.A.C." at the Ontario Athletic Commission Camp at Lake Couchiching.

For the title "Miss Toronto," which carries with it a prize of $400, Miss Forester was chosen by the Toronto Police Department from 180 entrants and 46 finalists. She says that she isn't very fussy about beauty contests, but entered this one on the persuasion of her O.A.C. friends for the glory of the dear old camp. Although she has had many offers for work as a photographer's model, she prefers to finish her course and emerge as a Physical Training teacher.

Originally from Markham, Miss Forester attended North Toronto Collegiate. After matriculating, she worked two years with the Bell Telephone. Asked the inevitable question, "How do you like the University?" she said she liked the wonderful spirit of friendliness. She likes her men casually dressed but she is, on the whole, not very interested. Favourite sports are riding, skating and archery.

J. R. Gilley Praises Art Of Services

Coming Hart House Exhibit of Work by Members of Armed Forces Is Subject of Warden's Radio Talk

QUOTES ALFORD

J. R. Gilley, Acting Warden of Hart House, last night delivered a radio talk on the Canadian Armed Forces Art Exhibit to be shown in Hart House Nov. 15 to 29.

The exhibit will present a collection of sketches and paintings by men and women of the Canadian Armed Forces, and of the United Nations' armed forces in Canada.

"It is hoped," said Mr. Gilley, "that this exhibit will stimulate the shy creator, will discover and display hidden talents.

In his speech Mr. Gilley quoted from a letter of commendation from John Alford, head of the Department of Fine Art. "There is nothing that is related to the lives and thoughts of our soldiers, sailors and airmen that can be of more interest than such a collection of pictures. It will symbolize all that for which we fight."

Used Book Trade Heavy

Since a good proportion of the men who have done business with the Student Christian Movement Book Exchange are now in Saskatchewan, a scientific settlement of accounts is impossible before their return, Bill Nicholls, assistant manager of the Exchange, announced yesterday.

The Exchange manager, Geoff Johnson, has gone harvesting, which further complicates the straightening of accounts.

"Since professors are making new book assignments, many texts, previously ignored, are in demand," he said. "In order to serve new needs, and to satisfy the browsers, the Exchange will remain open from 12:30 to 1:30 until Oct. 23. To date over $1,000 has been collected on student texts."

Schaefer Meets Art Amateurs

The first meeting of the Hart House Art Classes of 1942-43 was held in Hart House Art Gallery last night. About 30 students attended.

Carl Schaefer, director of the class, outlined the general nature of the classes for the year. Instruction in drawing will be given on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. but as yet Arts and Crafts groups have not been definitely organized.

Mr. Schaefer assured the class that no extensive experience was necessary and he hoped that anyone interested who failed to come to last night's meeting would turn up at the next one.

DELTA UPSILONS RELEASED FROM FEVER QUARANTINE

The Delta Upsilon Fraternity House was removed from quarantine Tuesday, freeing 28 men who had been shut in since Wednesday, Oct. 7.

The house was quarantined when Donald Bastedo, II Meds, contracted scarlet fever. Since then no new case has been reported among members of the fraternity, 22 of whom were allowed to spend the seven days at their homes.

University Symphony Organizes

U. of T. Orchestra Now Under Baton of Victor Feldbrill, Noted Violinist and Student of Mazzoleni

REHEARSAL MONDAY

Preparations are under way for the organizations and first rehearsal of the University Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Victor Feldbrill. Practices will be held this year at the Women's Union; the first one slated for Monday at 7 p.m.

All instrumentalists on the campus are urged to be on hand for this rehearsal; a good string section is the outstanding need. On Monday night the members will meet their new conductor, Victor Feldbrill, who will be introduced by John Weinzweig, former director of the orchestra.

Mr. Feldbrill, a noted violinist, has been concert master of several groups, notably the All-Ontario High School Symphony; he is at present leader of the second violin desks in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and is studying orchestration and conducting under Ettore Mazzoleni, associate conductor of that orchestra.

The University group has already collected a considerable library of classical and modern symphonic works, and recently the Toronto Conservatory has made available a whole new source of supply.

Students Reach Grain Fields But Weather Stops Harvest

Lloydminster, Alta., Oct. 14—(CUP)—Harvesting situation here is growing critical with weather conditions permitting no harvesting operations for the past two days. A group of students from eastern universities arrived here yesterday but so far have been unable to work in the wheat-fields.

Vic, Trinity Arrive

Ernfold, Sask., Oct. 14— (CUP) — All Vic and Trinity students arrived in Regina on Monday night, according to a report from Tom Nixon, President of the Victoria College Union. They are now grouped in two's and three's from Estevan to Ernfold.

"Marvellous Trip"

Saskatoon, Oct. 13 — (CUP) — "Arrived here today after a marvellous trip," runs the night letter from Joe Bennett, 1st year Pass in St. Mike's, which his mother received yesterday. "We greatly appreciated the sandwiches provided by the S.A.C., and the candy and apples from St. Mike's."

The boys left Saskatoon at 1 p.m. for Davidson where they will be met by the farmers. Joe Bennett is among those of the 'experienced' class, for he worked on a farm for most of the summer.

Rev. L. K. Shook Returns

"I am really grateful for the experience of a life-time," said Rev. L. K. Shook, M.A., Ph.D., Professor of English at St. Michael's College, who returned from Winnipeg yesterday after traveling west with the harvesters as a staff supervisor.

Surprisingly enough, the trip was not nearly as arduous as was expected, he reports. True, there was little sleeping done the first night, though nearly every one tried "for we weren't yet accustomed to the wooden uppers and leather covered lowers."

"The weather on Sunday was perfect for the trip," he continued, "and Sunday night there was the most splendid display of northern lights that I had ever seen. This was quite a novelty to many of the boys, for they had never been quite so far North before."

Father Shook left the Harvest Special at Winnipeg and returned to his duties at the University.

"I have nothing but the highest praise for the conduct of the students," he said. "It made me proud to be a member of the University of Toronto."

"They weren't going out there solely in the spirit of fun, but they were well aware of the serious obligation they were taking for the country. Most of the boys have worked hard all summer on farms and in war industries and are in the fine condition that this work demands."

U. of Sask. Empty

Saskatoon, Oct. 13—Empty as a cracked egg-shell is the University of Saskatchewan where every faculty has poured its students into the Saskatchewan wheat fields.

Only the faculty of medicine holds 44 first and second year students, 24 Juniors and 20 Seniors who have continued their studies here since the beginning of the term.

C.O.T.C. to March For Victory Loan

The first battalion of the C.O.T.C. will march along with all reserve army units of this city in the victory-loan parade this Saturday afternoon.

The battalion will form up on the north campus as usual and will probably march by in sixes. Details of the parade are not in as yet, but probably the salute will be taken by Major-General Constantine, Commander of Military District No. 2, reported Lieut. Ragen, Asst. Adjutant of the 1st Battalion.

Lieut. Evans, Adjutant of the 2nd Battalion, stated that the 2nd Battalion, because of lack of training, will not participate. Further details will be forthcoming.

Free Education System Benefit Given By Labour To World--Matthew Woll

Second Vice-President, A. F. of L., Addresses Students' Labour Club — Siren, C.I.O. Delegate, Also Speaks

INTRODUCED BY WALLACE

Organized labour, represented by Matthew Woll, Second Vice-President of the American Federation of Labour, Pat Sullivan, Vice-President of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (A. F. of L.) and President of the Canadian Seamen's Union, and Paul Siren, International Representative of the United Auto Workers' Union (C.I.O.) addressed the University students in Hart House Theatre last evening at a meeting held by the Students' Labour Club.

Principal Wallace welcomed the labourites in the absence of President Cody.

Mr. Woll traced the rise of organized labour from its beginnings at the start of the industrial revolution, through its turbulent history of secret and political organizations, to the present day.

He emphasized the fact that the A. F. of L., is strictly an economic organization, and not a political one. Also, while comprised of both international and national brotherhoods, they do not interfere with one another in matters of local interest.

"In so far as international affairs are concerned, Americans have no business interfering with Canadian brotherhoods," he stated.

Numbering the benefits given the world by organized labour, he included the present vast free educational system. He explained that the management classes were opposed to the workers

Ration Books Cause No End of Trouble

The meat shortage isn't the only headache University dietitians are enduring for all of us. There is also the question of ration books.

Co-eds who just can't find their little old ration books anywhere, or who just haven't got around to handing them in, are the dietitians' favourite solution to the meat shortage, if cannibalism ever sets in. One co-ed was asked to forego tea and coffee till she found her

Start Thinking!

With a relative calm descending upon the campus this week, after the excitement of the harvest departure, coupled with a certain post-prandial somnolence succeeding the gustatory excesses of Thanksgiving, students are getting a chance to catch up on a few studies and a little serious thinking.

The Varsity has been doing a little serious thinking of its own, all during the summer months, on one of the problems it considers to be most vital and interesting to university students and to the whole country at any time, but particularly in days when the embattled nation is driving ahead into its fourth year of total war, with manpower in home industry at a premium and the need for large-scale military reinforcements overseas probably becoming imminent.

The problem that has engaged the editorial grey matter during recent months is really not a single question, but a whole series of conundrums centering about the relation of the university student to the state—why are we at university at all?—are we doing all we can to be of use to the nation?—is the government right in permitting us to stay here—during our stay here are we making adequate preparation for taking an adult place in the outside world?—are the courses laid down for us properly geared for the production of valuable citizens, especially in a world at war?—most importan of all, is the existence of universities justified in wartime?

This list does not exhaust the number of questions which exist in this conection. But they will give the reader something to think over for himself. We believe that opinion on this campus is sharply divided on a number of them, nebulous on a number of others. It is time that we all gave some thought to the problems which relate to the purpose of our four years at university and reached conclusions on them.

But the whole problem is so large and polygonal that conclusions can only be reached after consideration of a variety of viewpoints on its multifarious aspects as put forward by both authorities and tyroes. To open the discussion which it hopes will continue throughout much of the year and may perhaps result in some definite understanding of the questions and their ultimate solutions by next March, The Varsity today takes the liberty of printing excerpts from a radio talk delivered over a national CBC network Tuesday evening by one of the nation's educational leaders, Carleton Stanley, president of Dalhousie University.

Bulwarks of Freedom?

Speaking on the subject, "Are the Universities a Bulwark of Freedom?" Dr. Stanley said in part:

"This ghastly war has already brought home to the governments of Ottawa and of the provinces, as nothing else has ever done, the vast importance of the university. For three years it has been a commonplace that the war cannot be won for the free peoples without the assistance of the universities. The signs multiply that Hitler has already lost the war. But that does not mean that the free peoples have won it. Canada can, for itself, lose the war if in the clashing struggle she allows any of her great universities either to go under or to lose their quality. . . .

"Now, ultimately what we want as a result of education is what we want out of life. If by life we mean power, 'successful careers'—greed for money—there is no place for a liberal education. In such a world the medical and dental professions would have no concern with preventive medicine; they would welcome plagues and pestilences; they would no longer teach personal hygiene or public sanitation. In such a world the engineers would not care whether they built bridges or artillery, whether they drained swamps or created floods. In such a world also there would be no Law. For there can be no Bill of Rights, and no Equality before the law, when stark, naked power is what each of us seeks, with the result that there are a few masters, while the great multitude plod and sweat and shiver and starve. The world has seen such ages before. But the human brain has not thought or reasoned in them nor has the human soul flowered in them. Slowly and painfully such civilisations as the world has seen have emerged from the welter of misery and oppression. Here a Huss, there a Hampden, Solon paving the way for Cleisthenes, Socrates—it may have been—paving the way for Christ.

Job Never Remains Done

"But the job never remains done. Each generation must mend its fences, and tend its dikes. The heroism of the soldiers in the Civil War, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, General Lee's wise example of education, even the emancipation of the slaves could not save the United States from corrupt politics and the spoliation of the public domain. More wise leaders, more thinking followers, were necessary for that.

"Some have held indeed that the spirit of a nation or a race grows fatigued: that Shakespeare and Milton are not followed by men of their own stature, and that a people is happy if the next generation lets poetry lie fallow, while a Royal Society plants the seeds of science. Such an analysis seems to me to leave too many things out of account. Among other things it leaves out of account the schools and universities of England and Scotland. These schools and universities were almost entirely devoted to "liberal" education. Schools and universities may have been too much the preserve of the well-to-do, but it was through them, after all, that the English Bible became the book of the people. And while they and their influence lasted, the field of poetry was not really lying fallow, nor the field of philosophy, nor the field of mathematics and astronomy, nor the field of law. Not least, they were the nurseries of parliamentarians. Schools and universities are, in the nature of things, a conserving force. For, schools and universities, which do not confine themselves to professions and techniques, are concerned with the nature and dignity of man. Conservative, yes; for they teach and learn first principles, and use the processes of reason. So at least it has been over long periods in France, and England and Scotland. Such schools and colleges are the surest bulwark to Freedom.

Insidious Materialism

"But, if, through an insidious and pervasive materialism, the schools have become largely technical and trade schools, and the universities have become largely Schools of Business Administration, Faculties of Medicine and Engineering, expect little conservatism there. They will go down overnight before any popular slogan, whether Pacificism, or "Normalcy," or Isolationism. They are no longer much concerned with first principles or reasoning; their mathematics will have become "practical;" their science will have become pre-professional science; for history they will have substituted sociology; their languages will have become the "business vocabulary" useful in South America; even English literature will be largely "business English." As for philosophy, there will be courses on 'How to Make Friends'.

"Hitler's first action was to destroy in Germany any semblance of liberal education from the kindergarten up. Are we in our war on Hilter to fight his battle for him here in Canada? I lift up my voice against it, and ask that other voices more powerful than mine be lifted up against it."

So spoke Carleton Stanley, one of the most ardent advocates for liberal education. No reader will say that there is not much of truth in his remarks. But many will disagree with him on one point or another. Start thinking about the questions that are raised here. Have an opinion of your own. And accept our invitation to write and tell us what your opinion is, so that we can print it, and stimulate further thought on what we consider to be the most pressing group of problems facing university students now.

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The threat, first by Britain, and now even by Canada, to torture German prisoners of war in retaliation for similar offences committed by the Nazis against British and Canadian prisoners, is viewed with alarm by many progressive-minded Canadians. Is then our proposed offensive against Germany to degenerate into a slugging match of reprisals and counter reprisals against unarmed prisoners, and later, I suppose, against enemy aliens? The Nazis have been practising torture and oppression for years and have become masters in the art of cruelty; are we at this late date to throw up the principles for which we are allegedly crusading?

The shackling of prisoners of war is an act so despicable that I had hoped that only an introverted fascist mind could tolerate it. The persons responsible for this and their other countless acts of violence will be rendered harmless in the not too distant future. The fact remains that the prisoners in our bands, no matter what their crimes may have been, were in no way responsible for this one. Retaliation against them will do nothing to hasten the collapse of Germany, and certainly will not raise British prestige in the eyes of the present and future worlds. It will bring little comfort to our boys suffering in Nazi hands. If German soldiers rape the women of conquered countries, are we going to have our soldiers rape German women when they get to Germany? If we are really crusading let us keep our hands clean by practising the Christian principles we profess.

It is very doubtful if the Nazis will be curbed in their cruelty by the prospects of retaliation against their own comrades; in any event the Nazis have had so much more practice at this sort of thing than we, that we must study the "Annals of Torture" very intensely if we expect to surpass them. Frankly I hate to see so much energy diverted from more worthwhile channels. Let us concentrate on winning the war and keeping our ideals high.

Yours very truly,

E. B. Ratcliffe,

SCHOOL SWEEPS NOVICE TRACK MEET

Burgess Is Individual Star Wins 21 Of Trinity's Points

School Freshmen Runners Pile Up Total of 66 Points in Novice Track Meet; Trinity 24, U. C. 22

FIFTH ANNUAL MEET

A full field of 70 competitors turned out for the annual novice track and field meet at Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon. Coach Hec Phillips enthusiastically proclaimed it the most successful freshman meet ever held by the University. School swept the field as far as points were concerned, amassing a grand total of 66. Well to the rear were Trinity with 24 and U.C. with 22 points. Med collected 16, Dents 11, and Vic 3.

Individual champion of the day was Cam Burgess of Trinity who turned up first in the 100, 120 yd. hurdles, and the shot put and second in the javelin and 220. He garnered 21 of Trinity's 24 points. Bill "Mouse" Fielding of Meds deserves mention for his efforts in winning the 880 and placing third in the 220 and 440. The 880 was one of the highlights of the afternoon. Fielding came through in the last lap to win in the fast time of 2.06 minutes.

Coach Phillips inaugurated these meets in 1938 and in the past four years has built up considerable enthusiasm and competitive spirit in the freshmen participating. Most of the competitors came to the Varsity cinder oval fresh from high schol tracks and, anxious to don their spikes, took the opportunity in the Novice Track Meet.

Four freshman records were broken in yesterday's meet. Most creditable was the stellar performance by Burgess of Trinity who set a new mark in the 100 yards of 10.3 seconds. The high jump was a hotly contested event and according to the experts the winner, Kerr, a Schoolman, could have done much better than his record breaking 5 feet 9 inches.

Charlie MacDonald of School did a 54.2 in the 440 to set a new record for this event. The 880 was won by Fielding of Meds who established two minutes and six seconds as the time to beat. "All of these record breakers could stand up under intercollegiate competition," remarked Hec Phillips. Coming from Hec, this means the boys are good.

Most amazing performance of the day was the marathon exhibition put on by Shackleton of U.C. He was pitted against Dave Kirkwood and Wally Brown and did well to finish in 19 minutes and 4 seconds.

A complete list of competitors and results follow:

100 yds.—A. C. Burgess (Trin.), McDonald (S.P.S.), Howson (S.P.S.). 10.3.

12 lb. shot—A. C. Burgess (Trin.), Wilcox (S.P.S.), Lye (S.P.S.). 43 ft. 11 ins.

Pole vault—Barry (S.P.S.), Kerr (S.P.S.), Claxton (U.C.). 10 ft. 6 ins.

880 yds.—B. Fielding (Meds), F. Fordyce (S.P.S.), P. Shackleton (U.C.). 2.06.6.

120 yd. low hurdles—A. C. Burgess (Trin.), Lawrence (S.P.S.), Sabeston S.P.S.). 15.

Discus — Wright (Dents), Lambert (Vic), Wilcox (S.P.S.). 98 ft. 11½ ins.

Saba Leads Vic To Tennis Crown

The final score for the tennis tourney has been compiled and Vic emerges as winner of the Victoria Cup, emblematic of supremacy in the University tennis world. Chuck Saba was largely responsible for his team's victory, in view of the fact that he accounted for 8 of Victoria's 23 points. Bill Waugh and Peter Bryce between them split 12 points and throughout the playoff matches showed decisive supremacy over the other contestants. Bryce did not enter the singles competition but teamed with Bill Waugh to win the doubles.

The team of Saba, Thompson, Waugh and Bryce will go down in the annals of Victoria tennis as one of the finest ever to be produced.

Trinity College ranked a close second with 21 points. Ian Rusted and Mel Jones combined in the doubles and starred in the signles to produce 13 points. The other two members of the Trinity team were Francis Tseng and his partner Worsely, who accounted for the other 8 points.

Tennis enthusiasts now turn their attention to the girls' tournament which is well under way by now.

Speaking Of Sport

NEW GROUPING

The biggest thing to come out of Tuesday's Intramural Sports meeting was the new grouping of the interfaculty rugby teams. So that all and sundry may follow the verbal pro and con dual which is inevitable, here is the new grouping and how it works.

GROUP I	GROUP II
Junior School	Junior Meds
Senior Meds	U.C.
Vic	Trinity
Senior School	St. Mike's
	Dents

Group I will run off a double round robin schedule with two teams entering the playoffs, the first team to receive a bye into the finals. Group II will play a single round robin schedule, the first and second teams to meet in a sudden death playoff, the winner to play the second team in group I.

Playoffs are arranged in this manner to permit the second place team in group II to meet the winning team again in the second half of the season when both teams are at full strength.

Although the Arts teams were considerably weakened by the Harvest Leave, none saw fit to withdraw from the league. In the face of overwhelming odds, unarmed men have been known to flee, and since the unarmed Arts teams were faced with giants from School and Meds, some were expected to fade. That they did not is a great credit to their sportsmanship and let's hope that reinforcements arrive from the West in time to bolster the head teams in group II.

SCHOOL vs. SCHOOL

Naturally, when the Schoolmen realize that they will be pitting their strength against each other, they will raise a howl. Any sane man can realize how foolish it would be to put either of the School teams or the Senior Meds in with the members of group II. T'would be a walk-away and t'would cause much anguish and gnashing of whatever teeth they would have left.

With the newly presented grouping everyone will be comparatively happy except School. After all, they should play better ball if they have a grievance.

The fact that Vic was chosen to stay in group I exemplifies the general opinion that Vic has a fairly strong team.

BACKWASH

Another backwash of the harvest business is the depletion of the number of teams in the soccer league. The Knox boys, forced by riddled ranks to fold up their team, are not alone in the withdrawals. Trinity, usually the fortress of the teams, also has to withdraw. Thus Trinity B and Knox will be missing from the soccer circle this fall.

RUGBY REFS

The referees for interfaculty rugby are all drawn from the ranks of the University students and to qualify for this job must write a test paper. The following men are requested to present themselves for examination at 4:30 in the Intramural Office.

St. Mike's—T. A. Cooney, T. O'Neill, W. Springer.
S.P.S.—A. D. Duncan, G. R. K. Lye, W. J. Paisley, W. E. Raney, J. Trant.
P.H.E.—C. J. McNulty.
U.C.—W. Nicholls.
Dent—W. Quigley.

Regular Track and Tank Work-Outs Urged by 'Steve' for Athletic Stamina

"The athlete who gets regular and hard workouts on the track and in the pool and keeps his equipment in good shape, has a good start on being a winner in any sport." Such was the reply of Warren Stevens, Athletic Director of the University, when asked by The Varsity to give a few general conditioning rules for athletes.

RUN—RUN—RUN—It may sound like an Italian army lecture, but it's the best way to get the stamina so vital to any sport. Work up to your training slowly—do a little running each night, increasing the dose—always beginning and ending each practice with a turn or two around the track. "All the middle distance runners get their stamina by harrier—just going out and chasing over the hills for five miles every day."

But if you've mislaid your track shorts, hop into the pool and play waterpolo or swim the tank thirty times—swimming is high up on Mr. Steven's list because of the large number of muscles it exercises.

For the freshmen—did you know Hart House has several muscle-stretching rooms in which you can hoist the dumbells, chin yourself thirty times, or generally pep up the old condition with hand-stands and push-ups?

"Whatever form your exercise takes," stressed the coach, "at least do it regularly." Three half-hour snappy work-outs a week are much better than an exhausting two-hour splurge the day before the big game. This applies to team managers too.

Just because you don't get enough men out for a full team practice, at least play touch rugby or job around the track to make use of the time.

"Tell the fellows to keep their equipment in good shape," continued Warren. "Have your shoes fit properly, a loose shoe brings blisters; wear heavy, clean wool socks without holes."

Splash Experts Coach Mermen

Warren Stevens announced last night his intention of providing expert instruction in speed swimming and diving to all those who are interested. This is an innovation this year and should attract a large number of aspirants to the various swimming teams of the University. Previously, swimming and diving instruction has been provided by each team but this year, to ensure a good crop of swimmers, coaching is offered on a large scale.

The enrolment in these classes will be limited, consequently the first men to present themselves will be accepted. Naturally if a man does not show progress after a few nights instruction he may be asked to drop out but for one who shows signs of swimming talent encouragement will be offered. This is a great chance for swimmers to learn how to swim in competition and should provide a great incentive to men to better their swimming style.

Bill Moffat and John Northwood, ace members of last year's Bib Blue team, will handle the instruction end. Both men have admirable records behind them and have been active in swimming circles in Toronto since 1930. Roger Beames will coach all those interested in fancy diving and should his pupils imbibe some of his style and finesse, there need be no fear of a good array of fancy divers this year.

The classes will begin next Monday at 3:40 p.m. and will be held each week on Mondays and Tuesdays as well as Saturday mornings at 11:40.

The main theme in feminine sports circles is still tennis, tennis and more tennis. However, the interfaculty is scheduled to get under way tomorrow, and most of the colleges have their teams ready to play ball.

Meds escaped the tedious work of running a tournament so we shall have their lineup first. The prospective lady doctors playing for the skull and crossbones are: Patsy Dunlop, Jean Harevill, Patsy Wilford, Helen Grady and the old faithful Mary Hollington. True to medical fashion, the doctors need a nurse to complete their team and their choice is Glete Alcantara, who hails from Brazil.

After much effort St. Hilda's was finally contacted. For proof we give their choice for the interfaculty. The sextet for the blue and grey includes: Mary Alexander, Barbara Conway, Joy Winters, Sonia Morawetz, Dorothy Jane Sanders, and Betty McLean, who defeated Dorothea Wedd.

The two teams from the Royal College are all ready, with one exception. Today will see Audrey Gibson play Ruth Parkinson for the sixth berth on the team. The other members are: Gladys Brenner, Betsy Mosbaugh, Barbara Greenleaf, Nora Graham and Ruth Martinson. Their tournament is in the semi-final round. Meanwhile their sisters in P. H. and E. are in the finals. Yesterday Virginia Kitto defeated Muriel Finlaysan 6-3, 6-1; while R. Carleton put M. Lipton down 6-3, 6-4.

The scenery is new to most, but even that has not prevented one remark, "If the guy who wrote 'Trees' had seen as many as we have, he would have strangled himself."

But singing, playing music, reading Time and Esquire, and indulging in the pleasurable demolition of the apples, sandwiches, celery and radishes put up by the Students' Administrative Council, are not the only pastimes on the train. The names of Plato and Aristotle have been bandied about in lofty discussions and a large and concentrated group of theology was broken up last night by the conductor turning out the lights at midnight.

Fetching little mystery yarn this, deftly paced, splendidly cast, studded with laughs. And you are actually not sorry for the victim, who is a thoroughly nasty individual named Mida King—as though that were not enough. She dances, sings, wears stunning gowns. But I'm still glad they done her in.

MIDTOWN MURDER AT GRAND CENTRAL

Van Heflin, who plays the ham detective (in the great tradition) asks this intriguing question: "How was she murdered? Was she shot, stabbed, strangled, drowned, poisoned or—struck by lightning?" Guaranteed, you won't even suspect till the last three minutes.

Remained of the bill is filled out with "Go West, Young Woman," featuring gangling Glenn Ford and Penny "Blondie" Singleton. Outstanding are the machine-gun tap rhythms of dancer Ann Miller. Community Sign-Song and a cartoon complete the program. But go, my cherubs, for the chiller-diller.

Varsity reporters are certainly having a trying time in these days of harvests and health examinations. And they need their early morning coffee. We always thought the Hart House Tuck Shop was wonderful for this sort of thing but it wasn't until we read about its counterpart in the McGill Union that its full beauty was brought home to us. . . . As everyone knows, the Tuck Shop is a quiet place (at most times) where a man can sink into a chair, preferably in a darkened room, and give himself up to a bowl of brown brew, an indigestible pastry and his thoughts. . . . But in the McGill Union Grill they have installed marble flooring, card tables and a juke box. Et tu, Ellington. . . .

Varsity reporters are quick on the trigger. In a flash, they can adjust themselves mentally to any situation. One of them spent a particularly rough evening as night editor for one of the more history-making issues of last week and slunk off to bed in the morning to clear up a little unfinished slumber. Next thing she knows her door opens and a voice inquires if she hasn't anything better to do at four o'clock in the afternoon. "Yeah," she said suspiciously, "what day is it?"

So here's a Varsity reporter who suffers from circular dreams. . . . Staggering home to bed at 8:30 a.m., as assistant night editors will, she was awakened by the sound of a male voice in the house, an unusual event in a family whose male members spend the day behind a down-town desk. . . .

Passing the matter off as a figment of her overburdened imagination, she lapsed into a dream about a Fuller Brush Man who visited the Press and brushed all the type out of the front page of The Varsity. . . . Recovering from this nerve-shattering episode she awoke and inquired of her mother if that nasty brush man had gone away. . . . "That was no Fuller Brush Man," returned her mother tartly, "it was an army officer."

Who should be C.B., no doubt, for impersonating a Fuller Brush Man. . . .

So The Varsity reporter stalks into the office in the morning, grey-faced and blear-eyed. With a condescending glance he takes in his by-line on the top left story of the day's issue, peers happily at his picture on page one, then gawps most unprofessionally . . "Cripes," he screams, "they've put a crease in my trousers!"

But Varsity reporters get a little unhinged at times. . . . Like a couple of nights ago when one of the senior masthead members lifted his head after a long session with the Saskatchewan harvest and screamed, "all that wheat and no patatoes."

* * *

And another time a Varsity reporter on rewrite duty engaged in the perusal of a contemporary journal called a comrade's attention to a headline—"Woman Fined for Stealing Diapers." . . . "Yah," said the other cynically, "the eternal triangle!"

book.

Hart House works on the club system, so that ration books are not required for the Tuck Shop or the dining room. Tea, coffee and sugar are ordered in amounts sufficient for two days at a time, based on the needs of last year. The Air Force boys get civilian rations without benefit of ration books.

That goes too for the men of U.C., habitat 73 St. George, who eat in Hart House. When asked what they were doing with their ration books, they replied they were sitting tight on them, which is a silly thing to do with a book of little coloured stamps.

The bearers of the Double Blue have not been as speedy as was hoped for. Their team is still incomplete. To date they have Maureen Murphy, Betsy Gowan, and Mary Farrell. By tonight the other places should be filled. Rose Mary Cunningham is scheduled to play Pat O'Donoghue and Isobel Roney will meet Florence Cooper.

Vic is ready for the fray, having one vacant spot on the team. This will be filled today by the winner of the match between Janet Bryce and Aileen Smith. The others are Virginia McLeod, Betty Weall, Isabel Eastman, Yvonne Baillie and Marjorie Chantler, a freshie from Humberside.

Once again we remind the managers that eligibility slips must be obtained before the tournament begins. Too, all those intending to volunteer as linesmen may answer the call now.

receiving undue amounts of education, but labour finally forced equal education through, both here and in the States.

"All of these gifts came to you not on a silver platter. You do not know the struggles, the conflict that labour went through to do this," he said.

Paul Siren, who was the opening speaker, discussed collective bargaining. He explained that, in collective bargaining, "individual grievances are handled by machinery set up for that purpose and whether settled in favour of or against the worker, they do not remain unsettled, as a source of trouble."

"Management," he added, "does not want to let control get out of its hands," and as a result they have set up company unions wherever labour has tried to organize.

"Company unions will not work," he said.

J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, President of the Canadian Seamen's Union, told the students: "You are the people who are going to carry the message of organized labour into the ranks of science and industry and universities where we are denied."

In regard to labour situations here, Sullivan stated, "We have tried to bring about labour-management co-ordination. We have not had great success—but we are not going to give up."

Explaining how his Seamen's union was aiding the war, he cited a list of suggestions that they had presented to the government that have never been acted upon.

Professor Logan, of the economics department of the University of Toronto, made a few remarks at the close and thanked the speakers for coming.

Lance Macdowell Leads U.C. Women's Singing

The U.C. Women's Glee Club will meet for the first time on Friday, Oct. 16 at 4:30 p.m. in the Theatre of the Women's Union. "Talent is not necessary to join this Club," stressed Louise McLaughlin, Music Director of the W.U.A. "We just get together and enjoy ourselves singing the songs we like."

Leading the singing this year will be Mr. Lance Macdowell a graduate of Victoria College in Honour Arts, and former member of the Hart House Glee Club, of which he has acted as Assistant Conductor.

Mr. Macdowell has done some choral work on the CBC, and has sung in church choirs. He is now taking a Music course at O.C.E.

Sweet Sound

Hart House Quaretet

If all the Hart House String Quaretet concerts this year are as fine as the opening one last night, this season will be one of the most successful in recent years. The group outdid anything I have ever heard them do before in tone and unity of expression.

Three quartets made up the program, with the last, Schuber's Death and the Maiden as the best. The music could not have been played with a more perfect understanding of its emotional content, and it was technically a joy to hear. No instrument dominated, and the ideal of Schubert was in complete control. The variations were especially fine.

The Mozart Quaretet in D Major was another complete success and was played with a clarity which allowed every note in every part to be heard. There was no glossing over of any figuration.

The first performance in Canada of Bridge's G Minar Quartet leaves me feeling that I did not grasp its essential significance. Parts of it were thrilling, and parts were mere successions of sound strung together. Probably, however, on further acquaintance, the whole will turn out to be as interesting as the second movement.

We should point out that a new member of the quartet, Henry Milligan, replacing second violinist Adolf Koldofsky, demonstrated technical capability and a true artistic sense throughout the program.

Government Quota Filled For Western Harvesting; 4,500 Already In Fields

St. Michael's Harvesters Go to Work Five Hours After Arrival; Earning Five Dollars a Day

MET BY FATHER McGAHEY

Ottawa, Oct 15 — Quotas of men needed to help with harvest work in Western Canada have been filled, National Selective Service headquarters announced today. Already 4,500 men have reached Saskatchewan and Alberta and a few are still to leave under special harvest excursion arrangements.

"We are extremely pleased with the response by the students of the universities in Quebec and Ontario," a National Selective Service official said.

St. Mike's Men at Work

Saskatoon, Oct. 14—(CUP)—The 56 students from St. Michael's College have all reached their destination and have jobs paying $5 a day. They were out working on their farms five hours after getting off the train.

They were met at Watrous, about 80 miles from Saskatoon on Monday afternoon by Father McGahey, formerly on the staff of St. Mike's and Athletic Director there; Dean Kirke of the College of Agriculture; a Government Official, and the Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus. All arrangements were made on the train for the boys to all go to either Kenaston or Davidson which are close together in one parish.

The train arrived in Saskatoon at 3:15 a.m. Tuesday, and the students were accommodated either in hotels or at St. Thomas More College. At 1 o'clock, eleven left for the vicinity of Kenaston and the rest are near Davidson.

"They are as fine a looking group of boys as ever left a train," wrote Father Carr, Superior of St. Thomas More College, and former Superior General of the Basilian Order, in a letter to Father McLaughlin, President of St. Michael's.

He also reported that while farmers usually haggled until dark about wages, a half hour after the group arrived in Davidson, the station was deserted. It took even less time in Kenaston.

Medical At-Home To Be Informal

This year's Medical-at-Home will be held in the Concert Hall of the Royal York Hotel, on Nov. 6, the Medical Society has announced. In accordance with President Cody's request that campus social functions be kept unostentatious, the dance will be informal, and officials of the Medical Society have requested that all girls attending the dance comply with the spirit of the decision and wear short dresses.

The music will be supplied by Morgan Thomas and his orchestra.

VICTORIA CLASSICS CLUB DISCUSSES SOCRATES

The Victoria College Classics club held its initial meeting last night at the home of Dr. H. Bennett. Professor E. A. Havelock, who spent last winter at Yale University gathering material for his book "Socrates, His Times and His Teaching," spoke on the growth of literacy in Greece.

Professor M. Woodside moved that an invitation be extended to all St. Michael's classic students as they have no club of their own.

News Lecture Today at 4 p.m.

All members of The Varsity staff are reminded of the first news lecture at 4:00 o'clock today in Room 19, University College.

Those unable to attend because of military training should sign the news books in the place provided for them.

Maximum attendance is absolutely essential.

The Varsity is fortunate in having large and apparently eager staffs of men and women reporters this year, but until they have learned at least the basic principles of news gathering and news writing they will be operating at only a bare minimum of efficiency. With its increased responsibilities The Varsity needs the very best of staffs.

In the absence of a journalism course at this university it has been the custom for senior members of The Varsity's masthead to pass on the knowledge they have gained on the paper in a series of fall news lectures. This series will be opened by the news editor, Rex Wilson, this afternoon and will continue in about a week with a lecture by the managing editor, Edgar Simon.

ORGANIZATION PROBLEMS TOPIC OF AVUKAH MEETING

The Avukah, the student Zionist organization on this campus, held its opening meeting Tuesday night at the Women's Union.

Organizational problems were discussed and plans were made for the next meeting to be held on Oct. 19. The guest speaker then will be Rabbi Samuel Sachs, rabbi of the Goel Tzedec Synagogue. It will be an open meeting.

Former Head of Dominion - Provincial Youth Training in B. C., Stresses Health of Armed Forces

ADDRESSES P. H. & E.

"Working power in men and women depends on physical ability," said Lieutenant Ian Einshardt in an address to students in Physical Health Education yesterday. The object of his discussion was to make clear the essential part that graduates of this course will soon be playing, owing to the increase of employment and working hours. Lieut. Einshardt is a former head of the Dominion - Provincial Youth Training Scheme in British Columbia.

In civilian life, families must be cared for while the parents are working and consequently day nurseries are being developed thus necessitating leaders in recreation such as Physical Health Ed graduates.

But not only the children must be cared for—a psychological lookout for workers must be considered especially since women are appearing in industry. The romance and thrill of work soon becomes routine and drudgery. At present there are a half a million women in industry but the future shows that the scale will rise to a million and industrial fatigue must receive a very serious consideration.

In the navy, army and air force, within a month the physical side will be stressed far more than formerly so that energy and enthusiasm will be raised and consequently work power rather than manpower will be tripled.

There must be a definite interest taken in all courses concomitant with Physical Training, concluded Lieut. Einshardt, as there must be changes with the changing needs.

University of Montreal Enters New Buildings

Montreal, Oct. 15—(CUP)—The new buildings of the University of Montreal today rang to the tread of 1,200 pairs of student feet as they were opened for classes for the first time.

The new buildings on the side of Mount Royal replace the old university in the eastern part of Montreal central. The old structures have been turned over to the Quebec Provincial Government.

Torontonensis Editor Appointed

Neil MacDonald, IV Vic, Varsity Art, Music and Drama Editor, Succeeds Paul Deacon as Magazine Head

ALSO EOITS ACTA

Neil MacDonald, IV Vic, was appointed Editor of Torontonensis yesterday at a meeting of the Publications Committee of the Students' Administrative Council. The Committee had been granted power to act in this regard at Wednesday's meeting of the Council.

MacDonald replaces Paul S. Deacon, Vic 4T3, now on active service with the Royal Canadian Air Force, who was named to the post last March.

Art, Music and Drama Editor of The Varsity since October, 1941, and Editor of Acta Victoriana this year, MacDonald is the first man in several years to have been connected in an editorial capacity with three student publications on the campus.

CORRECTION

Due to an editorial error, The Varsity yesterday carried a story saying that the Toronto Conservatory of Music has recently made available to the University a whole new source of supply of classical and modern works. This statement was unfounded. The University has its own collection of records donated last year by the Carnegie Foundation.

The Varsity tenders its apologies for any inconvenience which yesterday's report may have caused.

Approximately 10,000 Members of Three Fighting Forces Participate in Parade Advertising Victory Loan Drive

800 CADETS MARCH

Approximately 10,000 members of the three fighting forces will parade tomorrow afternoon to advertise the new national Victory Loan campaign, scheduled to open Monday.

About 800 members of the 1st Battalion of the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, will take part in the parade.

The parade will start from Queen's Park at 3:00 o'clock and will proceed south on University Avenue, east on Queen Street, north on Yonge Street, west on Bloor Street and south through Queen's Park. The saluting base will be set up on the west side of University Avenue opposite the Canadian Military Institute.

Troops from the Navy, Canadian Armored Corps, Armed Vehicles Unit, Women's Army Corps, Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Canadian Air Force, Women's Division, and 17 Reserve Army units will also mark in the parade.

Commander of the parade will be Colonel J. W. H. C. H. Van den Berg D.S.O. Officers Commanding 32nd (Reserve) Brigade Group C.A.

In order that colour may be added to the parade and the long march made easier for the participants, bands from each of the military units will take part including the Brass Band of the C.O.T.C. When passing the reveiwing stand the University battalion will march by six abreast but the men will be without arms.

Varsity Reapers Get New Slogan

Aboard the Harvest Special En Route to Saskatchewan, Oct. 12—(CUP)—Out of the smoke-filled colonist cars have come a new University College song and a new Varsity yell — both wheat-filled.

Here's the song, to the tune of Notre Dame's Battle Cry:

Sing whee for wheat, we're off for the west;
We volunteered at Cody's request;
We have come to stook the grain
And whee for wheat is our refrain;
We came to reap, but you will agree
We're going to have on heck of a spree;
Whee for wheat and for U.C.
And whee for old Varsity.

And, in a fighting mood, the Varsity yell:

Dirty shirts and dirty jeans,
Dirty Western, dirty Queens;
Whee for wheat! Whee for wheat!
Varsity reapers can't be beat.

Both are the work of a triumvirate consisting of U. C. Lit president Don Rowat, Geoff Johnson, his literary director, and Don Ruwald, Second Year resident at 73 St. George.

That "Whee for wheat" refrain came from the Champus Cat appearing in The Varsity Oct. 8.

Miss McAndrew Acts As Advisor To Perplexed U.C. Students

By Sara Socol

On the first floor of University College there is an unassuming door modestly labelled "Registrar's Office." Ensconced behind that door is Evelyn McAndrew, herself a U.C. graduate, daughter of U.C. Registrar W. J. McAndrew and unofficial friend and advisor to every student in U.C.—and she likes her job.

"Just what goes on in this office?" we asked her when, after half an hour, the room finally became empty.

"Well," said Miss McAndrew, "first of all, this is a bureau of statistics. We have the names and phone numbers of nearly 1,000 students and, very often, this information has been of some service to love's young dream."

In addition, the office is a complaint department, Miss McAndrew continued. Professors come and complain about their students. Students come and complain about their subjects and sometimes parents come to complain about their offspring.

It is also an information bureau. People phone and ask for Latin translations. Some girls in a downtown business office want Miss McAndrew to settle an argument and tell them what the plural of Christmas is.

"And you know," she added, "after particularly gruelling examinations this office has been known to become a first-aid depot for fainting students."

But this isn't all. It is also a lost and found office. Miss McAndrew handles everything from lost books and lost freshmen to lost hearts, and while we're on the subject of hearts the funniest thing that ever happened to her was when an excited young student described a cute young thing in a blue dress he had seen in a restaurant that day, and implored her to tell him if she knew her, and if so, would she please give him her name and telephone number."

U.C. Women's Initiation Feature Freshie Skits

Pandemonium reigned among the freshies of University College as they prepared their skits for the entertainment of their seniors at the Women's Union Wednesday night.

This was the formal initiation of the freshies by the seniors. Pennants were awarded to the two winning skits that were directed by Kit Shiller and Ruth Doherty.

Then in quiet groups the freshies walked between rows of gowned seniors holding lighted candles. After a pledge to uphold U.C. tradition, the signing of the honour roll, and obtaining the red and white colours of U.C., everyone, holding lighted candles, sang "Old Toronto" and concluded the ceremony with "God Save the King."

Nero's Golden House Doubled Varsity Area

Professor Homer Thompson of the Royal Ontario Museum staff addressed the Trinity-U.C. Classical Club last nigth at St. Hilda's on the fabulous "Golden House" of Emperor Nero.

He explained that the Golden House and its grounds covered 125 acres in the middle of a crowded city—more than double the university area in this city. It contained a 120-foot statue of Nero, taller than Hart House flag-pole, and the walls were lavishly decorated with gold leaf, while a revolving ceiling showered flowers and perfumes on guests, he continued.

About one-eighth of Rome was taken up with parks, Mr. Thompson stated, contrasting this with the scanty sunlit areas of most modern cities.

German Study Club To Present Comedy

The first of six meetings scheduled by the executive of the German Study Club will be held next Tuesday evening in the University College Women's Union, Prof. C. Lewis, Trinity, honorary president, told The Varsity.

Highligbts of the meeting will be the brief comedy, "Der naechste Morgan," while singing, refreshments and dancing will be featured. Students of all colleges and faculties are invited to attend.

Doors will be open at 7:45 for registration of members, and the program will start at 8:15.

The English appear to be much impressed by the record of the younger Canadian officers in the Dieppe affair in August, when Canadian colonels of 32 and majors of 27 achieved immortal fame. And also the English are noted for the signs they post up. So hot off the grape-vine comes the story of an English pub keeper in a south-coast embarkation point for Dieppe who put up a conspicuous placard reading:

"No drinks to Canadian colonels under 21, unless they are accompanied by their parents."

Look, Ma! I'm a colonel!

I. S. S.

If you asked the average denizen of this campus what the I.S.S. is he would either peer at you with a puzzled expression, or else, brightly smiling at you to have thought he could have forgotten so soon, tell you that I.S.S. was the organization which profited by last year's epoch-making March of Dimes.

General conception of the International Student Service and its function in relation to students of universities throughout the world is foggy, particularly at this University. The Varsity believes that this group is one whose aims and ideals should be properly understood, and therefore presents today a guest editorial by Bob Miller, graduate student in philosophy at the University of Toronto, who heads the local student executive of I.S.S.

International Student Service is a world organization with the purpose of creating a better understanding among student bodies. With the advent of the war, its work has become chiefly that of relief—raising money in those countries which still have free universities to provide books, food and clothing, medical supplies, recreational equipment and so on for students in war prisons, internment and refugee camps, and for students attempting to carry on in occupied or war-torn countries.

But I.S.S. is also concerned with the affect of the war on the intellectual life of students, and strives to promote intelligent thought on questions of international significance to students.

The Red Cross and the Young Men's Christian Association co-operate with I.S.S., referring student cases to it and sometimes helping to distribute food and comforts purchased with I.S.S. funds—as was done recently at the University of Athens. The European Student Relief Fund and the United China Relief Fund are the two large administrative bodies of I.S.S.

I.S.S. headquarters are at Geneva, and Andre de Blonay, general secretary of the body, operates from there in the Allied Prison Camps in Italy and Germany. Dale Brown is the secretary working among the German prison camps in Canada, with headquarters at 151 Bloor W., Toronto.

The executive committee of I.S.S. is made up of representatives of the International Student Service, Pax Romana — an international organization of Roman Catholic students—and the Y.M.C.A. It is non-denominational, non-policital, non-racial in its aims and practices.

The Canadian committee is headed by Mrs. W. L. Grant of Toronto. Vice-chairmen are Prof. H. Wasteneys, head of the department of biochemistry in the University of Toronto and Dr. Victoria Meuller of St. Michael's College.

Last year committees on Canadian campuses raised funds amounting to $4,770; this year's goal has been set at $8,000. I.S.S. appeals only to students and faculty members for financial support; but its committee feel that more than $8,000 should be forthcoming from these sources.

At its last meeting the local I.S.S. committee discussed with Allan Booth, former secretary of the British branch of the organization, the possibilities of extending Canadian I.S.S. activities. In the past Canadian students have had little understanding of the aims of I.S.S. except that of relief; and their general lack of knowledge and apathy regarding international affairs has been undisturbed.

Stu Robinson is heading a special committee on this campus to decide upon the best method by which I.S.S. can begin work in the field of making students take an interest in these matters. Canadian students have little understanding of their place in the student world and our universities have no sponsoring body which can encourage discussion of international problems. Robinson would very much like to get in touch with students interested in this phase of I.S.S. work, and asks them to leave their names in the Student Christian Movement office in Hart House. The forming of the Toronto committee is the immediate task and your support will be appreciated.

ART & MUSIC

Culture For The Barbarians

Richard Crooks

American artists seem to visit Toronto in a missionary spirit. Culture for the barbarians, beauty for the beasts, etc. This, at any rate can explain the condescending attitude shown in Mr. Crooks' selection of a program for last night's concert at Eaton Auditorium. Toronto audiences might be unable to appreciate great or good music, but dreary efforts by sugary French and Italian musicians might provide them with a pleasant introduction or stepping stone to the terrifying complexities of Mozart or Schubert. And so Mr. Crooks gave us Pessard, Giordano and other dull composers and in the process probably scared off a number of prospective music enthusiasts.

Mr. Crooks has the usual operetta mannerisms. He approaches his notes from below and then slips into place, he loves to show off his falsetto, and he varies his tempo frequently. He can get distressingly coy, as in J'ai dit aux etailes, where he ran the gamut of playful grimaces. All these facts do not add up to good singing even with a voice as good as Mr. Crooks' can sometimes be. Moreover the accompanist played in a blurred indefinite fashion which was just as noticeable in his group of solos as in his accompanying of Mr. Crooks.

And next time, let us have some Mozart and Schubert, and some Kern and Porter, for that matter, but not these hybrids which are neither profound nor amusing.

Prom Concert

The audience for last night's Prom concert made Varsity arena sag and bulge with its assembled weight. The tremendously popular tenor, James Melton was the chief reason for the huge crowd; probably Andre Kostelanetz, guest conductor was an attraction too, and the interesting program helped.

The program, well-played throughout, opened with Beethoven's Egmont Overture. This musical depiction of the cries for freedom of an oppressed people could be considered topical today for the oppressed people of Europe. Typically classical in form, it is intellectual and satisfying program music.

Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice Espagnole, following as a distinct contrast to the Beethoven, glows with fantastic sound pictures, and sways with sensuous and intoxicating rhythm. Originally planned as a fantasy for violin, it has evidences of this origin in the violin cadenzas woven throughout the dazzling brilliance of the orchestration. It is a curious fact that, before Ravel and certain contemporary composers, the musical spirit of Spain was more vividly expressed by Slavic composers than by Spaniards.

The tender brooding melancholy of the Sibelius Swan of Tuonela was brought out admirably by the orchestra. In my opinion, it is the most sadly beautiful and imaginative work in the symphony orchestra's repertoire.

A muffed horn passage got Ravel's Bolero off to a bad start, but it eventually worked up to a climax of mad rhythm. This piece seems to be more of an exercise in orchestration and an experiment in psychology than a musical masterpiece. It shows superb skill, however, in the skilful use of unvarying rhythm which goes beyond the point of boredom, rather like the old Chinese torture of endless drops of water, singly harmless, but whose relentless repetition drive one towards frenzy.

Two classes of humour were represented, the Shostakovitch Polka and the Victor Herbert's American Fantasy. The Shostakovich is a series of orchestral wisecracks, easily understandable, but of intellectual quality.

James Melton's "golden voice" was in perfect condition for his group of solos and his aria from Delibe's Lakme.

Cesar Borre appeared as guest conductor for Kostelanetz's Lake Louise, with the composer at the piano. But of that . . .

JEAN MCNEILL

Wagner

Dr. Arnold Walter's Lecture

Dr. Arnold Walter's lecture last night was on modern harmony as exemplified in Tristan. It began with a short history of the artistic purpose of music from Bach to Wagner, whose Tristan marks the beginning of modern music. Dr. Walter emphasized the contrast between the classic composers' regard for form as the purpose of music and Wagner's neglect of it as a musical consideration. Next came an analysis of Wagner's philosophy, his classing of most things old as bad and all things new as good.

Coming to the main point of the lecture, Dr. Walter played passages from Tristan on the piano, analysing chord by chord. Although this work reaches a peak of chromaticism, underneath it all lies a tonal unity, and all chords, no matter how wild they may look on paper, are diatonically related.

After outlining the technical origins of these apparently insoluble dissonances, Dr. Walter brought out an interesting question. Wagner used the classical dissonances (sevenths and ninths) as consonances for the resolution of his more dissonant dissonances. To modern composers, Wagner's dissonances are sweet concord. So who knows what the human nervous system of the future will be able to endure?

PAUL SERSON

"Forbear, O shameless Champus Cat,
To prate each day of this and that—
Forevermore your jokes are flat
And thin as ether vapors!

"Your column daily doth me vex,
I think I'll write to urge the prex—
And Caput too—to place a hex
On Cats in college papers."

Thus, one night, severely spoke
A very dreary seeming bloke,
As the eat-in-chief gulped down a coke
Before his evening's capers.

"There's not a thing beneath his hat,
He's quite as brainless as a bat,
Methinks yon feline is a rat . . .
We really should keel-haul 'im!"

But then friend ed-in-chief opined:
Quoth he, "I know he ain't refined,
But we can't let him be maligned,
Or he won't write his column.

"He doesn't ask for much to eat,
Besides, there's no one on the beat,
'Cause half my staff's out West in wheat,
There's no way to recall 'em.*

"So put away that lethal gat;
Please spare our feeble minded Cat.
If you don't like him, just yell 'SCAT'

Canadian Nickel

YESTERDAY...IN PLEASURE CARS
TODAY...IN ARMY TRUCKS

THROUGH MUD AND SNOW, over rocky trails and desert sand, supplies to Empire armies must continue to move. Canadian Nickel helps to give army transport the rugged dependability it must have.

Through years of peacetime research, automotive engineers learned to make use of the extra strength, toughness and durability of Nickel steels. The automotive industry became the world's largest user of Canadian Nickel. Today the accumulated results of automotive research are being used to build army vehicles.

From Canadian mines today comes an increasing stream of Canadian Nickel to make our war vehicles rugged and dependable . . . to toughen the tools of victory.

Senior Meds Loom Large In Grid Loop

Beefy McMillan Is Mainstay of Outfit Which Packs Plenty of Power All Along Wingline

MURRAY'S KNEE AILING

Don Graham shook out his Senior Meds yesterday in a pre-schedule workout with Vaughan Road Collegiate. Of course the Meds' big team had little difficulty with a fast and classy collegiate team but the main thing was to see how the doctors were shaping up.

Grouped with Vic and Junior School in the first division the Meds look to be in top shape for the league's opener against Jr. School next Monday. As a matter of fact, some side-line quarterbacks are calling the big Red and Black team to carry off the silverware this year. And with those that are back from last season the squad sure packs power. Among those who stood out yesterday were the great Beefy McMillan, McNeil, Irwin, Wells, Turner, Cody, Toogood and Blanchette.

One of coach Graham's mainstays in the backfield will be Jim Murray who graduates from the junior squad. Murray had some trouble with his left knee before, and during yesterday's scrimmage put the other one out of action. However he expects to see action next week.

Gord Beatty, who, according to Graham, is one of the best ends in the game hereabouts, is backalong with Arnett, a heady field general and good passer, and Virtue, a fast back. Lewis, who also starred with the Juniors last season, is also turing out with the Senior squad.

All in all, unless Vic and Junior School watch themselves, the doctors are going to give them a good run for their money. Perhaps slightly weak aerially, the Red and Black are quite a team on the line and pack tremendous quantities of brute power.

Groupings Completed By Lacrosse Committee

The lacrosse schedule was drawn up yesterday at a meeting of the standing committee on lacrosse. Among changes from last year it appeared that O.C.E. and Meds would be unable to field teams with U.C. doubtful. On the other hand, S.P.S. has entered a fourth stick squad. To handle the season Pete Turner of Meds was elected chairman, Bradford of School was named vice-chairman and Currie of Vic was made secretary.

The 12 teams were tentatively placed in four groups, somewhat similar to last year, so that the winners of group one would play winners of number three. Group two's champ will play off with number four's winner for the right to play in the finals. Groupings tentatively named were:

Group one—
Sr. S.P.S., Pharm. A, Vic.
Group two—
Jr. S.P.S., U.C., Dents.
Group three—
St. Mike's, S.P.S. III, Pharm. B.
Group four—
Forestry, Wycliffe, S.P.S. IV.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Roger Conant

THE RACE BEGINS

Whether most realize it or not—a full fall of sports, both in and out of Hart House, will be thrown into high gear next week. As announced yesterday, the soccer and rugby leagues get under way Monday. But on top of that the volleyball season starts next Wednesday. Then the following Monday, Oct. 26, the lacrosse and swimming leagues will be launched.

The arts faculties will probably put up cries of inequality in point gathering in the Reed Race. Some Athletic Directors claim grave, perhaps mortal, handicap in their chances because of the exodus westward of their players. For instance, U.C. claims the loss of six top rugby players, four volleyball managers plus numerous players, four trackmen, three best lacrosse veterans, and a few soccer starters. That is only a sample, however. Trinity has given up completely a "B" soccer entry. The Meds and Dents students point out, however, that they too will be handicapped—what with the approaching of none-to-distant examinations. Then of course School puts up the cry of long working hours. However it does seem that some readjustment will be necessary to keep the Reed Trophy on the same plane of equality and fairness that it has enjoyed for the past few years.

Because of the nearness of the volleyball, lacrosse and swimming seasons it is urged that the numerous managers and Athletic Directors of the colleges make their programs clear to the Athletic Office. In the first place it will aid the jugglers of the intramural sports set-up in quickly making schedules and groupings while it will also shine light upon the respective strengths of the Colleges and aid in the considerations for changes in the Reed Race. It seems about time that the numerous teams were organized—and from first glimpse it appears that volleyball teams are going to be very numerous—despite harvesting or exams or what have you. But in any case the managers are advised to make reservations as soon as possible for practice in the gymnasium or with Mr. Winterburn for the pool.

ALL HAIL KNOX

In speedy and heated refutation of brother Pete's mention yesterday that the old soccer contemptibles of Knox had been forced to give up the ship for a season—Theologians by the handful swooped down on anyone the least bit connected with athletics and emphatically informed them that, quote, Knox has been in the competition since its inception many years ago—and Knox will remain in the competition as long as any other college, unquote. We raise our battered hats and offer the suggestion that their spirit could well stand as an example for the rest of the campus.

COMMITTEE MEETING

Standing Committee meeting for swimming and volleyball leagues to be held today at 4:30.

PING . . . . . PONG

Ping-pong, as if you didn't know, is another and perhaps slang name for table tennis. Some athletic historians have been trying to find the ancient Chinese warlord by that name who originated the sport. Derivation, however, more probably arose out of the sound of bat and celluloid pill as they met in play.

Upon entering the local bastion of the noble pastime in Hart House one's nostrils are assailed by a pungent odour—perhaps a result of the rule that states no leather-soled shoes are to be worn. However the spectators appear to be exercising as much as the participants. One moves one's head from right to left, back to right, and continues this process indefinitely and/or until the game ends and/or the ball is lost. In order to prevent eye strain which is extremely dizzying, one must be cross-eyed.

Some play pingpong as if they are back on the tennis courts, while other seem to have gone back to tiddley-wink days. Some experts have the knack of technique of coaxing the sphere just over the net, making it clip the edge of the table, and cutting it so that it imitates a boomerang.

The most prevalent complaint with the local p.p. room (and we're not referring to a nearby hotel) is in regards to the loss of balls via the radiator. It seems the elusive pill has a habit of bouncing from the nearest table into this heat distributor. However, there is an advantage to the room—a boxing ring is handy for discussion of arguments.

So, if you haven't anything to do, fellas, that is, if you think you haven't anything to do—don't make a bee-line for the pool parlor—head for the ping-pong room. Anyway, it's free.

Sportswoman

At last the long-awaited zero hour has arrived! If old man rain stays away from our door, St. Hilda's will be sporting lots of action this afternoon. Come on around and watch a few of the Interfaculty games. You might even be able to leave your mitts at home and will undoubtedly be favoured with the cream of University tennis.

Here are the various teams as they are lined up and ready for anything. U.C. has, to uphold her honour on the playing field—or should we say court—Betsy Mosbaugh, Barbara Greenleaf, Nora Graham and Gladys Brenner, in the order that they have been seeded. Two more players have yet to be added to the fold to make the merry six. P.H.E. will show some good players as well—in the persons of Virginia Kitto, M. Lifton, M. Finlayson, M. Keir and Connie O'Connor, as they were placed in order of ace bitting ability.

St. Michael's players are—in order of seeding—Rose Mary Cunningham, Isobel Roney, Maureen Murphy, Mary Farrell and yours truly—with one more game to be played off. This afternoon, at 3:30, Pat O'Donoghue and Florence Cooper are slated to play on St. Joseph's court for the sixth place on the double blue team.

Victoria College has named as their three to players V. MacLeod, Marjorie Chantler and Isabelle Eastman, while Betty Weall, Yvonne Baillie and Aileen Smith make up the sextette.

The Saints and the combined teams of Meds and Nurses are still entering the teams we mentioned in our last article—and a fine lot of tennis material they are sure to prove when the fray begins. Like all good things, our tournament will probably start slowly and work up to a brilliant climax; so let's look out for anything later on.

As of last year about this time, St. Hilda's are supplying the balls. All the players who have not been telephoned by Betty Hungerford should consult the draw sheet to see when they play. It will be posted on the bulletin board near the dressing rooms in the basement. We'll be seeing you at the games.

freshie cub reporters discovered the other day that the professors in the Fine Arts Department just do not appreciate literary greatness. As she sat glowing over her very first story, and displayed under a two-column head at that, the professor rushed into the room to start the lecture, took one look at the waving Varsity, yanked down the window-blind beside her, and blacked her out completely.

There is a professor in the French Department at U.C. who is a very, very popular fellow with his classes. He understands student weaknesses and also appreciates the early hour at which his classes are held, and so when he gave out the long lists of books for the year he printed out three sets on the blackboard.

"These," he said, pointing to the first, "are your course. These," pointing to the second, "are your reference books, and this, "waving at the third and shortest, "shows you where you can find the whole course summarized when you skip your lectures."

We hear an enormous lot about what the students think of the professors, but the vice versa is generally a closed book to everyone not allowed into the sacred confines of the Senior Common Room. On that account we are grateful to the English prof who openly, and with a chuckle, described the moustanche sported by one of his students as "Two minnows, rampant."

"Buddy, can you spare your pants?" is a cry you will hear in the corridors of the General Hospital, but it doesn't come from an escaping patient in the psychopathic ward. It is an S.O.S. from one senior Meds student hurrying ward-wards to another coming out, and translated it means, "Buddy, can you spare your stethoscope?"

The etymology of the word is shrouded in legend but it appears that one presiding doctor in the past impressed upon the more forgetful of his flock that they must never go around without their stethoscopes, that they must consider them just as necessary as their pants. And so the medical vocabulary becomes enriched.

SELECTIVE SERVICE SPOKESMAN PREDICTS UNIVERSITIES RESTRICTED TO WAR COURSES

President Cody Attacks Excessive Acceleration In Technical Courses

Speech at Niagara Falls Points Out Dangers in United States System of University Course Acceleration

MAY IMPAIR EFFICIENCY

A warning against overemphasis on acceleration of technical courses is wartime was sounded by President H. J. Cody in an address to the joint convention of the Canadian Engineering Institute and the American Society of Civil Engineers at Niagara Falls, Ont., Thursday.

The warning came a day after L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, suggested to the convention that further developments be made in allocating university students to important technical posts in wartime.

In an address prepared for the convention, Mr. Wright said an increased number of students should be persuaded to enter universities to fill the demand for trained technicians in the active forces and in government departments.

He pointed out that the student body will have to be available to the active forces to accept positions as technical officers on graduation. "Under the present circumstances students will probably have to volunteer," said Mr. Wright, "but in the event of an insufficient numbers volunteering, allocation of a further number will be made."

Mr. Wright added that students who are medicaly unfit for active service on graduation will be placed in highly essential civilian posts.

President Cody deprecated the speeding-up of courses in United States universities. If this continues, he said, it will impair the efficiency of university graduates who must be relied upon as responsible representatives of their profession.

Manpower Lack Requires Step --Austin Wright

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 18—(CUP)—Prediction that university training would be restricted for able-bodied men to courses which will fit them to be technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry, was made here yesterday by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, in an address to the General Alumni Association of Queen's University.

"In the long-range national interest it is necessary that we should maintain as high a standard of education as is compatible with wartime exigencies," Mr. Wright said. "But it is obvious that the first need is to fulfil the requirements of the armed forces and war industry for technical personnel.

"Present regulations requiring male students to undergo physical examination and take military training, restricting changes in course, are an indication of government policy. If the war continues long enough the privilige of higher education may be lost to many.

"A logical progression of government policy, already stated as far as present-day students are concerned, might develop into a selective arrangement for university students.

"It could well be that young men of military age will require permits to enter university and that they will be required to take not only military training but courses which are directly useful in the war effort.

"It might be that physically-fit young men will be allowed to enter university only on condition that they take courses which will fit them to become technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry.

"I have no doubt that as the shortage of manpower in our nation becomes more acute, matriculation into the universities will be reserved for those who can qualify with the highest marks. Hereafter, perhaps, a university career should depend on a competitive scholarship basis.

"This new trend does not mean that universities would be curtailed out of operation for they have an important place in training necessary personnel. The function of universities in teaching the art of thinking is also of importance in wartime.

"The policies of manpower control which we have been charged with administering are not meant for a passive, negative people. They are designed to organize to the limit the manpower of this country into a strong, active, fearless force of fighting men and civilian supporters who cannot but conquer.

"We want no slavery in Canada. That is not what we are fighting for. We want a free people, freely moving in their own and the common interest, limited only by the necessary restrictions of a nation-wide policy."

Mr. Wright has for many years been general secretary of the Engineering Institute of Canada. Associated with Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service, in the formation two years ago of the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel, he has continued as Mr. Little's assistant when he assumed leadership of National Selective Service.

Need For Consultation With University Heads Emphasized By President

Feels Suggested Drastic Regulation May Impair Rather than Help Efficient Prosecution of War

THINKERS ALSO NEEDED

Canadian university officials should be consulted before any new regulations bearing on the courses open to able-bodied male university students become effective, Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, said yesterday. He was commenting on a speech delivered Saturday to the alumni of Queen's University by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service.

"Before any such drastic regulations —regulations which may impair rather than help the war effort—come into force, it would be the part of wisdom of the government to consult the universities," he said.

"The war effort demands other types of men than those technically-trained," he added. "Mr. Wright himself states that the universities have an important part to play in wartime in teaching the art of thinking."

Commenting Saturday on Mr. Wright's speech, A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, said he was not in favour of such projected legislation.

He said that men of 17 or 18 should not be prevented from entering courses in which they could continue for a year or two before becoming eligible for compulsory military service.

He added that registration in technical courses had increased voluntarily since the outbreak of war, citing a present registration of 600 in first-year Applied Science and Engineering, as compared with a peacetime average of 325.

Western Finds Policies Agree With Wright

London, Ont., Oct. 18—(CUP)—Dr. Sherwood Fox, President of the University of Western Ontario, said Saturday that predictions embodied in an address delivered by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service were "quite in keeping" with policies already adopted at that University.

"With the manpower situation growing more acute, it is natural to expect such compulsion in training and it goes without saying that full co-operation will be extended by the universities," he said.

Meds to Hear Labour Lawyer

J. L. Cohen, K.C., outstanding Canadian labour lawyer, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society this evening from 6:30 to 8 in Wymilwood. Students of all faculties are invited to attend and join in the open discussion.

Mr. Cohen was counsel for Tim Buck and other labour internees in the hearings which preceded their recent release. He was also retained by the National Committee for Democratic Rights as their counsel in discussions of the Defense of Canada Regulations with the government last winter.

He is the author of "Unemployment Insurance," a text used in this University and "Collective Bargaining in Canada," a survey of the labour situation in this country.

STUDENT OFFICERS HELP HARVESTERS

Don Rowat, President of the U.C. Lit., who left for the west on the Harvest Special a little over a week ago, is now working in the wheatfields of Alberta.

"I have just finished a hard day's work in the fields pitching grain onto wagons which were drawing it steadily and endlessly, it seemed, to the threshing machine in the centre of the field," he writes. "But I shouldn't say it was hard work, because I rather enjoyed a day's outing in the clear Saskatchewan air — and, anyway, the farmers here don't expect too much of these Eastern 'dude' farmers."

The morning after they left Toronto, the U.C. boys held an organizatiou meeting, and appointed a committee of five consisting of Don Rowat, Geoff Johnson, Frank Watson, Bryant Kasrer and Al Mitchell. This group arranged for accommodation in the coaches, food, information, and entertainment. "This temporary self-government," reports Rowat, "gave them a spirit and a feeling of unity that was

Women's Common Room To Have First Programme Of Recorded Music

The first programme of music to be heard this year from the Carnegie Collection of recordings will be presented in the Women's Common Room, second floor South-East corner, University College, today.

Continuing under the same general arrangements as last year, the selections to be played each day will be arranged from requests made by the students, and will be published daily in the A. M. & D. column of The Varsity. The 650 records are widely representative of all forms of musical composition and media, and lists of them are available.

Programmes will be presented from 3:45 to 5:30 daily, Monday through Friday. All men and women of the student body and faculty are invited.

MEETING SET FOR AIR FORCE WING

Men who have registered with either the 1st Battalion or the 2nd Battalion for Air Force training,and any other students who are interested in eventual aircrew service with the Royal Canadian Air Force, are to essemble at 1930 hours (7:30 p.m.) tonight (Monday, Oct. 19) in the area between Convocation Hall and the Physics Building.

From there they will be directed to a place where they will be met by Squadron Leader H. C. Spence of the local R.C.A.F. Headquarters, who will speak to the group and answer questions relating to the establisment of a squadron of the University Air Training Corps at the University of Toronto.

Men interested in enrollment in this squadron will then be given classification tests and appointments for early R.C.A.F. medical examinations. Wherever possible they should bring birth certificates with them tonight, or failing that, be prepared to indicate whether they can have these certificates in hand by the time of their medical examinations.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS FOR WOMEN

Will all first year women students who have not already made appointments for medical examinations please do so immediately at 44 Hoskin.

HARVESTERS ON JOB; U. of M. AID UNASKED

The 2,000 students of Ontario and Quebec Universities who left for the wheatfields last week-end, are now located at various points throughout Saskatchewan and Alberta. In most areas the harvesting is proceeding to schedule, but at Lloydminster the work is being held up by rain. Students from the University of Manitoba have not yet been asked to help.

Delay at Lloydminster

Lloydminster, Oct. 14 — (CUP) — Fifty Queen's students were welcomed like long-lost brothers by the farmers when they arrived in this town on the border of Alberta and Saskatchewan, 210 miles northwest of Saskatoon.

Most of the crops in Saskatchewan have been cut and stooks line the fields across the countryside. Threshing has not started yet on 70% of the farms because of the heavy rains in September and the early part of this month. There is little chance that harvesting will get under way until the end of the week.

"This may mean that students will be required in the fields until the middle

The Balloon Goes Up

Potentially the biggest story ever to hit the pages of this Undergraduate Newspaper is carried today on the address delivered by Mr. Wright to the Alumni of Queen's University in connection with the annual autumn convocation at Kingston.

The assistant director of National Selective Service has made some predictions which are startling in the extreme. And the implications of his words are even more far-reaching. Apparently it is the government intention to reduce the universities which once were strongholds of liberal education to the status of mere trade-schools.

Admittedly the need for more and more technically-trained personnel is pressing. But how this need will be filled by cutting the arts courses in universities which are already turning out technicians to the limit of their capacity remains unanswered by Mr. Wright. And how non-technical officer-material of the highest possible calibre is to be obtained without giving young men the opportunity to undergo education in the humanities is also unanswered. At this University alone, the Canadian Officers' Training Course has already graduated some 1,000 subalterns into the Canadian (Active) Army. And we venture to say that they as a group are more efficient officers than any group of subalterns who have not had a university training.

We question whether the speaker had any right to suggest that matriculation into the universities would be limited to those qualifying with the highest marks. Here he would seem to step out of his own domain into that of educational administration, a field not yet under the control of Mr. Little and his associates.

And finally we take issue with Mr. Wright, as President Cody has done, in going over the heads of university officials in making his predictions. The Universities of Canada have done perhaps more than any other stratum of the nation in carrying on war work, both in training of all types of personnel, and in research, of which the full story cannot be told until after the war. They have co-operated at every turn with government requests. To send up trial balloons on projected legislation relating to university men without first consulting the head of Canada's largest University would appear to even the casual observer to be high-handed to the point of bad manners.

Freedom For Sale

The Third Victory Loan campaign opens across Canada today—a fact of which several hundred members of the 1st Battalion need no reminder. Canadians are being asked to lend to their government some three-quarters of a billion dollars. This is an astronomical figure; but the war in which Canada is taking valiant part is the hugest in history. We cannot stint the price to be paid if armies overseas are to be maintained and equipped, if more armies at home are to receive adequate training, if the wheels of Canadian industry—vital cogs in the war-machine of the United Nations—are to keep spinning at top speed.

University students are not—despite recent ill-informed comment appearing in the correspondence of the down-town press—a monied class. It is not expected that they can make any large contribution to this appeal for funds. War savings stamps and certificates are within the means of most; but war bonds are not. Nevertheless there are some few students at this University of independent means, who can well afford to buy a bond or two in the fight for freedom on the financial front.

And it would be wise if such purchases were made through University channels so that a creditable total of contributions could be added to the growing list of refutations of the charge that universities are not bearing their full burden in the present war.

Introducing---

Today The Varsity introduces to its readers a new feature, which it hopes and believes will be of wide interest. A weekly column, "The Word's Pulse," conducted by the Toronto secretary of the League of Nations Society, makes its bow elsewhere in this issue.

No stranger to collegiate journalism, W. J. Bramah was Editor-in-Chief of the University of Western Ontario Gazette for the year 1938-1939. He is now enrolled in the School of Graduate Studies at this University.

Bramah's work with the League of Nations Society has given him a far-seeing understanding of, and a familiarity with, the international scene which is rare in a college student. He is eminently equipped to discuss world affairs from the combined points of view of the student reporter and the well-informed observer.

The Issue Is Joined

Printed below is a letter from an Engineering freshman. It is in reply to our editorial suggestion that university men and women give some serious consideration to their position in relation to the rest of the community. We commend the sanity of the reply. But the whole question is not yet answered. And the contents of today's front page bear witness to the growing need for the Universities to justify their existence. Our letter-box is still open to students and faculty-members.

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Being one of those unfortunate people who read the second page first, I bumped into Thursday's editorial.

We should be allowed to stay at university, I think, but we are not making adequate preparations for taking a place in the outside world, and the courses are not geared to produce the most valuable citizens. To understand this, take a look at the world in general.

The world is at war. What caused it? Was it a raving Hitler or was it a German people tired and ill-fed during the depression of 1929-35? If they had been living a decent life, and progressing to a better one, they would never have followed the fanatical ideas of the Nazis. But science had far outstepped society. The busy scientists were discovering and inventing things that would make the human load lighter, but they made the fatal mistake of not seeing that those things were distributed and used properly. The result—a few people had practically everything and a great multitude relatively little.

That happened here too. Does any sane person see why the grain elevators of the west should have been overflowing while people were undernourished in Toronto? It happened here about the same time that Hitler was rising in Germany. A little logical reasoning of university quality might have helped. But most students weren't and aren't interested in politics.

Ask the average student what fundamentals should determine the structure of the post-war world. He avoids the question; he wants to go swimming. Suggest to him that since he will have to live and work with people for another forty years or so, he ought to know something of human nature, and you receive a patronizing smile. He fails to apprehend the basic reasons for this world conflict; that would require thought outside the courses of study.

Most students are here for the purpose of acquiring an education which will permit them to live life in security and comfort while conveniently forgetting those who do not have the same opportunity. To them a graduation certificate is a pass to a good job. They amuse themselves at every opportunity, not realizing that to lead a balanced life there must be devotion to an ideal beyond self—the raising of human life to a higher plane.

The world has solved the problem of production. There are immense resources available for man to use and enjoy, but the jobs of distribution and government have been sadly bungled. The university graduates of the past have invented, designed and manufactured without question whether their work was being used to full advantage or not. And we are making the same mistake.

Yours sincerely,

Don Millard,
I Electrical Engineering.

Conciseness Seen as Core Of Newswriting

Speaker Declares Newswriting Must Be Concise in Four Hour Address to Varsity Staff

MUST BE CONCISE

Conciseness was stressed as the core of newswriting by Hex Nilssen, News Editor of The Varsity, Friday in the first of a series of news lectures delivered before a mixed audience of both sexes made up of members of the men's and women's news staffs of the paper. Women were also present.. In a sprightly speech which lasted from 4 p.m. until nearly midnight he continually stressed the necessity of conciseness in newswriting. Saying that conciseness was the core of newswriting, he said, "Conciseness is the core of newswriting."

Core Conciseness

He went to state that newswriters, reporters, journalist and also newspaper-

COMMENT IS QUITE UNNECESSARY HERE

Reprinted from the correspondence columns of The Globe and Mail, Friday, Oct. 9:

In view of many announcements recently broadcast over the radio with respect to the status of university students in the National Selective Service scheme, the thought has occurred to me, and I am sure must have occurred to many others, that the National Selective Service Commission should publish a definite statement of policy in this matter for all people to read.

Thus far I have been given the impression that those people whose financial circumstances permit them to send their sons to university have a better chance of keeping their boys out of the army than others parents whose means will not permit their sons to do anything but work as soons as they are able in order that the additional earnings may bring a little more happiness and comfort into their homes.

Are we to understand that all university students, irrespective to their courses of study and dates of enrollment, are to be put into a privileged class and, provided that they are good boys and do as the professor tells them, they won't be subjected to the physical and mental horrors of war; that all the fighting necessary to protect their cultural advancement will be done for them by those who could not afford to go to a university or who could not see any advantage in doing so?

Perhaps I am wrong, and it is possible that I may have misunderstood what has been announced, but in these days when the Government is exhorting equal sacrifice on the part of all citizens it is very disturbing to feel that the functions of our "seats of learning" are to be destroyed by converting them into glorified "funk holes" for youths who do not want to join the fighting forces and a convenience for the selfish parents who encourage them.

P. Ackroyd.

New Liskeard.

Reprinted from the correspondence columns of The Globe and Mail, Saturday, Oct. 17:

It seems unthinkable to let pass unchallenged the reflection on the aims and ideals of university students recently appearing in your columns.

Your correspondent states that the university is filled with the sons of the rich. But almost every student spends his summer vacation in earning his fall expenses, and many students, working hard for good grades, win scholarships and make their way unaided. It has been my personal experience that any young man with initiative and ambition can get a university education.

How can the students be anything else but war-conscious? Thousands of graduates and former undergraduates are on active service. Many have already fallen. The universities are continually providing leadership for the forces from the ranks of the Officers' Training Corps. Your corespondent might well visit the campus and hear the resounding tramp of students preparing for service. Engineering, dentistry and medicine are making most vital contributions to the serious needs of both the forces and war industry, and of civil life.

The Government allows students to continue their courses in the belief that they will prove of value to their country either in the immediate crisis or in the future reconstruction. The liberal arts student will be desperately needed, with his broad and tolerant outlook, to provide leadership in the bitterness of the postwar period. In the occupied countries the Nazis have eliminated all cultural subjects because they inculcate ideas not in the interests of Das Deutsche Volk. Are we to follow suit and tear down the citadels which uphold the principles of social justice and freedom?

To turn to practical considerations, students are fully behind war relief organizations, such as International Students Service, which aids prisoners of war to study and retain their sanity.

Recently more than twelve hundred students from Eastern Canadian universities left to help harvest the Saskatchewan wheat crop. They had a difficult choice to make. The wheat crop must be saved, but also the students must fully accept the responsibility of putting their all into their study courses, a responsibility laid upon them by the Canadian Government which made it possible for them to study.

Students are facing up squarely to war problems. All wrestle with the conflict of loyalties waged between the immediate situation and the long-range view. Are we to avoid our responsibilities as students and enlist now? Mr. Ackroyd will pardon us, it is to be hoped, if we differ so abruptly from his views. But as students we feel very strongly that public opinion is vastly misinformed on this subject and that it should be corrected. Students are not slackers.

John Wood, 4T3.

Unity in Variety

Hart House Art Gallery

The presentation of the work of Caven Atkins in the Art Gallery in Hart House, is arranged to show the unity of approach in structural composition, whether a picture is in water colour or in oil, in abstraction, pencil sketch, or in landscape. The purpose of creative painting is to give the artist's interpretation of his reaction to perceived things. Everything in the exhibition is based on the immediate response of the artist. Even the most abstract painting is directly identified with an observed experience.

In the landscapes, it may be observed that light and dark are used to indicate linear structure. A scene in the Laurentians is a good example: through the spontaneous use of water-colour the artists has captured the burst of sunlight from behind rainy clouds. It explodes like a bomb, and a silver outline gleams from the contour of treetops. In contrast, Near St. Maurice, Quebec, expresses the enclosed-by-mountains feeling. The scene is painted in a locale which is invariably rainy; this picture heightens the feeling of awe before Nature through a ball of mist descending upon the valley.

In Michigan, there are certain areas which have the underbrush burnt out, for fox-hunting. One of the larger paintings shows one of these places after a snowfall. The burnt areas are exposed through the snow, and leafless trees raise their limbs to an unsympathetic sky.

Woman descending stairs is an abstraction. It is a successful canvas in portraying a three-dimensional form through the use of light when the picture is done only in flat planes. In this type of picture, the shape is conceived of late November," stated Hugh Buchanan, Associate Editor of the Queen's Journal. "Now that they are here, there seems little indication that any of them will head east again until the job is finished. The pay is better than advertised, the food so far is excellent, and the country is a real change from the rolling land of the East. The Western attitude on so many things, such as polities is so different from that of the East, that it will prove intensely interesting to students."

The greatest demand is for teamsters with very little call for pitchers. The majority of farmers needed only one to three students, which necessitated breaking down the groups which the students had formed previously. However the farms are within 10 miles of town, so many Saturday night get-togethers are expected.

The farms of Southern Saskatchewan are larger, as the land is much more wide-open, and students may be as far as 50 miles away from town.

Archduke Harvests

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 16— (CUP) — Archduke Rudolph of Hapsburg, 23-year-old brother of Otto pretender to the throne of Hungary is out harvesting with the Laval contingent, at Huxley, Alberta. "I think I'm going to like this," he said, after he had had a lesson in stooking and pitching bundles of wheat. "It is a very fine thing to be able to help the farmers at this time. It is the least we can do to show our gratitude to you for allowing us to live in your wonderful country."

Rudolf was out before dawn with the other hired men to harness the team for his bundle rack, and by 7 a.m. was seriously pitching. He is to work until 7:30 p.m. and he will be paid $7 per day.

The 300 farm lads and students who arrived here on Thursday were the first East Canada Harvesters to arrive in Alberta in 14 years. They were engaged within 30 minutes of their arrival. Another 500 arrived in Edmonton on Friday and were sent to districts east of Edmonton.

"Meals Amazingly Good"

Regina, Sask., Oct. 17— (CUP) — "The meals are amazingly good," says Professor Culliton of McGill, who accompanied the 500 students from McGill and Macdonald College to the West. "In certain cases the plumbing wasn't exactly what the boys had expected, in other cases, the boys were not quite what the farmers had hoped for," he continued, "but the students are proving willing workers, and are developing into first-rate harvest helpers."

None of the McGill students have asked to be sent back, although two had to return on account of illness. No accidents have occurred. Not all the students are working with combine crews, driving trucks, loading grain, operating tractors, stooking and threshing, and only 25 out of the 500 have had any previous experience. They are getting blisters, sore backs, and stiff muscles," concluded Professor Culliton, "and liking it."

Manitoba Aid Not Asked

Winnipeg, Oct. 14— (CUP) — The students of the University of Manitoba, have not been asked by the Government to help bring in the crops on the prairies. In an article written by Marion C. Glassman appearing in the Manitoban it was stated that when they first heard of the large numbers of students from the Eastern Universities who were on their way to the wheatfields, Manitoba student felt disappointed and surprised that nothing as yet had been done to send out Manitoba students.

Balls Unobtainable For Squash Committee Says

". . . and women are definitely not encouraged to watch the games." So ended a report on squash at Hart House by W. B. Burwell Secretary of the House. Mr. Burwell confided many surprising details of the game. For instance—did you know that the real name for the game is not "squash" or "bash" but squash raquets?

Mr. Burwell reported that the courts in Hart House might soon be closed because of the shortage of balls which are now impossible to obtain. Hart House has two balls and several raquets left and beginners are invited to borrow them. They may sign for them at the Warden's office and test their skill and dexterity at the fascinating game. New men are allowed to borrow the Houses's raquets ten times. After that if they like the game they are expected to buy their own, take the game up seriously and in time become proficient. Mr. Burwell reports that many freshmen have taken advantage of this standing offer so far this year, and advises other men new at the game to do the same. First, the courts must be reserved at the Hall Porter's desk.

Mr. A. B. Fennell, registrar of the University, is chairman of the Squash Raquets Committee and himself an excellent player.

Speaking of Sport

SCHOOL AGAIN

Today is the big day for all rugby and soccer followers. For today is opening day in both the Arts Faculties and Mulock Cup grinds. Today at 4:45 up in Varsity Stadium Sr. Meds and Jr. School fire the opening rugby gun—and what a boom it will make. For from pre-season prognostications this game may be a deciding one in the first division—and if in the first division, so in the whole league. For it is generally conceded that whoever takes group one will easily dispose of any challenger from the weakened entries in the second division.

The custom of this hour of every year is to call the ultimate holders of the Mulock silverware. Why this has become a custom is not completely comprehensible—however even the best of our predecessors have succumbed to the limb-crawling lust. But, doggone it, when we've finally persuaded ourselves to take the plunge—we look around and see three, not one, outstanding squads. And when we note that they are all grouped together—we, quick like a bunny, make up our minds to take in all the games in group one before the play-offs. But the problem, after primary parings, is between Sr. Meds, and the two School entries.

The doctors showed good form last Thursday in a work-out with Vaughan Road. Beefy McMillan with extensive aid from Jim Murray and Gord Beatty should give them all a good fight for their money—especially with that heavy line of theirs. Vic can't be counted on too much until the harvesters return—despite all Jim Carson's efforts. Thus it seems the hunt may narrow down to School—and that's where we're stopping. The Senior squad has such names as Grosskurth, Plaxton, Lucas and Seymour on its roster—to mention a very few top men. While, coached by Mike Rodden, the Juniors have such stars as Vern Booth, Bill Moffat, Gus Campbell, Jack McLean and the great Herb Stricker. The Arts faculties may be more powerful if they reach the playoffs—for reinforcements toughened from hard toil—will reach them. But first they have to reach the play-offs. So until then we shall watch the first division with its predominating School teams. And we are promising one of the best games of the season—this very afternoon.

LET'S GET GOING

With the volleyball schedule to begin this Wednesday one would think the Athletic Directors would have had their teams organized by the dealine Friday. Somehow, through lack of foresight, or some such negligence, several faculties had not made their entries or withdrawals before the volleyball committee meeting on Friday. Thus the program had to be shifted on four days—the league opening now set for a week today. A larger number of teams than usual is expected—for instance Meds hope to get eight squads in the fray—so games are to be played at noon, from 3:45 to 6:00 and 6:30 to 9:30 in the evening. These games will be listed on non-drill days as far as possible as all intramural sports this year will be handled by Mr. MacCutcheon. It is too bad that the organizing has been held up through some negligence on students' parts. After all—due warning had been given—and no excuses for harvesters could be used for the simple reason that the Arts Colleges are not the offenders in this case. However, gentlemen, perhaps you will be able to sign the affidavits in the Athletic Office before Tuesday at 6.

lacking in any other coach on the train except Laval with whom we organized a joint sing-song."

As the train neared Saskatoon, the harvesters arranged themselves in groups of three to five to suit themselves before being issued tickets. Nineteen went to Kenaston, 6 to Hanley, 18 to Bladworth and Davidson in the south, 17 to Lucky Lake in the southwest, and 13 to Melfort and Tisdale in the northeast.

The committee of five mentioned above, along with Vernon Lang, assistant Managing Editor of The Varsity, and two others were issued tickets to Melfort via Prince Albert (100 miles north of Saskatoon) where they were given the name of the government representative they were to see in Melfort.

By 6 o'clock on Tuesday they arrived at Melfort which is a town of about 2,000 population. "Here," Rowat continues, "we were almost rushed off our feet by unshaven farmers begging to give us jobs, but we would have nothing of it until we had got the local hotelkeeper to hunt up our representative. We were determined that we must be hired in groups of four, but our representative showed us that we were much too valuable to be sent to only two farmers, and thereupon proceeded to divide us up into groups of two, and we were promptly driven off by our farmers. We have all agreed to meet in Corky's Drugstore on Saturday night for the usual farmers' outing."

Thoughts and whisperings of basketball are beginning to drift around this campus. The chief difficulty at present, is to locate coaches for the various teams. The worried basketball heads are holding a meeting this afternoon, and perhaps may have something definite to report by tomorrow. There is some promising material at O.C.E. to meet this need, but whether these girls can spare the time in the next two months is another matter.

Despite the lag in proceedings to date, things should start shortly. Schedules will be posted. Initial practices will be held this week.

The division of the University College teams into an Arts grouping and a P.H.E. grouping will split up the neat combinations of last year in the Junior and Senior squads. From what we hear, the rest of the colleges applaud this move and feel it makes for a more even competition. The Royal College will be entering six teams, freshie, junior and senior from U.C. and freshie, junior and senior from P.H.E.

Enough of basketball for the present. Let us now turn to tennis. Players in the Interfaculty Tournament this week are to get their eligibility slips in to their team managers before they play their first match.

Players should consult the draw and check on their games. The first round is slated for today. The second round tomorrow will have to be all played off on time in order that the tournament will reach the finals on Friday.

The four matches for today are listed here.

1—Ruth Margesson, U.C., v.
Patsy Wilford, Meds.
2—Mary Farrel, St. Mike's, v.
Dorothy Sanders, St. Hilda's.
3—Barbara Greenleaf, U.C., v.
Betty Weal, Vic.
4—Ruth Carletou, P.H.E., v.
Sonja Morawetz, St. Hilda's.

12,000 Parade As Loan Drive Launched

Varsity Bursar To Be Agent For War Loan

Will Canvass University Administrative Staff; Academic Staff Comes Under City Loan Committee

TO SHOW FILMS

Toronto objective in the Third Victory Loan campaign which opens today is $188,000,000—and the University of Toronto will be contributing substantially to the city total, C. E. Higginbottom, University bursar, said in an interview Friday.

He outlined plans for the canvassing of the University's staff, tradesmen and students, and stressed the necessity for co-operation with the present government appeal for funds.

"The present situation is serious and those who can afford it should help in every way possible," he said. "The earning power of the majority is high and those in the income brackets below $2,000 annually are now probably being taxed less than before the last budget."

He said that the academic staff of the University would be canvassed by members of the city loan committee, while members of the administrative staff would be canvassed through his own office. Tradesmen and members of the superintendent's staff would be canvassed by the University of Toronto Employees' Association.

Students will not be canvassed, but those who wish to contribute to the Loan may get their Bonds by filling out forms available in the Students' Administrative Council office in Hart House, Miss A. E. M. Parkes, S.A.C. Acting Secretary-Treasurer, said Friday.

Mr. Higginbottom announced that films are to be screened by the Toronto Loan committee in Hart House Theatre Wednesday afternoon, showing ravaged European scenes following the arrival of Nazi armies in the conquered countries.

First showing will be at 3 p.m., for the benefit of students and the employees of Hart House. At 4 p.m. the films will be shown to the academic and administrative staffs, and at 4:30 p.m. for the tradesmen and members of the superintendent's staff.

"In the First Victory Loan in 1941, the University contributed about $100,000," Mr. Higginbottom said. "Nearly $400,000 was given by the University during the Second Victory Loan in February of this year. This time we should do at least as well if not even better."

He emphasized the fact that the Bonds are negotiable and that they carry interest-bearing coupons. "One of the soundest investments I know of," he said.

men should always bear in mind that the core of newswriting was conciseness. Saying that the core of newswriting was conciseness, a fact which should be borne in mind by every newswriter, reporter, journalist and newspaperman, Mr. Nilssen said, "Every newswriter, reporter, journalist, and newspaperman should bear in mind the fact that the core of newswriting is conciseness."

Simple Language

Short words in short sentences were recommended in the place of more elongated terminology by the renowned redactorial authority as he said that simplicity was the ally of brevity in both the choice of words and the sentence structure of good newswriting. "Simplicity both in the choice of words and in the sentence structure is the ally of brevity in good newswriting," he said.

Brief Paragraphs

Short sentences and brief paragraphs were recommended to his heterogeneous audience of scriptorial neophytes who awaited his every utterance with resperatorial hesitation. "Always use short sentences and brief paragraphs," he said.

Student Comment

During a brief pause for chicory and saccharin tablets we asked one student who would not give his name for comments on the lecture.

THE WORLD'S PULSE

By W. J. Bramah
Secretary, League of Nations Society (Toronto Branch)

Russian psychological and material resistance appears to be frustrating German attempts to maintain the highly publicized theory of Nazi invincibility. Retreat or surrender on the part of the Russian people is apparently not included in their general attitude towards the struggle for existence.

But in a realistic fashion the Russians have difficulty in interpreting the seemingly half-hearted assistance from the West, and Stalin looks upon Great Britain and United States with an attitude of disappointment rather than anger. As Churchill illustrated however in the House of Commons on September 7, Russia has little comprehension of the difficulties involved in transporting supplies over sea routes, always having been an inland country.

The difficulties involved in opening a second front at the moment present innumerable tactical complications—most of which are obvious, but unless we develop a more complete understanding of the concept of total war, the repercussions are going to shake up from our power pinnacle—now, and in the post-war world.

Russia's previous and present distrust of the Western powers must be dispelled at all costs by our continued and intensive attempts to give aid to this valiant and sincere ally if we are to expect her co-operation both in war and peace. If she can produce an offensive now it might possibly be intensified in the next few months, and if it so happens that Germany can be defeated or mortally weakened by Russia alone, we may expect little sympathy from the Soviet Union when the inevitable time must be continually kept in mind in comes to consider peace terms. This is one aspect of the second front which determining the actual moment when the Western allies open a drive into occupied territory.

Meanwhile the democracies have a good deal to learn from the Russians with regard to the psychological spirit with which to meet German agression. Hitler's propaganda of invincibility has been considerably deflated by the Soviet's contempt for his formerly irresistible attacks, and today Germany attemps to conceal her position by diffusing the idea of the ultimate defeat of Russia among the conquered countries, as a continuation of the propaganda which was so potent against fallen France.

Now that Russia has disturbed the equilibrium of Hitler's psychological victory, it must be precipitated by the democratic powers and a new propaganda directed against the German people. This is not accomplished by stupid phrases of hate and revenge and the total elimination of the German race; it merely convinces them that they must either win or perish. Moreover it is ridiculous to assume that Germany can be indefinitely excluded from a world order. A psychological victory must be achieved by declaring—without pacifisit sentimentality—that some Germans will be awarded justice in the dictation of peace terms. This is not through consideration of the German people any more that it is protection for ourselves and for those who fight with us. It is our duty to utilize the Russian psychological offensive in the spirit of good judgment and far sightedness which is the basis of our democratic training.

These are indeed times to try men's souls, and even an Exchange Editor's, for that matter. What with the harvest situation and all, we have had to forego our time-honoured prerogative of introducing two guest hither writers. It irks us because we had planned to be ever so witty at their expense, but we'll take it all in good part and, like stout Cortez, remain, SILENT UPON A PIQUE IN DARIEN.

WOMEN, as we have been heard to state before, CONFUSE US. But there's no denying they have a way of looking at things sometimes. Take, for instance, the remark of one reporter's mother last week, "I'm certainly thankful for a pot roast for our Thanksgiving dinner. I THOUGHT WE MIGHT HAVE TO HAVE TURKEY."

But on the other hand, they appal us. For instance, we had always thought of women's colleges as pleasant places crammed to the rafters with representatives of the gentler sex and untrammelled by the ruder foot of man, but we were wrong. The following box from the Bryn Mawr College News showed us that:

"This is idcal lacrosse weather! . . . We will play Saturday mornings, so don't worry of you're taking hockey as well."

SO THAT'S WHAT THEY MEAN BY WOMEN'S CLUBS!

But everything that looks like a woman, ain't one necessarily. Uhnh, unh! Take the case of the Purdue upperclassman, for instance. Cornered by armed Freshmen he disguised himself in a dress and ran the blockade successfully. The only comment he aroused was, "Not bad, but her legs are kinda skinny."

* * *

A local case in point is that of a lad from Burwash who went with others from his house to visit some of the co-eds in one of the women's residences. In the course of the visit, lads from a rival house were caught entering by a ground-floor window. They were hurled back, but they succeeded in taking the legs of this lad with them. A tug of war ensued in the midst of which something gave and the top part of our hero came tumbling into the room. The bottom part followed, but minus its pants. His companions chivalrously covered his confusion by sitting on him until all the young ladies had retired and one had returned to pass an ample skirt in at the door.

Apparently, as we have also remarked before, men confuse women. There's a psychology student on campus who keeps a pet mouse in a tobacco can. An inquisitive co-ed of our acquaintance asked him if his family objected to his keeping mice. "Why should they?" he shot back. "They keep skis." Our friend didn't quite catch the logic of this until he added with feeling, "Did you ever break your neck on a mouse?"

* * *

Tomorrow's hither will be written by our Feature Editor, a medical-type Varsity staffer who is also well-known on the campus as the oldest inhabitant, having been here since most of use were trying our high school entrance exams. He has served The Varsity long and faithfully, keeping a vigilant stethoscope clapped over more than one night-editor's faintly-beating heart and warding off insistent glue factory agents. Tomorrow, then, a hither by our guyed philosopher and friend, HENRY Z. SABLE.

One Thousand Strong C.O.T.C. And Band March For Victory Loan

Parade Including Jeeps, Tanks, Bren Gun Carriers Largest Military Display in City's History

ALL TRAFFIC HALTED

Approximately 1,000 varsity students, members of the 1st Battalion of the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, participated in the Third Victory Loan parade through downtown Toronto Saturday.

The parade, which included 12,000 man and women of the armed forces, was labeled the largest military display in Toronto's history. Its sole purpose was to advertise the Third Victory Loan campaign which begins today.

Thousands of spectators lined the streets as men and materials passed in review. Tanks, jeeps and Bren gun carriers were included in the display.

Street cars in the parade area were rerouted to avoid congestion, and all traffic was at a standstill while the parade passed.

Major-General P. F. Leclere, general officer commanding the 7th Canadian Division, Major-General H. N. Ganong, general officer commanding the 8th Canadian Division, and Colonel Milton Fowler Gregg, V.C., commandant of the officers' training school at Brockville, took the salute.

Commander of the parade was Colonel J. W. H. C. H. Van den Berg, D.S.O., Officer Commanding 32nd (Reserve) Brigade Group C.A..

The C.O.T.C. Brass Band also took part in the parade.

A rip-roaring picture of heroism without heroics is "Wake Island," feature attraction at the Imperial Theatre this week. Shot and shell fly thick and fast as the Japs try to wipe the tiny sandbar off the screen.

IMPERIAL "WAKE ISLAND"

Starring Brian Donlevy as the tough Major commanding the island's defenee battalion, the picture is virtually womanless, and thus moves, unhampered, along lines of authenticity supplied by meagre details of the heroic stand by the Marine defenders.

Comedy, irony and tense drama are well mixed. The pastings the island received from Jap naval guns are portrayed with realism, although actual physical horror is played down. Although not recommended to anyone suffering from shell-shock, the picture is a fine piece of the right kind of propaganda.

Except for the news-reel the accompanying short features are disappointing.

Wycliffe Withdraws From Swim Scene

Withdrawal of Wycliffe and the entrance of Emmanual were the highlights of the organization meeting of the Swimming Committee last Friday. Roger Beams of U.C. and Glen Eagle of Emmanuel were elected vice-chairman and secretary respectively.

Two meets are to be run concurrently beginning at five o'clock. Contestants are forewarned to be on time always because only one postponement will be allowed for each team for the season. Pointings are to be as formerly with relay for three and other events five, three and one.

Groupings changed very little from last season, only exceptions being those of the two Theology entries. GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS DISCUSS PLAN TO RESTRICT UNIVERSITY ADMISSION; ARTS, SCIENCE HEADS AGAINST MOVE

Stress Danger Of Expansion Of War Courses

Speeding Up Essential War Courses May Impair Efficiency of Graduates; Modification of Existing Regulations Is Necessary Preliminary as Facilities Now Inadequate for Number of Applications

ARTSMEN NEEDED FOR GOVERNMENT

Doubt as to the feasibility of further acceleration and increased enrollment in science courses designed to fit men for specialized war work was expressed yesterday by heads of the Faculties of Medicine, Dentistry, and Applied Science and Engineering.

Commenting on speeches by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, delivered at Niagara Falls and Kingston last week, E. S. Ryerson, Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, T. Cowling, Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Dentistry, and C. R. Young, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, were agreed that increased speeding-up of science courses would probably impair the efficiency of graduating students.

"It has always been our practice to intersperse periods of practical training with academic years, and to date this system has been found most satisfactory," Dr. Young said. "We have as yet received no word from either the War-time Bureau of Technical Personnel or the Army that they wished us to change this system."

He predicted that there would be "a number of intermediate steps of modification of existing regulations" before such changes in academic administration as had been outlined in Mr. Wright's Kingston speech became effective. "Such a situation is some way off," he said.

Discussing the advisability of restricting non-war courses as Mr. Wright had suggested, Dr. Young said that such a step would depend upon the degree of emergency, and "only National Selective Service can decide that." He added that there was a constant although probably small demand for men highly trained in the fields of economics, languages,

UNIVERSITY MEN JOIN DISCUSSIONS

Plans to curtail admission to courses which are of no direct benefit to war activities have been framed by the Dominion Government and discussed with heads of Canadian universities, The Canadian Press reported "from official sources" in an Ottawa story yesterday.

The story said announcement of this order is expected within a few weeks or at least before the Christmas holiday period.

Such regulations were forecast Saturday by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, who told Queen's University Alumni that physically fit young men might be allowed to enter only courses of direct value to the war effort.

(In a statement to The Varsity Sunday, Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, said that he had received no official word of any projected changes in government policy such as were outlined by Mr. Wright. He said that "It would be the part of wisdom of the government to consult the universities" before such steps were taken.)

Four Arts Heads Oppose Plan Unanimously

Majority in First and Second Year of Non-Technical Arts Courses Are 17 and 18 Years Old; Feel These Will Be More Valuable During and After War with University Education

TWO TYPES OF LEARNING

Heads of the four Arts colleges in the University yesterday expressed spontaneous disapproval of the recent prediction by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, that physically-fit young men might be restricted in their university training to courses that will fit them to become technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry.

Mr. Wright's prediction was contained in a speech delivered Saturday, before the General Alumni Association of Queen's University.

Principal M. W. Wallace, of University College, expressed immediate agreement with President H. J. Cody's statement in The Varsity yesterday that Canadian university officials should be consulted before any new regulations bearing on the courses open to able-bodied male university students become effective.

"I agree with President Cody and thoroughly disapprove," said Principal Wallace, after reading an account of Mr. Wright's speech.

In the non-technical Arts courses of the University, Principal Wallace said, the majority of the men in first and second year are 17 and 18 years old. It is of supreme importance that these representatives of the potential thinking people of Canada should get a start in their university education, he said.

"They will make far better officers for having had some initiation into university training, and they will also be of far more value after the war," he continued. "The prime concern of the university in wartime is how to make the best contribution to the war effort. We will contribute greatly in seeing that the education of these young men proceeds."

Harvesters Meet Difficulties Working In Alberta Wheatfields

Students in Alberta Find Work Harder than Expected; High Temperatures Cause Minor Casualties; Salary Disagreements Between Students and Farmers; Toronto Harvesters Not Affected

By Hugh Buchanan
Queen's Journal Staff Writer

Lloydminster, Alta., Oct. 18—(CUP)—Salary differences between a few student-harvesters and their employers have arisen on Alberta farms today.

A few inexperienced harvesters were reported to have asked higher wages than the four-dollar-a-day minimum promised by the Dominion department of labour, while some farmers have been unwilling to pay even two dollars for unskilled help. No University of Toronto students have been reported in the Alberta district.

(A Canadian Press dispatch tonight reported an appeal by the Alberta Department of Agriculture and the Edmonton branch of the Unemployment Insurance Commission to harvesters and farmers to "give and take" in the question of wages.)

Many harvesters here have found that work more arduous than they had expected. Although the labour situation here is still extremely critical, some of the younger students have been discharged.

Thermometers here topped 80 today and there were several mild cases of sunstroke among the students working in the fields. A mild influenza epidemic has also hindered operations in this area.

Bad weather conditions had previously prevented harvesting operations in the Lloydminster district for the first two days following the eastern students' arrival.

A party of 34 students from Laval University arrived here yesterday, many of whom speak only French.

Reports from the Saskatchewan districts where University of Toronto students are located have made no mention of bad weather or of salary differences.

Donations Are Directed To Science

Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, announced recently that the Board of Governors has accepted donations made by friends of the university, totalling almost $70,000.

The W. J. Kellogg Foundation has contributed $10,000 to the Faculty of Medicine and $10,000 to the Faculty of Dentistry, to be used for loans to the students, as well as $4,000 to the School of Nursing for scholarships and loans to students entering the course this session.

The Rockefeller Foundation has made another contribution of $14,000 toward the research work in nutrition which Dr. E. W. Henry is doing in the School

Toronto K.C. Says Status Labour Need

University students should present an example of alert, critical and even indignant opinion to a largely uniformed indifferent Canadian populace, J. L. Cohen, K.C., told the Arts and Letters Club last night. The noted Toronto labour lawyer expressed this idea while speaking on "The impact of the war on Civil Liberties in Canada."

"The danger in wartime legislation is that it will arouse hysteria, and a certain amount of class discontent," he declared. He then took an example from the earlier part of the war:an enemy agent masquerading as a C.I.O. worker was speaking to metal miners on union-

Judith Evelyn Visiting Toronto Acted in Hart House in 1936

By Jean Southworth

Fond memories of Hart House Theatre were expressed by Judith Evelyn, star in the current Broadway hit, "Angel Street," in an interview here yesterday. "In fact, I received some of my best training there," she said. Miss Evelyn and Vincent Price, who co-stars with her as the villainous husband, came from New York to play the leads in the fifth of the "Nazi Eyes On Canada" radio dramatizations, broadcast Sunday night.

Miss Evelyn, who grew up in Toronto and Winnipeg, recalled the series of Hart House productions in which she starred in 1936. These included "Once in a Life-Time," "Silas the Coreboy," in which she played the role of a 14 year old boy, "Power of Darkness" and "Judgment Day."

Miss Evelyn and Mr. Price find time in their already crowded schedule to

She is a graduate of St. Hilda's College, Toronto. Last summer the Dean was in Port Hope with the Workers' Educational Association at Canada's first Labour College.

Eastern Students In Saskatchewan Bring In Sheaves And Milk Cows

Hanley, Sask., Oct. 15—(CUP)—The student harvesters here are working hard unhampered by inclement weather conditions. There is a definite type of rhythm to pitching sheaves, they find, and once you get used to its technique, disregarding the callouses on your palms, you begin to enjoy the work.

The technique is to dig the fork lightly into the sheaf a few inches beneath the twine, grab the fork handle firmly, swing the bundle high in the air directly over the left shoulder, and listen as it lands with a s-s-w-wish on top of the bundles on the wagon.

Other tasks besides pitching the sheaves include milking cows, grinding the cream separator, as well as various other regular farm chores.

Kenaston, Sask., Oct. 14—(CUP)—Novel to the students from eastern cities are the sort of caravans in which many of the boys live near here. The advantage of this type of movable residence is that it can be easily transported from farm to farm. Most of the students in this district are from St. Mike's.

Wilson Addresses S.P.S. Frosh At Reception In Hart House

Songs about beer, off-beat music, off-colour skits, magic tricks and serious advice made up the program of School's freshman reception in Hart House on Friday night. Over 400 frosh turned out to be formally acknowledged as schoolmen to end their period of "initiation."

Lt.-Col. W. S. Wilson, secretary of the faculty, told the students, "Have all the fun you want, but keep it within reasonable limits and do not do anything to arouse public criticism of the university."

He read a speech recently given by the president of Yale University setting forth the reasons why students were allowed to continue their studies in wartime and what was expected from them for their privileges.

Lt.-Col. Wilson recalled the last war when university students enlisted, whole

From Official Sources

The Canadian Press, a news-gathering agency whose "official sources" are usually impeccably accurate, carried a story out of Ottawa yesterday saying that the restrictions on admission to non-war university courses predicted Saturday by L. Austin Wright would be announced shortly.

The same official sources said "Plans have already been framed and discussed with heads of Canadian universities." We have reason to believe that the plans have been discussed with heads of some Canadian universities. But Mr. Wright's predictions were made at Kingston more than 24 hours before the President of this University received any word of the projected changes. And that word did not come to him through official channels.

In other words, with the most drastic changes in educational regulations yet to be made through National Selective Service apparently in a mature state of development, government officials had not seen fit to consult the man who heads Canada's largest university—a man who has constantly co-operated with government requests relating to the part universities are being asked to play in the national war effort. By sheer size, as well as by tremendous student and staff enthusiasm, the University of Toronto has led the way among Canadian universities in aiding the government's prosecution of the war. But when plans which may change the whole status of universities in this country are being "framed and discussed," this University is not consulted.

Yesterday we labelled such behaviour "bad manners." Today we add that it reveals a lamentable lack of judgment on the part of government officials whose current slogan, "All That Matters Now Is Victory," suggests the depressing thought that when victory is won we may have lost much for which we now supposedly fight.

The Case For Arts

The bomb-shell which hit the campus yesterday with the news of Mr. Wright's speech bas had repercussions. Mr. Wright's assertion that "If the war continues long enough the privilege of higher education may be lost to many" (able bodied men) finds few dissenters. Certainly if tbe war continues long enough and becomes desperate enough, and if any acute crisis such as an invasion of Canada should take place, it would be justifiable even to close the universities until the danger was past. But to close any part of them at the present time or under the present condition would be unjustifiable.

Unless our government and our newspapers have misled us seriously, the situation in Canada cannot compare with that in Russia or in China, and in both these countries the universities are not only still functioning but are urged to do so by their governments, who foresee the future need of men trained in other arts besides those which make them good "technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industries."

The manpower shortage has become acute in Canada much faster than in either of the two great countries mentioned above, since our smaller population will not compare with their millions. And while we all admit tbat the shortage is acute and we all are more than willing to help relieve it, nothing can change the fact of the essential work which the universities are now doing and the contribution which they are making to the nation by graduating educated men and women.

Hitler Destroyed It

"Hitler's first action was to destroy in Germany any semblance of liberal education from the kindergarten up," stated Dr. Carleton Stanley, president of Dalhousie University, in a nation-wide radio talk a week ago. "Are we, in our war on Hitler, to fight his battle for him here in Canada? I lift up my voice against it, and ask that other voices more powerful than mine be lifted up against it."

While we certainly do not pretend to a voice more powerful than Dr. Stanley's, we repeat his words in complete agreement.

To dispense with the arts courses at the universities would be to abolish one of the principal foundation stones of democracy. Far be it for us to sneer at any of the non-arts courses, but at the present time they are not menaced. We have heard a great deal about the work of the universities to aid the war effort and most of the publicized contributions have been from the science faculties: the speeding up of the medcial and dental courses to provide the graduates necessary to the armed forces, the very valuable and hush-hush work which the laboratories are doing, and the important posts which university-trained men are holding efficiently.

The Foundation of Our Cause

So far there hase been almost no reference to the greatest, fundamental contribution of the universities: the instilling of the principles of democracy for which we fight. This is such an obvious thing that most people do not see it from having looked at it so long. Without the so-called liberal arts courses at our institutions of higher learning we would have no principles of freedom for the individual, free speech, and the right to think along independent lines, tolerance, and the right to work on new fields of research instead of having to prove a preconceived opinion as workers in the totalitarian states must do in order to bolster the position of the state even further.

While we do not try to deny that our universities have snoozed in a state of fat complacency at various times in the past, they have never stood entirely still. Their work has always gone forward, striving to reach the truth and to point the way to new improvments and to a better future for the human race. Some of their workers have even given their lives trying to reach new knowledge which would help their fellow beings.

The universities have given and are giving all their efforts to the cause for which we fight, and which we have seen enunciated so often that we easily forget where it came from and surmise that it was hatched from spontaneous public opinion.

The effects of curtailing the universities and of making them into instruments of a higher power can be seen in Germany: the erstwhile leader of thought now has to bow and obey before a dictator of thought. The result is not thought at all but mere parrot-talk, and the moral is so obvious that it would be an insult to our readers to point it again.

Basis of Our Morale

Morale is absolutely necessary to the successful prosecution of the war, as we have been told many times. Guns and supplies, while also of supreme importance, are not enough in themselves as we saw in the tragic lesson of France; they must have the spirit behind them, and blind faith in the rightness of our cause is not enough to make the proper spirit. We must have far-sighted thinking, a clear idea of the fundamental issues at stake and convictions backed by reasoning, to keep us going. The Nazis know this as was proved by their liquidation of the educated persons in the towns and cities of Holland, Norway, Czechoslovakia, France and others of the conquered countries, to nip the leaders of any possible revolt.

Far too few people realize the contribution of the universities to this branch of our war effort. It has been neglected too long in order to put the limelight on the more material contributions made by education in the fields of science and technical knowledge.

But if we do not realize the importance of the cultural and so-called superfluous arts courses of our universities, our enemies do. In our eagerness to scrap all but the essentials let us not forget this fact.

This morning we take great pleasure in presenting two short stories, contributed by a member of the staff . . . at least I think he is.

CATITOR.

I. The Cat and the Bag

Late last night the Champus Cat was seen slinking around the corner of the Observatory and across the campus carefully avoiding the islands of light around the lamp posts, The Varsity has been informed by a member of its staff. The reporter stumbled along in the darkness behind the elusive animal, his eyes glued to the white tip of the Cat's tail. Finally, while the Cat stopped to investigate an old gin bottle which had aroused his feline curiosity, the reported rushed up to him. However, finding the bottle emptly, the newshawk released the Cat and spoke quietly to him.

"Hey, Champus, you haven't turned in your column for two weeks and O'-

COMMENT IS QUITE UNNECESSARY HERE

Reprinted from the New York Times, Sunday, July 5:

New Haven, Conn., July 4—Warning that college students in the United States are continuing their education "on borrowed time" was given by Harvey H. Bundy of Boston, Special Assistant to the Secretary of War, at the annual Freshman Assembly at Yale University this morning.

Mr. Bundy told the 1,050 young men, representing the largest entering class in Yale's history, that their country only had lent them to the university in the belief that advanced education should go on for a limited number of men to provide leaders not only in the armed services but in war industry.

"No one knows when the necessities of war may change this decision," he said. "There is no committment that any man may complete his college education."

Mr. Bundy explained that many plans had been considered for the development of leaders for the armed forces. It was finally decided, he added, to make use of the colleges by allowing selected students to enlist in the reserve corps and to continue their education for the time being.

"It is only by fulfillment of certain conditions which have been stated by the Secretaries of War and the Navy," he said, "that the experiment of the loan of young men to the colleges will be justified through the later return of these men to the country, with interest in the form of increased capacity."

"If the loan of the colleges becomes a method by which men who ought to be in the thick of battle avoid the hazards of war; if the colleges retain any of the aspects of the country club which have been evident in the past; if the men who can afford to go to college are considered as a separate class exempted from fighting; the experiment will be a dismal failure and will not long continue.

"I think your country and college are entitled to believe that you realize that you are here rather than in the ranks in order that you may be better trained for your part in the war and that you who are living here on borrowed time are determined to repay the loan with interest compounded.

"You who are here on borrowed time must so live that you will surely be worthy to join your brothers in arms and your brothers in industry and do your part in fighting and winning the war."

Relative to the young men continuing their studies, Mr. Bundy said:

"Your decision to enroll here at this time may not have been easy to make. Your wishes may have been conflicting. You may have wanted an immediate part in this war. You may have wanted the admiring approval given to men in uniform by contemporaries and friends. You probably also have wanted to continue your education and to satisfy yourselves that your special abilities are to be used to the utmost. You have wanted to satisfy the wishes of your families which have perhaps been irreconciable with your own."

Finally, as to military service he added:

"I repeat that you have had a certain freedom of choice and you have now made your choice in starting your freshman year. Some of you will be in the enlisted reserves. Some of you will be preparing for other parts in the war work. You can look on occasion at the scoreboard of war without changing your plans every time the fortunes of war shift.

"You can and must keep your eye on the ball. Keeping your eye on the ball means doing your job here, moving towards your objective steadily, with the advice and assistance of the faculty, including those special advisers on war training who, I believe, here at Yale, see very clearly the ends which your government is trying to reach."

Miss Evelyn, who spends Thursdays in the canteen making sandwiches, said that British and Canadian boys have a slightly different attitude from that of the Americans in that they never take anything for granted but are always ready to do anything they can to help.

Mr. Price has also made a number of appearances on behalf of the blood donor campaign, and as Miss Evelyn revealed, has given his own blood six times.

Referring to his beard, Mr. Price said that as he had to wear one for his role he just decided to grow one. "The first time in my life I ever got really sore, though, was when some kids tried to pull it off one night," he remarked.

May Admit Aliens To University

"For these heinous remarks," Cohen said, "the authorities made charges against a union leader. Although the charges were subsequently withdrawn, a proviso was added to the Defense of Canada regulations in effect excluding any critical statement on government policy and conduct of the war.

"It is really in the interests of a wholehearted war effort that civil liberties be extended, particularly in trade unions and collective bargaining. We may forget the difficulties attendant upon the insecurity of depression years —women permaturely old, children warped, sometimes passing away—but the worker has not forgotten. It is the war which has brought security for the worker who finds his services in urgent demand. He is really pledged to bringing the war to an end—and rightly so—but it is the very thing which has brought him security. By giving assurance to the worker, frustration connected with the worker's isolation, may be avoided."

The internees, classed as friendly aliens, were sent to Canada from Britain after being interned in the early days of the war. They have been granted conditional freedom by internment authorities for the purpose of attending seats of learning.

Meds Cop Rugby Opener 6-5

First Round in Mulock Cup Race Won By Meds in Close Battle; All Scoring Chalked Up in Second Quarter

MacMILLAN MEDS MAINSTAY

Meds started the long fight for the Mulock Cup on the right foot by taking a very close game from Junior School at the Stadium yesterday afternoon.

While fans shivered in the stands the doctor-students eked out a 6-5 victory in a game which see-sawed from end to end of the field and back again.

The victors played a strong plunging game as contrasted with the passing and running of the young engineers. Beefy MacMillan, the mainstay of Meds' backfield, did some fancy kicking which held the mighty School passers from cluttering up the score sheet. All scoring was chalked up during the second quarter and only School's failure to convert Lawrence's touchdown prevented a tie. The passing team of Stricker to Lawrence provided the best part of the game's crowd appeal. The powerful plunging of Bill Arnup resulted in Meds' touch while Pete Turner converted to complete the scoring for the game.

FIRST QUARTER

MacMillan kicked off for Meds and School took possession of the ball on their own 35-yard line. An incompleted forward, a short plunge, a School offside and Meds took the ball on School's 30. Meds plunged for five yards. A short end run and another plunge finished Meds and the Docs kicked to School who settled on their own 45. After two end runs School kicked and Meds retrieved on their own 15. Meds fumbled and recovered but School blocked MacMillan's kick and took the ball on Meds' 10-yard line. School fumbled and Meds recovered to plunge for a total of ten yards. An end run, a plunge and Meds' kick to their own 40 ended the quarter.

SECOND QUARTER

A succession of forwards and end runs put School in position for their first score. A Meds offside gained School another five yards and another forward, Stricker to Lawrence, resulted in School's touch. Stricker failed in his attempt to convert. Meds kicked and School took the ball on their 20. A muffed School kick gave Meds possession on School's 10-yard line. Meds gained a first down with a plunge and an end run and Bill Arnup plunged over the School line to tie the score. Pete Turner converted. School kicked and Stafford ran the ball back to the Meds' 25-yard line. School intercepted a Meds lateral and after an incompleted forward and a plunge kicked to Meds who were promptly stopped at their own 5-yard line. Meds plunged and the half ended with Meds in possession on their own 15. Score: Meds—6, Junior School—5.

THIRD QUARTER

School kicked and Meds ran the ball back to centre. Two plunges took the ball to School's 50 where MacMillan kicked. School took the ball on their own 10. School plunged and an end run by Stricker brought the ball out to the 15. Meds recieved the kick and took first down on School's 35. Meds plunged and then failed to complete a forward. The kick landed behind School's line but Stricker ran it out to the one-yard line. Lawrence plunged to a first down. Meds were offside on the next play and School took first down on their 20. Stricker caught a beautiful lateral with one hand and took the ball to the 30. School lunged and Meds were offside which put the ball in Schools' possession on their own 40.

FOURTH QUARTER

School plunged to their 50 where they fumbled. Meds recovered and plunged back to School's 50. Meds kicked and Stricker was tackled on School's 20. Stricker kicked the ball out to the Meds 50. Meds with a forward and a plunge took the ball to School's 45. MacMillan kicked the ball out at the School 15. School fumbled and Meds took the ball on the 35. Meds plunged and School intercepted a forward on their 5. Two forwards took the ball to School's 25. Two incompleted forwards followed and a beautiful end run, Stricker to Verne Booth, placed the ball on the centre line as the final whistle blew.

Final Score: Meds—6, Junior School—5.

Speaking Of Sport

THE OPENING BREAKS

'Twas as weird an encounter as one would want to see yesterday up stadium way. Yeah verily, the battle between Herb Stricker and Beefy McMillan, with innumerable fumble intermissions, proceeded merrily along in the increasing cold and darkness. And indeed will be continued at a not-too-future date. For nothing really was decided yesterday—only the fact that Senior Meds are a stronger crew than at first realized. But the Schoolmen didn't lose the game—in fact they appeared to have the better of the play in the last half at least. As is generally the way at the season's start, the well-known "breaks" gave the doctors the nod. We are not begrudging the Meds' win—nor are we saying that the Blue and Gold should have won—we are merely maintaining that it was a toss up from start to finish—and we also maintain that the whole fit division will be a toss up—with four quite evenly matched teams in there with blood in their eyes:

MATCHED STARS

The duel personalities, as anotated above, were the highlights of the game. Herb Stricker was the School offense on all fronts—on land, and in the air — whoot, WHOOT, WHOOT. He passed to Lawrence for more first downs than you could shake a yardstick at. And some of his runbacks were a treat to watch—from the sidelines. But this one-man effort did not overshadow the display put on by perennial mainstay—Beefy MacMillan. This little number in Red and Black with the white skull on his shirt front besides his usual stonewall performance on the defensive gained many yards besides putting his newly highly educated toe to great advantage. But all these performances were marred by a surfeit of misplays, miscues and plain every-day fumbles. After awhile you could almost hear someone say before each play: "Pass the biscuit, Pappy, it's my turn to fumble." The scores that were, only were accomplished by miscue leadups which shows one how close the two teams are. Later, when the ball handling becomes more sure the potentially great football will come to the top, unmarred by loose balls, and we shall see as hot a football league as any that have ploughed the swards of this campus.

ON FURTHER MENTION

We would like to draw notice to the authorities—whoever they may be in this case—of the large numbers of students that came down from the stands and lined the side-lines—acting as a danger to themselves and players as well as obstructing many more spectators' view of the game. . . . PLEASE, gentlemen, some of those seats ARE comfortable.

"Well," groaned the Cat, "my home life has been all upset lately. Mrs. Cat and I are both nearly crazy with worry. You see, my eldest son, Requies, was exploring a strange kitchen the other day and swallowed a tea bag. The veterinary has been at the house ever since."

"What's there to worry about?" asked the scribe.

"You don't understand. It's something new in the annals of Medicine and reporting. The doctor is trying to figure out a way to let the bag out of the Cat."

And the Cat wandered away into the darkness near Convocation Hall.

II. The Freshman and the T.T.C.

Homer Feeslip was just a poor Artsman. His one ambition in life was to pot the black-ball in the side pocket once, just once, without scratching. But one day something happened that exceeded his wildest dreams. He was awarded a prize by the T.T.C. for an essay on Traffic Control. Originally written as a Champus Cat, and refused by the Catitor, the essay was submitted to the T.T.C. contest in a fit of fury and desperation. The Commission adopted his ideas, and as a prize, they offered him a free trip, anywhere he wished to.

But all the places he had ever dreamed of visiting were now war-bound. He could not see Naples and die. He could not arise and go now, and go to Innisfree. He could not go down to Kew in lilac-time in lilac-time in lalic-time, it isn't far from London. So he despaired of ever being able to take advantage of his prize.

Then, one night as he sat in his favorite refreshment parlor looking at the co-eds, he overhead two engineers at the next table discussing a mysterious place they called "Infinity" where all sorts of wonderful things happened. Homer hardly hesitated. He rushed home, packed his bag, and boarded a T.T.C. car bound for infinity.

In less than a week he was back in pool-room, shooting the black and retrieving the white from the side-pocket. When friends asked him about his trip, he replied: "Oh, it was nice enough there, but all I ever saw was a lot of parallel lines rushing up to each other and saying "Hello, A—B," 'Hello, C—D' . . . and you know how monotonous that sort of thing can get."

Scoreless Tie In Soccer Game

Trinity held a surging Emmanuel soccer squad to a scoreless tie in the opening game of the Arts' Faculty Cup series yesterday on the back campus.

Led by centre Morwood and sparked by playmaker Singh, the Theologians had the better of the play for most of the game and it was only some rather poor season-start shooting by Emmanuel, and clever blocking by Bell-Irving and Edmunds that kept the Red and Black from the defeat column. Toward the final whistle the play evened up a little but the Artsmen couldn't collect the pill from a couple of goal-mouth scrambles to put it past Gillespie.

Emmanuel: MacCrea, MacLeod, Morwood, Cresswell, MacKenzie, Morgan, Singh, Waugh, Gibson, Cumming, Gillespie, Henderson, Daynard.

Trinity: Earl, Stinson, Cartwright, Wood, MacMullen, Rowe, Clarkson, Corbett, P. Bell-Irving, Edmunds, R. Bell-Irving, Young, Kirkwood.

Referee—Russel Self.

Senior Track Meet To be Held Tomorrow

Track fans are looking forward to what is expected tomorrow to be the best intramural meet in years. Hec Phillips, pleased beyond words with the results of last week's novice meet, refused to speculate as to who will win the various events on the program, but he was heard to mutter as he strolled away, "It's about time that some of those interfaculty records were wiped off the books."

Team managers are warned that this senior meet differs from the novice in that all entries must be in the athletic office by 5:00 tonight. No post entries will be accepted. And also don't forget those eligibility lists.

The distance events according to Hec are really going to be close. Voted most likely to be close at the tape were Bill Fielding and Bod Delaney of Meds and Gord Lorimer, John Feldhans, Doug Herron, Harry Hall and Frank Fordyce of School. Cam Burgess, second year student from Trinity who copped the individual title at the novice meet will likely take the hurdles again and possibly the 100 yard sprint. The sprint events however will have a large entry from the senior students and Cam will probably have plenty of opposition from such parties as Jimmy Bitove of U.C. and Verne Boothe of S.P.S. The discus event seems pretty well settled in the person of Pete Onasick who last year heaved it 121 feet 6¼ inches. McDonald, another Skool man would be a good bet in the 440.

For further details visit Varsity Stadium about 1:30 Wednesday afternoon.

New Regulations Passed At Intramural Meeting

At the regular Intramural meeting at Hart House last night, Mr. MacCutcheon announced that the saturation point had been reached in the number of interfaculty volleyball teams. Rejecting the proposal to limit the number of entries to the same as last year, it was agreed to admit teams on a strict total registration basis. If for example S.P.S. were allowed 10 teams and Trinity three, if School found she only needed eight teams, the other two could be divided at the Committee discretion among the other faculties. If School with its huge freshman year should overtax the facilities is baseball and basketball, it agreed that the same provisions would have to be made to include those sports.

The question of suspending the T. A. Reed Trophy for the duration due to the unsettled student situation was unanimously defeated. A review of the problems to be considered included, Artsmen going West, sixth year Medicine graduating at Christmas, and third, fourth and fifth year Meds writing exams then, and senior Artsmen being called to Brockville. S.P.S. is relatively unaffected by these circumstances and in additon have a record freshman enrollment. It was felt, however, by the Committee, that it would be impossible to adjust the scoring system for the Reed trophy to meet every situation that might arise. Mr. MacCutcheon expressed the general opinion when he said that this must be "a year of give and take." With the accelerated physical training requirements, interfaculty interest must be kept up.

An application for a second soccer team from S.P.S. was accepted. S.P.S. II will play in group II.

Meds announced the entry of a lacrosse team at the same time as Wycliffe admitted their entry was doubtful.

The method of bonusing the Arts colleges in the Reed race has been postponed until the next meeting when a plan will be submitted for approval of Mr. MacCutcheon and Miss Boyd.

Those present included Warren Stevens, Mr. MacCutcheon, Don Clee (chairman—Dents,) Bill Waugh (Vic), Fred Swanson (S.P.S.), Watson (O. C.P.), Rawlinson (Trinity), Natoli (St. Mike's) and Tom Burnett (Wycliffe).

University Is Nerve-Centre Of Military Activities

Over 3,000 Service Men Trained At University

By Doc Savage

Though during the last war the University's main contribution to the training of men in the active services was to supply them with barracks to live in and grounds to drill on, there are no less than five different types of specialized technical training for members and future members of the services now being given.

In 1917 the Royal Flying Corps set up a training centre for the dominion with Toronto as its centre. They took over a great portion of the buildings, including the then incompleted Hart House, parts of U.C., Burwash, and Wycliffe. The air force housing problem became so acute in 1918 that tents were erected on the campus.

Here at the university the airmen received preliminary training, and members of the Applied Science staff aided in this until a large body of instructors was brought to Canada from overseas.

Also in Hart House, was the Divisional School of Musketry, with its orderly room in what is now the athletic office.

That was all of the training done on campus, though there were great strides made in the field of physiotherapy and in the fields of research by the psychology department and the then new Connaught laboratories.

This time, however, with the highly specialized type of warfare that is now being waged, the picture has changed. The facilities, laboratories and staff of the university are being utilized for five different types of technical training and have to date trained well over 3,000 men.

There is the Radio Technical Course being handled by the department of physics. In two years time it has trained approximately 2,000 air force members to do radio locator work.

The Department of Physics has also trained about 300 naval ratings and officers for work of a nature which cannot be disclosed.

Meteorologists are being trained by the Dominion Department of Transport in the basement of the Economies Building. Around 150 have completed the course.

The Department of University Extension has been conducting pre-enlistment R.C.A.F. classes for the past two years. These classes are held three nights a week and enable men with only two years of high school edueation to qualify for training as air crews. To date 573 have completed.

The newest of these technieal training courses is the Number One Canadian Army Corps that has just been started in the Physics Department. The 120 members will receive special training in math and physics to prepare them for special work in the army.

Maths. And Physics Course Finds Favour With Army

By Bette Mondo

The group of 160 army youths enlisted in the one-year Mathematics and Physics course offered jointly by the University of Toronto and the Department of National Defence is the most enthusiastic bunch this campus has seen in many a day. Whether this enthusiasm will be lasting is yet to be decided, for the lads only started studying on Monday and are still a little hazy on the serious end of things. But ask them about the food, about the city, about anything but their course and there is a deluge of replies.

The boys are from the ages of 17 to 19. They have taken up residence in Burwash and, one might add, they have taken over Burwash.

Ken Graves, 18, of Islington, Ont., when questioned about the course said, "We have the best food and the best beds in the army."

He hastened to add that he feared such excellent treatment would give the majority of the boys a false impression of the real army. Ken was in the army six months before beginning the Maths and Physics course.

Leslie Warder, 19, a lively lad from Calgary, Alta., popped up with "We think it's going to be a really good course," while E. Belliveau, 16, Yarmouth, N.S., and incidentally, the youngest boy enrolled, moaned, "I can't find any women"; then he grinned, "say, maybe you'd like to insert my phone number."

At this point, another youth started complaining about the social situation oo. "Yes," he said, "the only friendly women around here are the C.W.A.C.S."

All were agreed concerning the food issue. John Mathers, 19, from B.C., summed it up by saying, "We really have great food around here—much better than any of us expected. In fact, it's so good that the Major even eats with us."

All the provinces are represented. The boys' relations with one another are fully expressed by one khaki-clad youth who said, "We're the nicest bunch of fellows we know." And this attitude is characteristic of the spirit of the boys.

The course is based upon work in the first year Mathematies and Physies in the Faculty of Arts, combined with the first year Engineering Physies course in the Faculty of Applied Science and Enginering. The University of Toronto will give due credit towards a degree to those wishing to complete a course at the University at a later date.

Many Branches Of Forces Represented On Campus

By George Elliott

Not all the uniforms on campus are worn by its students. Besides the members of the two battalions of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps and its Air Force Wing, the Canadian Red Cross Corps and the student-members of the Royal Canadian Medical and Dental Corps, there are a number of groups of men and women on active service who are making use of the facilities of the University for their education in essential trades and techniques.

Two Royal Canadian Air Force Squadrons have taken over the U.C. Men's Residence on Devonshire Place: here, they learn the theory and intricacies of radio-location.

Old Trinity House, whose halls once rang with the shouts of student residents, is now Trinity Barracks and rings to the commands of Canadian Women's Army Corps sergeants. Every week-night at 10:30 at the corner of Harbord and St. George there is the scene of a made scramble as the women privates rush into barracks just beating the sound of the curfew bell.

The Men's Residence of Victoria College, Burwash Hall, has been partially conscripted for war service. The residence houses some Airmen as well as members of the Canadian Army who are studying Engineering, Mathematies and Physies under the guidance of Professor E. F. Burton. The military part of their training is the same as though they were in barracks. The men of the Number One Canadian Army Course receive Army pay, drill and discipline.

There is a scientific war being carried on against the Axis on every university campus in North America and Toronto is no exception. Due to the nature of the research and investigation carried on, no facts will be released until after the war.

W. J. Dunlop, Director of the Department of University Extension, believes that still more residences and buildings will be taken over for the armed forces.

Auxiliary Services for the Armed Forces are also represented in the University. Under Mr. Dunlop, correspondence courses for degrees in Arts are being sent to about 200 men on active service in Canada and overseas. There are about 20 Canadian war prisoners who are taking a correspondence course. This and other courses of lower academic standing are being conducted under the auspices of Canadian Legion War Services.

G. G. Coulton Receives Queen's Degree

Kingston, Oct. 16—(CUP)—Dr. G. G. Coulton, F.B.A., Litt.D., Professor of Medieval History at University of Toronto, received the honorary degree of LL.D. at the Fall Convoeation of Queen's University here today.

Dr. Coulton attended St. Catherines College, Cambridge, and later Heidelberg University, Germany. As a teacher, he held the position of Assistant Master at Sherborne, Sedbergh, and Dulwich Schools. He was Birbeck Lecturer in Ecclesiastical History at Trinity College, Cambridge, and in 1930-33, Lord's Lecturer in English History at Oxford. In 1931, he was also Rhind Lecturer at Edinburgh.

In 1940, Dr. Coulton accepted the temporary appointment of Professor of Medieval History at the University of Toronto.

The Most Reverend Jean-Marie Rodrigue Villeneuve, Cardinal, Archbishop of Quebec, was also the recipient of the honorary degree of LL.D. at the Convoeation on Friday.

Cardinal Villeneuve has been prominent in educational and religious circles in Canada since 1907. From 1907 to 1913 he was Professor of Philosophy in the University of Ottawa, and from 1913 to 1920 he was Professor of Theology. He has received numerous degrees including that of M.D. from McGill and Varsity.

EXPANSION OF WAR COURSES CONSIDERED DANGEROUS

psychology, history, and other 'cultural' courses, to fill vaeancies in government offices and bureaux.

Facilities Inadequate

Dr. Ryerson pointed out that since the last war the Faculty of Medicine has been striving to restrict rather than increase the number of students enrolled in the interests of efficient training. He declared the facilities in laboratory classes are actually smaller than the enrollment in the present first year and the efficient teaching of certain subjects, while it remains possible, is extremely difficult.

"A large number of students in the clinical years makes it necessary to maintain a large clinical teaching staff," Dr. Ryerson said, "and in view of the fact that many teachers have left the University for the armed forces it has been necessary to make many temporary appointments, and while there have been sufficient clinical teachers available, it has proved difficult to obtain a quota of instructors for some laboratory courses."

Dr. Ryerson recalled that in the years following the last war, the Medical Faculty accepted very large classes and said he believed that members of those classes did not receive the thorough training required and have felt the lack in their practice ever after.

If it were to become necessary to increase the number of graduates each year, new facilities will have to be found, as present laboratory equipment is being used to the utmost now, Dr. Ryerson said.

Unfair to Public

"In dentistry perhaps even more than in medicine the student must get a very thorough training at university before he goes into practice immediately after graduation," said Dr. Cowling. ....

He pointed out the unfairness to the public as well as to the student of graduating men without adequate experience and said the amount of clinical material available is insufficient to deal with large classes.

In the last war larger classes were taken, Dr. Cowling said, but the faculty was never satisfied with these men, and furthermore there was no difficulty in getting suplpies at that time.

AN OPEN LETTER to the Exchange Editor:

Dear Sir:

Whyncha get together with yaself, huh? First you keep after me to write Hithers, then you spurn me—and me with all these Harvest Items. I'm hurt, that's what I am. But those asterisks below here sure make me homesick.

PROBABLY SOME OF YOU still remember that the harvesters left about 10 days ago. The coaches in which they travelled, just in case you have forgotten, are ealled Colonist Cars . . . and they really do look as if they have been in use since first colonists went out West.

ONE OF THE QUEEN'S HARVESTERS buttonholed this weary frame and on learning that we were a reporter, said: "Tell 'em that Commerce '43 is going out west for one reason only—we don't eare about the Harvest—we're just going 'cause we want to write our theses on wheat.

* * *

ANOTHER OF THE QUEENSMEN was carried away by the osculatory spirit of the farewells displayed by many present. He seanned the platform with an appraising glance, and then approached a vision in saddle shoes. "Come on," he said, "ya gotta kiss us all goodbye!" "Oh, I can't," she answered—I'm married." "Don't give me that old line—either show me your ring or come and kiss us all goobye. . ." Whereupon she ealmly removed a lilly-white left hand from her pocket, and, much to his disgust, showed him.

Okay, lady, but ya don't have to be nasty about it.

THAT SAME EVENING a pal of ours was leaving to join the United States Army. Being a Varsity alumnus, he displayed great interest in the University's emigrant sons. An overly zealous young reporter approached him. "Are you going harvesteing?" he inquired. "Yeah," came the answer, "I'm going to harvest some Japs."

Mow down a bunch for me too, pal.

4 ARTS HEADS UNANIMOUS IN OPPOSITION TO PLAN

lege, commenting on the fact that Mr. Wright has for many years been general secretary of the Engineering Institute of Canada, said: "He seems to be suffering from the belief that only engineers are wanted in this war.

Two Types of Learning

"A little knowledge of edueation will let him see there are two main types of learning: the type that enables a man to deal with things, and the type that enables a man to deal with persons.

"The first kind is the one Mr. Wright regards as very important. He wants courses directly useful to the war effort, technieal and scientific courses, to be offered. But it is the training a man gets in Arts, that enables him to deal with people that qualifies him for a position as an officer.

"The first duty of an officer is to be responsible for his men. But many of the men who have been trained to deal with things are showing themselves unable to deal with persons."

Dr. Brown said more than 500 graduates and former students of Victoria College are now in the armed services. A large proportion of these are holding commissions.

"These men have gone into the army not as immature boys but as capable young men able to carry responsibility, and in this respect Victoria is not an exception among the Arts colleges. It would be a tragedy if scientifically trained men thought they could run the army. The task of commanding men is different from that of running machines."

Says Wider View Needed

Rev. F. H. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College, said, "The only need Mr. Wright seems to recognize is the need to fill the armed forces and the war industries with technieal personnel. This need, of course, is very great but the matter should be looked upon from a wider point of view."

Dr. Cosgrave also pointed out that some of the best officers in the armed forces come from the Faculty of Arts. More than 500 recent graduates and undergraduates of Trinity College are now in the armed forces and a large number of these are officers.

Dr. Cosgrave said the Arts student today is doing all that is asked of him by the government in so far as war needs are concerned. "If a different state of things is desired a more definite lead must be given by the government. There is no doubt the universities will respond to any eall the government may make on them."

Blow to War Needs

Rev. T. P. McLaughlin, C.S.B., Superior of St. Michael's College, held that any plan such as that outlined by Mr. Wright would constitute a real blow to the country's war needs.

"The country needs four things for the successful prosecution of the war: educated men, trained leaders, technically trained men, and physieally-fit men. The universities have been supplying the edueated men, trained leaders and technical training.

"There are some people who insist on having every physieally-fit man, thus sacrificing the first three needs. There are those who will insist on having technieally trained men and also every physieally-fit man, excluding the other two needs."

Father McLaughlin considers it a very short view to exclude the need for educated men and trained leaders. Persons taking this view are not looking to the future or to post-war reconstruction for which these two groups are essential.

Four Harvesters Reported Ill, Injured Near Saskatoon; Help Shortage Still Acute

Stulberg of Toronto Suffers Pneumonia Attack; Two Laval Men Injured, McGill Man Has Bad Cold

ELLIS BLAMES EAST

By Frank Rasky
Varsity Staff Writer

Saskatoon, Oct. 20—(CUP)—At least three student-laborers in this area have suffered serious illness or injury since joining in emergency harvest operations.

Gordon Stulberg, University of Toronto law student, suffered an attack of double bronchial pneumonia two days after his arrival in the farm of John Zeigler at Hanley, 40 miles south of here.

Removed to Saskatoon by Dr. J. J. Finn, a local physician, he spent six days in St. Paul Hospital before medical authorities released him. He will return to Toronto shortly.

W. S. Ellis, local representative of the Saskatchewan Harvest Labour Committee, told this reporter that two Laval students had suffered injury in farm operations. One had lost a finger in harvesting machinery; the other suffered a dislocated shoulder.

"All the mixup here and in Regina can be blamed on authorities in the east who believe farmers can use and pay inexperienced help from colleges and high schools as they might experienced farm laborers," Mr. Ellis said.

McGill Man in Hospital

Saskatoon, Oct. 17 — (CUP) — Jack Thorburn of McGill who came west with the other student harvesters is in the Grey Nun's Hospital recovering from a bad cold.

His cold was complicated by dust he breathed while pitching oat sheaves on a farm in the Craven district.

Students in Greater Demand as Saskatchewan U. Resumes Classes; Choose New Employer If Unsatisfied

WEST IS MELTING POT

By Vernon Lang
Varsity Staff Writer

Saskatoon, Oct. 18— (CUP) — The labour situation here is such that students who happen to get a raw deal at one farm have only to move on to the neighbouring place where they will be taken on as experienced help; for it is so late in the season that the prairie farmer has got to get his crop in now or not at all.

The shortage of help has been made all the more acute by the return of the whole of the University of Saskatchewan to classes at the beginning of this week. The Saskatchewan Harvest Bureau is busy shipping out any stray students who may have left their original jobs and returned to Saskatoon; for there is still plenty of work to be done.

This expedition has become very much of a melting pot for young Canadians. On the trip out, two days and three nights of it, both French and English-speaking students from all over the east could get together to talk and sing; and then again, now that they have reached their common destination, they have all been scattered over hundreds of miles of Prairie, in small groups or alone to make contacts with farmers who are desperate enough for help but who would much rather have tough, experienced pitchforkers than willing but inexperienced and softened students.

The eastern students who have come out west to harvest are rapidly discovering that when you work on a farm you don't do anything else but enough eating and sleeping to make that work possible.

All their plans about cavorting around with farmers' daughters of evenings after work are proving rather pointless (at least for the first week or two), for you work from before dawn until after dark at night, and under such circumstances sleep and plenty of it becomes a prime necessity of life.

But to make up for all this we have opportunities which we have never had before: we see every day the endless expanse of open land, and over it we see sunrise, sunset and nothern lights, their glory unobstructed by anything made by man or nature.

And we easterners are learning something out here: we are seeing at first hand the inner workings of what has been the pivotal industry of Canada's economic system, and also at times Canada's chief economic headache.

Medical School to Open Month Later Next Year

The academic session for all years in the Faculty of Medicine next year will not open until Sept. 27, it was decided at a recent meeting of the University Senate. This extends the vacation period between first and second years to approximately four months, allowing time out for military training camp.

The decision, which was released through the medical office yesterday morning, is designed to help students earn their tuition fee during the summer months. Opening date this year was Aug. 24.

Reasons offered by the medical office for this new order is that the present session, for all save first year students, will not close until late in July.

Rev. Nash Plans Series On University Christian

Rev. Arnold Nash, Chaplain to the Students' Christian Movement, will give a series of four sermons on "The Position of the Christian, Whether Student or Professor, in a Modern Liberal-Democractic University" in Hart House beginning Sunday, Oct. 25 at 7:30 p.m. and continuing through Nov. 8, 22 and Dec. 6.

Professor Cosgrave of Trinity College will conduct the first meeting, to be followed by Dr. Davidson of Emmanuel at the second meeting, Dr. Taylor of University College at the third and Dr. Armitage of Victoria College at the fourth.

Two lessons will be read at each meeting by a man and a woman student of the University.

These meetings are open to all students, members of the staff and their friends.

In his first sermon, Mr. Nash will set forth the conditions leading up to the present defects in our modern Liberal-Democratic Universities and in following meetings will explain what is to be done in order to form a new concept of University which will fit in with the changing times.

Victory Loan Campaign Committee Present War Film In Hart House

Scenes from the Czecho-Slovakian town of Lidice will be screened in Hart House this afternoon for students and staff as part of the University Victory Loan Campaign.

Lidice, a rural Czecho-Slovakian village, was methodically destroyed as an act of reprisal by the Nazis. The film depicts life in the town before the war as well as destruction wrought by the Nazis. The film is sponsored by the Victory Loan Committee and a representative will give a brief address after the showing.

Mr. C. E. Higginbottom, University bursar and agent for the War Loan on this campus, said yesterday that early returns were most encouraging as to the future success of the drive in the university.

"We are particularly anxious that as many of the staff and students as possible will attend this meeting to make our publicity campaign a success," he stated.

First showing of the film will be at 3:00 p.m. for students and employees of Hart House. At 4:00 p.m. the film will be shown to the teaching and administrative staffs and at 4:30 to the tradesmen and members of the superintendent's staff.

McMaster Men Visit Borden; No Similar Action at Varsity

Hamilton, Oct. 20—(CUP)—Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers of the McMaster University Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, visited Camp Borden for instructional purposes last week-end.

The detachment of university men witnessed demonstration and training in the use of weapons and vehicles. The group was billeted in one of the advanced training centres.

Varsity Busy Training

Officials of the C.O.T.C. stated last night that they were not considering at the present any plans of week-end training at Camp Borden for officers and N.C.O.'s as did the McMaster University Contingent.

"We are much too busy with the training programme to consider things like that now," an official said.

Officers and N.C.O.'s of McMaster were in Camp Borden from Oct. 16 to 18, for instructional purposes.

Will Tag For I.S.S. At All-Varsity Dance

Funds for International Student Service will be raised at the All-University Fall Dance in Hart House Friday evening when girls from all faculties and colleges sell tags to the dancers, Stu Robinson, IV Meds, member of the local I.S.S. executive, said yesterday.

The tags will be useful as well as charitable, Robinson said. Each will have names of the bands playing at the Dance and rooms in which they will be performing. Sold to each couple, they will serve as a directory of the varied terpsichorean activities in session.

"The tags will be sold by glamour-girls—all glamour-girls," said Robinson. "They will be on sale at the door and upstairs."

International Student Day To Commemorate Prague Planned By I.S.A. Leaders

Washington Permanent Committee Requests Students of All Countries to Observe Anniversary

CO-OPERATION URGEO

Plans for a Student Day in commemoration of Czech student-martyrs who were slaughtered by Nazis at the University of Prague in 1939, to be held on this campus Nov. 17, are now being made, Gordon Bell, IV Meds, speaker of the Canadian delegation to the International Student Assembly, said last night.

"The permanent committee of the I.S.A. in Washington has requested students of all countries to observe an International Student Day on the anniversary of the execution of several hundred students at the University of Prague in November, 1939," Bell said.

"In accordance with this request the members of the Canadian delegation to the Assembly ask for the co-operation of student executives in forming a committee to arrange for this occasion. The observance of this day is an event in which all executives and societies should participate.

"The group of delegates from Toronto to the Assembly does not fully represent this University. Therefore each executive is urged to choose representatives from their faculties to be present at the organization meeting, Sunday, Oct. 25 at 3 p.m. Place of the meeting will be announced later.

"It is hoped that these representatives are not already overburdened with executive work. Anyone keen to help in this project should volunteer through his executive. Members of the present delegation will contact student presidents before Saturday noon.

"At this meeting all arrangements for the observance of this day will be worked out so as not to conflict with curricular activities.

"It is hoped that this truly representative committee will continue to function as a Permanent Committee of the I.S.A. for this University. As such, its duties would include not only the inauguration on this campus of other projects being undertaken by the I.S.A., but also the initiative in bringing the decisions of this Assembly to the attention of students throughout Canada."

VISITORS' DAY

Members of Hart House are informed that this Sunday, Oct. 25, is Visitors' Day when they may introduce guests, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Members will be asked to show their membership cards at the door.

Many Apply For Air Corps

Approximately 275 male students have applied to join the University Air Training Corps, this year being offered as an alternative for compulsory training in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps.

Squadron Leader H. C. Spence, No. 1 Training Command, told applicants that this course would result in a reduction of time spent at a Royal Canadian Air Force Manning Depot and Initial Training School after graduation.

Men enrolled in this course will be divided into two groups, those who trained last year under the University Air Training Plan, and those who have had no previous training in this field.

A recruiting unit has been set up in Hart House where the men are also given medical examinations to determine whether they are in sufficiently good physical condition to be accepted by the R.C.A.F.

F. L. Hutchison, assistant director of the Connaught Laboratories, is expected to head the U.A.T.C. as he headed the Air Training Plan last year. In the last war Mr. Hutchison served with the Canadian Expeditionary Force and subsequently in the Navy and the Fleet Air Arm. He became a member of the R.S.A.F. when it was formed in 1918.

P.O. H. C. Hallett, permanent adjutant of the U. of T. squadron, said some confusion has arisen over the question of eligibility for the corps.

"As the latest orders stand," he explained, "no medical or dental students may be admitted, nor can any S.P.S. men, other than 3rd and 4th year civil engineering or engineering physics students who have taken the aero option, or 1st and 2nd year civil engineering physics students who agree to go on active service at least by the end of their second year."

P.O. Hallett said training in the U.A.T.C. will entail between 110 and 125 hours work during the school term, plus two weeks during the summer at an R.S.A.F. flying station. Corps training will be conducted during the same hours as that of the C.O.T.C.

Regulation air force uniforms will be issued to members when organization has been completed, and distinguishing badges will be worn on the sleeve.

Washington Students Help Harvest Apples

Seattle, Wash.—One thousand University of Washington students, both men and women, entrained to nearby Wenatchee and Yakima last week-end to help harvest the state apple crop.

Leaving the campus Thursday afternoon, the students picked apples for four days and returned at midnight Monday.

Student pickers were required to pay their own train fare, at a reduced rate, but the university looked after arrangements for room and board.

The Martyrs Of Prague

A committee is being formed on this campus to make arrangements for the observance, Nov. 17, of an International Student Day, in commemoration of the hundreds of students of the University of Prague who fell victim to Nazi brutality in the early months of this war.

We commend the step highly. We of the University must never lose track of the fact that the goose-stepping legions of Der Feuhrer have been ordered into more than one scat of higher education in Europe with orders to pillage and destroy. The brains of the Hitlerite war-machine consider—and with good cause—that universities, and the freedom of thought for which they stand, are implacable enemies of Fascism. All the free universities of the world are hated by the Hun; many have felt his hate; and those of us who have been fortunate enough to escape the fate of Prague up to now should never forget the men and women who were tortured to death in November, 1939. They were our brothers-in-arms in the intellectual battle for freedom; we must honour the fallen.

And the Student Day will serve another purpose than that of commemoration of the fallen; it will serve as a bond of unity among the university men and women who carry on the fight for free thought in a world which might one day become the plaything of a brutish horde of vandals. It will be a source of strength to us in Canada to know that we are marching forward besides students in Great Britain, the United States, Russia—in the greatest clash of ideologies the world has yet seen, we are not alone.

Quebec Is Still In Canada

French-Canadians have been accused frequently in the Ontario press of maintaining an attitude of stolid non-acquiesence when asked to co-operate with Canadians from other parts of the Dominion. We have even seen them compared in action to the Gandhi-inspired "passive resistance" bloc in India.

And it is true that men and women of Quebec have not distinguished themselves as a group in the present war through any sweeping spirit of co-operation. But their attitude is not one of pure negation. That they do not see eye-to-eye with brother-Canadians on more than one issue is partly the fault of their environment, partly the fault of ineffective propaganda which has apparently failed to swing them solidly into line with the rest of the nation.

But the French-Canadian is not a mere obstructionist. When a appeal to him is based upon grounds which he understands fully and appreciates properly, he moves into action with a celerity and enthusiasm which sometimes overshadows his English compatriots.

A recent case in point is the response to the Labour Department appeal for emergency student-harbesters which was made at Laval University.

In a front-page story in the most recent issue of Le Carabin, official student organ of that University, it is pointed out that when 200 Laval students left for the wheat-fields of Saskatchewan, three Faculties—those of Law, Commerce and Social Sciences—closed their doors because no students were left to attend classes. Le Carabin gives as its belief that Laval is the first University in Canada where such closing of whole faculties was necessary. To our knowledge this belief is correct, except in the case of the University of Saskatchewan.

Where Beats the Heart of Canada

The story, signed by Pierre-Paul Turgeon, continues (the translation is amateur, but reasonably accurate):

"Certainly it is always the duty of French-Canadians to safeguard Canadian unity. Two hundred Quebec students are not deterred in the least by the rather uninviting conditions of a long trip of more than 2,000 miles to a district in which their language, their culture and their past are unknown. It is still their country althought the fact has often been contested.

"Our gallant soldiers overseas may well rejoice to know that their country is not completely exhausted and to learn that the young men who remain behind are practising sound patriotism in carefully helping to conserve their immense land which stretches from ocean to ocean.

"No, French-Canadians will never accept conscription for overseas military duty, because they do not need compulsion when their country requires their services. They love Canada too well; too much of the blood and sweat of their forefathers has fertilized this soil for them to abandon it.

"We assume that if the circumstances were reversed, English-Canadians would not hesitate for a moment to rebuild national balance and unity by devoting themselves to the fine old province of Quebec, where beats the heart of all Canada."

Just as Patriotic

Here, then, we find a manifestation of the French-Canadian's desire to serve his country. The Quebec ideal of service differs sharply from that of other provinces; but this exposition of it by a University student writing from the heart of Old Canada demonstrates that it is no less patriotic.

And if the government were to embark upon a campaign of effectively publicizing the need for overseas conscription, even in the hinterlands of the French-Canadian stronghold, instead of sidestepping the issue at every turn and accepting the flat refusal of French Canada to consider the advisability of such a scheme, perhaps as much opposition would not be met in Quebec when the government finally chooses to act upon a policy which its semi-official utterances indicate is growing more and more necessary. Because the enlightened French-Canadian has shown himself willing to co-operate in a national scheme when the advisability of it is brought home to him.

ART & MUSIC Drama

Not On Lease-Lend

Olga Koldakova

Olga Koldakova is "The Russian Nightingale." Russia is Canada's ally. What can we say?

Miss Koldakova once upon a time was gifted with a promising voice; she is still very young. One would expect her to be an accomplished singer. The actuality, however, was very flat. She has been taught to produce her voice in a way which would destroy the output of the most ideal vocal cords, and the result is a combination of the nasal and metallic, disquieting in the extreme.

Every now and then, especially in the soft passages in her medium register came forth as delightful tone. She quickly reverted every time to what she had been taught, and managed to destroy the effect she had produced.

As far as program choice is concerned, it cannot be justified. There was not one selection of real depth and most of it belonged to the shallowest of shoal water. And when Miss Koldakova sang the music of her choice, she did it in a way to destroy any illusion of interpretation which she might have been able to get across. She postured, grimanced, rolled her eyes until the whites showed—leaving her auditors more amused than moved by everything she did.

Perhaps Russian technique is completely different from ours; perhaps Miss Koldakova simply is unaware of the artistic conventions on this side of the world. Let her take stock of them, for her own sake, before her next recital.

The flute obligato (well-played) in The Gipsy and the Bird was as sentimental as are the worst of the most popular radio concert music.

Redeeming an otherwise dead program, Leo Barkin's accompaniments were, as usual, perfect. He conforms to what my a priori concept of music is.

Even for those who have done hard labour before, 12 to 14 hours in the fields plus time to look after your horses is plenty of work for one day, and it is doubtless teaching many students something more about life than they would learn around a University.

Revolver Training Now Offered To Varsity Undergraduates

Last night, to the staccatato barking of six revolvers, the group of sharp-eyed undergrads known as The University of Toronto Civilian Rifle Club declared open season for targets.

But this year, instead of rifle practice, revolver shooting will be taught—for reasons as stated by Dr. G. H. W. Lucas, crack-shot mentor of the Club—"As the majority of undergrads are P.O.M. (Potential Officer Material) and since officers carry revolvers only, it was thought revolver-training would be the most valuable to the most men."

The club also lets it be known that the weapons to be used are not the finger-length automatics of movie-moll fame, but are army regulation revolvers using .22 ammunition instead of .38 because of cheapness and availability.

During the summer, the ranges, deep in the vitals of Hart House, have been made over completely, now accommodating six targets at once, instead of the previous three. New safety features include bullet-proof glass spotters' shields, concrete backstops, and ranges adjustable from ten up to twenty yards. With qualified range officers in attendance, they will be open from4 to 6 p.m., various nights in the week, to give men from every faculty a chance to shoot.

The fee is $3.00, which includes one hundred free shells, all the trophies a man can win, and a dinner at the end of the season. The Club welcomes any student, whether he has fired a gun or not, since, as Dr. Lucas remarked with a grin, "We don't gurantee to make a crack-shot out of him, but if he can't use a revolver with effect when we finish with him, he'd better look around for a good billy."

LOOK FELLOWS — FOOTBALL!

Tonight at Maple Leaf Baseball Stadium down on Front St. the Navy and the Air Force hook up in what promises to be the football show of the season. In fact it should be as sensational a football show as has even been put on in our fair city of Toronto. The game itself is by no means the sole attraction. There will be parades galore throughout the evening. Military bands will dish up their usual hot brand of jive for the entourage. Air Force planes will dive overtop from time to time—just in case the Navy gets a little out of hand, of course! The Navy will probably retaliate with a couple of gunboats strategically scattered about the bay. The game will naturally be played under floodlights, and with power shortage and all that, this may be our last glimpse of the stadium's huge glimmers. Not since the Cross & Blackwell Chefs folded up has Toronto seen a major football game under lights.

The show starts at 8:30 p.m. and will be well worth the patronage of all, especially as it is dedicated to the Victory Loan campaign. So let's see all you football-hungry cadets down at this game for possibly your last look at "glamour games" for the duration. Grab two or three of your favourite co-eds and hie yourself (and the co-eds) to the Front Street Stadium for an enjoyable evening. And also you will be helping the war effort by getting behind the Services Benevolent Funds.

WE'ER PICKING THE PIGEONS

As for the actual outcome of the football clash, we're stringing along with Lew Hayman's unbeaten Hurricanes. The Air Force didn't look too sensational last Saturday but the weather and the lack of competition had a lot to do with that. Any team with Eddie Thompson and Bill Stukus on it threatens every minute of the game. Thompson is now in second place in the scoring race, being runner up to long Al Lennard of the Hamilton Wildcats, and will be trying to improve his position in tonight's encounter. In addition to these two the Pigeons are practically knee-deep in stars. Hayman's job has been to mold these individualists into a team and we think he has now reached the point where co-ordination is present.

The Navy has improved every time out and reached a peak in their upset victory over Hamilton last week-end. The Sailor Boys are in superb condition and at fighting pitch. They are absolutely determined to beat the Hurricanes and if Hugh Cuddie shakes himself loose very often, they may do so. Elwyn Morris and Cuddie are two of the swiftest young backfielders to show around here since Art West was in his prime. The Navy line is a fighting aggregation of ball players who take a back seat to no one. Big Steve Levantis and his cohorts are counting on spending the majority of the game in the Air Force backfield.

Both coaching staffs are confident that their charges are in good shape. Teddy Morris and Jim Palmer of the Navy have cooked up two or three new plays to throw against their rivals. Lew Hayman stated that his team was taking nothing for granted after last Saturday's dismal showing, but that they had been pointing for this game and were fully prepared.

And once again let us reiterate our wish that as many people as possible will attend what promises to be one of the greatest spectacles in Toronto's history.

Scoop! The interfaculty tourney is here at last. We might even add that things are well begun round about St. Hilda's way. The first ball was bounced and the first racket swung high into the atmosphere on Monday afternoon about three p.m. Besides all that, the weather has been delightful for tennis. Yes, yes, we looked and looked and the good old sun was still there shining every time.

Hence, the first round and most of the second round have gone by the board. U.C. and P.H.E. are out in front so far but anything can happen yet. Speaking of things happening, we hear that one bewildered freshie tennis prospect was found patiently awaiting her opponent at Victoria's courts instead of at St. Hilda's. (How to keep from getting old.) When she finally found her way to yon courts, she and her rival found the tourney will into the second round.

Now, let's go back and see what happened. Barbara Greenleaf representing U.C. and Betty Weall of Vic started the ball rolling in the opening game. Time followed time and the ball invariably landed in the back part of the court or in some remote corner. After three set, Barbara emerged the victor to the tune of 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Ruth Carleton and Sonja Morawetz battled it out next for two sets of good form and quick playing. Ruth took the tally 6-1, 6-1. To finish off the first day's schedule, Dorothy Sanders of St. Hilda's and Mary Farrell of St. Mike's did the honours. After much steady playing and a few fast drives and twists past the venerable old nose of yours truly, the final score—6-1, 6-3—with Dorothy Sanders the winner.

Yesterday, the second round started bright and early with Maureen Murphy of St. Mike's playing Muriel Finlayson of P.H.E.. After two steady sets, Muriel came out first by 7-5, 6-3. The only other game reported was one between Barbara Conway and Betsy Mosbaugh. Barbara won only after three hard sets fought to the bitter end and tallying 7-5, 6-4, 7-5. Close games such as this are really something to write about.

Today will be a busy one for all concerned. The following games, at least, are slated to be played off:

D. J. Sanders v. Yvonne Baillie.
V. MacLead v. Barbara Conway.
M. Finlayson v. Betty McLeod
M. Lofton v. Betsy Gowan.

All players are kindly asked to bring their own balls. It seems that the new rubber they are putting into the wee balls just doesn't eare much about touranment and prefers to wither up and turn to jelly before our very eyes. Don't forget, it still does our heart good to see the odd spectator and linesman come around, even if spare time is getting to be almost a thing of the days gone by.

Lead Group II in Rugby Race After 1-0 Victory in Opening Encounter; Murray Makes Winning Score

BLASTORAH SPARKS MEDS

Dents are now leading the Group II Interfaculty rugby race at a result of their 1-0 victory over Junior Meds in yesterday's opening encounter in the stadium. Dents should have a fair chance of grabbing the number one spot in this group which includes Trinity, U.C. and St. Mike's, as well as today's contestants, and with it the right to enter the Mulock Cup playdowns against the runner-up in Group I.

Dents struck suddenly in the third quarter to seize their game-winning marker. The Garnet and Blue boys gathered in a Meds fumble on Meds 20 yard line and though they were unable to punch across a touchdown, Murray managed to hoist a lofty spiral out of touch behind the Meds line. Neither team came even close to scoring in the remaining time and play was fairly well confined to the mid-field area.

Meds reached scoring territory in the closing moments of the first half as a result of some sensational end-running by Bill Blastorah and Murray Paterson. A placement attempt by Jim Davies went wide however and Dents succeeded in getting out of the danger zone. Dents intercepted two Meds forwards in the last quarter to erase Meds threats in that frame.

The broken field running of Bill Blastorah sparked the Meds attack. Murray Paterson and Locke Clement also featured for the Doctors. Bill Hambley and Bob Ferguson were the pick of the victorious Dentists.

Junior Meds — Spoone, McIntyre, Davies, Blastorah, Paterson, Bereton, Toogood, Blanchet, Hardman, Turner, Clement, Grant, Hughes, Rubenstein, Jeffs, Salte, MacKinley, Feigman, Wilson.

Dents—Marshall, Ferguson, Hambley, Murray, Corcoran, Webster, Faulkner, Wright, Woods, Cunmings, Truner, Nolan, Allman, Avery, Schwartz, Hugman, Jenkins.

LIMITED APPOINTMENTS AVAILABLE FOR MEDICALS

Dr. Urquhart of the University Health Service told The Varsity that owing to the number of students who have gone west, a limited number of appointments for medical exams are available. He expects these to be filled by men seeking to play some interfaculty sport.

More than 1,500 examinations have already been made.

Of those who went west, the majority have not yet been examined.

BOOK-BINDING INTRODUCED TO ARTS AND CRAFTS CLUB

Book-binding will be one of the new undertakings of the Arts and Crafts Club this year, if possible, stated Mr. Carl Schaeffer at the opening meeting Monday.

A small group was on hand to follow their interests in the usual activities of the club: clay-modelling wood-engraving, wood earving, lino-cutting or etching on whatever copper is available.

DESCRIBES ENGLISH RUGGER PLAYED ON VARSITY CAMPUS

By Gard Mack

"Sure, a little bit af England,
Fell from out the sky one day,
And it chose the U.C. campus,
In a sporty sort of way-ay-ay."

And that's what it did look like last Saturday afternoon. A bright English day with a fine misty rain, and a dozen or so fellows all dressed up for soccer, but playing rugger.

The ball they were using was slightly more rotund than a rugby ball but didn't seem to be any handicap. In fact it's purpose was soon apparent after watching several 30 yard drop-kicks, from the worst obtuse angles outside a drafting room, go sailing gleefully over the cross-bar.

Tiring of this monotonous accomplishment, the players started lateral passing waves sweeping up and down the campus (shades of Hayman's Argoes). Here again the shape of the ball altered the style of play. Instead of the familiar Ameriean lateral that is thrown with an end-over-end motion, the ball is chucked to the next man in line, much like the way you'd chuck a sackful of cut-glass finger-bowls if you thought you were going to drop them.

Rugger is played on a regulation rugby field, exhibition games last 60 minutes, and there are 15 men to a team ("side").

Eight men are called forwards. They form a compact line by having the first three crouch to a sprinter's starting position, lock arms with their teammates for support (Schoolmen will understand) and lean shoulder to shoulder against their opponent. The other five men similarly get behind the Victory Loan and by this means the pushing power of eight men is concentrated on the shoulders of three.

What corresponds to our rugby backfield is unbalanced (geographically only) to facilitate fast breaking end runs. When the teams are ready, a "half" of one of the teams rolls the ball along the ground in the aisle between the two opposing sets of soccer boots.

The centre of the first three forwards is called the "hooker," and it is his job to try to "heel" the ball back through the "scrum" to his backs. At the same time, the forwards of both teams are trying to push the other team away from the ball as though it were an F2 ration card.

When the ball is kicked out the laterals start. To stop the man with the ball, you merely tackle him, orthodox blood 'n thunder American football, except these fellows have no pads and no substitution. The ball is dead as soon as the man is tackled, so if he is unable to lateral it to a team-mate, he kicks the ball, and saves a bit on the mercurichrome side.

When the ball goes in to "touch" (out of bounds), the two opposing groups of forwards line up and a "wing" throws the ball between them. The result is something like a mass "jump ball" in basketball, with 16 forwards trying to deflect the ball to their eager backs.

Their scoring is easily compared with rugby. A "try" counts 3 and corresponds to a touchdown. It is converted (2) by a drop-kick from any distance out from the goal line, but perpendicular from the point at which the ball crossed the line. A field goal (4) is a drop-kick between the posts, and is a spectacular score when the ball-carrier attempts it just before being brought down by his pursuer. A penalty kick (which is burrowing deep into technicalities) counts 1.

To find out about the team, Warren Stevens was interviewed. It still being early in the rugger season, no predictions were possible, but it would seem that prospects were good for an All-University team. For a nucleus, there is Eric Robertson, Hugh Ford, Pete Spohn (all "T" winners with Varsity's last intercollegiate champs), Ian Todd, Allan Earpe and Max Clarkson (this trio are English fellows staying up at Trinity).

These experienced players with several new recruits from the west coast (Bell-Irving and Nikaido of Meds for example) shape up as a formidable aggregation. Last year the team had only one game because of military studies, but this year it is hoped this obstacle may be overcome to permit exhibition games with R.C.A.F. teams.

Tentative games have been arranged with R.C.A.F. teams posted at Clinton, Picton, Goderich and Mount Hope (vanquished last year 8-0). Fellows interested in playing (especially those from the coasts or England) should get in touch with Ian Todd (Mi 8411) or watch The Varsity for the next practice date.

If the chance is given us, there should be a big turnout to these exhibition games. The game is far more wide-open from the spectators' viewpoint and commands a far wider range of interest in the old country than our rugby does here.

Sociology Club Holds First Group Meeting

This term's first group meeting of the Sociology Club was held at St. Hilda's last night with approximately forty members in attendance. Discussions, outlining the importance of progress of Sociology, were given by members of the faculty.

Profesor S. D. Clark's talk on the "Coming Age of Sociology" covered the various stages in the progress of Sociology since its beginnings in the nineteenth century as well as its use and importance in society today. He brought up the subject of employment of Sociology students after graduation and Professor C. W. M. Hart dealt with the question in his topic "Sociology as an Education."

Professor Ross, newest member of the faculty, concluded the meeting by resuming Mr. Clark's discussion on the Importance of Sociology. She particularly stressed its recognition in Washington and implicated its importance in Ottawa after the present world crisis.

Dr. Gibson to Address VarsityFellowshipGroup

Fifteen years a medical missionary in Manchukuo, Dr. D. M. Gibson, M.B. (London), F.R.C.S. (Ed.), will speak this afternoon at 4:30 in the School of Missions, 97 St. George. Dr. Gibson is to address the Missions groups of the Varsity Christian Fellowship.

In 1914 Dr. Gibson went to China under the China Inland Mission; the following year he went to Honan Province, where he remained until 1927 as a surgeon in the men's hospital. At that time the activities of the Reds brought about his evacuation, whereupon he went to Mukden, Manchuria. There he was placed in charge of the surgical department for women and children at the large Church of Scotland Mission hospital, which cared for over a thousand patients daily. In addition to this, Dr. Gibson taught surgery in the Christie Memorial Medical School.

Compelled to return home on sick-leave, Dr. Gibson left on the last convoy out of Manila, and arrived at San Francisco on Christmas day. He is anxious to return to his work, but this is impossible at present. Few foreigners are left in Manchuria now, he told The Varsity.

ENGLISH RUGGER

hither and yon

with doc savage

Those of you who know and love our physical training instructors as only those who have been exposed to the stuff can know and love them, will really appreciate this one. It was one of the opening P.T. periods of the year, and the Noblest Roman of Them All was reading the rules and regulations to the class—reading them with emphasis—all about contact sports and numbers of hours on the floor, etc.

He finally stopped and there was a stunned silence as the white-faced boys pondered on the gruesome potentialities therein. Came then a voice from the rear—

"If I happen to miss my period, could I make up for it by playing badminton for an hour?"

NAIVE, WASN'T HE.

The more we consider it, the more P.T. classes look like dependable contributors to this column. So many things happen there. Take, for example, the Case of the Serious Student, which happened late last year. This fellow was a bookish sort of a guy who had about three corpuscles and two muscles to his name—in fact, he was almost as unhealthy as a Varsity Nite-Editor, and that is one step past the grave.

So just picture this poor chap in there being made to do all sorts of things like knee-bends, deep-breathing, etc. Finally he is all by himself in one corner of the room doing push-ups. The strain is too much and he collapses, and lies there panting, unable to raise himself. One of the demons in that hard-wood floored hell approached and, standing over the prostrate form, snarls contemptuously—"When's the last time you ever did any exercising?"

"Not since I reached the age of reason, sir," he gasped feebly back.

SPEAKING OF AMERICANS and drafts, which we weren't, several exchange papers have come through with the suggestion that the vendors of programs, pop-corn, etc., in the stadiums modify their chant to go something like this—

"Getcha program here . . . name and draft numbers of all the players. . . ."

SERGEANTS ARE HUMANS DEPT.

One of the more charming members of the women's staff came in the other day with this little tale of Beauty and the C.O.T.C. Seems that one afternoon she was sitting on the bench in that park-like arrangement beside the Press and Physics Building, when who should come strolling in but a whole platoon of sojer-boys. Resourceful-like she opened her Varsity and sat behind it hoping the boys would go away, maybe. They didn't, but kept marching back and forth and obliquely and coming to halts all of two feet away from her.

The poor gal hadda stay there because she was supposed to meet someone, so she gritted her teeth and waited.

Finally they started to march out again and she sighed relievedly. But just as they went marching past her, the sergeant ordered a snappy "eyes left!"

"Embarrassing," she reports.

WONDER HOW SHE WOULDA FELT IF THEY HAD BEEN ORDERED TO LOOK IN THE OTHER DIRECTION?

It seems that a couple of the boys dropped into one of the less nicer spots in town the other night, picked for convenience, rather than choice. It was a joint in the strict meaning of the term and inhabited entirely by the lower strata of society.

So out of the smoke-filled air, rising above the babel of voices, scuffling of chairs and tinkling of glassware, comes a voice shouting in anger—"But you can't understand the philosophy of Confucius because you can't speak Chinese!"

SO SOLLY!

* ** *

Guess that by now nearly everyone has noticed that sign in front of the former Trinity Residences—

Canadian Women's Army Corps
"B-Coy" Headquarters
MMMMMMmmmmmm.

THERE ARE TWO THINGS that completely baffle us—women and professors. Culling the exchanges in search of items even remotely connected with these, we managed to unearth the following more or less intriguing facts.

Down at Temple U. there is a German prof who insists on growing a long beard over the summer and scaring the daylights out of his classes on his return. Then when they get used to the appendage, he shears it off.

And then down at L.S.U. we find a revered History prof being mistooken for a professional billiard player by some students. He didn't know whether to be made or feel complimented.

ALSO DOWN Temple U way we have the sad, sad story of a lonely little freshie who was accosted, one evening, by a rather handsome looking boy who wanted to know all sorts of things like her name, age, telephone number and whatareyoudoingtomorrownight? and stuff like that. Naturally the maid is offended at first, but this kid is on the ball and peddles a very, very smooth line. So, he got the date.

The only trouble was, the lad was a freshman, and that was part of his initiation.

The lady was quite annoyed.

SOME GIRLS, THOUGH, seem to be doing quite all right by themselves in re initiations. Take Boston U for example. There all disciplining of frosh and freshies is handled by a stalwart crew of "Lock-Men" who apparently are the chief magistrates of the sophomore class and possess powers like unto life and death.

So what do we find in the Boston papers but a whole column bewailing the fact that the girls are getting away with murder and making the lock-men like it and what's coming off here anyway? Seems that every time they break a rule and are caught, they smile and make with the eyes and all is forgiven.

"What," screams the paper, "is the matter with the Lock-Men?"

R.A.F. Officers Visit Hart House

Fifty or more lads in the Royal Air Force blue, some wearing R.A.F. wings and some those of the United States Army Air Force, visited Hart House last Friday. Some of them were graduates and former students of English universities and all expressed themselves as immensely impressed with the house.

The men made up most of a group of 65 newly commissioned at R.A.F. stations in Florida, Alabama, Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and Californio, who have come to Toronto to be kitted. The correct material for R.A.F. uniforms which is unobtainable in the United States.

This week they will return to Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., to instruct American flying cadets until the first of the year, when they will either return to England as fighter pilots or come to Canada as instructors.

When questioned about his impression of the United States, Pilot Officer Dick Thomas, a former student of St. John's College, Cambridge, said, "It's very nice down there, but we like it better here. It's more like home. People amuse themselves in the same way as we do." One drawback to the particular section in which he trained, he said, was a lack of girls in the same age group as the fliers.

T. A. Reed, secretary of the Athletic Association, took the officers through the athletic wing and a tour of the rest of the house war arranged by the acting warden, J. R. Gilley. Mr. Gilley told the men about the history and traditions of the house in an informal talk in the Great Hall.

The tour of Hart House was part of a tour of the city arranged by Squadron Leader R. H. Bishop of No. 1 M Depot. Over the week-end the men were to Niagara Falls under the auspicies of the Toronto Kiwanis Club.

let's go places

Except for the fact that the title character spent most of his time (a) in town, (b) in the woods, or (c) in the mountains and therefore confused us, MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL "Pierre of the Plains," current first run offering at the Midtown, struck us as a workmanlike and amusing little drammer.

The plot is more or less routine and some of the acting unconvincing, but there are a good many sharp lines and amusing situations in the picture. John Carrol as the Canuck Pierre, is as naive and lovable a villain as ever doublecrossed the Mounties in an honest sort of way.

The big feature this week is really "Pardon My Sarong" with chubby friend Lou Costello and his friend Bud Abbott. You've probably heard your friends laughing this one over and over again, and anyway, everybody knows Abbott and Costello. Music and dancing are plentifully spread about, including some very undulating chorus numbers, and tapping by Tip, Tap and Toe.

"The people of China need medical care as well as spiritual instruction," Dr. D. M. Gibson, medical missionary recently returned from China, told the Varsity Christian Fellowship meeting yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Gibson spoke of the great difficulties which face missionaries in that country because of the lack of equipment and aid.

He concluded by saying, "There is plenty of opportunity for anyone who wants to help. China will welcome them."

D.F.C. Lauds Universities

"The Universities hold the seed of the religious, social, economic, and industrial thinking for our future civilization, and must not be hampered," R.A.F. Wing Commander Larry Skey, D.F.C., told this Varsity reporter.

A Trinity College graduate of Commerce 3T4, Wing Commander Skey professed himself still much attached to our University, and feels that the student world is an all-important one which must continue. Not only the medical and scientific faculties, but the Arts as well. "For they are the men and women who should devote their time and thought to the planning of the post-war world," he stated.

Concerning Canada's part in the war effort, Skey affirmed that in the 10 months intervening his last visit and this one, a great change has taken place. "I feel that there has grown up a unity of impulse and feeling among Canadians, which is certainly very encouraging."

Since joining the R.A.F. in 1936, Skey has flown from Iceland, Malta, Cairo, South America, Singapore, and Canada, handling 25 different types of aircraft in that time. He was one of the first Canadians to be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his work in the earlier part of the war. He was also mentioned in dispatches from the Narvik battle in the Norwegian campaign.

U of Sask. Dean Dies in Toronto

Dr. George Herbert Ling, 68, formerly Dean of Arts, University of Saskatchewan, died early yesterday afternoon in Toronto General Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Wallacetown, Ont., in 1874, Dr. Ling graduated from the University of Toronto in 1893 and received his Ph.D. from Columbia in 1896.

For a time he was a mathematics instructor at Wesleyan and later an assistant at Columbia. Dr. Ling was one of the five original professors at the University of Saskatchewan when it was first opened. Later he became head of the Mathematics Department, and, in 1911, he was made Dean of Arts. He was also the acting President of the University in 1919-1920.

Dr. Ling retired four years ago and has been living in Toronto ever since.

He has received two honorary Doctor of Laws degrees (Toronto and Saskatchewan) and was president of the Conference of Canadian Universities in 1928-1929.

Queen's Medical Students Protest Prof.'s Resignation In Mass Meeting

Claim Loss of Dr. Ford Connell Would Result in Deterioration of University's War Effort; Petition Presented Signed by 90 Per Cent of Students in Clinical Years; Declare Right to Express Opinion

AUTHORITIES CHARGED WITH NOT CO-OPERATING

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 21—(CUP)—Queen's medical students in a mass meeting held in camera Monday have passed a resolution protesting against the policy of university authorities concerning the resignation of Dr. Ford Connell, professor of medicine, which was accepted Saturday, it was revealed tonight.

The students claim the loss of a first-rate medical man would reflect on the quality of the university's war effort. They also claim that in view of the university's policy of not making permanent appointments in wartime it would be difficult to find adequate replacement for Dr. Connell.

Word of the resignation was first heard Friday night. Saturday a petition was presented, bearing the signatures of over 90 per cent of the students in clinical years, asking that the resignaion be not accepted.

However, the Board of Trustees accepted the resignation, allegedly without consulting the advisory board of the faculty.

The students said the resignation was tendered because Dr. Connell, as acting head of the department, said he felt he was not receiving co-operation from university authorities in the appointment of a competent assistant and promotion to the position of permanent department head.

The students claim their right to express their opinion as they are most directly affected by the quality of the teaching staff. They say they hope university authorities may reconsider acceptance of Dr. Connel's resignation.

Dr. Blatz Relates Overseas Work

There are no idle people in Britain today, Dr. W. E. Blatz, Professor of Psychology and Director of the Institute of Child Study, told The Varsity yesterday. Dr. Blatz recently returned from England where he had been directing training for wartime nursery work.

Last winter, Dr. Blatz, Dr. C. M. Hincks, and Prof. S. K. Jaffary made a trip to England, and on their return, Dr. Hincks founded the Canadian Children's Service Fund for work in Britain.

In June, Dr. Blatz and five nursery school teachers, Miss D. A. Millichamp, Miss Margaret Fletcher, Miss Anne Harris, Miss Mary Wright, and Mrs. Neil Smith, went to Birmingham, where the Ministry of Health had remodelled a school in order that a demonstration nursery school could be set up.

When the school was opened in July, the training of English teachers for the nursery schools was begun. Some 300 women were instructed in a condensed course which lasted three weeks.

The children in the demonstration school came from the immediate neighbourhood, the slums of Birmingham. Dr. Blatz said it was interesting to note that they responded to the nursery-school discipline in exaetly the same way as children do here in Canada. Many of the children had been through the blitz and some had been blitzed out of their homes, but none of them seemed to have been permanently affected by

30 McGill Harvesters Quit Jobs, Return After Adjustments Made

Montreal, Oct. 21—(CUP)—About 30 McGill student harvesters have left their original jobs on Saskatchewan farms and returned to Regina, Prof. John Culliton reported in a letter published in the McGill Daily yesterday.

There they visited Prof. Cullinton, who has set up his headquarters in the Hotel Saskatchewan. After he had straightened out their difficulties, they all returned to the wheat-fields.

What impresses the students most about the west according to Professor Culliton, is the good food. "Rich, thick cream, fresb milk from the cow to the table, fresh eggs, fowl suppers—things that aren't too common in city life, have a big appeal for the boys."

The majority of the farmers contacted by Prof. Culliton seemed pleased with the work the boys are doing. They find that they in turn are becoming professors as they instruct the university lads in the intricate operations of harvesting grain.

Prof. Culliton has also had a message from the girls of Royal Victoria College. They are urgently requesting all boys who have gone west to stop shaving. The girls plan to stage a real old-time western barn dance in Montreal when the boys get back and award prizes for the best crops of whiskers. "The boy boasting of the best beaver will bag the big prize" explained the Professor.

TIPS TO MAKE YOU PHOTOGENIC

By Aileen McDonough

It's open season for having one's graduation picture taken, and here are a few sidelight on the procedure, gleaned from a series of interviews with photographers who carry on business near the campus.

Mr. Crippen, of Ashely & Crippen, says he finds university men and women very easy to work with, as they are intelligent and ready to co-operate with the photographer. He said that often the subjects are a little shy or sheepish at the beginning but that they soon warm up. He stressed the importance of co-operation and added that half of the photograpre's job is to penetrate the wall of reserve that may exist at the beginning of a sitting.

"While a picture may be technically and artistically perfect, it will not satisfy unless the subject is co-operative, for this is necessary to obtain the pleasing, natural effect," he said.

Girls worry most about their hair. Mr. Crippen warned those who are planning to have their photographs done, not to experiment to glorify and glamourize their hair, for while the effect may be pleasing, it is often a bone of family contention. The graduate's family and friends want the picture to be as natural as possible and are often disappointed in an excellent picture just because of a different hair-do. The best make-up for the face is a good, clean, natural skin with its own natural sheen. All heavy colours should be avoided as they darken the features. Rouge tends to make the cheeks appear hollow.

Very often the result of a picture depends upon how the personalities of the photographer and the subject react on each other. The photographer must analyse his subject and proceed accordingly. If there is co-operation the picture will be a success, but if the attitude of the "sitter" is that the photographer is out to get some thing in spite of them, the picture is apt to look that way when completed. Mr. Crippen assured us however, that Mr. Ashley has "universal appeal," and that everyone cooperates with him—be they man, woman, child or animal.

At Randolph McDonald's studio, Miss Petrie said students were "very nice" to work with. She thinks that people are much less self-conscious about photography now than in former years, and she attributes this to the fact that photography has come a long way in the last few years.

There is one mistaken impression that she would like to correct. She says that the majority of girls feels that they must have their hair done before a sitting, but actually the photographer would rather have the hair natural, soft and fluffy. Miss Petrie also said that the majority of girls apply far too much lipstick for their pictures. This always photographs darker in the picture and thus over-emphasizes the mouth.

"Most people scream and howl at their proofs but after a second or a third look they are more satisfied," said Miss Petrie. She believes that this satisfaction comes from the fact that Mr. McDonald has a happy knack of catching the subject when they're not on guard.

To this Miss Petrie added as we were leaving, "Some people wonder if they should have their pictures taken in case they don't graduate, but they really should have it done, as there is a saying that a photograph brings good luck, and thus the student is certain to graduate!"

John S. Steele said that as a rule women are fussier and more self-conscious than men, but that a self-conscious man is far harder to "breakdown" than a self-conscious woman. Women are more co-operative and realize faster what the photographer wants of them. However, a man's skin photographs much better than a woman's. The reason for this is that women use make-up and this robs their skin of its natural sheen. Mr. Steele says that, "Modern panchromatic materials and the proper light balance permit completely natural results when using 'screen make-up' which raises both morale and the photographic quality of the skin."

"If you want a really good photograph you have to have something good to start with—and good doesn't necessarily mean only good-looking. The subject needs in addition character and the ability to work with the photographer" To this statement Mr. Steele added that he challenged anybody to take a "true personality portrait" of any stranger in ten minutes or even half on hour.

"Serious Experiment" Conducted In Want Ad Plea For Dance Date

By Elizabeth Serson

"Wanted—Female partner for All-"V" donce. Applicont must send photograph ond qualifications. . . ."

This somewbat unorthadox notice in the usually staid Classified Ads section of The Varsity aroused considerable curiosity on the campus last week.

The source turned out to be not one lonely man but three. (Very personable—two second year and one first year.) And furthermore they claim they aren't particularly lonely.

But the advertisement is entirely "on the level." It was first thought of as "a serious psychological experiment," and then carried on—well, for the fun of it.

"We actually intend to select two girls from the applicants," said the blond man, explaining that one of them already had a date. "All replies are strictly confidential," he emphasized.

The Varsity Classified Ads office did not seem overly anxious to take the ad, the men said, but they published it. It appeared in last Thursday's paper. Until Friday noon, no answers were received, and the boys were feeling a little discouraged.

But then the letters and photographs started to come in. Up to the end of last week they had received about a dozen applications, two from non-university girls.

The authors of the ad confessed that they could have got dates without resorting to the scheme, but they were interested in new material.

In general, they had no prejudices in favour of one type of girl or another, they said. The only thing that did not go down well with them were intentionally funny letters of which they had received one or two. "This is a serious experiment," they insisted.

They say that the experiment has brought home to them the need for a date bureau on this campus, and they have themselves considered inaugurating one.

"You know, some very beautiful girls have applied," remarked the dark man, and sighed that it was going to be hard to choose.

"Varsity Want Ads get results!" chorused the other two.

What faculty were they, did you ask? Three little lads from School!

Added Advantages

Several days ago we suggested in these columns that our readers could find pleasure and profit from attending a few lectures other than those included in their time-tables. Many students have already signed up for extra lectures, and quite a few others to whom we have spoken have discovered that the odd lecture off their regular beat can be extremely interesting.

During the last week or so several of the university departments have announced their annual series of lectures, open to public and students alike, and regularly attended by crowds of interested listeners. And so we include in the list of suggested extra lectures these profitable hours in the afternoon, at the Economics Building, St. Michael's College, and probably later at University College and Victoria. The Royal Canadian Institute also plans to start its 1942-43 series a week from Saturday night in Convocation Hall.

Jacques Maritain, one of the world's most distinguished philosophers, who is now at this university, on Tuesday gave the first of his series of brilliant lectures on Art, Morals, Knowledge, Education and Man, in St. Michael's College. It is needless for us to say that Prof. Maritain is worth hearing—all the world knows that. We can only urge everyone to take advantage of this chance to hear one of the world's greatest thinkers in person.

Last year the staff in Economics and Political Science covered the problems of the wartime world in a series of lectures through the year. This year they are discussing the question of post-war reconstruction in an interesting and valuable series of ten lectures being given at the Economics Building each Tuesday at 5 p.m. These lectures come up to the high standard set by this department in the past. For those who have ever heard one of the lectures this is all that need be said. Those who are interested in this subject will find the lectures no waste of time.

Besides these two series which are already started, there are several others which, it is expected, will get under way in the fairly near future. Dr. G. G. Coulton, world renowned historian, will, we hope, continue his lectures on the more interesting aspects of the Middle Ages. University College customarily conducts a survey of a section of the humanities, with the co-operation of the English and Philosophy Departments.

And in addition to these regular university sponsored series, the Labour Club, the S.C.M., the English-Speaking Union hold lectures regularly, the artists exhibiting in Hart House Gallery regularly give informal talks on their work. The list of the sources of extra information is almost endless.

A student who goes only to his own regular lectures is missing out on one of the most important of the many advantages offered by this university.

Your Two-Bits Worth

For the past two years Athletic Nights have been held in Hart House on the Saturdays of the second term, and merry affairs they have been, becoming more popular all the time. In view of this popularity and also in view of the President's wish that university entertainment be kept as much as possible on the campus, our suggestion at this time is that another series of Athletic Nights be held in the fall term.

Students in the past have found it notoriously hard to amuse themselves on Saturday evenings. After going dancing, going to the movies, or drinking endless "cokes" the choice of entertainment is exhausted. Also at the present time we are being asked to spend a bare minimum on such things as amusements. The price of 25 cents per person per evening was a suggested figure we saw quoted in an article in the down-town press recently. The entrance fee for the Athletic Nights is 25 cents, and the inference is obvious.

In past years the various faculties and colleges have been in turn hosts to the rest of the campus, and their hard work to entertain the rest of us has been largely responsible for the success of those Saturday Nights.

Many of the people who were in charge of individual Nights last year may argue that the work involved and the small amount of spare time allowed by a wartime curriclum would prohibit more than one Night a year sponsored by each college. We suggest in that case that a few of the many pleasant minor attractions could be dropped if there is just not time to organize them.

The main attraction of the Athletic Nights have been the games played in the Big Gym (generally basketball), the boxing, wrestling and fencing in the Upper Gym, the swimming competitions and the dancing and square-dancing in the two gyms afterward. The exhibits of various kinds and the old fashioned movies shown in the boxing and wrestling rooms have drawn crowds and it would be a pity to curtail them, but these attractions could be dispensed with and the eds and co-eds could still find plenty to keep them amused.

As a pleasant solution to the perennial entertainment problem, how about it?

Visitors Welcome

Next Sunday will mark the first Visitors' Day to be held this year at Hart House, when the members will have a chance to show their friends the interior of this almost fabulous building with which few people but the members are acquainted. The members possibly take Hart House and its privileges pretty much for granted, but to several thousand students, the feminine half of the university, and to the public it is more a legend than a reality.

Hart House is so close to us that we do not always realize that no building or institution comparable to it is to be found on this continent, perhaps even in the world. The facts about the House, the size of the Great Hall, of the swimming pool, the athletic wing almost half the size of the whole building, the amenities like the fiction library, the songsters, and concerts, the pool room, the Tuck Shop, have impressed everyone who has heard of them and thousands of students have enjoyed these facilities.

The effect made by the House on a group of Royal Air Force officers last week is added proof, if any is needed, that visitors enjoy seeing this glorified super-club. Many of these airmen were graduates or former students of famous English universities and they were much impressed with the pleasant provision made here for Toronto students.

The tradition of Visitor's Day is one which could be utilized by even more students than have brought their friends in the last. Hart House is a landmark on the campus, in Toronto and in Canada, and we are proud to show it to our friends.

BEER IS HERE!!

Great Hall Licensed to Serve Light Wines and Beer with Meals Costing More than Two Dollars

CANDY ALSO DANDY

The Great Hall has decided to begin serving alcoholic beverages as a substitute for the soup course which was discontinued late last summer as a wartime economy measure, it was announced yesterday in a special communique from the Hall Porter's desk.

"When I was in Household Economics," said Miss Ptomaine D. Spepsia in an interview with The Varsity, "we learned two things. One of them was that you can boil water without burning it, and the other was that a meal, like a university, must have a main course. The University of Toronto bas the Pass Course, and we have veal loaf.* It all evens up. Plus ca change, plus c'est la meme chose," she said, concluding on an intellectual note.

This big news threw The Varsity office, normally a calm, quiet place, into great activity. All reporters (both of them) were dispatched to interview all important campus personages, on this great innovation.

The first reporter to return was young Garbles, veteran cub reporter who had been sent to interview Etaoin Shrdlu, the linotypist. "He says," Garbles reported, "that it probably won't make any difference in the kind of copy you guys turn in."

"It will be nice to get some solid food in the Great Hall for a change," said Tangent McSlide-Rule, Mech. IV, President of the Engineering Society. "At

COMMENT IS QUITE UNNECESSARY HERE

Reprinted from an article by President F. W. Johnson in The Colby Alumnus:

Modern war is an undertaking of very intricate and complicated detail, both of technology and organization. For its waging we must have large numbers of junior officers and "non-coms" who are able to master new techniques quickly and have the intellectual resourcefulness to handle successfully the problems that arise in the field.

The mental qualities needed are the powers of analysis, judgment, decision and execution, founded on wide general knowledge and an understanding of basic scientific principles. These attributes of a good Army or Navy officer, it wil be noted, almost perfectly define the traditional aims of a liberal arts education.

Fortunately, the high commands of our armed forces realize that the colleges have something invaluable to contribute to America's war effort simply by doing what they know best how to do. We have been asked to intensify and accelerate the process of higher education, but not to change or give up the tested methods and curriculum.

Statements recently issued from both the War and the Navy Departments are, in reality, strong endorsements for the type of higher education that the liberal arts colleges have been offering right along.

Both branches emphasize the desirability of courses in such subjects as history, English and the languages, as well as the more obviously applicable subjects, such as mathematics, physics and physical training. . . .

All of this offers a thrilling challenge to those of us who are connected with liberal arts colleges. For decades we have been asserting that our type of education gives fundamental intellectual capacities of a superior order. Now, in the fiery ordeal of war, we have been taken at our word and told to go ahead and turn out men with the capacity for "sound, incisive and well-ordered thought." as the Navy puts it.

Reprinted from an article by Prof. Ruhl J. Bartlett in The Tuftonian:

The great advance of science during the past three quarters of a century has produced as profound revolution not only in the material aspects of civilization but in the social and intellectual aspects as well. The need for a person to study the subject that will enable him to find a position in an industrialized society has appeared to be greater and more essential than the need to examine the society itself or his relation to that society. One result of this has been the rapid development of technical schools where the humanities have had little or no emphasis beyond "tool-subject" value. The relative decline of the humanities in the colleges of liberal arts has also been marked. Scientific study has accelerated the advance of industrialism, which in turn has increased steadily the overweighed emphasis upon technological subjects. This reciprocal relationship has produced a mechanized civilization in which man may be destroyed by the machine which he created, with infinite labour, for his own happiness. . . .

The colleges that include the humanistic studies as a major part of their endeavour may be termed the liberal colleges in order to distinguish them from the technical schools, and an examination may be made of the role of the liberal colleges in the national crisis that exists. It is obvious that the totalitarian nations have for a long time devoted their energies, their resources, and their intellectual efforts to the development of instruments of aggression. Their world is that of the soldier and the technician. It is obvious also that the free nations of the world must devote their efforts as completely as possible to the development of the same instruments in order to defend their freedom. In this effort the role of the technical schools and of certain parts of the liberal colleges is clear. While the crisis lasts, all elements of society must sustain the soldiers and the technicians.

When the crisis has passed, society will still need the soldier for the enforcement of law and the technician for the advancement of material progress. But above the need for each of them will be the indispensable necessity of the leadership of those whose training has been in the humanistic studies. From this leadership must come the vision, the perspective, the moral concepts, the aesthetic sense, the understanding of justice, the knowledge of social institutions and organization that will render the victory significant for the human race. If the necessity for the training for this leadership is lost sight of, if in the efforts for defense, that which is being defended is swallowed up and the means to the end becomes the end itself, then the toil, and perhaps the ultimate sacrifice, of the soldier will have been in vain.

The great responsibility for the teaching of technical skills, for the production of defense materials, and in short for the preservation of the nation, seems to give a special primacy to technical institutions. The liberal colleges have the special function to preserve and defend those things for which they have the chief responsibility, the things that other institutions are not equally charged to preserve. If the liberal colleges become blind to their peculiar duty, if they short-circuit the humanities or declare a moratorium or even a partial moratorium upon them, they will have betrayed their trust and will deserve their inevitable fate. . . .

What then is the true function of the liberal colleges in the national emergency? It is to maintain and to strengthen the sources of learning which form the foundations of a civilization that is worth fighting to preserve. This is their obligation to the soldier, to the labourer in field or factory, to the man of science and technonogy, to generations unborn. Whatever else they can do, they have an obligation to attempt. But the test of their character, their fibre, their stewardship, their faith in their mission, well be the degree to which they maintain the great sources of liberal education.

School Tops Track Field In Rain

Engineers Pile Up 85 Points to Trinity's 25 and Med's 12; Three Mile Race Hotly Contested

BURGESS STARS

In spite of drizzling rain, which prevented the breaking of any records, the annual interfaculty track meet, held at Varsity Stadium yesterday, brought forth some excellent competition.

School, up to their usual standard, topped the field with 85 points; Trinity, thanks solely to Cam Burgess, copped 25 points. Med's efforts garnered them 12, while U.C. netted 9, Dents 8 and Wycliffe 1.

The most hotly contested race of the day was the three mile—Delaney, Lorimer and Foulis ran in a bunch up to the last few yards, finally finishing in that order. With the addition of Shakleton and Barnett to these three, Hec Phillips sees some good cross-country material, for use in the meets to come.

One man team was Cam Burgess—19 year old Trinity Junior—who bettered his Novice Meet score of 21, by tucking away five first for a total of 25. He placed first in the 100 yds., 220 yds., 12 lb shot-put, 120 yd. low hurdles, and the javelin throw, thus accounting for all of Trinity's points. Last year he held the Dominion title for the 120 yd. high hurdle.

Vern Booth, of School, deserves a hand for turning out while suffering from a torn ligament in his back, as a result of rugby. Vern took third place in the 100 yds. and second in the broad jump, and will be useful man next Tuesday against O.A.C.

Frank Lewarne, wiry 130 lb. Schoolman, won his third consecutive senior pole vault with a vault of 10 ft. Given a dry day he could have gone a lot higher.

These are the highlights of the big track meet, which, since intercollegiate sport was lowered into the grave, has been the big spot in track around the University. Hec Phillips, like every other athletic coach, regrets that his boys cannot run in competition with Queen's, Western and McGill the way they used to in the good old days.

Young, stalwart Cam Burgess would be a valuable asset to a possible intercollegiate squad and, given a dry track and a little better conditioning, he would probably prove unbeatable. Burgess, unlike most sprinters, is big of frame and resembles a rugby player rather than a track man. It is unusual to find the combined qualities of size, strength and speed. His winning efforts in the 12 lb. shot and javelin throw place him in the all-star class. Most men are either track stars or field stars. He is both.

Interesting to note is that Trinity's total score in the two track meets to date is 49. Of these, Burgess is responsible for 46. That is a batting average to be admired.

It is whispered that there are a few more stars in the making among the boys who competed. Kerr of School is reputed to be able to do much better than 6 feet in the high jump and Castoldi should clear 21 feet the next time he broad jumps.

THE RAINY WEATHER yesterday ruined the tennis schedule but nothing could dampen the ardour displayed at the basketball meeting held Monday afternoon at Oaklawn. There all the representative gathered and made plans for the coming season, which promises to be one of the best yet. This year there are 17 teams, an increase of three over last year. Since this makes a heavy schedule, Ruth Virtue, who is in charge this year, says that we must get under way by the first week in November. S o all those interested are urged to turn out with their own college or faculty at the first practice.

Touring around last night we managed to get a line on all the teams. Vic will have three teams this year, and practice will get under way on Friday. So far they have been able to obtain only one coach—Flo Allan, who used to play for the Scarlet and Gold.

Another grad of Vic, who has assumed coaching duties this year is Beryl Pollock who has taken over at St. Mike's. Their initial practice was held Tuesday night and there was a large turnout.

St. Hilda's will commence praticing on Monday at 6:30. Their Junior team will be coached by Annabelle Macklin, whose prowess at basketball has not been forgotten. As yet they have not obtained a coach for their Senior team.

This year Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy will have separate teams. 'Physio' will have as coach Jean Barnhardt, II P. H. and E., and their first practice is slated for next week. The O.T. girls still are without a coach but hope to start next week.

Nurses are planning on getting under way tonight though they too lack a coach. Their sisters in Meds are also minus in this department.

U.C. and P. H. and E. are both entering three teams this year.

Not only have they six teams but they actually have six coaches. Betty Mortimer, IV P.H. and E., is going to handle the U.C. Freshies. Dorothy Patterson from Queen's will coach the Juniors, while Margaret Burns, formerly of Western, will assume the responsibility of the Seniors. Mary Sinclair, III P.H. and E. is to be in charge of her faculty's Freshie team. Bobbie MacDonald, of Inter-Collegiate fame, and her team-mate Helen Gurney, will handle the Junior and Senior teams, respectively. The schedules for U.C. and P.H. and E. are below. The first year students are asked to be at the Women's Union 15 minutes before the scheduled time and they will be taken to the practice "gym." Practice will start next week.

Speaking Of Sport

By Pete Aykroyd

OFF THE SPORTS RECORD

Last year's undergraduate Varsity survey showed that one of the most popular sections of the paper was the Sports page. If our tired old mind doesn't fail us,* the Sports page ranked higher than did the editorials. Now this is a sad thing because the editorials in our paper without exception are excellently well written and in most cases repay one for their perusal. In fact, editorials in general are the highlight of a newspaper and it is on these that the average thinker bases his conversation and thought concerning current affairs. All this is a roundabout way of working up to the fact that there were two good editorials in the Globe and Mail today. (Readers are advised to broaden their intelligence by perusal of other daily newspapers besides The Varsity.)

(*Editor's Note—It does.)

SPORTS AND RELIGION

The editorial which will interest the S.O.S. public was one which described the evolution of a sports department cartoonist to an Evangelical minister. "Chuck" Templeton's cartoons were familiar to everyone during the past few years and when he dropped out of the Sports page picture, few people realized where he had gone. The Globe and Mail cartoonist had forsaken his profession as an artist for that of the ministry. His following of the long and tortuous ministerial trail brought him back to Toronto. Today Rev. Charles B. Templeton holds forth at the Church of the Nazarene on Avenue Road where he has been a minister for over a year. Rev. Mr. Templeton uses his artistic talents regularly to illustrate his sermons, and through his perseverance and enthusiasm the old St. Paul's Presbyterian Church on Avenue Road is cleared of debt, and has a congregation which fills the place of worship three times every Sunday.

What's all this to do with us? Well, the editorial in part read, quote, "We are not saying that there are not pious sports editors, columnists and reporters. We are suggesting that if there are their religion was more likely acquired at their mother's knee than in the practice of their profession. The story of Rev. Mr. Templeton ought to be an inspiration to them and have an immediate and moderating effect upon their language" unquote.

That means us.

THE BRIDGE

That brings us to the second editorial and one in which sports readers would probably pass over. In the extraordinarily rapid whirl of our lives, it does us untold good to stop sometimes and realize how infinitesimal we are in the whole picture. The Universe, the World, North America, Canada, Toronto, Queen's Park, Hart House. The Universe can stand in its lofty position and point to us, but we are too small to abe able to even comprehend the Universe.

The editorial quoted a saying which ran like this: "Jesus, on whom be peace, has said, 'The world is merely a bridge: you are to pass over it and not build buildings upon it'." True it is the we climb on the bridge at one end, walk across, and fall at the other. Few of us leave a permanent landmark on it; some of us fall off half way, but all of us, sooner or later, are engulfed. Why is it then, that we strive so much for transient treasures and set our hearts on things to be quickly lost? We cannot take them across the bridge.

Like an endless spiral, this thought feeds right down to us today. Our little circles which we trace out have inexhaustible possibilities, but they are so very little. Sports is just one example—a little circle.

Those of you who have followed this far may have found some food for thought. Surely this is an S.O.S. for the books. The Rev. Mr. Templeton is on the right track.

BACK TO THE CIRCLE

If we follow the spiral down with a mental finger, we see two items in our little circle which are of interest. The first is the sensational showing of a husky lad from Trinity in the Interfaculty Track Meet yesterday. His name is Cam Burgess and his prowess is supreme. Trinity scored 25 points in all, Burgess scored 25 points. Trinity—Burgess. He deserves honorable mention plus, because he led the field in five events. More will be heard from him later, when our boys meet Buffalo on the cinders next Tuesday.

The second item is the ball game at the Stadium today. This is really the opening game because the girls should be there to rah-rah-Victoria. Senior School a power. Vic a champion. Who knows.

WE HOPE IT'S A CIRCLE

Most likely everyone will see everyone else at the dance tomorrow night. It seems probably that instead of moving in little circles as one is wont to do at a dance, we will move vertically up and down all night until the crowd moves and then we will move up and down some more. Anyway it is classed as sport and should be a real terpsichorean workout.

IDENTITY

This character is not the P. Ackroyd who wrote the dogmatic letter quoted in The Varsity a few days ago. It was well written, but this character hastens to explain that his opinions are not necessarily the opinions of that citizen from New Liskeard.

Employees' Assoc. Fills Social Needs

Unknown to most of the student body is that essential group of people who keep the University running smoothly by seeing that buildings are kept at liveable temperatures and by tending to all the other details that go on behind the scenes of education. Equally unknown is their organization, the University Employees Association.

The Association is primarily designed to fill social needs; and members claim that their At-Homes and euchre parties surpass in amusement value anything put on by students on this campus.

Started at the end of the last war by a small aggregation of permanent employees here—caretakers, technicians, laboratory assistants, and office workers—today it boasts almost 500 members, a quarter of which are women.

In keeping with its functions, business meetings are held only twice a year, and the association devotes itself mainly to activities arranged by the various committees, appointed as the occasion warrants.

Although the officials are generally changed in the annual elections, present president is Philip Tipping, a technician in the electrical department, now serving his ninth term.

In the past, the association's main entertainment feature of the year was its annual minstrel show, but they have discontinued due to the war.

However, not all of their activities are of a social nature. Boxes are sent overseas to former members, and the association has a very active part in the present Victory Loan Drive.

FRIDAY, OCT. 23

4:30 p.m.—U.C. Women's Glee Club will meet in the theatre of the Women's Union. Those not in U.C. also welcome.

M. and P. Society Hears Dr. Gould

"Main difference between Archimedes' and present-day methods in calculating relationships of an object's measurements lies in the fact that the great Syracusian considered each solid as a different problem, whereas modern students, no matter how green they are, may learn within a week to apply blanket formulae," Dr. S. H. Gould told members of the Mathematics and Physics Society yesterday.

Dr. Gould, Assistant Professor in Classics at Victoria College, was speaking on "Archimedes and Hydrostatics."

His work with the sphere and the cylinder Archimedes considered as his greatest, although to us he is more generally known as the father of his "Principle" in the study of floating objects.

His genius was to such an extent that even his king was impressed, and issued a proclamation ordering that whatever Archimedes said must be believed. This followed Archimedes proving true the boast "Give me room to stand and I can move the world." The 'world' in question, was a ship the mathematician launched when careless workmen built it too far from the shore.

DELIVERY OF VARSITIES

The following bundles of Varsities were not picked up yesterday:

Occupational Therapy
Pharmacy

Those responsible should try to ensure that the bundles are picked up each day.

HARD WORK FOR HORSES, SAY HARVESTERS

Montreal, Oct. 21—(CUP)—A letter describing a day's work on the farm has been received from John H. R. Bird, 1st year Arch, and Ralph A. Coren, 2nd year Arts, and published in the McGill Daily.

"To describe a day's work here is like telling the story of a man who contained the qualities of a Messiah, a miner, and a cowboy.

"During the day one might drive a truck to grain elevators in small towns or drive a tractor or pitch grain or drive horses or do many other chores.

"However, we may describe an average day. With eyelids heavy and worn one rises about five a.m. because the sunrise is so beautiful and also because breakfast is served then and no later. At five-thirty a.m. the horses are ready for the field and we are ready to return to bed. As the only way to get to the field is by horse, we reluctantly open one eye and climb aboard a wagon.

"By six a.m. the sun has risen a little and the work begins. At nine a.m. fatigue has hit us and we sleep as we work. Usually oats are fed to the horses but we struggle on unaided.

"We stop again at noon because the horses are in need of rest. While they rest, we grab a quick lunch. We realize that the horses are in need of more rest, but we reluctantly hitch them to the wagons. Many of us consider this cruelty to animals, but it is one of those things that has to be done.

"We work with the horses until four p.m. when we leave them to eat and rest again while we take a spot of tea. From four p.m. til dusk the "Rah-rah boys" struggle to complete the job, and then we carry the horses to the barn. Without any artificial means such as sleeping pills, we quickly collapse in or near our bunks, depending upon where we fall.

"Every day is different, but they all have one thing in common—rough work for the horses."

A group of Queen's students were the first to arrive at Winnipeg en route to the Saskatchewan wheat-fields. The boys are pictured giving their College Yell. Leader is Bob Osborne from Portage la Prairie.

Volleyball League Is Organized

A 45-team volleyball league was organized at the standing committee meeting yesterday. With an increase of eleven teams over last year which saw Dents 'A' capture the championship and Victoria Staff Cup a full season is in prospect. Twelve groups were arranged with four teams in each except the last three which have three. One team is to enter the finals from each except from groups I and II in which the heaviest competition is thought to be forthcoming and which will enter two.

The grouping is as follows:

I—Sr. S.P.S., Sr. Vic., Sr. U.C., P.H.E.
II—Jr. U.C., Jr. Vic., Jr. S.P.S., Dents 'A'.
III—Trin 'A', Meds IIIA, S.P.S. III, St. Mike's 'A'.
IV—Meds IIA, S.P.S. IV, St. Mike's 'B', Pharm. 'A'.
V—S.P.S. V, Meds IVA, Dent 'B', Emmanuel 'A'.
VI—Vic. III, St. Mike's 'C', Meds 'A', Trin. 'B'.
VII—Knox, Wycliffe, Forestry, Emmanuel 'B'.
VIII—S.P.S. VI, U.C. IV, Meds IIB, St. Mike's 'D'.
IX—S.P.S. VII, Meds IIIB, St. Mike's 'E', U.C. V.
X—S.P.S. VIII, Meds IB, Pharmacy 'B'.
XI—S.P.S. IX, Meds IVB, Dents 'C'.
XII—S.P.S. X, Meds IC, St. Mike's 'F'.

CHANGE IN BOXLA GROUPING CAUSED BY WITHDRAWAL

At the standing lacrosse committee meeting yesterday a slight change in the groupings became necessary. Trinity was forced to withdraw from competition for a year. Meds were moved to Group II, U.C. was put in Group III and Pharmacy B was placed in Group IV. New groupings are:

I—Sr. S.P.S., Pharmacy 'A', Victoria.
II—Jr. S.P.S., Dents, Meds.
III—St. Mike's, S.P.S. III, U.C.

their experience.

Subsequently five more nursery school teachers, 10 elementary school teachers and 12 social workers were sent over to England under the auspices of the Fund, and these new arrivals are carrying on the school in Birmingham as a training centre for Nursery School teachers all over England.

Equipment for the schools is very scarce, but an arrangement is being made whereby toys, slides, swings, etc., for the nursery schools will be made by fire-fighters in their spare time. Nursery school furniture is being distributed by the Government.

"All the people are working hard and everybody is willing to do whatever he can," said Dr. Blatz. "There is very little grumbling except good-natured grousing."

German Study Club Seeks Cultural Program

The German Study Club of the University held its first meeting of the year Tuesday night in the Women's Union. Over sixty students, faculty member and friends were present.

The President, Isabelle Eastman, welcomed old members and newcomers and gave a brief outline of the purpose and aims of the club. She stressed the fact that a liberal education requires the appreciation of other cultures besides one's own in order to avoid a narrowness of outlook. "The club," she said, "in addition to its social programme, exists for the purpose of promoting the study of the German language and literature, and has no political connections whatever."

A short comedy, "Der naechste Morgan," directed by Professor Lewis of Trinity, Honourary President of the Club, was presented.

Cookies and cider, followed by an hour's dancing, concluded the evening's entertainment.

According to The Longue Pointer, local journal of the Longue Pointe Ordnance Depot, Montreal, there should be a new section added to the King's Regulations for Canada to cover orderly officers with a liking for gangster radio programs. Responding to an insistent siren one chilly night the fire piquet tumbled out, half-awake and dashed about with their clattering fire-reel, only to discover that the siren indicated, not a general holocaust, but merely the fact that Fearless Fotheringay was closing in on the Dogface Mob. But were they burned up!

RECORDS IN REVIEW

orchestra. Judged abstractly, the performance is magnificent from start to finish. The drive and rhythmic virtuosity are something to be marvelled at. However, when we look at the composition which is given this exhilarating workout, we may wonder whether Toscanini's performance is suited to it. For the poetic feeling of this symphony is not sufficient to account for the attitudinizing and the blood-and-thunder which are its outward manifestations. Amid all these magnificent trappings, one feels that the work is somehow bloated and rather monstrous. And Toscanini's performance does Brahms no favour by exaggerating a tragic rhetoric which is already exaggerated. If he had minimized these faults, the hearer might be more ready to appreciate the real excellences of the work. The recording is good, if a trifle nasal. The surfaces of the copy which I played over were somewhat noisy.

Lotte Lehmann has recorded a group of Shubert songs from Die Wintereise on Columbia. Miss Lehmann gives performances of great subtlety and intimacy of feeling. It is a pity that her breathing should be so much in evidence. The songs themselves are, of course, beyond praise. In particular, one might mention Rast, Wasserflut, and Gute Nocht, but to pick examples is to trifle. For both material and performance, this is one of the finest sets on the market.

Victor gives us the NBC symphony orchestra playing Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, under Leopold Stokowski. It is an unneeessary set. Koussevitsky's performance of this work on a previous Victor release is excellent, and, but for an echo, the recording is excellent too. Stokowski, however, distorts the symphony out of all recognition. The fantastic tempi, the swelling and heavings, the twisting of phrases into anything but what the composer intended, make this a set to be avoided. Tschaikowsky, as B. H. Haggin points out, had a wonderful command over his medium, but even Tschaikowsky cannot survive such treatment as this unseathed.

William Walton's Violin Concerto has charm and rhythmical impetus. As played by Heifetz on Victor, it is an enjoyable experience. The violinist's dazzling tone and impeeeable technique are in evidence, as is the fluency of the composer.

As for The Rite of Spring on Columbia, Stravinsky gives a powerful performance of his own work with the New York Philharmonic. The recording is quite perfect. Stravinsky's masterpiece is pretty "old hat" today and this authentic performance gives one a chance to judge the work as it has been tested by time.

Columbia has also given us Schubert's Quintet in C. There is no greater chamber work than this, and to do justice to it a performance would have to be miraculous. The performance by the Budapest String Quartet with Benar Heifetz is just that. Unfortunately the recorded sound is bloated and unpleasant. The Budapest really doesn't sound like this. Still the performance and the work itself make this a set to acquire. But the Kolisch quartet gives a performance of Mozart's Quartet in C (dissonant) that is considerably less than miraculous. The Kolisch family is related to the Schonberg family and there seems to be an attempt to transfer the neurotic atmosphere of Pierrot Lunaire to this Mozart quartet. The players are nervous and fidgety, and although Mozart can be morbid when he likes, in is the D minor quartet and occasionally even in this one, he requires a serenity of style and a saliency of phrasing which are not to be found in this set. The Kolisch quartet just sounds worried.

Senior School Edges Vic On Rain-Soaked Gridiron To Tie Meds For Top Spot

Grosskurth's Touchdown, Converted Aerially, Scores for Engineers; Failure to Convert Bundy's Major Loses for Vic

MUNRO INJURED

Senior School leaped into a first place tie with Senior Meds in Group I of the interfaculty rugby loop by turning back Vic 6-5 in a slow moving contest yesterday on the soggy sward of Varsity Stadium. Vic now shares the cellar spot with Junior School who were vanquished by Meds last Monday.

A convert of Turk Grosskurth's third quarter touchdown was the margin of victory for the Engineers. Bob Bundy did his part to tie the score by smashing through for a touch in the last frame but the convert failed.

There was no scoring in the first half. School had much the better of the play and went deep into Vic territory on two occasions but both times were held and their third down placement attempts failed. A bad snap gave the Engineers the ball on Vic's twenty when Weed Quintenton nailed Glen Munro before he could get rid of the ball on third down. Two line plays made no appreciable gain and the placement attempt was blocked. Near the end of the first half Don Grosskurth recovered a Vic fumble on Vic's 25 yard stripe and a similar train of events took place.

After the second half kick-off Vic were stopped deep in their own territory. As Glen Munro had left the game with a dislocated shoulder at the end of the first half, big Jim Carson took over the kicking department for Vie. His long punt was taken by Don Grosskurth at the midfield stripe and using a superlative change-of-pace Grosskurth managed to evade hordes of Scarlet and Gold tacklers to race 55 yards for a touchdown. McIntyre tossed a pass to Luke Hamlin for the all-important convert.

Vie came back strong in the fourth quarter. A blocked kick gave them possession in School territory. Savage plunges slowly brought them nearer the Engineers' line and Bob Bundy finally plowed across for the touchdown. Vic

McGill Explores Field With Radio Workshop

Montreal, Oct. 22 — (CUP) — Something new has been added down McGillway in the form of a Radio Workshop, a field of activity hitherto unexplored by students of Canadian Universities.

This enterprise offers a variety of studies—radio acting, script writing, production and sound effects, and to direct students in their individual radio abilities and aspirations.

But the Workshop not only hopes to train and study radio techniques; it hopes to reach a point where it will be able to present its own plays over the air and where it will be able to send students for auditions with favourable results.

If this experiment works, it may lead to training schemes for members of one of Canada's youngest industries—radio writing and production.

I.S.S. Tags To Go On Sale At Tonight's All-Varsity

Tonight at the All University Dance, there will be sale of tags for the International Student Service—as a boost towards the national objective of $8,000. Last year Canada achieved the total of $4,777 in support of this organization which has done student relief work all over the world.

One-third of money raised last year was sent to China to help the nomadic (of necessity) students there, supplying them to an extent with travel aid, to reach transplanted universties, medical aid, food, clothing, and lodging.

Most of the remaining two-thirds was sent to Europe, where in occupied countries and even in Germany the work of the I.S.S. has been carried on by workers from neutral countries

Partly through its efforts, Moscow University has never bern forced to close. In Switzerland there is a Polish University carrying on, mainly with the help of the I.S.S.

André de Blonay, at the Head Office in Geneva, has written to the Canadian branch of I.S.S. saying how much Canada's contributions have helped, and especially in the work they are able to do in the German prison camps. Swiss people go into Germany to supervise the organizing of courses of study, sports, and other activities for Canadians. We, in turn, provide books and so on for the German prisoners in Canada. Also right here at bome, it has been through the work of I.S.S. secretaries and others that interned refugees have been released, to enable them to continue their studies.

Last year on this campus the students—through the March of Dimes, etc.—contributed $1,535 to the Canadian total of $4777.

"And supporting the I.S.S.," Stu Robinson, head of the committee selling tags at the dance, said yesterday, "is supporting one body which actually and materially—instead of by mere words—has given aid to other countries."

R.C.A.F. MOBILE RECRUITING STAFF INVADES HART HOUSE

The second floor of Hart House was taken over last Tuesday by a Royal Canadian Air Force mobile recruiting staff which has been examining candidates for the University Air Training Corps. The staff, which consists of a clerical and a medical section, will have the job completed by tomorrow.

A staff of 10 clerk-stenographers of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) invaded the sacred masculine portals and set up their typewriters in the Debates Room. They were in charge of Corporal Elizabeth Carr, Vic. 3T7, Classics, who in her undergraduate years had never found access to Hart House so easy.

The staff of seven medical examiners headed by Squadron Leader D. Christie set up shop in the Music Room.

In the Debates Room applicants for the U.A.T.C. filed the required data, asked questions and had them answered and were referred to the Music Room for medical examination. This medical examination consists of the same rigourous tests to which all active-service air crew applicants are subjected, Flight Lieutenant J. D. Jennison, Officer Commanding No. 11 Recruiting Centre, said.

Because they are the most frequent cause of rejection in air crew the eyes are examined first. Flt. Lt. W. D. Howe, Meds 4T1, who examines eyes, ears, and throat, explained the tests. The Ishishan Test on colours is first given in which the applicant must distinguish numbers among coloured dots. If he fails this, he gets a lamp colour test where he must distinguish the colours themselves. Colour blindness will not keep an applicant out of the air crew but will prevent him from becoming a pilot. Then varying letter arrangements are put on a screen for eyesight test. After this the applicant must pass the Maddox Rod Test, the Bishop-Harman Test and several on convergence, designed to test the functioning and co-ordination of the eyes.

Flt. Lt. Howe also gives a whisper test at 20 feet, examines the nose and throat of the applicant and then sends him over to Flt. Lt. Miller, Meds 4T1, who records his medical history. Nervous breakdowns, consumption, heart disease, ulcers, chronic ailments, fits, severe hay-fever and discharge of the ears will cause a man to be rejected from air crew. The applicant's blood pressure is tested and then comes the famous endurance test where he must hold up by inhaled breath, a column of mercury four centimetres high for at least 55 seconds. Flt. Lt. Miller obviously enjoys himself as he comforts the slowly dying wretch with such phrases as "Just a little more," and "My, how green you're turning!" This test is always good for a laugh for everyone but the fellow taking it, but it is not very difficult for a man in average condition. The famous whirling chair test in which the applicant becomes thoroughly dizzy and must then stand at attention looking up with both fists closed above the face has been abolished and only those who suffer from car sickness, sea sickness and train sickness are so tested.

The prospective recruit then goes to Flt. Lt. E. C. Evans, Meds 3T9, who gives a thorough physical examination, then co-ordinates all the other reports and categorizes him.

Queen's Harvester Reports Growing Labour Troubles In Western Wheatfields

Students Being Discharged By "Uncompromising" Farmers; Others Quitting Harvest Due to Disatisfaction, Illness

LABOUR APPEAL HASTY?

By Hugh Buchanan
Queen's Journal Staff Writer

Lloydmister, Alta, Oct. 22—(CUP)—Many students throughout northern Saskatchewan are being discharged by their farmer-employees, or are giving up their jobs because of what they consider poor working conditions.

Farmers in this area are generally believed to be dissastisfied with the labour supplied them by volunteer harvesters from eastern universities and colleges, and the students feel that the farmers' attitude is unjustifiably uncompromising.

Some students here believe that the Labour Department's appeal to the universities for emergency workers to help bring in Saskatchewan's record wheat crop was made hastily, that the Saskatchewan Government did not investigate the labour-shortage situation in that province properly, and that many Saskatchewan farmers do not care whether they get extra help or not.

From this centre, just on the provincial border, about seven students have moved on to British Columbia on sightseeing tours; six have gone home; three are in hospital suffering from influenza; 10 have been discharged and 10 have resigned their jobs.

The situation is similar at nearby Marshall and Lashburn, where only about half of the students who came west aboard the Harvest Specials are remaining at their jobs. Some are doing government surveying work.

It has turned cold in this area in the past few days, and there was light snow here today.

36 En Route Home

Tbirty-six of the student harvesters who went out to the Saskatchewan wheat-fields have been given their return tickets home during the past week as they proved physically unfit for the work.

Each case has been checked individually, reported W. W. Dawson, secretary of the Saskatchewan central harvest labour committee, as the Government does not want to drain the West of

Health Service Checks 1800 Men

To date, 1,800 male students have been given medical examinations at the University Health Service, Lt.-Col. R. W. I. Urquhart reported to The Varsity today. About one-half of the students scheduled to take medicals have already bern examined and nearly all examinations will be completed by the end of November, be said.

Most first year men have already been examined so that they might be attested for the Canadian Officers' Training Corps and might also take part in extra-curricular athletic activities. Students who received a medical category last year may be attested for the C.O.T.C. on the strength of that rating and for this reason senior men have been left to the last on the appointment list.

Since the majority of students will have been examined by the end of November, Dr. Urquhart said that the extra staff of doctors will be no longer necessary after that date and that the Health Service will be able to carry on with the normal strength staff.

For the most part men have been prompt in appearing for their appointments but the staff at the Health Service greatly appreciate having students come a little early for in this way a few extra men may be examined in the time saved.

Professor Praises Eminent Edibility Of Horses for Hungry

You don't really dislike the thought of eating horse meat; it's just an unjustifiable whim.

Anyway, Prof. J. W. G. McEwan of the University of Saskatchewan says there's no reason why horse meat shouldn't be eaten when a meat shortage threatens to interfere with industrial efficiency.

Horses are strictly vegetarian in diet, and have constituted an important part of family menus in other parts of the world.

Horses are cheaper, too, selling for approximately one-quarter the price per pound of good cattle.

Mr. McEwan says consumption of horse meat would mean a ready supply of meat for hungry workers and a considerable benefit for ranchers who have difficulty in marketing their horses. It might even frighten a few oat-burners on local race tracks into running a little faster.

Mr. McEwan seemed particularly happy about the thought that if Canadians carved roast horse at their Sunday dinner table, it might help regain the United States market by releasing beef cattle for export. Meaning more ready money for Canadians so they can presumably buy further supplies of horse meat. And lose more money on the horses.

PROVOST F. H. COSGRAVE TO TAKE TRINITY SERVICE

First of a series of four university services for this term will be held Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. in Trinity College chapel, it was announced last night.

All members of the University, staff, students and their friends, are welcome.

Dr. McIlwraith to Open 42-43 R.C.I. Series

The Royal Canadian Institute was founded in 1849 by a group of architects, land surveyors, and civil engineers for the purpose of spreading the knowledge of scientific research among the general public. It acts, as it were, as a liason betwern the scientist and the layman.

In addition to arranging a scries of popular lectures by leading scientists of Canada and the United States, it publishes the results of scientific studies earried out in Canada, and maintains a library of scientific journals received from societies to which the Institute publications are sent. This library has been built up during a period of ninety years, and contains many valuable publications.

T. F. McIlwraith, Professor of Anthropology, University of Toronto, will begin this season's series of lectures with an address on Race and Race Concepts, Saturday, Oct. 31, at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall.

Quiet Over The Campus

The past three weeks have been the most hectic, from a newsgathering point of view, of any within memory of the oldest inhabitants of the newsrooms of The Varsity.

On a Sunday afternoon in early October, the writer of this editorial was settling down to an early sabbatical supper and wondering vaguely what he could write editorials about that night, when he was informed telephonically of Humphrey Mitchell's request that students be used as emergency harvesters to relieve the labour shortage in the western wheat-fields.

The harvest story loomed immediately as one of the biggest on this campus in years. Although little further information than texts of telegrams exchanged between federal and university authorities was available for more than two days, students buzzed with comment and rumours flew thick and fast over the campus. When details were finally released through Ottawa, and the outlines of the plan became less blurred, there was student and staff opinion to be rounded up by hard-working campus reporters, long hours to be spent at the Press by senior masthead members in correlating and co-ordinating the heavy run of "harvest" copy. In the meantime, there was the same big news breaking on other Canadian campuses, and the wires of the Canadian University Press crackled as student editors throughout Ontario and Quebec kept one another abreast of developments at each college, and the newsmen of the Prairies told of the growing need for harvesters in Saskatchewan.

Toward the end of the week groups of students were on the move from many of the universities to which the Labour Department appeal had been directed and it was here that CUP was of more service, in tracing the path of the harvesters from embarkation points in Montreal and Toronto to dispersal centres at Saskatoon and Regina.

When the men from this University pulled out of the Union Station, the scene was colourful enough to justify the large number of Varsity reporters who had been assigned to cover it. College yells and songs blew dust from the rafters, and tired old senior staffmen recalled the days of intercollegiate football weekends.

Came the respite of Thanksgiving and three days in which the news was not unduly heavy although there was no let-up in the flow of harvest stories humming eastward along CUP wires.

Then on another Sunday, the second Story of the Century broke loose, with the report of L. Austin Wright's address to the Alumni of Queen's University predicting drastic curtailment in university admission regulations. Late nights at the Press were the order for senior masthead men again. Opinion of the heads of arts colleges and science faculties was rounded up, and swung solidly against the projected modifications in governmental regulations relating to the universities.

And since then nights at the Press have been uneasy ones, with newsmen uncertain when the official announcement of such changes was coming—if it is coming at all—and fearful of being beaten on any important newsbreak.

But since Monday night there has been no important development in a situation which many fear will result in serious derangement of present and future university status. And the campus is having a breathing space from the end-of-the-world type of news which The Varsity has been purveying of late.

We are writing this with the Press relatively quiet, with only the routine flow of campus news moving across the Managing Editor's copy-desk. We, along with other students of the University, are having a chance to rearrange our thoughts in the light of all that has happened in connection with relations between central government authorities and university students in the past several days.

The implications of what has transpired are of vital importance to Canadian college men and women. We have already urged that, in the period which we have been granted to spend here, we use our comparative leisure to think hard and carefully about the part which we — ostensibly one of the more enlightened national groups—will play in the community upon graduation.

Such planning naturally should concern itself immediately with the active part which we will take in the national war effort, following preparation for such participation here. But also of high importance should be a consideration of the post-war aims of each one of us—what sort of reconstructed society we wish to see formed, and how we can best serve it.

There is quiet over the campus tonight. It may be a mere lull. We may have few more nights of relative calm in which to arrange our thoughts. To be sure that our efforts in winning the war and the peace be properly integrated toward the formation of some sort of post-war world in which greed and inhumanity are no longer predominant, it is necessary to think. And the time may be all too short.

Correspondence

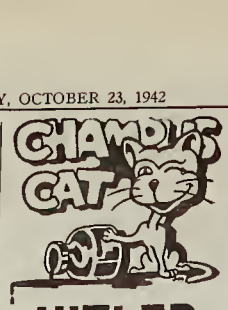
President,
Canadian University Press.

Dear Mr. O'Mara,

On November 17, the Czechoslovak students in Great Britain, together with their British colleagues, will commemorate the massacre of the Czechoslovak students in Praha and the closing of the universities and high schools in Czechoslovakia by the Germans on November 17, 1939.

A few thousand students perished in the massacre —hundreds were executed or beaten to death and others deported to concentration camps, where they were tortured and from which they never returned.

The date of November 17 is therefore being commemorated in Great Britain as an International Students' Day, appealing to the student solidarity of all nations and honouring the brave resistance of their Czechoslovak colleagues and the martyrdom they suffered in defending with their bare hands the ideals of liberty and democracy against German armed violence.



On the request of the students in Britain, I am taking the liberty of approaching the students of Canada to invite them to join this International Students' Day, and by honouring the memory of these student martyrs, to show what a great contribution students are able to make to a common cause.

I would be grateful if the Canadian University Press . . . could invite all the university students in Canada to manifest their solidarity in our present struggle.

It might be possible for the student organizations to prepare a mass meeting for all students on that day to remember the massacre of the Czechoslovak students in Praha and show that we have to fight for the ideals for which they sacrificed their lives. . . . The manifestation would be given a great significance if the university authorities, prominent local authorities, civil and military authorities and representatives of the press could also be invited. . . .

I shall be grateful for any assistance you may be able to give our students in Great Britian in

HITLER RESIGNS!

Retiring Chancellor Sheds Tears Among His Onions as O'Malley Leaves Varsity to Succeed Him; Masthead is Jubilant

SURPRISE! SURPRISE!

By Hex Nilssen
CUP Berlin Resident Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 22— (CUP) — Shamus O'Malley, well-known Toronto editor and reformed pool-shark, has left The Varsity to become chancellor of Germany, following the surprise resignation of former Reichskanzler Adolf Hitler today.

Interviewed at this Berchtesgaden onion-farm, Hitler said, "I have not grown rich in the chancellorship, and what little money I have left I intend to invest in Canada's current Victory Loan. Heil O'Malley!!"

The New Chancellor

"Dirty O'Malley," his smiling successor corrected him gently.

"Rather an unusual procedure," commented Josef Stalin, Premier of Russia, when this newspaper informed him of the change. "I hear however that the new Chancellor is a Russian billiards enthusiast," he added with a twinkle.

"From now on, he plays Prrrrrussian billiards," said Hitler, chalking his cue with a kindly smile.

"Three times I offered the Chancellorship to Winston Churhill, and three times he refused it," Hitler added. "We differed on minor matters of North African policy. At times there was talk of my personal friend Winston resigning from the League of Nations, but we patched up our misunderstanding, and agreed to differ on that point, as well as a few others concerning Malta, the British Isles, and some Atlantic convoys."

"Some Atlantic convoys," commented Mr. Churchill, puffing serenely.

"We regret Mr. Hitler's resignation," said Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, "but it will undoubtedly have a beneficial effect on international world relations."

"No relations of mine," commented Benito Mussolini, Prime Minister of Italy.

"I am definitely not going to Saskatchewan to harvest," Hitler said.

Told that it was believed in some quarters that he would enter the political field in the forthcoming elections of the Engineering Society of the University of Toronto, Hitler replied, "If people want to believe that, it's their privilege. This is still a free country. And I am still a critic of the present regime of Tangent McSlide-Rule, and I intend to remain one."

Turning to his successor he said: "Son, stay out of politics, it's bad stuff."

Dents Soccerites Take Pharmacy On Clee's Penalty

In a cold drizzle and on a soggy field the Dents soccerites held complete mastery yesterday as they blanked Pharmacy 1-0. The molarmen had the ball in Pharmacy's territory most of the game but were only able to bulge the wine once. Don Clee proved the star of the game by sparking his team throughout and sinking the winning goal from a penalty shot.

Pharmacy — Cameron, Watson, Spence, Reed, Little, Detre, Blanchum, Clifton, Cucohill, Smith, Munro.

Dents — Merritt, Johns, Grainger, Smyth, Chapman, Clee, Scott, Fhnikov, Bakalinsky, McCartney, MacFarlane.

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir,

In your leading editorial of the issue of Oct. 22 I notice that you suggest that the lectures given in the Economics Building are sponsored by the Department of Political Economy.

In fairness to the work of the committee of the staff of the University, I would be grateful if you would publish this letter to say that the arrangement of the lectures has been entirely its responsibility.

Yours sincerely,

H. A. Innis.

The Varsity thanks Dr. Innis for bringing this matter to our attention, and regrets any misunderstanding that the editorial may have caused—Editor.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

HEROES ARE MADE

The air was tense—the crowd was hushed—the teams were aghast—for out strode onto the oozy turf the hero with arm limp at side. The play was called—the quarter fell back from the line onto one knee—the hero poised for the trying point. The ball whipped back—the sphere was balanced with index finger on tip of pill—the hero's foot came back—swung—and the ball slurred off the side of his toe. Such a scene was enacted yesterday in the rain at the stadium. And a more dramatic event has not taken place in a long time up at the Bloor Bowl. For it was in the dying minutes and Vic had just garnered five points through some super plunging of Bob Bundy—to bring the Red and Gold within a point of School. Then for the convert Bernie Taylor sent out Glen Munroe who had been out of the game since the second canto with a dislocated shoulder. And it was just plain luck that the greasy ball eluded his educated toe. If he had made the score he would be a campus hero by now—but the books had it that it was not to be. However we can exclaim how glad we are to see such sportsmanship and love of the game—for to go out on the field with a dislocated shoulder to try for a point takes real spirit of the game—something which a lot of students and athletes can profit from—and something that a student should take away from University along with his sheepskin.

As a rugby game the Vic-Sr. School contest proved to be slightly boring and very cold-provoking. However the two teams are very well matched and Meds should have quite a tussle to stay on top. As we have reiterated before, the first division is a toss-up all the way around with Meds and Sr. School having been favoured with the 'breaks' so far. A little more progress will be made a week hence when Vic and Meds will have met as well as the two School aggregations.

JOTTINGS

A very interesting hour could be spent tomorrow morning for those souls who have some free time after eleven. English rugger will be played by two of the very best aggregations. U. of T. has been perennially tops in Ontario and this season seems to be no exception, So, though you may not exactly understand what's going on—you'll see a very wide open and fast travelling sport that has been a favourite in the Old Country for generations.

The Athletic Office, including Mac MacCutcheon, Warren Stevens and Hec Philips should be congratulated upon their efforts on behalf of the University to get events with outside centres. Old intercollegiate days will be recalled to the few remaining privilegees who were enrolled before the burial was consecrated. Next Tuesday will see O.A,C. and R.C.A.F. track squads visit the stadium to test their mettle with this season's crop of University trackmen. With no intercollegiate sport and such good bills of fare offered both the aforementioned events should be well attended.

GOOD OLD HARRIER

Tomorrow morning, nice and bright after the all "V" dance, is the annual Novice Grind—or Harrier. Upwards of one hundred are expected to enter the three mile jog around the campus—but remember, gentlemen college point collectors, there is a time limit. You just can't walk around for the dear old Alma Mater. So don't cut too many rugs tonight. Think of the morning workout in trunks and running shoes and also the afternoon workout in battle-dress. Come to think of it—d'ya wanna buy a good tickets to the dance—huh?

Hec's Trackmen Raring To Go In Tuesday Meet

Fresh from the training of the two interfaculty track meets lately, Hec Philip's men are in top form to take on two visiting track teams—O.A.C. of Guelph, and No. 31 S.F.T.S. from Kingston next Tuesday.

The O.A.C. visit has been contemplated for some time but word was only received today that the Airmen would be able to partake in the three-cornered event. Fred Rowell, alumnus of Varsity and one-time member of the sport staff on this paper and originator of the column "Around the Track," is the sports officer in charge of the Airmen squad.

The interesting meet will consist of the full intercollegiate program. Two entries from each team will take part in the sprints and three in the remainder of the events.

Coach Philips will choose the best 25 men of the Junior and Senior Meets and as they are all in condition, readying themselves for the relay meet next Wednesday, the wearer of the Blue and White should stack up very well against the visitors.

Now that rubber tires—and hence cars—are going further and further from us, we should appreciate all the more the old saying "Horses, Horses, crazy over Horses!" Why, just the other day, whilst walking across the campus, we heard the trotting sound of horses' hoofs — and when we turned around to see what went on—lo and behold, it was a real old-fashioned carriage drawn by two beautiful equines. All of which goes to show you that really horses are animals we all ought to get to know a little better.

Week-end afternoons are really lovely times to try out either Glen Mawr or The Kingsway Hunt Club's various horses—or to renew old acquaintances if you are of the more stalwart type. Our University Registration Cards are honoured there by a half-dollar reduction and the facilities are the very best.

The proprietor of Glen Mawr assured us that his busses met the street car at ten and at three o'clock—and that he would be glad to give any further information regarding parties of riders, etc., if you would phone Mo 3633 and ask for Mr. Morris. Instructors are free for nothing—if you ask for them ahead of time, since they are quite busy with various riding clubs.

Although racing and jumping is not allowed here, there is 30 miles of country bridal path to cheer the heart of any riding enthusiast and a few nearby farm-yard stables to keep your horses away from if perchance they should scent them and scurry off with you on their respective backs. Altogether, the Club boasts of 25 saddle horses—so you can take your pick.

The Kingsway Hunt Club, or the Old Mill Stables, is famed far and wide for its good bridal paths, excellent horses, and capable instructors who will also teach jumping if you so desire. It's always thrilling to try something new if you, in company with us, haven't had the courage in previous years. Busses are also supplied to and from this Club and can be inquired about at Weston 108 WI. Just give the "prop" a ring.

All we need now is our boots and breeches and good riding weather—and we're off. There's no better time than the present to post, gallop, or just to trot—and there's no healthier (if you can stay on your horse(form of non-competitive sport known to us. (All letters to the Ed. will be duely perused.) If you have never ridden before we hearby guarantee you the thrill of a lifetime, and invite you to come on out on your free afternoons.

Meanwhile, our tennis tournament is progressing quite favourable considering our old friend, Mr. Rain. Some of the second round remains to be played, but Y. Baillie is already into the third round, having won her game yesterday by the score of 6-3, 7-5. We'll hear more of tennis come next Monday, we trust.

Blue and White XV to Make Debut Against R.A.F. Saturday Morning

The 1942 edition of the University's rugger fifteen will be on dispaly tomorrow morning at 11:00 on the back campus when they meet an R.A.F. team from Clinton.

The Blue and White squad has been drilling for a couple of weeks and looks as strong as former championship fifteens. A number of experienced players, who received their training in England—the home of the game—are the mainstay of the squad. Among these are Weedon, Max Clarkson, an alumnus of Stowe, Ibbs, Wood, Earp and Ian Todd, one of the sparks of the team who hails from St. Barts. Hugh Ford played intercollegiate rugger before the lid was clamped on the competition.

The R.A.F. team, under the supervision of Squadron Leader Iliffe, is reported to be quite strong—having defeated Picton Flyers on our own back campus just two weeks ago. So when the two English manned teams mix it up tomorrow sparks will fly.

The U. of T. fifteen is requested to be on hand by 10:45 in the locker room to receive uniforms. Following will comprise the team: fullback—H. Aitchison; quarters—G. Weedon, J. Wilford, P. Allen, H. Mikaido; halves—H. Ford, M. Clarkson; forwards—B. Morwood, E. Robertson or J. Ibbs, J. Hickman, S. Robinson or T. Wood, R. Bell-Irving, I. Todd, J. Brandon, A. Earp, J. Twaithes.

was now one point behind School, time was short and this migbt be their last chance to score. So, to attempt the vital convert Bernie Taylor yielded to Glen Munro's wishes and sent him in, his limp arm dangling by his side. The muddy ball went off the side of Glen's foot however and Vic still trailed 6-5. Vic took to the air in the last few minutes but Parchello intercepted a pass to ease the threat. The game ended with the ball in School's possession.

Carson and Bundy were the best of the Vicmen. Don Grosskurth played a whale of a game for School and Weed Quintenton also featured with his smashing tackles.

hither and yon

with harriet leigh-mallory

Now that essays and things are coming around, it seems a good time to gather up a few helpful hints for faltering freshmen. A student at Notre Dame has a somewhat gloomy outlook on the whole situation:

"I think that I shall never see
A 'D' as lovely as a 'B'—
A 'B' whose rounded form is pressed
Upon the records of the blessed.
A 'D' comes easily—and yet,
It isn't easy to forget,
'D's' are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a 'B'."
Discouraging, isn't it!

But from the Victoria Optic, we have the fighting spirit coming to the fore:

"There are to me, two kinds of guys,
And both of these I sure despise.
The first I really like to slam
Is one who copies my exam.
The other is the dirty skunk
Who covers his and lets me flunk."

And then comes the optimistic fellow in Alberta who publishes his feelings about 8:30's and such:
(With apologies to Tennyson, in case you don't recognize it.)

"Sunrise and eight o'clock,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of my prof.,
I cannot rise you see.

"I'm up to stop the alarm half-dead,
Too sleepy to rise and roam,
For I who jumped from out my cozy bed,
Soon turn again home.
"Sunrise and nine o'clock,
And still I slumber well,
Unmoved by the stirring call
Of my alarm clock bell.
"And though my cut from year to year
Pile up in mighty masses,
I hope to see my diploma face to face
If I did cut too many classes."

Obviously some of the Frosh down Queen's way are not very hep yet. Disgusted Soph shots to Frosh, "You ought to take chloroform!"

"Yeh?" replies the Frosh. "Who teaches it?"

THESE ENTHUSIASTIC FROSH YOU KNOW!

About on a par with that is the young Varsity Co-ed who has the foresight to be thinking of the cold winter months to come. The other day she was shopping for the new leg make-up WITH HEAT IN IT!

News of an approaching blackout, reminds us of last spring. We were wandering along the streets near the Campus on that drizzly blackout evening when we saw a light on in a house on the opposite corner. Two Air Raid Wardens near were discussing it. We did a little eavesdropping and this is what we heard, "No, can't do anything about it, it's not on my side of the street." Organization, they say, is everything.

* * *

And speaking of organization, the Varsity staffers are so well organized that they post notices to each other dated not only with the year, month, day, even with the hour and minute. (If you're really good, you get down to the split second.) It seems they are all taking this efficient arrangement very seriously for the other day a young reporter came into the Women's Office and was accosted by a Senior member of the Masthead, "Did you get the note I left in your door?" "No," replied the aspiring reporter, "But I'll get it now, I'm going right over." And she catapulted out the door. "The note," moaned the poor mastheader, "only tells her I want to see her."

The Last Prom . . .

. . . with an Indian Princess

André Kostelanetz (hereinafter to be referred to as Mr. K.) conducted the last Prom of the season with his usual aplomb. As this was a Benefit in aid of the Navy League, with a capacity crowd in attendance, and since at least two of the A.M. and D. brotherhood are with the Senior Service at either coast, all should be sweetness and light in this column. Alas, 'tis not so. Mr. K. started with the Etnr'acte from Rimsky-Korsakov's Le Coq d'Or, which for most of us in more pleasantly associated with Ballet Russe, and the scintallant leaps of Riabouchinska. The orchestra gave them an elegaic interpretation of The Winter's Passed, by the America composer Wayne Barlow.

Guest artist of the evening was statuesque Mobley Lushanya, whose Verdi and Puccini arias have been Done to Death here, but were nonetheless notable for a subdued orchestral background. Her group of soli, padded with the usual Cadman, displayed a pleasing control of the lower register. The little princess certainly had all the crowd-pleasing qualities.

The single oasis in a desert of non-symphonic music was Ferdé Grofe's Grand Canyon Suite, in which the Philharmonic attained an end-of-season elan glaringly absent from the rest of the program. Nicely evolved was the whimsy and nostalgic humour of On the Trail; Leo Barkin's piquant interlude on the harpsichord almost gave the illusion of a frontier saloon music-box. At times the string section achieved absolute suavity of tone. There were several good moments here, thanks to the competent baton of Mr. K.

And now, for a barbed shaft or two. First, a murrain on ill-mannered late-comer, who come stumbling in at nine-thirty, with distracting giggles and line-plunging tacties. They, I fear, will be always with us. It is our profound and footless hope that the next season of the Philharmonic will see a larger proportion of true symphony on the calendar, and much less of the trashy program music of the immediate past. At least we can hope.

BROCK BRACE.

Philosophy of Music

Dr. Walter's Lecture

Last night Dr. Arnold Walter began his lecture on Modern Harmony by clarifying some of the technical points of the preceding lecture on Wagner. After outlining with the aid of illustrations on the blackboard the origin of Wagner's harmony, he analysed at the piano, bar by bar, the Prelude to Act I of Triston.

Turning to Wagner's successors—Brahms, Max Reger, Strauss, Bruckner, Mahler and Hindemith—Dr. Walter read a paper on the historic background of these men from the standpoint of what might be called the philosophy of music rather than its technique, which is the general subject of this series. He pointed out the similarity of music and architecture in their cycle of gradually increasing complexity and sudden simplification, and traced music back to its elements—Melody, Rhythm and Harmony—expressing their relationship in mathematical terms.

While on the subject of history, Dr. Walter said that most musical history is over-simplified, with the result that we view such controversies as the Brahms-ian-Wagnerite feud as childish rows of people who ought to know better. But the road of musical progress does not run straight up to us, and no one can know which turn is the right one.

Finally, Dr. Walter explained that he did not have time for the recordings he had brought, but the audience persuaded him to play the first of the set—the first record of Mahler's Lied von der Erde.

The conglomeration of short subjects showing at the Imperial this week is on the whole more appetizing than the main dish, "Footlight Serenade." The plot, centred backstage, is the usual plot which one finds centred backstage, while the tunes, with one or two exceptions, are none too tuneful. What lifts the picture into the realm of the ordinary is the captivating performance of Betty Grable, the main dish. Mature and Payne also ran.

IMPERIAL "FOOTLIGHT SERENDAE"

Short subjects include an eye-catching Betty—er, travelogue of Arizona, an interesting item entitled Betty—er, Unusual Occupations, a Popeye cartoon and the latest in the March of Time series, "F.B.I. Front," an out-of-the-ordinary documentary which includes a true spy case.

S. E. Smith, Manitoba Dean Stresses Value Of Arts In Universities At War

Agrees with Cody in Letter to Ottawa; Claims University Heads Should Have Been Consulted

ARTSMEN OF VALUE

Winnipeg, Oct. 25—(CUP)—Dr. S. E. Smith, president of the University of Manitoba and head of the National Conference of Universities. said university heads should protest against any measure which would bar physically fit student from enrolling in arts courses.

Dr. Smith agreed with the view expressed earlier by President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto that university heads should be consulted before any restrictions are made on courses thought to have no direct connection with the war effort.

Dr. Smith said he had submitted his views by letter to officials at Ottawa.

He was commenting on an address prepared by Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, for delivery at a recent meeting of Queen's University alumni and released for publication. In this address Mr. Wright said university training might be restricted for physically fit young men to courses fitting them to be technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry.

"Students graduating in arts," Dr. Smith said, "are just as valuable to the war effort as those taking engineering, science, medicine, dentistry or other technical courses."

The Varsity Enjoyed By Harvesters

Ernfold, Sask., Oct. 25 — (CUP) — First copies of The Varsity to reach this harvest centre since University of Toronto men moved in from the Harvest Special were eagerly read by students last week.

"The arrival of The Varsity was the biggest event since we reached the farm," Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union, said. "It serves as a connecting link with home. We are eagerly awaiting subsequent issues."

MEMBERS OF HART HOUSE

Members of Hart House are requested to watch the special Hart House Bulletin Board on page 2 on Mondays and Thursdays for notices regarding Hart House activities.

Newman Club Will Debate

"Resolved that the Arts Course is a Function of the University in War Time" is the topic on which debaters from Newman Club and St. Michael's College will clash tonight at 8:00 in the first debate to be held by the Newman Club this year.

The debate will be decided by a vote of the house. The meeting will be thrown open for discussion after the debate.

"This topic is one vitally affecting the students today, so it would be fitting for them to have an opportunity to voice their opinion," explained Art Maloney, president of the Newman Club Debating Society.

Les Wilson, I Meds, and E. Duchene, I Law, will take the negative for Newman Club. Wilson is a graduate of St. Patrick's College, Ottawa, and Duchene is a graduate of Assumption College in Windsor.

St. Mike's will be represented by Alec Cambell, III Honour and George Wiskes, II Pass, on the affirmative.

The meeting will be open to all University students who are interested. There will be dancing after the debate, and refreshments will be served at a slight cost.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS

Will all those who expect to engage in any athletic activities this winter please make their appointments immediately.

STUDENT LABOUR CLUB DISCUSS RECENT BOOK

Canadians should co-operate closely with Russia, both now and after the war, Bert Kenny, student of foreign affairs, told members of the Student Labour Club Wednesday night in a discussion of the first two chapters of Palme Dutte's recent book, "Britain in the World Front."

The first two chapters of the book deal with the problems confronting the Allies. The author recommends total conscription and organized production for victory.

CAPT. G. C. GRAY, MEDS 4TO, PRISONER AT HONG KONG

Capt. Gordon Cameron Gray, 1940 graduate in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto, was listed as a prisoner of war in the 176th army casualty list. He was previously reported missing after the fall of Hong Kong.

Captain Gray interned at the Toronto Western Hospital after his graduation. He enlisted in Ottawa, August 19th, 1941, and was sent overseas shortly afterwards.

C.A.M.S.I. Convention To Be Held In London, Week Of October 30

Three delegates and an unspecified number of observers will constitute the Univcrsity of Toronto delegation to the sixth annual convention of CAMSI (The Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes) to be held in London, Ont., Oct. 30-Nov. 1.

"The idea of the conference is to air professional and student problems," said Stanley C. Best, Medicine VI, head of the Toronto delegation, in an interview with The Varsity on Friday. "We believe that this organization can aid the universities and thus, indirectly, the community, by helping make better doctors."

The other Toronto delegates are M. S. Acker, Medicine VI, vice-chairman of the University of Toronto CAMSI committee, and Gordon Millar, Medicine V, chairman of the Curriculum Committee of CAMSI. "We are anxious," Mr. Best continued, "to have as many students as find it possible to go to the conference as observers."

CAMSI, Mr. Best explained, is trying to achieve unity of action among medical students, in cases where definite student problems arise. "I believe that this organization is the logical one to attain such a goal," he said.

One of the services that CAMSI maintains is the Canadian Interne Board, which aids hospitals and senior students in arranging internships. "One of the man objects we have set ourselves is to make CAMSI truly representative of the opinion of the majority of Canadian medical students," Mr. Best concluded.

CORRECTION

Friday's issue of The Varsity contained a story which erroneously reported that colour-blindness will not keep Royal Canadian Air Force Candidates out of air crew positions other than pilot. R.C.A.F. officials report that no colour-blind candidates for air crew are being accepted.

Queen's Harvesters Claim Pay Short

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 23—(CUP)—A few Queen's University students, who claimed that they were not receiving wages at the rate promised them and that work of the sort expected was not available in their area, have been granted permission to return home early, it was announced here today. It was emphasized that these eases were isolated.

Early in the week Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's, received a telegram signed by five harvesters asking permission to return early on account of unsatisfactory conditons.

Dr. Wallace communicated with the Dean of the Agricultural College of the University of Saskatchewan who investigated the students' complaints. Arrangements were then completed with railway officials through the employment office in Regina to issue them with early return tickets.

Today Is Deadline For Signing With Air Training Squadron

1. Today (Monday, 26 OCT) is the last day for students (other than harvesters) to apply for enrolment in No. 3 (University of Toronto) Squadron of the University Air Training Corps, R.C.A.F.

2. Applications will be accepted from any male student registered in the University of Toronto, excepting only Medical and Dental students, and certain engineering students. Eligible "School" students include: (a) Men who are willing to undertake aircrew service with the R.C.A.F. not later than the end of their Second Year; (b) Third or Fourth Year men taking the Aero option in Engineering Physics or Civil Engineering; (c) First or Second Year men who have the definite intention of taking the Aero option when they enter their Third Year of Engineering Physics or Civil Engineering. (Note: In the case of men mentioned in (b) or (c) above, it is a requirement for enrolment in the U.A.T.C. that they meet ground-crew medical standards, but it is not required that they satisfy the aircrew medical standards which are requirements for other applicants.)

3. The syllabus of training in the U.A.T.C. calls for instruction during the academic year in subjects which include Mathematics, Navigation, Signals, Drill, Aircraft Recognition, Airmanship, Theory of Flight, Theory of Engines, Station Familiarization and Practical Flight, etc. This training involves no examinations, but is followed by a two-week Summer Camp at a R.C.A.F. station of which 4 hours are scheduled for examinations. Syllabus and other details are available in the U.A.T.C. Orderly Room, located immediately East of the Debates Room in Hart House.

4. Complete R.C.A.F. uniforms, including shoes, are to be issued within a few days' time to members of the U.A.T.C.

5. At 1945 hours (7:45 p.m.) this evening (Monday, 26 OCT) there will be a meeting in Room 25 of the Engineering Building for the benefit of: (a) Students who are interested in enrolment in the U.A.T.C. but who were absent on Monday, 19 OCT, and have not yet had a classification test and an R.C.A.F. medical examination. (b) Students who have already indicated interest in enrolment in the U.A.T.C. but have not yet had both a classification test and a complete medical examination.

Report Student Harvesters Doing A Good Job; Weather Is Drawback

Dornan, Western Editor, Claims Boys "Can't Take It"; Saskatoon Registers Few Complaints

SOME 'EXTREMELY WILLING'

Conflicting reports as to the success of the student barvesting scheme in Saskatchewan came out of the west during the week-end.

W. W. Dawson, chairman of the Saskatchewan Central Harvest Labour Committee, said 45 per cent of the Saskatchewan wheat crop had been threshed during the last two weeks with the help of 4,000 Eastern Canada harvesters of whom at least 2,000 were students.

"I consider that, as a vital phase of our war effort, the harvest excursions from Ontario and Quebec have been a success," said Mr. Dawson. "There were difficulties, but the men accomplished what they set out to do.."

He said that 70 per cent of the Saskatchewan wheat crop was now threshed.

Dawson Re-assures McGill

In a telegram to President James of McGill University, Mr. Dawson attempted to clarify the situation as regards student-harvesters from McGill and Macdonald College.

"Press reports from this province have been grossly exaggerated," he said. "There has been a percentage of boys not physically able for threshing operations. The boys were willing to make a try but failed. The percentage of misfits is comparatively low. A large percentage have been continuously employed and presented no problem."

"A total of 35 students unfit for work returned to Montreal last Saturday night," the wire continued. "There are a few in Regina willing to take employment but it is unavailable beeause of the weather. They are being eared for in the Y.M.C.A. or hotels, and their meals are provided.

"From the point of view of harvesting and threshing the crop plan was an unqualified success," he said. "More progress was made in 12 days than in the previous two months."

Students "Just Can't Take It"

Sam J. Dornan, editor of the Alameda, Sask., Dispatch and director of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, said the scheme had proved a failure.

"The boys all want to go back home. They just can't take it," he declared.

Placing responsibility for the failure on officials who organized the scheme

Times Scribe On Soviet

"Soviet university students are being asked both to fight and to study," stated Walter Duranty, Moscow correspondent of The New York Times from 1920 until very recently, and author of several books about the Soviets, who spoke on War in the East at a meeting of the Town Forum in Eaton Auditorium on Friday evening. John Collingwood Reade, news analyst, was the guest chairman of the meeting and introduced the speaker.

"The situation is pretty much the same as, I believe, it is here," Mr. Duranty continued, speaking of the universities. "The authorities try to let the students continue their edueation as long as possible, but where they feel they are most useful in the field they urge them to fight. They have considerable man-power but the minimum age for soldiers is being lowered all the time.

"The trend in their edueation is toward the technical side, as is natural in a country which has been so rapidly industrialized, but arts also have an important place. Study in the art of the theatre and other non-traditionals arts is very popular but there is great stress on professions like medicine and engineering."

Discussing the success of the Soviets on the Eastern Front Mr. Duranty set himself to answer the questions: Why have they fought so well? How have they been able to rival the industrialization of Germany? and Why have they apparently gone back on their theories to democratic principles?

In answering these questions the speaker stressed the fact that when the Soviet authorities saw that the theory of international revolution would not

Brass Band Now Organizing

The C.O.T.C. Brass Band is now in the process of being reorganized, under the musical direction of Mr. Leslie R. Bell, M.A., of the Ontario College of Education, one of the leading musical educationalists of the city.

Provision has also been made to have private individual instruction, given by a fully experienced instrumental teacher, to those who desire it, at no expenditure on their part of either money or time outside the regular drill periods.

The Band is attached to the 1st Battalion, C.O.T.C., and is commanded by Lieut. J. L. MacDowell. Anyone with previous band experience who is interested in joining, or transferring to, the C.O.T.C. Brass Band, is asked to meet Mr. MacDowell in the Band Room, S.P.S. Basement, at 1700 hours on Monday, Tuesday, or Thursday of this week.

Resolved . . .

Tonight the Newman Club, not one of the largest, but one of the most vital and integrated of the groups on this campus, throws open its doors to all students of this University for discussion of a topic that should be of importance to the more than 2,500 men and women enrolled in Arts courses.

Resolved that the arts course is a function of the university in wartime. The Varsity believes that the arts course is a function of the wartime university; but will only continue to believe so if the students enrolled in courses in the humanities prove sufficiently articulate in realizing the importance and significance of their present training, and put sufficient thought on the implication of the work in which they are now engaged.

In other words, it is only a function of a wartime university to provide an arts course as long as the students taking it derive the full benefit which such a course can give. If the artsman and artswoman steer an erratic course through three or four foggy years of college, without any particular objective other than the gathering of a general education and the enjoyment of the pleasant things of campus existence, they are being not very objectionable but merely rather futile in peacetime. In wartime there is no place for them.

With the military war far from won, and the intellectual war in little better plight, we who have been granted the privilege of a time in which we may think about the war in which we must fight, instead of being bustled too unceremoniously into its welter, should waste none of the precious moments. We must—each one of us, for it is not a matter in which we dare take anyone else's opinion—have a proper concept of the part which university graduates can best play in the world.

That concept should not limit itself to the immediate service which we can give in winning the war. Adequately directed and generously given, this service of university graduates may well be the deciding factor in the United Nations' war effort. But it alone is not enough. We must think through to a concept of how we can aid the world which will follow the peace—a world which will be bleeding from scores of all-but-fatal wounds, a world in sore need of intelligent leadership and unsparing sacrifice if it is ever to gain a measure of sanity and security once more.

We all ought to be giving much of our time to these problems. We have an opportunity to make a start on them tonight.

Opportunity Lost

Appearing recently in certain Canadian newspapers has been a statement of thanks to those concerned in the organization of the recent exodus of harvesters to Saskatchewan grainfields. It was made by Hon. R. J. M. Parker, acting provincial Minister of Agriculture and chairman of the Central Harvest Labour committee, speaking on behalf of the Saskatchewan government.

Mr. Parker thanked Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, federal Minister of Labour. He thanked the students and transient labourers who made the trip as emergency harvesters. He said in part, that he expressed thanks for "the excellent work done by the presidents of Canadian universities, McGill, Queen's, Saskatchewan and others in organizing parties of undergraduates to work as harvest help and the splendid service rendered by Prof. John Cullinton, who accompanied the students on their trip west."

Mr. Parker singled out for special mention, the heads of three of about a dozen colleges and universities that participated in the scheme.

He did well to laud the spirit of co-operation shown by McGill, Queen's and Saskatchewan. And he may have felt that the co-operation in evidence at Bishop's, Sir George Williams', Western, O.A.C. and Toronto was not worth his commendation. But he missed an opportunity for far-sighed diplomacy when he omitted in his list the names of another group of instutitions that also gave whole-hearted support to his province when it cried aloud for speedy assistance — those of Laval, Quebec, Montreal, and Loyola.

National Newspaper

We have a small fight to pick with our Toronto morning contemporary. It concerns the somewhat technical matter of story placement, and readers who aren't interested in ink-smeared shop-talk may go away now.

Saturday morning The Globe and Mail ran a story on an interview with Sam J. Dornan, editor of the Alameda Dispatch, published (oddly enough) in Alameda. This Saskatchewan metropolis has about 300 citizens. Mr. Dornan is obviously a man of some influence.

Mr. Dornan is quoted as saying that the present harvesting plan is a failure; "that the boys all want to go home. They just can't take it."

So much for the authoritative Voice of the West. Tucked neatly below Mr. Dornan's witty summation of the harvest situation was a CP story datelined out of Saskatoon. It quoted W. W. Dawson, chairman of the Central Harvest Labour Committee.

"I consider that as a vital phase of our war effort, the harvest excusions from Ontario and Quebes have been a success," Mr. Dawson said.

The headlines with which the journalistic genii of The Globe and Mail had surmounted the two stories both dealt with Mr. Dornan's remarks.

And yet we, in our collegiate ivory tower of ignorance, would have thought that Mr. Dawson probaly knew more about what he was talking about than did Mr. Dornan. Perhaps we were wrong. We are aware that disaster is generally more newsworthy than success. Perhaps from this angle The Globe and Mail was justified in its story placement here.

But we do not believe so. In a case such as this, when a scheme still being carried on has been proved neither an unqualified success nor an unqualified failure, we think The Globe and Mail would be well advised, as we believe The Varsity has been well advised, not to make up its mind—and more important yet, the minds of its readers—as to the value of the whole business, until all the facts are known.

Art, Music, Drama

Humour and Heartbreak

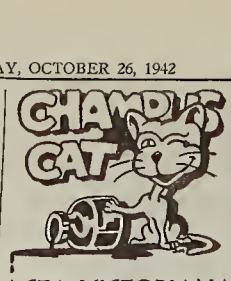
Hart House Concert

Three of Toronto's leading musicians joined together last fall to form the Canadian trio. The result is superb. Although three such outstanding soloists might not be expected to subordinate their strong personalities in the manner so necessary to true chamber music, Kathleen Parlow, Zara Nelsova, and Sir Ernest MacMillan have done so, and the result is one of the most unified ensembles to grace North America.

It goes without saying that the technical mastery of the three musicians is flawless. They are each world-renowned, and justly. But to feel the unity which pervades the whole, the perfect understanding of one another, the delicate nuances, is to know that infinite pains have been expended to make the trio what it is.

The Haydn trio, in the Tovey arrangement, is a beautiful job of making something beautiful out of what was merely interesting in an academic way. No trio can be expected to play Haydn's trios today, unless in arrangement, because the 'cello part particularly is insufferably dull. That the resulting music does not sound much like Haydn matters very little, it is good music, and the arrangement is certainly justified. The last movement was especially well done .

The Tschaikowsky trio is good, if the composer's sincerity and purpose is considered and the idiosyncracies of his style are taken into consideration. For what Tschaikowsky was driving at, the music is a perfect expression, in his romantic language. The music is a little difficult to appreciate now: it seems verbose, bombastic, and at times even inartistic. But we should be careful of judging anything from our own point of view, alone.



The performance left nothing to chance and gave Tschaikowsky every opportunity to sound at his best. The variations (incidentally the best movement) were extremely well played.

For purpose of record, the "great artist" whose memory is recorded is Nicholas Rubenstein.

ACTA VICTORIANA RAIDED

Offices Raided in Attempt to Track Down Saboteurs; Editor a Fugitive from Justice

HIGH TIME, TOO!

Special to The Varsity and the Toronto Police Journal

Somewhere in Queen's Park, Oct. 25 — (CUP) — The offices of Acta Victoriana, monthly Victoria College publication, were raided by a detachment of men from The Veterans' Guard and reinforced by a special group from the Toronto Police Morality Squad. The reason given by authorities was that the offices, situated in a dark corner under the tower of Burwash Hall, had for some time been a nerve centre for authors, journalists and other saboteurs.

The Veterans' Guard issued a partial report on the result of their raid. No one was present in the office at the time, but immense quantities of documents and even printed material were found. The printed matter had been carefully piled in a corner. Close investigation revealed that it had been printed at a place under surveillance of the R.C.M.P. The name of this nefarious printshop was not disclosed. In addition to this subversive material, a large quantity of long straws, allegedly stolen from the Hart House Tuck Shop, and one (slightly used) motorcycle, were seized.

Unnamed students in Burwash Hall reported that preceding the raid they had noticed several suspicious looking characters in field-grey uniforms, jackboots, scuttle-shaped steel helmets, and with swastika armbands. So cleverly were these men disguised in long black beards and spectacles that no one suspected them of being Nazi sympathizers. Informed of the presence of these figures while he was rummaging through a pile of parachutes in a corner, an unnamed sergeant of the Veterans' Guard mumbled—"Wonder who they coulda been?"

"Probably nobody that matters," answered his assistant, tossing aside a hand-grenade labelled 'Krupp—Essen—1941.' "We better leave those hunches alone and look for some real evidence in this ease."

The only evidence that was found to which any importance was attached was a telephone number, alleged to be Ki 2941, and another one, attached to a picture, which the seargent kept for himself.

A usually anonymous source named MacDonald, but who, for reasons of professional secrecy, will be referred to as John Doe, stated that the Acta will appear on schedule.

Exquisite Charm

Paintings by Chang Shu-Chi

"Elegant" and "exquisite" are two adjectives which are being used constantly at the Royal Onatrio Museum by the people who come to see the elegant and exquisite paintings by Professor Chang Shu-Chin, famous contemporary Chinese artist. Professor Chang is not only an artist of the first rank but also a teacher of art at the National Central University at Chungking, and he has been forced by the Japanese invasion to take refuge in the caves around the city and there carry on his work. He has recently become known on this continent as the painter of the large scroll The Hundred Doves, a gift to President Roosevelt from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The pictures in the exhibition at the Museum are nearly all high wall panels mounted on silk and painted in a variety of water-colour, but there are also a few smaller paintings. The traditional Chinese subjects: bamboo, Chrysanthemums, birds, fish and landseape scenes are the basis for most of these entrancing pictures, while others show roosters, pine trees, crab-apple blossoms and peacocks.

To Western eyes these pictures look like completely traditional Chinese paintings, but, in reality, they are far from traditional. Artist Chang has made revolutionary use of lovely whites, like magnolia flowers, and white peacocks, in his pictures, where the ancient rules frowned on white. However, he carefully follows the rules of much-practised and exquisite craftsmanship.

It is very hard to pick out a few outstanding pictures since they are all good, but a picture like Ecstasy, a kingfisher sitting contentedly on a branch of pink blossoms overhanging the water, is one which will make a pleasant memory for a long time to come.

This exhibition will be on view on the first floor of the Museum for the rest of the week, until Saturday, Oct. 31.

A Canadian Heritage

Art Gallery of Toronto

In a little over a year Canada has lost two outstanding contributors to her national heritage, Clarence Gagnon, and J. W. Beatty. The Art Gallery of Toronto is at present displaying a memorial exhibition of these two artists: Gagnon, whose roving spirit took him all over Europe, whose love of Canada has made him famed as the painter of snow scenes and habitant life; and Beatty, who penetrated deep into Canada's north woodland, whose earlier ambition of figure work and portraits, turned to an interest in the background, finally resulting in devoting his life to landscape painting as the greatest department of accomplishment in art.

Anything less than a deeply-felt appreciation of French Canada, of Canadian beauty, of nature in different moods, is hard to attribute to Clarence Gagnon. Capturing with subtle grace, the pregnancy of a season, the artist has painted every season — one that has stirred into life, Comme Mars venait, another that sweeps into the grandeur of luxuriant colour of Septembre arriva. These scenes are from the illustrations of "Maria Chapdelaine" by Hemon. A great many of the qualities of his work are projected into these illustrations.

Gagnon's paintings are straightforward. He utilized light to advantage. In Midnight Mass, an almost supernatural burnt orange plays about the tiny village; all tracks lead to the church, and figures are bent against a light swirling snow. But, there is no movement in the figures—this is characteristic of all his work, even when motion might be expected, as in Francois, his skin raw with a pitiless nor'wester. The artist seemed to choose naturally sharp colour contrasts, and liked to focus light.

Two observations might be put forward for the better understanding of

Track Meet Tomorrow Provides Keen Contest

Hec Phillips Fielding a Strong Team; Expect Spirited Competition with R. A. F. and O. A. C.

EVENTS LISTED BELOW

Tomorow's track meet, at first expected to be a fairly easy victory for Varsity, has, with the entry of the R.A.F. team from Kingston, developed into what will probably be a closely contested meet. We know little yet about the O.A.C. team but from past performances we can expect a fighting squad of athletes. The Air Force men are led by former Vic trackman, Fred Rowell, who was Intermediate Intercollegiate hurdle champion. Another ace hurdler on the team is Owen, whose best high hurdle time is 16 seconds. Owen ran second to Johnny Loaring, former University of Western Ontario hurdle star, in a Naval track meet in England.

Also high on their list of stars is Sandy, 440 champion of No. 1 Training Command, who is no slouch in the sprints either. Half mile threat is Smith, the former English Public School champion with the time of 2.02. His best time was 1.58 in the Cambridge trials when he placed sixth behind such name runners as Brow and Hudson. Chawick is a former wartime Oxford Blue in the pole vault. Best height was 11 feet. Thornhill won the Hampshire County colours some time age. He can do the 440 in 49 seconds and can broad jump 22 feet. Completing our present list of notaries is Truelove, who did 15.5 to take the No. 1 Training Command Low Hurdles title.

However, don't let these names cause despondence in the campus for the fate of the blue and white is in good hands. Hec Phillips has chosen a team from the winners of the two interfaculty meets.

Many are among the best in the province and should give the strong No. 31 E.F.T.S. team and perhaps not as strong O.A.C. team a great battle. Besides the below-mentioned representatives a number of strong reserves will be on hand namely, Bitove, Howson, Lye, Kirkwood, Jefferies and Wally Brown.

Events and probably entries are as follows:

100 yds—Burgess, Booth.
220 yds.—Burgess, McDonald.
¼ mile—McDonald, Wilcox, Wilford.
880 yds.—Fielding, Shakelton, Fordyce.
1 mile—Foulis, Feldhans, Parke-Taylor.

The tennis tournament is bogged down after all the muddy weather it has encountered lately. Added to the fact that the weather has held up the games, the players have also slowed up proceedings by failing to note the results immediately at the completion of their matches on the tournament draw sheet at St. Hilda's.

The second round should be completed by this time, but all the results have not been recorded. The girls are asked to remedy this situation immediately. Perhaps then the other players will know whom they are to play next. We also suggest that the players consult this draw sheet and make a point of telephoning their opponents and get their matches off as soon as possible. This tournament canot go on forever, but there is needed a great deal of co-operation on the part of the tournament heads and the players.

So far, Yvonne Baillie, II, listed as Vic's number six player, has been doing famously, and is the first to reach the quarter finals, by virtue of her win over Dorothy Sanders, St. Hilda's number two player, 6-3, 7-5. Connie O'-Connor, II U.C., defeated Rose Mary Cunningham, I St. Mike's, over the week-end.

Ruth Carelton, III P.H.E., Virginia Kitto, II P.H.E. and Virginia MacLeod, II Vic, are in the third round but have been unable to get farther because no opponents have come up from the second round.

The only game that is definitely scheduled for today is that of Muriel Finlayson, P.H.E. v. Betty McLean, St. Hilda's, in the third round. There should be more than this one, so check up on it, girls. Someone is slipping up somewhere.

We have something more definite on the basketball situation. The groupings for the teams are as follows:

GROUP I — U.C. Seniors, P.H.E. Freshies, St. Hilda's Juniors, Meds.
GROUP II—Second Year P.H.E., U.C. Juniors, Sr. St. Hilda's.
GROUP III—P.H.E. Seniors, Vic Seniors, Nurses.
GROUP IV—U. C. Freshies, Occupational Therapy, Vic Freshies, St. Mike's Seniors.
GROUP V—Vic Juniors, St. Mike's Juniors, Physios.

We will leave these arrangements for someone else to comment on. But we would like to differentiate between a junior and a freshie team. When a college is entering only two teams, the junior team is made up of first and second year players. A freshie team consists of first year women only. The Senior teams, when there are only two from the one college, can be made up of third and fourth year students, and second year pass.

One more word in closing, and that is for all players to get their eligibility slips signed early. The games are starting about Nov. 4.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

AT LAST

After twenty-one issues of sports filler we finally find the sports program of the University thrown into high gear. Heretofore this department has been hard pressed for topics to fill page three but from now on its augurs that this page will prove too small instead of too large. And we won't have to dream up articles on ping-pong to fill space. For, if you take a gander at the sports calendar today, you will notice that, not counting alternates, at least 150 different University of Toronto students will be exerting themselves on the numerous fields of athletic endeavour. This voluntary physical training along with the required P.T. periods and military drill makes those responsible for the University's 'Keep Fit' program rub their hands with glee. For, despite all the protesting about athletes gone west or protests of long work hours there is more intramural activity than ever before. The lacrosse, volleyball and swim leagues all get under way today and with the soccer and rugby games scheduled go to make up a full day of sports. In fact, we wonder how the authorities can plan for all these competitions to be run simultaneously. However, long experience in this regard, has taught the controllers in the Athletic Office many things. And one of these is that a great deal can be accomplished with co-operation and organization.

INTERCOLLEGIATE DAYS?

It seems that Queen's University has not completely given up the intercollegiate rugby ghost. It has a representative in a city league thereabouts and is rightly doing itself proud. They haven't been beaten and just last Saturday a 41-0 shellacking was administered to an army squad. But we're not without our own intercollegiate games. We saw as murderous a game as we have seen in quite some time last Saturday morning when a visiting R.A.F. team defeated our own rugger boys 8-0. If you have never seen a rugger match just imagine 30 soccer players playing rugby (with no pads) and you have a slight idea of the sport. It should be taken up by the commando command for training purposes. Then tomorrow we have one of the highlights of the season's sports. For two of the best track teams in the country will be visiting the University. The Air Force team Kingston is particularly strong—laden with veteran champions. But we have a hunch that Burgess and company will topple a few records in their own right, for the blue and white representatives have had a thorough training under coach Hec Philips' expert supervision and with two meets in the last two weeks under their belts the U. of T. need not worry too much. So if you want to see some high-class and keen competition drop around to the stadium between 1:30 and 4:30 tomorrow afternoon.

IS OUR FACE RED

Beet red turned our face Friday as we were eajoled from every quarter in regards to our announced Novice Harrier for Saturday morning. Yes, we repeat—said Harrier will be held next Saturday, the 30th — and the mistake was all ours. But we do hasten to add that thinking at four a.m. can become quite confusing. And anyway it showed us that some people read the S.O.S. — even if it is only on the days that mistakes are perpetrated.

What We Mean . . .

Readers of this column will probably remember remarks such as "Mr. A. distorted the phrasing of Mr. B.'s symphony" or "Mr. X. falsified the structure of Mr. Y.'s tone poem with his erratic tempo" and so on. One might well ask on what basis we criticize interpretation.

Interpretation comes down to organization. The composer has set down on paper a successioin of phrases with only a few indications as to their relative significance. The performer has to fit them together into paragraphs, and fit the paragraphs together too, until he has formed a consistent whole. Each phrase itself must be given a distinct contour by the relative accentuation of the notes in it, and by their exact placing within the phrase. The phrases and the work itself must have their distinct contours. Suppose that the first five phrases of a work fit together into a unit; they might, if the passage warranted it, be united by a gradual crescendo, each phrase being slightly louder than the previous one; and there might be a slight falling off at the end of the fifth phrase to mark the conclusion of a unit. But if the performer noticed some pretty ornament at the end of the third phrase, and emphasized it with a lessening of speed in order to make a sentimental effect, he would be distorting the phrasing and falsifying the structure of the work.

Leopold Stokowski, for example, persistently twists his phrases out of recognition, takes the most fantastic liberties with speed, and is getting worse each year. Toscanini's tempi are usually consistent. Sometimes one finds a conductor who, although he does not distort the phrasing, achieves an even worse effect by letting his phrases float around loose, in unrelated confusion. One listens to a succession of beautiful noises that the conductor did not seem to know belong together.

Interpretation in jazz is sufficiently broad to be called invention. I am of course speaking of improvized jazz. If one listens to Beiderbecke's cornet through the solos and ensembles of his recording of Goose Pimples, one must admire not only his purely melodic variations but the wit and humour of his accentuation, tempi, and phrasing as a whole. Haggin of the Nation finds these qualities also in Teddy Wilson's piano playing, although I must admit that with limited acquaintance I see them more in that of Stacy and Basie whom Haggin admires also I gather.

To return to interpretation proper, it is evident that although adherence to the composer's intentions is desirable, it is an uncertain quantity for basing criticism on. Consistency at any rate is essential, and the lack of it is a major cause of tasteless performances.

Sir Ernest MacMillan's performances are at any rate consistent, and from his occasional performances on the piano, one may see that the dullness of phrasing which the T.S.O. so often exhibits is not entirely his fault. At any rate we may expect to have a lesson in how to phrase when Szigeti gets here. And a final plea for some modern music from the T.S.O., perhaps some Block, Copland, Sibelius? And a little of the great music of the neglected Hector Berlioz might be in order.

Trinity Wins By One Point

In a closely contested soccer game on Friday, Trinity College emerged as victors over Wycliffe, 2-1. Wagland kicked off for Trinity and, after Wycliffe intercepted the ball, held the offensive for the greater part of the first half. The Anglicans forced their opponents to take the defensive during the last five minutes, and twice fired the ball over the uprights. The Wycliffe soccerites displayed some marvellous headwork when three of them relayed the ball to each other, using their noggins only.

Following a scoreless first half, Wagland and MacMillan skilfully deposited the sphere in the twine for Trinity, and Harris of Wycliffe did likewise, preventing a shut-out. Clarkson, Wagland and MacMillan sparked the winners with their surging attacks, while Harris was the star for the losers.

and on the students themselves. Mr. Dornan claimed the majority of the latter were unwilling to apply themselves to their task.

He added that while his criticism was directed at the situation in Saskatchewan as a whole, he could not apply it specially to any of the Toronto students, as there were none in his community.

V.C.U. President Reports

Satisfaction with the harvesting scheme as far as it concerned his particular group was expresed by Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union, in a letter received here Saturday.

Nixon pointed out that Victoria College students had been scattered in isolated groups throughout Saskatchewan since their arrival and he could speak for only the two or three men in his group with regard to their experiences in actual farm work.

"However," wrote Nixon, "I can say that our half of the excursion had a marvelous trip, that we were distributed efficiently by the authorities and that those of us on this farm are quite satisfied with our work and content that our excursion has not been in vain."

Easterners "Extremely Willing"

Regina, Oct. 25—(CUP)—W. E. McCutcheon, Employment and Claims Officer in charge of harvest labour in Regina, said the boys from the east were extremely willing and that the few problems met with were being "ironed out with a minimum of difficulty."

Saskatoon Has Few Complaints

Saskatoon, Oct 25—(CUP)—A check-up at the Saskatoon Labour Office, clearing house for northern Saskatchewan, revealed that complaints were being received from time to time but the total was less than one per cent of the number of men from the east in the fields.

Most of the complaints came from inexperienced workers, who asserted that farmers were not anxious to hire them, and that crews from neighbouring outfits were available.

R.A.F. Squad Whips Blues

Scoring two touchdowns and a convert in the dying minutes of the game, a strong Royal Air Force rugger squad from Clinton air base defeated the University of Toronto rugger team 8-0 on the back campus Saturday.

A large audience of Varsity men watched the game with enthusiasm which grew as they began to understand some of the rules, and they were soon yelling "heel it" and "scrum it" in unison with English students.

During the first half Clinton kept the ball in Varsity territory and only brilliant defence by U. of T. prevented a score. Varsity managed to surge back and were only three yards out as half time was called.

Play sec-sawed up and down the field in the second canto and casualties mounted. Players had their shins kicked, and their faces and legs blackened with dirt as the game, which is a cross between Canadian Rugby and soccer, continued.

The R.A.F. team got its end runs clicking in the last ten minutes and scored a touch for three points. Two minutes later another player went over the goal line and this touch was converted to give the R.A.F. a well-earned victory.

As he watched the players, with no protection of pads, getting kicked and tackled around the neck as well as legs and coming back for more, a Canadian student observed. "If the Germans saw this they'd surrender right away."

St. Michael's Players Hold Second Meeting

St. Michael's College Players held their second meeting of this term Wednesday in Brennan Hall. Father O'-Donnell, director of the club, conducted a novel experiment by recording each member's voice. In addition to this all were asked for snapshots for future plays without tedious tryouts. "Some voices which will never reach beyond the footlights can be used in this way for study," said Father O'Donnell. Following the recording, elections were held for the 1942-43 executive. The new officers include—President, William O'Connor, 4T3, St. Michael's College; Secretary, Mary Taylor, 4T3, St. Joseph's College; Treasurer, Geraldine Wilson, 4T3, Loretto College.

The Society will choose the play to be presented for the University Dramatic Night at its next meeting. The meeting concluded with the presentation of recordings by the director and prominent members of the club, and with a lively sing-song.

work, they turned to patriotism for their own country.

Commenting on the question of a second front and on Stalin's personal statement to Henry Cassidy, Associated Press correspondent in Moscow, Mr. Duranty said, "Stalin was not really carping. I feel that he was saying that he and his people were sorry that there was no second front, rather than that they felt that their allies had let them down. Public speakers in Britain had said 'soon' and the Russians took them literally, which gave the Germans an excellent chance to try to create ill will between the United Nations."

"Where are the songs of spring?" We wouldn't hazard a guess, but some of the characteristics of that season are evident on the campus, despite falling leaves. For instance LOVE is rampant again like anything.

And gallantry is not dead, either. A young lady of this campus recently became the recipient of a super-gorgeous gob of fraternity pin which came all the way from Penn State. One of her local admirers saw it and said, with noble solicitude, "Jeez, it's nice, but don't wear it swimming, ya might drown."

And real diamond rings keep popping up, too. A heretofore indistinguishable pair of twins from Vic can now be differentiated quite easily. They used both to shuffle about campus with their hands in their coat pockets. Now one of them shuffles one-banded as the left hand is kept in the sunlight for sparkling purposes.

But all does not go merry as a marriage bell, and in fact one young lady who recently received a particularly striking piece of decoration for the third finger of her left hand commented dubiously when queried as to the date of her wedding. "I couldn't say," she said. "I don't really seem to have room for another ring on that finger."

But then, perhaps she really has more trust. Women, we've heard, are such sensitive creatures. And yet it's difficult to generalize about them.

* * *

Take the girls who eat at Wymilwood, for instance. They were all chatting gaily the other day when an ill-natured worm stuck his head out of an apple and gave the assemblage a fishy eye. "Eeek (or its modern equivalent)," squawked the muncher of the apple, displaying her sensitivity, "a worm!"

"Is he all there?" queried one of sterner stuff.

"Seems to be."

"Well," rejoined the heartless one, "what are you kicking about then?"

For another variation on an old theme we turn to a letter from a colleague of ours who, as he says, took the Horace Greeley special out to Saskatchewan. He's very proud of his two years of Pass French, so when passing through a French Canadian community in Northern Ontario he decided to put it to some use. Accosting a six-year-old at the station, he said, "Bon joor, moan p'teet."

"Bonjour," replied the lad courteously.

"Coamong saw va, hein?"

'Bien, merci."

"Parlay voo fraunsay?"

"Way, M'sicur."

"Coamong voos appellay voo?"

"Elmer Ferguson."

* * *

A lot of things around this campus seem to puzzle a lot of people, and not least among this puzzling array is the W.S.T.D., or University Detachment of the Red Cross Corps. As the girls were marching with great spirit up the path by Trinity campus on Saturday morning, three little urchins formed up to review them as they went by, and to speculate.

"What are they?" inquired the first urchin of the other two.

"I think they're the Air Force Wing," hazarded the second.

"No, they're not," contradicted the third triumphantly, "THEY'RE THE ANTI-TANK CORPS!"

Where? When? At Honey Dew, of course, any day. Grand food properly prepared, temptingly served. Benevolent to budgets, too.

PART I

1. PUBLICATIONS—TRAINING MANUALS

General Staff letter No. 414 dated 26 May 42 is republished for the information of all concerned:

"Manual of Field Engineering, Vol I (All Arms) 1933.

I. I am directed to draw your attention to the change that has taken place in published information concerning instruction in field engineering for all arms of the service.

2. During the year 1940, a new series of pamphlets M.T.P. 30 appeared and additional parts of this pamphelt have been published from time to time. These pamphlets specifically cancelled certain part of M.E.F. Vol. I (All Arms), 1933 and by A.C.I. 674 dated 30th April, 1941, the entire M.F.E. Vol. I (All Arms) 1933 was cancelled.

3. In addition to the aforementioned M.T.P. 30 contain other publications which have been issued dealing with this subject. At present, information for instruction in field engineering for all arms of the service is found in the following publications:

(a) Infantry Training, 1937, Supplements2 & 3—Design and Layout of Field Defences.
(b) M.T.P. 23 Part VIII — River Crossings.
(c) M.T.P. 30 Part III—Obstacles.
(d) M.T.P. 30 Part IV—Booby Traps.
(e) M.T.P. 30 Part V — Protective Works.
(f) M.T.P. 46 Parts I. II and IV — Camouflage.

4. From time to time syllabuses appear containing references to M.F.E. Vol I (All Arms) and I am to ask that care be taken in this respect to see that instruction is based on the correct publications."

2. INCOME TAX—OFFICERS AND OTHER RANKS

Canadian Army Order No. 261 dated 26 Aug. 42 is republished for the information of all concerned:

"Income Tax—Officers and Other Ranks

I. In accordance with recent amendments to the Income War Tax Act, a new schedule of compulsory income tax deductions becomes effective 1st September, 1942.

2. This schedule provides that the tax will consist of two portions, viz.—

(a) A "Normal" Tax, varying from 7% to 9% upon total income according to the status of the taxpayer as set forth in the Act and taking the place of the tax previously known as "National Defence" Tax.

(b) A "Graduated" tax varying from 30% to 85% of incomes in excess of $660.

As a result of the introduction of "Normal" tax above referred to, the collection of "National Defence" tax as such, will cease as at 1st September, 1942.

3. The taxes are to be deducted at the source, i.e., through the pay accounts of those concerned by monthly instalments commencing in the month of September, 1942.

4. The amounts of deductions vary with the marital status and number of dependents of the taxpayer. Moreover, the compulsory savings portion of the tax is subject to adjustment on account of savings such as superannuation and pension fund deductions, life insurance premiums and payments of principal on mortgages, etc. Information in this respect is to be given by the taxpayer on Department of National Revenue form T.D. 1, and submitted to the Unit Paymaster or other accountant officer responsible for his pay before 1st September, 1942, if possible, and in no case later than 5th September, 1942. Any changes in this information are to be advised thereafter by means of an amended form T.D. I, as required by the regulations.

5. The form T.D. I need not be completed by unmarried persons without dependents who are not making payments within the year on account of superannuation or life insurance, or principal payments on mortgages or sale agreements. The Unit Paymaster or other accountant officer will recover tax deductions on the basis of the information supplied on form T.D. 1 and if no form is submitted, the taxpayer will be taxed as a single person without dependents and without savings. It is, therefore, imperative that the taxpayer submit this form before the dates mentioned in order to avoid overpayments, and in this connection, the regulations provide that overpayments will not be recoverable until some time after 31st August, 1943.

6. Detailed instructions in regard to income tax deductions have been issued by the Paymaster-General to paymasters and other accountant officers who are to arrange to promulgate in unit Daily Orders such information as is necessary to put these instructions into effect. Supplies of form T.D. I are to be obtained from the nearest post office or income tax office.

7. Taxpayers are to estimate the amount of their retirement or pension fund deductions in preparing form T.D. I. Instructions as to the treatment of insurance premiums against which dividends have been applied, and other information, are included in the back of the form.

the world's pulse

By W. J. Bramah
Secretary, League of Nations Society (Toronto Branch)

It is regrettable that circumstances have arisen which prompt our government to participate in the recent atrocity of shackling prisoners of war. As Mr. Churchill remarked, "If they want to play rough, we can play rough too," but the advisability of reciprocation in this particular manner is extremely doubtful.

Primarily, this action as far as the enemy is concerned, is directly in accord with the continuous policy of terrorism which has been so undeniably successful against the fallen countries, and the Nazis intend that our conclusions be that peace at any price is more welcome than continued atrocities as adopted by the enemy.

Secondly, our action at this time is greatly in accord with the Nazi desire that the German people should be most conscious of a horrible fate if they happen to fall into allied hands or are ultimately defeated in the present conflict.

The relinquishing of our sensibilities and participation in such reprisals consequently does not assist the allied cause in any tangible way. In fact, similar incidents may prolong the war and make future peace an extremely difficult matter.

On Columbus Day Mr. Roosevelt referred to "new offensives against Germany and Japan" which gives official backing to Willkie's statement in China on Oct 7, that "the time has come for an all-out armed offensive everywhere by all the United Nations."

Mr. Willkie's Chungking statement was issued with unusual directness when he declared that within the countries that he visited, the people "doubt in varying degrees the readiness of the leading democracies of the world to stand up and be counted upon for the freedom of others after the war is over. This doubt kills their participation on our side."

His comments are significant because they arose from Chungking itself, and he expressed facts that the Chinese are anxious to hear from American Administrators. Consequently the Chungking press regarded him as a most welcome spokesman. Aside from this, however, Mr. Willkie's comments upon the Chinese war effort and his criticism of hoarding and profiteering is most encouraging to those who look forward to an era of social justice. Mr. Willkie's political offensive in the Pacific can only be commended.

The United States received a most unexpected diplomatic defeat in the decision of President Juan Rios to cancel his visit to the United States this month. Apparently he takes exception to Mr. Sumner Welles' speech on Oct 8, wherein the Under Secretary of State declared "that certain South American countries" were guilty of co-operation with the Axis in propaganda and sabotage. Pan-American unity must not be disrupted by such incidents, since Mr. Welles was only rebuking Chile in the light of the fallacious belief that the United States is completely satisfied with Chilean policy. Again and again Axis propaganda is reminding Chile that South America is being made a vassal state to the United States, and that if diplomatic ties are severed Chile's long coast line will be attacked. It is difficult to believe that South America can be impressed by such typically Nazi threats.

Gagnon's contributions. The outstanding characteristics of his paintings are, his use of luxuriant colour, the great variety of his subjects, tones, and moods, and the atmospheric quality permeating all his landscapes. The second observation is contained in a quotation from the artist: "My purpose in illustrating Maria Chapdelaine was to catch the spirit of Canada, and of French Canadian life, which the book immortalizes."

Throughout all the periods in the paintings of J. W. Beatty, can be felt his skill in expressing expanse, in suggesting to the mind's eye what scenery is beyond the border of the picture, and particularly in the larger canvasses, the feeling of the infinity of grandeur. The Evening Cloud on the Northland, dwarfs everything at dusk, dramatizing the unconventional sunset of northern Ontario. Paint rolls from side to side over the spine of a hill to give the bigness to First Snow in the Woods.

In none of his works has Beatty attempted to be deliberately sensational. There is a certain dignity to all his landscapes. Perhaps most famous of his canvasses is Brooks Falls, Magnetawon. The very water pouring over the ledges has a texture as it boils into pools, again it is a pictorial drama of nature.

St. Mike's Gains Decision By Large Majority In Newman Club Debate

Resolved that the Arts Course Has a Function in the University in Wartime," Topic Debated

VOTE UPHELD 98-2

The motion, "Resolved that the arts course has a function in the university in wartime," was upheld by a vote of 98 to two at Newman Club last night when members of the St. Michael's College Debating Senate presented the affirmative and members of the Newman Club Debating Society upheld the negative.

Alex Campbell, III Honour, leader of the affirmative, opened the debate with a discussion of the purpose, end and function of the arts course. Its end, he said, is the cultivation of the intellectual virtues which are habits resulting from the training of one's intellectual powers.

"We must discover and expose the philosophical errors of our enemies," he said. "It is by carefully fostering those points wherein we oppose Hitler that we will win the war. If we adopt his methods he conquers us."

Campbell said that the arts course is the central and most important course the universities have ever offered. Its function is to promote the humanity of the individual. "And we are fighting a war against the destruction of humanity," he said.

Leslie Wilson, I Meds, graduate of St. Patrick's College in Ottawa, leader of the opposition, based his argument on the statement, "You can't fight guns with brains, or steel and tanks with reason."

Wilson dwelt on the strength of the German and Japanese war machines, then declared it "foolish to sit and assimilate knowledge which will have no direct bearing on the situation."

George Wickes, II Arts, of the St. Michael's Debating Senate, declared that leaders are as necessary as technicians and that it is the arts course which will produce them. He said a large percentage of officers now in the army are graduates of Arts courses.

Referring to the practice of labelling Arts students slackers, Wickes said any student wishing to escape the draft could enter School or Meds where he would be exempt.

Wickes cited the example of the Chinese universities in remaining open in the face of invasion. He also stressed the fact that the arts students would form an almost negligible contribution to Canada's manpower.

Eugene Duchesne, I Osgoode, graduate of Assumption College in Windsor, gave the second and last speech for the opposition. He held that the arts course cannot directly aid the war effort.

Duchesne declared that the proposed curtailing of the Arts courses for a few years was not tantamount to curtailing it forever. Referring to the argument for arts as an officers' training ground he argued that the science of military strategy is not learned in the arts course and that the best training for leadership is experience.

After the debaters had completed their speeches the question was thrown open for discussion.

Jim Carson, U.C. 4T1, drew a swift retort when he stated the Japanese fighting men might not have the artsman's philosophy but they did have "guts." Bill O'Brien, III Pass, who returned yesterday morning from harvesting wheat in Saskatchewan, took exception to the remark and said, "If the Artsmen working out west haven't got guts, I've never seen them."

The debate was introduced by Arthur Maloney, III Osgoode, president of the Newman Club Debating Society. Chairman was Frank Keenan, II Osgoode.

A similar subject was debated by the senior members of the Loretto College Debating Society.

Louise Hartsmith and Betsy Gowan, upholding the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved that the Arts Course should be Abolished for the Duration," lost to the opposition, Aileen McNally and Marion Sirdevan.

Eisendrath Discusses Anti-Semetic Problem

"The anti-semitic problem is not alone a Jewish problem but should be of concern to all countries engaged in the defence of democracy today," said Rabbi M. N. Eisendrath in his address to the Meds Arts and Letters Club at their meeting in Wymilwood yesterday evening.

"Anti-semitism is a smoke screen used by Hitler to make the Jewish Race front page news and cover up his nefarious works," continued Rabbi Eisendrath. "It is basically a Theological Problem—not what it has become today—a politieal weapon. Anti-semitism as exploited by Nazi Propaganda is being used as in instrument to divide our united war effort and divert us from the real challenge."

Thinking that open discussion would be more practical as a solution of the problem the Rabbi asked members to give their opinions on the subject—assuring them that their frank statements would in no way indicate Anti-semitic leanings.

The meeting then took the form of an open forum and several points were

ALERT TO BE HELD TO-MORROW

200 Wardens to Carry Out Full War-Time Regulations; Students Urged to Follow Instructions Carefully

ORDER, QUIET ADVOCATED

Screaming sirens will announce the University's first taste of daylight war conditions at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning when a 15-minute city-wide practice alert will be held, it was announced yesterday afternoon. Full wartime regulations will be in force as the students practice for the first time how they should take cover during an actual raid.

The purpose of this alert, as designated in the official instructions is "To edueate the general public and the University to seek immediate shelter when an air-raid warning is sounded, to have all vehicular traffic proceed to the curb and stop, to test the efficacy of existing warning facilities, the adequacy of the space set apart for refugees and suitability of the arrangements for the protection of personnel."

When the warning is sounded, students are to proceed quietly and quickly to the nearest "refuge room." They will be informed of the location of these rooms, and possibly led there by whoever is lecturing them at that particular time.

Once there, the students are urged to keep as quiet as they can to facilitate the proceedings.

"There is the danger that the students will make so much noise that they will be unable to hear any instruction that might be given to them," an official of the local Air Raid Precautions, warned. "There is no point in students wasting this quarter of an hour. The best way to pass the time is to bring along a book and study, and this will aid in eliminating possible confusion."

All the air raid wardens will be wearing armbands for identification. These bands are white with the blue letters CDC on them, standing for The Civilian Defence Committee. Some of the wardens will be wearing metal helmets, but due to the sheltered location of many of the posts, not all are so equipped.

The eampus A.R.P. organization consists of more than 200 wardens—at least one in a building, 13 post wardens, and one sector warden.

"If the students will follow instructions and co-operate with the wardens, confusion will be reduced," the official added.

It is suggested by A.R.P. officials that the students familiarize themselves with the Air Raid Warning Instructions, copies of which are posted in all buildings. However, special attention should be paid to the supplementary orders that are posted beside them, for several of the general instructions need modification in their application to the University.

For example, all electrical and gas lines are supposed to be turned off. However, were the main switch to be cut in the University, it might easily ruin some experiment then going on that might be vital to the war effort.

PRESIDENT ASKS STUDENTS TO CO-OPERATE IN PRACTICE RAID

In response to the request of the Civil Defence Committee, the University of Toronto will participate in the Practice Air Raid Alert on Wednesday, Oct. 28, from 11:00 to 11:15 a.m.

On hearing the warning sounded by the sirens, staff and students are asked to follow the instructions of the Building Air Raid Wardens and proceed to the refuge areas in each building in a quiet and orderly manner, and remain there until the All Clear signal is heard.

H. J. Cody

President.

Doctors Of Philosophy Harvest U.S. Crops

Canadian students are not the only ones who have been called upon to aid in manpower crises this fall. According to the latest University News Letter from the Office of War Information in Washington, students have not only answered the call for harvest help, but have also aided in handling vital freight.

Answering an appeal from Governor John Moses, 800 students and faculty members from North Dakota State University swarmed into the beet, potato and wheat fields of the Red River Valley and saved vitally-needed crops which had been threatened by a shortage of labour.

The University closed down for two weeks while members of the football squad, doctors of philosophy and 260 gay co-eds worked from dawn to dusk to harvest food for the armed forces of the United Nations.

Several hundred sons of Utah State Agricultural College, reinforced by students from local high schools, made two excursions on successive week-ends to Ogden and unloaded more than 600 carloads of incoming and outgoing military supplies bogged down by a labour shortage at the Army Quartermaster Depot.

The Office of Defense Transportation provided a special train which carried 350 volunteers to the scene one weekend and 480 the following week-end.

Students of the southern branch of the University of Idaho and the Pocatello high schools left their classrooms to relieve a labour shortage in the beet and potato fields under a pledge to catch up on their school work when the harvest is in.

Returning Varsity Harvesters Tell Of Varied Experiences Endured In Wheatfields

McCardle of St. Mike's Tells of 12-14 Hours of Back-breaking Work in Piercing Cold and Blazing Sun

WEATHER STOPS WORK

By Edgar Simon

The story of back-breaking, 12 to 14-hour working days in the piercing cold of early morning and the blazing heat of noon was told by Jim McCardle, leader of the St. Michael's College delegation of harvesters, who returned from Saskatchewan yesterday.

Working steadily for a week, except when interrupted by bad weather, McCardle and five companions returned east when bad weather struck the crops in their district in Northern Saskatchewan and made harvesting operations impossible.

Saskatoon was glutted with student harvesters who were driven from their jobs by the weather and were awaiting either their return transportation or another job, McCardle said. Many of them were running short of money and some had obtained jobs in the city.

Government Not To Blame

Provincial authorities were trying to keep the men employed, but farmers who had hired three or four men were unable to find enough odd jobs to keep them all busy during the bad weather. "But they kept on eating," McCardle grinned.

The Saskatchewan government is sending small groups of volunteers home daily, but officially the original agreement to keep the men in the west until at least Oct. 30 has not been lifted. McCardle pointed out that the authorities were unwilling to drain the west of labour as long os there was any chance of continuing to bring in the harvest.

"I didn't feel that the government was to blame," said McCardle. "They were very decent to us and I'm sure there'll be a lot who come back well satisfied;"

Salary Difficulties

He told(however, of some cases in which salary difficulties were encountered by the easterners. Many farmers knew nothing of the $4-a-day minimum guaranteed by Labour Minister Mitchell, although some had made verbal agreements with the Saskatchewan Government.

"People out west seem to think the harvest excursions will be an annual affair, at least for the duration," said McCardle. "There has been some talk of the government putting pressure on recalcitrant farmers by threatening to refuse them help in future years."

The St. Michael's leader was impressed by the incongruity of the small size of farmhouses on some of the vast acreages of wheat fields. Many of them

Archduke Hapsburg Drives Western Combine

Calgary, Oct. 25 — (CUP) — Archduke Rudolph of Austria, 23-year-old brother of Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, is apparently doing satisfactory work today as a driver of a combine on a farm in the Trochu, Alta., district.

The Archduke, who accompanied fellow-students of Laval University westward, suffered a sore back and blistered hands while pitching sheaves on an Alberta farm, but refused to quit when he failed in his first job.

"Trip Not Great Success but Good Adventure" Says Returning Student - Harvester Claude Morrison

STUDENTS TO RETURN SOON

By Jack Peppiatt

Despite the troubles and inconveniences they encountered in Saskatchewan, St. Michael's students who returned from the West yesterday agreed that the experience gained made the trip worthwhile.

"Our trip was not a great success but good adventure," Claude Morrison, Third Year St. Mike's student, told The Varsity. "However, I think the other students will be glad to get back. They went out there expecting to make good money and some hardly made 10 dollars." Claude said that he expected other student farmers would return today.

Poor sleeping accommodations irked Bob Fitzpatrick, Second Year St. Michael's college.

"We worked from dawn until dusk and then slept in a barn or on the floor of a house," Bob declared.

"Yet I liked it all, even though some of us had a hard time between jobs. Experienced fellows would come along and take our places, and then we had to wait for another job. We had four meals a day and the food was very good."

"When the weather turned, government officials advised up to go back, since there would be no more work until at least a week," Vincent McNamara, Second Year student, said. "A Saskatchewan government official told me that when we went out 15 per cent of the crop had been harvester and when we left 45 per cent had been taken in."

Harvest Delayed By Bad Weather

Regina, Oct. 26—(CUP)—Unfavorable weather conditions here have indefinitely postponed harvesting in southwestern Saskatchewan, reported Tom Nixon, president of the Victoria College Union yesterday.

The majority of the students who were working in this area, have been redistributed to other sections. The Saskatchewan authorities have cooperated fully with the Toronto students regarding reallocation.

Permission has been granted to those wishing to return bome now, but only 12 Toronto students along with some others from other Universities have left the wheatfields for the East.

"Students are generally satisfied with the treatment," states Nixon. "There have been serious complaints in isolated cases only."

"Reports of complaints have been badly exaggerated," states Captain W. S. Ellis of Saskatoon. The whole scheme should have been begun two weeks earlier, but now the completion of the harvest depends entirely on fair weather.

Gets Raise

Davidson, Sask., Oct. 26—(CUP)—Bob Sheridan, 2nd year St. Mike's, says that he worked on one farm at $4 a day for four days, and now being considered experienced help, is being employed on another at $5. "The work is tough, but it's putting us in fine shape," he continues.

He expects to return to Saskatoon on Oct. 31 as the Knights of Columbus

A Start Has Been Made

Last night the Newman Club Debating Society, by an overwhelming majority, voted that the arts course was a function of the university in wartime.

It is naturally gratifying to The Varsity to watch one group at least from among the campus coteries decide in favour of a platform that has become one of the main editorial planks since this hectic term opened five weeks ago. But we do not flatter ourselves that we had much influence in deciding last night's deliberations. For the group debating the point represented a cross-section of the university chiefly drawn from the arts courses. And one could feel intuitively upon entering the room where members of the Newman Club and its guests were discussing the issue that the decision from the floor would swing in only one direction.

One perhaps might have felt, after listening to the debate, that the decision was reached on emotional as much as logical grounds. Although those who genuinely opposed the value of the arts course—and we are prone to believe that even the speakers for the negative were not whole-heartedly among them—were in a slender minority, all the men and women who spoke on behalf of education in the humanities might have failed to convince the casual listeners of the rightness of their ease. It was a decision reached by a number of interested parties.

Nevertheless, we cannot overlook the importance of the vote last night. Artsmen and women apparently do believe in their own function in university as something of value even in time of mounting national crisis. And we cannot countenance the thought that more than a negligible handful of those artsmen and women nourish that belief because they are prompted to it by unpatriotic motives. Their belief is genuine enough.

But it is still not adequately formulated. Although some of the speeches from the floor last night, and certainly those from the positive side of the house, revealed careful and accurate thought on the status of arts students in the community at large, there were more which displayed in the speaker a fogginess of concept as to what the debate was all about. And at no time was a full explanation of the concept attempted.

But, we reiterate, last night's discussion of the position of the arts student in wartime was of value—even thought it only opened what may become a series of similar discussions of the problem. A start has been made. Students have been confronted with e definite problem which concerns them closely—and they are starting to think.

It was a small group of those most intimately concerned — the students of the arts colleges — which took the major part in last night's debate. But the whole problem of the place university graduates should play in the world of war and post-war is one which concerns the men and women of every faculty and college on this campus, and on every Canadian campus and on every campus in the world.

It would be interesting to hear a debate on the same topic conducted by a group of embryo engineers or doctors or dentists or foresters; to hear other questions of similar nature discussed by all manner of campus groups. We have made a start last night; let's not stop now.

Alert!

Tomorrow at 11 a.m. the University will join in a city-wide practice air-raid alert to test A.R.P. facilities and to educate civilians as to how it should act in case of the necessity of a genuine alarm.

Students' attention is directed to official instructions carried elsewhere in this issue, particularly those dealing with student co-operation in the proceedings. They are being asked to move "quickly" and "quietly" to their refuge rooms, and urged to keep as quite as possible while there.

Although the demonstration may strike some as a childish shouting of "Wolf!" and others as a pointless interruption in the daily round of activity, such opinions count for very little. Half-an-hour's co-operation is a small concession to make to the Civilian Defence Committee, whose work may well prove invaluable in a future the security of which is in no way guaranteed.

We have to carry out the business of practicing scurrying to cover; and it can best be carried out in a quiet and orderly manner.

No Denial

It now appears that the speech by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, which The Varsity printed last week, was actually never delivered to the Queen's University General Alumni Association.

The story printed by The Varsity came from a text which was released to the press from Ottawa in advance of the speech. In the week following release and publication of this text, Selective Service officials have not repudiated it.

It may therefore be taken that The Varsity's story stands as an authentic indication of Ottawa's student policy. Mr. Wrights prediction that physically fit young men might only be allowed to enter arts courses fitting them to be technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry was backed by a Canadian Press story two days later which reported "from official sources" that plans to curtail admission to non-technical arts courses were being made. The story also said announcement of new regulations was expected within a few weeks or at least before the Christmas holiday period.

Faculty and college heads at this University were immediately unanimous in their condemnation of any measures which would either curtail the non-technical or expand the technical courses. They were recently supported by the remarks of Dr. S. E. Smith, President of the University of Manitoba and chairman of the national conference of universities.

Since last week, no further word has come out of Ottawa, and university heads have been called to no conference with government officials in regard to pending changes; but there has been no denial that such changes are in the making.

We Are Ashamed . . .
Of Dirty Audiences

Toronto audiences, troupers claim, are the most immature they meet in Canada. Playgoers at the Royal Alec have seen plenty of evidence of the attitude which revels in filth of any kind.

We are just finished with one of the most striking plays to have come to Toronto in recent ycars, Tobacco Road. Those who saw it will bear witness that the actors played against a steady barrage of gasps and titters from the audience as the jucier lines took effect.

That these lines were entirely in context with the scene and the characters affected the audience not at all. Toronto was shocked, and when Toronto is shocked it reacts in exactly the same way as a smoking car does to a thoroughly more interesting dirty joke.

Probably it is not the university students who offend in this respect: they are too intelligent. The real offenders will, I hope, not be reached by the columns of this paper.

Toronto will eventually grow up. Cities usually do. When they get the idea that the absence of the Hays office immediately results in material suitable for the casino; when they realize that what shocks their sensibilities may have a deliberate artistic purpose—then Toronto will be mature, and will deserve to hear the good plays which now so often pass it by.

Leadership Course Discontinued Due to War

Antigonish, Oct. 26 — (CUP) — The annual one-month course for Leadership previously held each year at St. Francis Xavier University has been discontinued. Formerly 75 to 100 students enrolled for the short course from all over the Maritimes, Upper Canada and the U.S.A.

To overcome the difficulties involved by war, a new plan has been adopted. Short courses lasting only a few days or a week are held under the guidance of the University professors all over the Maritimes, in small and large communities alike. Each stresses the problems of that particular community and deals with them in greater detail. It has also proved to be a more efficient way of mobilizing people for aetion—making them "masters of their own destiny."

Although the solutions offered will vary according to the community, all will be based on co-operative principles.

The Varsity Reviews

Acta Victoriana

October Issue, 1942

A promising issue of Acta Victoriana reaches its subscribers today. Strong in fiction, non-fiction and light verse, the issue only lacks a little more serious poetry to round it off.

As usual, the outstanding piece of work in the magazine is a story by Rigmore Christopherson, whose consistently fine work has seen Acta through a number of lean issues in the last few years. Unjustifiably hidden behind a music column and a write-up of freshman week-end, The Candle proves well worth the search.

Reading the opening sentence, "One morning Elmer MacNutt hanged himself in the cellar by the light of a single candle," one would expect from anyone other than Miss Christopherson a rather mawkish piece of college-student prose. But she is happily able to handle human values that few student authors would dare to touch, and the result is an extraordinary gripping short story.

A long and exhaustive account of last summer's International Student Assembly by Eileen Acton, the first adequate story of the conference to hit print in these parts, will probably go unappreciated by the majority of Acta's readers.

They will be happier about Paul Fox's breezy review of events at Camp Niagara last summer, and will probably enjoy Rex Wilson's entertaining sketch of Chancellor W. T. Brown, unconscious of the fact that it is really quite scholarly as well as amusing.

Two welcome newcomers to Acta's pages are Dorothy Sigmund and Gordon Rattray, who contribute bright and imaginative light verse and a punchy short story respectively.

Less appreciated by this reviewer were the somewhat scrappy story placement which marred the modern format of the magazine, and above all, the opening editorial in which the editor deals in detail with the time-worn topic of the troubles he's seen. He has nothing to apologize for.

Trinity Defeated 4-0 By U.C. Rugby Squad

Play at First Slow but Warms Up to a Spectacular Victory in Last Quarter; Nesbitt Right in There

CLOSE RACE PREDICTED

By Shael Sone

Amidst an atmosphere of real rugby weather, the U.C. rugby team defeated Trinity 4-0 yesterday, scoring a placement and single in the last quarter.

Play was very slow for the first half, and although Trinity held an advantage, they only managed to carry the ball as far as U.C. 25 yard line.

The second quarter was featured by Nesbitt's tackle after Trinity accepted a kick by Stu Scott.

Scott started the second half by booting the ball as far as the Trinity goal line and the red and black carried the spiral out about 20 yards. Beatty of Trinity did some terrific plunging but his team failed to gain very much. An Anglican loss of 15 yards for roughing gave U.C. an excellent opportunity to score. On an attempted placement by Scott, the ball hit the goalpost and went behind the line. The point was disallowed however, as the red and white did not allow their rivals the required five yards. Johnny Aird of Trinity intercepted a pass by Stu Scott and Mills threw a lovely 30 yard forward to Brooks. Trinity was threatening but its hopes were jeopardized when Beatty got away a bad kick. The third quarter saw some real tackling by Dixon, Amell and Loffmark of U.C. and Davies of Trinity with the score still in the goose-egg stage.

In the last quarter, Goodman of U.C. made a brilliant run to knock down an attempted forward by Trinity. The Anglicans dropped a long kick by Scott and were downed on the 10 yard line. Scott took Trinity's punt and ran 30 yards to their 15 yard line. U.C. were really warmed up and after carrying the ball to the centre of the field on the first two downs, Scott booted a lovely placement, giving U.C. a 3-0 lead. Don Smith and Bucky Zierler held the ensuing Trinity onslaught with stone-wall might. Soon after Amell hoisted a short pass to Jimmy Bitove which put them in position for another placement. The attempt was blocked however and the red and black went aerial. This was to no avail as the red and white worked back up the field with the aid of a sturdy backfield and heavy line. Shortly before the final whistle Stu Scott hoisted a beaut over the line and Nesbitt and Warren nailed the Trinity safety to collect the final point.

The Trinity squad seemed to have none too much experience but with the leadership of Beatty, Mills and Livingstone should make it a close race in the second division.

The Royal College men were greatly handicapped by mistiming and fumbles but when coach Folwell rectifies this department this looks like the team to beat in the group. A strong line of Smith, Zierler, Goodman, Dixon, Wade and Loffmark coupled with a fast backfield with Stu Scott booting the pigskin augurs for a good season.

Trinity — Brooks, Crawford, Aird, mills, Beatty, Sheppard, Smith, Livingstone, Mathews, Mitchell, Davies, Spenee, Hickman, Lamb, Sommerville, Campbel, Gibson, Laughton, Dunbar and Raspin.

University College—Nesbitt, Warren, Cutler, Scott, D. Smith, Amell, Zeiler, Goodman, Dixon, Loffmark, Bitove, Wade, Kamain, Garrett, Bronstein, Clayton, Shakleton, McNulty and Poscoloff.

School Takes Lacrosse Opener

Senior School opened the 1942 lacrosse season defending their Dr. W. A. Dafoe Cup yesterday. Pharmacy was the victim of this one-sided conflict and went down to the tune of 24-3.

Frankie Lewane and Frankie Kellam had a field day as they led the School attack with seven and nine counters apiece. The whole Engineer team looked hot as they gave the Druggists a once-over. Leebowitz was the sole Pharmacist to make the score sheet, netting three.

Relay Meet Scheduled For Varsity Arena

Perhaps the concluding track events of this season outside of the harrier meets will be run off tomorow. This is the Relay Meet where the teams from the numerous colleges endeavour to capture themselves the odd point for the Reed Trophy. Numerous teams are entered and should put on a good show for any spectators who are enthused after today's exhibition in the Bloor Bowl.

Events for the Interfaculty Relay Meet are: 110 yards, 220 wards, 440 yards, 880 yards, medley of 440-220-220-880.

VOLLEYBALL SEASON COMMENCED YESTERDAY

A gruelling three-game match between Trinity and St. Mike's A teams featured the opening day of the quest for the Victoria Staff Cup, emblematic of University volleyball supremacy.

The Red and Black had great difficulty in overcoming the Double Blue's plays and it was only after long rallies and hard work featured by the play of Tseng and Bell-Irving that victory was theirs. St. Mike's floored Mahoney, Culhane, Karl, Sheehan, Foley, Argo, Finnan. The Anglican team was composed of Tseng, Peterkin, Bell-Irving, Wagland, Bagnall, Rawlinson.

In a noon game Senior School had little trouble with the harvest-weakened U.C. Seniors. 15-4 and 15-2 were the lop-sided seores. U.C.'s team was composed of Wood, Brannen, Chard, Conant, Hoyle and Stokalo. Sr. School played Dickie, Giovanetti, Crosby, Isbister, Parcehlo, Christlaw, Pringle and Henry.

St. Mike's B team likewise had no trouble with Pharmacy A despite their handicap in numbers. The Druggists had plenty of reserves but no co-ordination while the vietors although only five strong were a real team. The St. Mike's quintet was Blum, Ullrich, MacAvoy, Addario and Crane. Pharmacy A played Reif, Richards, Slifton, Blaekman, DeHetre, Cappe, Capitofsky, Heap and Hutton.

Vic thirds had growing opposition with the St. Mike's C squad. Winning 15-1 in the firts eneounter, Vic had some trouble in the second but won with a 15-10 score. Sullivan, Thompson, Chirico, Daly, O'Brien and Natoli wore the Double Blue. Vic fielded Mack, Taylor, Dedrick, Richards, Cooks, Waugh, Wickware, Brown, Dunlop and Mounfield.

A peculiar set was that of Dents A and Junior School. The Engineers appeared to have a walk-away in the first game, taking it 15-3. The second game saw a terrific nip and tuck battle with the dentists finally winning 16-14. Then Junior School folded and only eounted two points in the whole last game. Dents A was composed of Schneider, Spivack, Shapiro, Sussiner, Mitchell, Satzwan, Smyth, Merritt and Clee. The Engineers used Goldstein, Boa, Brent, Mason, Gibson, Wallace and Hall.

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF GLASS SLIPPER

The Cinderella group in interfaculty rugby got off to a profitable enough start yesterday with U.C.'s 4-0 victory over Trinity. Play, we are told, was rather slow, but recalling the pace of the Senior School-Vic game last Thursday, we might write some of that off to the earliness of the season, the chillness of the weather, or any other astral cause the team managers care to name.

Trinity's showing against a U.C. squad that loudly bewails the lack of no less than six regulars who are pitching sheaves rather than passes, leaves little hope that last year's finalists will make a very large ripple even in their relatively small pond. Last year's classy team has suffered severely from graduation and enlistment, though their harvest toll has been relatively light, but they may improve as they gain in experience.

Stu Scott's kicking seems to be playing a large part in the Royal Collegians' attack, and the line showed up well against the Anglicans.

In fact, judging by Vic's showing against Senior School, it's still a bit early to cross the arts faculties off your list of Mulock Cup contenders. There were men in the locker rooms last week who were telling all interested that the Senior Schoolmen were decidedly lucky to grab that one-point decision, and it was only a fluky kick with a rain-soaked ball that kept the somewhat muddied Scarlet and Gold from trying up that moderately memorable contest. And we'll be watching the papers with interest to see how the unheralded St. Mike's go against the Molarmen tomorrow.

UNDER OUR NOSES

But there's some pretty fair football being played even closer to home than the Bloor Bowl. We happened out on the back campus in the rain the other day and took in a set-to between the U.T.S. Firsts and Pickering College. A grudge match, apparently as the boys from Newmarket had recently handed the Huron Streeters their first setback of an extremely successful season.

The game was a treat. U.T.S., who have had the benefit of Lew Hayman's coaching in recent years, threw around a wet ball with the utmost abandon, pulled off some of the trickiest plays in Hayman's repertoire, and sent their visitors back home on the decidedly short end of a smashing 13-0 score.

Unlike many high school teams, the boys were showing plenty of drive along the line, and some of the plunging of both teams would have done credit to senior company. And above all, it was good to see an organized cheering section or two in action.

The boys generally play fairly early of an afternoon, in plenty of time to skip your 2:30 lecture, even your 1:30.

CINDERS IN YOUR EYE

Today Hec Phillips unveils the fastest men he can put into spiked shoes for the intercollegiate track meet with O.A.C. and the R.A.F. The Airmen from Kingston have a fearsome reputation, and press agents assure us that the Aggies are practically mercurial, while Phillips is throwing the cream of the interfaculty track meets against the visitors.

So intercollegiate sport celebrates another of its frequent Indian summers at Varsity Stadium today, and anyone without a previous engagement on the parade ground is invited to join in the celebration.

If the weather does not soon smile with favour on the tennis courts, our co-eds will be playing in winter clothes, and as for the presence of spectators—well, we have our doubts. However, the weather is not entirely to blame, for the long drawn-out tournament. It is now in its second week and as yet only a few have played in the third round. This is due to the fact that very few of the winners in the second round have indicated their victories on the tournament sheet. So will all the gals who have negelected to do this please see to it TODAY. If the tournament lasts much longer tennis will become known on this campus as a winter sport. Scheduled for today are Muriel Finlayson and Betty McLean, who failed to get their game played yesterday. Enough of tennis for now, but please get busy and finish the tournament.

Another basketball meeting was held yesterday, and the schedule was drawn up. The first game will be on Wednesday, Nov. 4. The complete schedule will be announced tomorrow. It is rather lengthy, and the "powers that be" have asked that we print the schedule for each week on the preceding Friday. So coaches, managers and players please be on the watch for this. We also remind the managers of the necessity of getting eligibility slips as soon as possible.

U.C. has its first practice las night and there was a very poor turn-out. This is felt due to the fact that many failed to read the schedule posted last week. For their benefit we are reprinting it. All are requested to turn out for the FIRST practice. St. Mike's will practice tonight—the Seniors at 7:30, the Juniors at 8:15. St. Hilda's had their first work-out yesterday also, and from all reports it was quite sueeessful. Of the others we shall hear more tomorrow.

Sports United Under Referee

Today sees the beginning of another section of the athletic program—volleyball, lacrosse and swim leagues all now come under the referee's eye for the first time this season. And according to Mac McCutcheon, a very competitive series of games is expected.

In the volleyball division the number of teams has jumped this year to 45—about 12 to 14 more than in previous years. As can only be expected, with the necessity of playing 150 games in a season, some tilts will have to be at night and others at noon. The schedule bas been arranged to avoid drill days as far as possible, and also to see that every team has its fair share of bad-time games. Thus far the teams are co-operating 100 per cent with the authorities.

The followers of the old Indian game, lacrosse, report 15 teams contending, amounting to one less tban last year. Wycliffe and O.C.E. withdrew, while School added a team.

Swim league will have a full house with 14 teams in the splash. All going well, all championships should be decided before the Christmas holidays.

Dents Beat U.C. At Soccer 2-0

Showing a too powerful offensive against the U.C. team yesterday afternoon, Dents strengthened their reputation as a threat to all comers in local soecer circles.

Held seoreless in the first half, Dents carried the play in the second half. Jack McCartney opened the scoring soon after the turn in the play, and from there until the end of the game Dents had numerous chanees but were foiled by the goal-tending of Barney Apple and their own over-eargerness except for Phil MacFarlane's score near the end of the game. It was Dents' second shut-out.

Dents — Don Clee, Ralph Smith, Schwalm, Ed Jahus, Merritt, Jack McCartney, Lloyd Chapman, Phil MacFarlane, Scott, Chapman, B. Atnibov, M. Bakalinsky, Tom Crouch.

U.C. — Rod White, Barney Apple, Tomlinson, Fox, Arthur, Bailey, Rothfels, Mareolin, Pirshad, Kreisel.

McCardle Tells Of Hardships were practically unfurnished, with makeshift bunks and made-over crates as the only furniture.

"Sleeping facilities weren't always of the best, but the food was uniformly good," he said. "We had four good meals a day."

McCardle repeatedly stressed the fine treatment the St. Michael's men received from government officials. "Everybody did as much for us as possible. Capt. W. S. Ellis, Saskatoon representative of the Harvest Labour Committee, took all the beefs and did his best with them." He told how Capt. Ellis had a few colonist cars put on a siding to house harvesters who had returned to Saskatoon and were running low on funds.

Just Break Even

He expressed doubt that very many students had made money during their stay. "Most of the fellows returning with us were just breaking even," he said.

McCardle spoke highly of western hospitality. "Most of the farmers had a pretty poor opinion of us easterners, though," he related. "They're convinced that our weakness is produced by the prevalence of soda bars and too much pop. And they refer to daylight saving times as 'golf' time."

McCardle and some of his comrades were guests at a University af Saskatchewan football dance, held the first week-end after the western university's late opening, following a month's postponement to enable students to help with the crop. He told of the enthusiasm of their college yells and Medical-Engineering rivalry, and of the ease with which easterners' dance cards were filled at the Sadie Hawkins affair.

"Nobody shaved out there," he said. "You'd see people you knew as immaculate dressers at home, the most unkempt lot imaginable. And I've finally given up hope of ever growing a Van Dyck beard.

"Saskatoon looked pretty much like an eastern city, except that there were lots more lights. It was quite new to us to see the display signs after the eastern dimout.

"There was no meat shortage, either. You could get a full-course turkey dinner in Saskatoon for 60 cents."

The woman behind the man behind the gun, is the dedication of "Priorities on Parade," a first run feature at the Midtown this week. Morale building through relaxation—just plain jivin'—takes us to Eagle Aircraft Co. in the States, where Johnny Johnson, swing artist, with his "Jive Bombers," works at the war plant. Apprenticed to a tough welder, Vera Vague, Johnny takes it on the chin for some time, finally finding the plant is really more to him and his buddies than Broadway. The jive is plenty torrid, featuring Jerry Colonna on the trombone, singing sweet n'hot with some good tunes, dacing—whew—Ann Miller has the hip rhythm and knows how to use her hips. Everything points to the best in war film musicales.

MIDTOWN "PRIORITIES ON PARADE"

Another in the Aldrich series, "Henry Aldrich and Editor," appears on the same bill. Aldrich humour speaks for itself if you like it. Certainly it's up to the past standards and merits seeing, even if it is to watch more than an ordinary number of fires.—W. N.

UNIVERSITY STAFF

Designed to provide a medium of exchange of ideas among the staff of the University, the recently organized Teaching Staff Committee is one of the most interesting University developments of recent years, according to its chairman, Prof. R. F. Legget of the Civil Engineering Department.

"We print the University of Toronto Bulletin, a summary of all University activities, for distribution to the staff. Then we have organized a series of meeting to discuss research work. Four of these meetings were held last spring and aroused considerable interest. While we have as yet no definite program, I expect we shall hold another set of discussions this year."

The Committee's largest undertaking to date has been the series of lectures on Post-War Reconstruction currently being given in the Economics Building Tuesday afternoons. "The distinction between these lectures and public lectures of former years is that former series were purely departmental. The lecturers in this series are drawn from every department of the University," Prof. Legget explained.

Pro. Legget stressed the fact that the Committee is not University-sponsored, but an independent body existing within the University among the teaching staff. Two and a half years ago a number of men who foresaw the usefulness of such a body called a mass staff meeting in Hart House, and appointed the first committee of 10 members, with Professor A. F. Coventry as chairman. Members were to be drawn from the University as a whole, without reference to distribution by faculties.

As now organized, the committee consists of 12 members, four of whom are elected every year for a three-year period, while four drop out. Prof. Leggett has been chairman for the past two years.

The present members of the committee are Principal M. W. Wallace and Prof. Barker Fairley of U.C.; Prof. St. A. Woodside of Victoria; Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, Trinity Dean of Women; Prof. E. A. Allcut of Mechanical Engineering; Prof. J. H. Elliot of Medicine; Prof. H. Wasteneys of Biochemistry; and Prof. Legget. Four members are to be elected immediately to bring the number up to 12.

W. T. Clarke Winner Of Medical Fellowship

W. T. Clarke of the U. of T. Medical School, has won one of the primary fellowships in the Royal College of Surgeons.

Medical students are eligible to write the primary examinations of the F.R.C.S. after completion of at least two years of Medicine. The primary subjects are Anatomy and Phsiology. The examinations consist of a written portion and for those who pass the written, an oral examination. Those who have completed the primary fellowship may, any time after receiving their degrees in Medicine, write the final fellowship examinations which are in Pathology and either Medicine or Surgery.

The examiners are members of the Medical Faculty of McGill and Varsity.

Registration Required For Graduate Students

Graduate students in Canadian universities are now required to undergo medical examination and register with the Canadian Officers' Training Corps for military training, National War Service officials announced in Ottawa last week.

The order does not apply to those who have begun clinical work in Medicine or Dentistry. Applications for exemption may be made by those conducting research work connected with the war effort.

TO HOLD NO AUCTION OF LIBRARY MAGAZINES

Hart House magazines will not be auctioned off this year as has been the custom, the Library Committee announced yesterday. As they are withdrawn from the Map Room, the magazines will be sent to the troops overseas in response to the request of the services for reading matter.

The committee also announced that plans have been made to enlarge the seating capacity of the Hart House Library.

Bad Harvesting Weather Delays Work in West

are having a party for them that night. They will be leaving the west on Nov. 1, and arriving in Toronto on Nov. 4, according to present plans.

Macdonald Total Highest

Montreal, Oct. 26—(CUP)—Of the 407 Montreal students who went west, the highest percentage was from Macdonald College who sent 93 of their 108 students, or 86%. The School of Commerce sent 96%, Law 56%. Percentages in the other faculties were under half.

Macdonald College students, according to the "Failt-de-Times," will not be asked to attend extra lectures or labs on their return to College, but will be considered as just starting in again where they have left off. To compensate, however, the content of the courses affected is being changed, and there is a possibility that the Christmas holidays will be shortened.

Says Reports Exaggerated

Montreal, Oct. 26—(CUP)—In a letter to Principal James of McGill University, W. W. Dawson states that press reports from Saskatchewan have been grossly exaggerated. That the percentage of those physically unfit for threshing operations has been comparatively low.

A large percentage of the boys have been continuously employed, and have presented no problem. Thirty-five students incapable of working returned to Montreal Saturday. A few are in Regina and willing to take employment, but this is not available due to weather conditions. These are being cared for in the Y.M.C.A. or hotels, and their meals are being provided.

"From the point of view of harvesting and threshing the crop," states Mr. Dawson, "the plan was an unqualified success. More progress has been made in twelve days than in the previous two months."

U.C. Graduates On the Move

University College graduate students in residence moved last week from their house at 49 St. George Street to 86 Queen's Park Drive, the former residence of Sir Robert and Lady Falconer. The migration took place last Monday and Tuesday when lines of girls were seen filing through Queen's Park under bundles of coats, cartons, and sundry bedroom furnishings.

"It was quite hectic," said Margaret Scott, head girl, "especially as I had to go out and teach that day." Wyn Ditchburn and Marg Westgate were quite intrigued by the mover with whom they rode over who sang "A Hearty Welcome" to them.

The grads all agree that their new home is grand both because of its former importance and because it has balconies "where we can be serenaded." The girls expressed gratitude to the Dean of Women, Miss M. B. Ferguson, who supervised the redecoration of the house and the move from St. George Street. "She even carried luggage and pushed furniture," they added.

The former grad house has been taken over by the Army Research Branch.

Brady to Give Post-War Talk

The third of the series of lectures on Post War Reconstruction will be presented by Professor Alexander Brady at five o'clock today in the Economics Building. The subject of Professor Brady's talk will be "The Problems of Democratic Institutions in the Post War World."

In the two previous lectures, Dr. Coates discussed the general post war economic setting, while Professor Parkinson lectured more specifically on the problems of International Trade in the post war world. Professor Brady's lecture is designed more to develop the political aspects of Reconstruction.

The more obvious points to be discussed deal with the likely tasks of the Canadian Government at the conclusion of the War, in its solution of the problems of Political Parties, the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of Parliament and Parliamentary Institutions, Economic Controls, and the problems of Public Service or Bureaucracy.

CJFX to Sponsor College Activities

Antigonish, N.S., Oct. 25—(CUP)—A new radio station CJFX, which is scheduled to begin broadcasting in the early part of November, is expected to prove a great asset to the University of St. Francis Xavier.

The more outstanding college events will be broadcast from the scene of action, such as student conferences, debates, and sport events. It is planned to use, whenever possible, student announcers and operators. Talented musicians from among the student body, whether individually or in groups, will be used.

Organized groups will listen to these programs and will be supplied with supplementary printed material. From time to time programs will be featured designed to stress the cultural heritage of the Maritimes. Every effort will be made to revive and foster the folk music of the Maritimes, particularly the Scottish tradition.

Affiliated with the CBC and broadcasting 16 hours per day on a frequency of 580 kilocycles, CJFX will be the only station east of Montreal using a directional antenna allowing its signal to be beamed to localities that are desired to be served. Because of this beam antenna, CJFX's signal will be 40 per cent more powerful than if a non-directional antenna was used.

University Students Return From Western Wheatfields With Tales Of Harvesting

First Varsity Reporter to Come Back Tells of Variety of Experiences; Stresses Poverty Among Farmers

TO TIRED TO WRITE

By Edgar Simon

Jim Paton, IV Victoria, was the first Varsity reporter to cheek in at the office with a story of the harvest, but he was too tired to write it.

Jim saw more of the west than most of the harvesters, starting on a farm near Estevan, 20 miles north of the United States border, and ending up on a large stock ranch near Saskatoon.

When Jim's group of 20 arrived at Estevan, they found jobs waiting for only five of them, as the harvest in that area had already neared completion. Jim nailed one of the five jobs, but left it after a short time when his student companion fell sick.

Back in Regina, Jim found 25 to 30 men, mostly from McGill, crowding the employment office, but a friend had connections that brought him a job on a 5,000-acre ranch near Saskatoon, where he worked through until the weather broke.

Passing through Saskatoon, he again saw jobless students wandering about the streets, this time from Western.

"Personally I was rather disgruntled

St. Mike's Student Holds that Most of the Farmers Were Anxious that Boys Return Thinking Well of the West

S.A.C. FOOD "WONDERFUL"

By Doc Savage

"I would go again, if I had the chanee," said Charles O'Connell, II St. Mike's, just returned from the harvest.

"As far as I could tell from my experienees, it was only a few farmers who gave a bad impression. They were rather rough on the boys, but the majority were nice. The people out there seemed most eager to see that we had a good impression of the west," O'Connell said.

"I can appreciate how they must have felt," he added. "We were very inexperienced and the harvest was a matter of life or death to most of them."

O'Connell, an American from Lima, Ohio, had never been on a farm before. "Perhaps that is why I enjoyed the experience so much," he said, explaining that he had been driving a team for most of the while.

O'Connell was grateful for the "wonderful food" that the S.A.C. had provided. He also told that the St. Miehael's S.A.C. had donated candy and cigarettes. — "They were passed around five or six times a day" and money for the students to buy a meal with in Saskatchewan.

They arrived at Saskatoon at noon and about 30 or 40 St. Mike's students were shipped out to Davidson, arriving there about three. They were working in the fields within 15 minutes of their arrival at Davidson.

"We were auctioned off like slaves on a block," he remembered. "There were

WEATHER IN ALBERTA DELAYS HARVESTING

Lloydminster, Alta., Oct. 27—(CUP)—Bad weather in this area will likely hold up harvesting operations for at least five days, farmers and government authorities said tonight.

If government permission is granted, most of the student-harvesters in this border district will probably leave for home in the next two or three days.

Brady Talks On Post-War In Dominion

Changes in Canadian Government institutions and administration which will be necessary after the war, were discussed by Prof. Alexander Brady of the department of Political Economy, in the third of the series of lectures on Post War Reconstruetion yesterday.

Speaking on "The Problems of Demoeratic Institutions in the Post War World," Mr. Brady said that the mass of totalitarian institutions set up in Canada for the prosecution of the war will have to be transformed to suit peacetime needs. These will be harder to change than they were to put into effect since the emotional drive present since the beginning of the war will be relaxed.

Political parties in Canada have arrived at the stage reached by the British parties at the beginning of the last war, and, on the coming of peace, will have to exhibit a flexible capacity to analyse and cope with economic issues, the speaker continued. Changes in party techniques will be necessary, sinee Canadian parties need more roots of a perennial kind, not those which wither between elections.

Mr. Brady said that parliamentary tradition in Canada has become very weak, and commended the British Parliament which is still operating despite bombs. There has been no extensive change in parliamentary methods in Canada since Confederation, and during

Oil and War Subject of Talk

Oil resources of the world and their relation to the war was the topic of the talk given by B. A. Myers of the Imperial Oil at the opening meeting of the International Affairs Club Monday.

The spcaker, who has been in the oil business for 40 years, stated that oil can be a great friend to man if rightly used; but in following the example of the Axis members it is being used most destructively. Mr. Myers told of the many means of utilizing petroleum for man's progress and comfort. And then went on to tell of its various wartime uses, and how much is dependent upon it now. "In fact, " he specified, "oil is what enables a modern mechanized army to run."

"Japan," he continued, "though she has been storing oil for ycars, would nevertheless have been in a bad way had she not taken the Dutch East Indies and Burma. Germany, unless she gets deeper into the Russian oil fields, will be pretty short of it by next spring. Italy has a small field but hardly enough for her needs. So actually the United Nations has an advantage in that they control two-thirds of the world's supply. Their main proble is in its transportation.

U.B.C. REMOVES RARE BOOKS TO SAFETY FROM BOMBING

Vancouver, Oct. 22—(CUP)—Since steel and granite buildings do not afford adcquate protection against bombing, the Library staff of the University of British Columbia has removed several thousand valuable books in the summer to vaults in the basement.

Rare volumes from the Art Room, reference books and early editions of learned societies have been stored.

Dr. A. Baker, Ex-Professor, Dies Aged 94

Professor Albert Baker, for 33 years professor of mathematics in the University of Toronto, died at his Toronto home yesterday. He was 94.

Dr. Baker, who became professor emeritus in mathematics in 1926, was believed to have been the seeond oldest living graduate of this University. Sir William Mulock, Chaneellor of the University, is 98.

Born in Toronto, Dr. Baker was educated at Toronto Grammar School (afterwards Jarvis Street Collegiate Institute) and the University of Toronto, (B.A., 1869; M.A., 1878; LL.D. (hon.) 1914), where he won the gold medal in mathematies, graduating in 1869. He was Dean of the Faculty of Arts, 1912-19. He was a member of the Senate of the university since 1887,

In 1895 Pro. Baker was president of the Ontario ,Educational Association and was president of the Royal Society of Canada in 1915-16.

He was lieutenant in the University Company of the Queen's Own, 1875-8, and captain, 1878-83, and for many years was a member of the Military Institute.

He was married in 1894 to Nora Kathleen McCormaek of Wilmette, Ill., U.S., who predeceased him.

On his retirement, he said: "I have in my 33 ycars of academic work as professor of mathematies at U. of T. tried to feature the practical value of mathematical training as applied to actuarial, engineering, chemistry and like work, but the singular intellectual beauty of an absorbing mathematical problem has, like art, but aesthetic value for its vindication."

In tribute to Prof. Baker, Sir William Mulock said: "I deeply regret the death of my life-long friend. He devoted his life to the service of the University of Toronto. He was a most able mathematician, and even on retirement from university service was deeply interested in its welfare."

University Air Raid Alert Being Held This Morning Tests Present Protection

A.R.P. Control Room Will Be Outfitted for Next Alert; Being Equipped Now in Basement of Simcoe Hall

BAY-DUNDAS ROOM MODEL

Room 11 in the basement of Simcoe Hall is being outfitted as a permanent university A.R.P. nerve centre.

Modelled after No. 2 control room, at Bay and Dundas, whieh directs civilian defence effort in that section of the city bounded by Queen, Spadina, Bloor and Jarvis streets, this miniature headquarters will be under the supervision of A. J. Butlin, section warden.

Equipment in the Simeoe Hall control room will include wall charts of the university layout, .personnel lists, data on the A.R.P. organization here, etc. Telephone lines will conect it with outlying posts from its safe and central location.

The control room, just now in the process of equipment, is expected to be ready to function fully before Toronto's next alert, aecording to Mr. Butlin.

Ask Leave-Homes For Air Force

Students are being asked by the Student Christian Movement to open their homes over week-ends to some member of the British, Australian, or New Zealland Air Force, now training at Camp Borden.

The purpose of this campaign is to provide a "home away from home" where these boys can always feel free to drop in on their 48 hour leaves.

Lists have been posted in the colleges today where the students may sign, stating what week-end their families can make accommodation. Full details of the arrangements will be given later.

In charge of the drive is the newly-formed Air Force Committee composed of two members from each of the Arts colleges. The committee will facilitate the sending of boys to homes of their own religious denomination. It has records of each individual and will send him to a family whose activities and interests are similar.

Authorities Attempt to Remove All Persons from Danger of Flying Glass During Today's 15-Minute Alert

CARS MUST BE PARKED

Object of today's air raid alert, aceording to A. J. Butlin, who is attached to the office of the University Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings as A.R.P. section warden, is to test the adcquacy of present protective arrangements.

At a special meeting of all post and building wardens late yesterday in the Law Building, final instructions were detailed and uncertainties cleared up. Orders to wardens included the wearing of Civilian Defence Corps arm bands and steel helmets and the carrying of cards identifying them as persons of authority during practice alerts.

The authority of A.R.P. officials includes their right to report any persons wilfully infringing specific air raid regulations. Patrolmen also have the right to require the general public to take shelter from the open street either in university buildings or in private homes. Each building warden has been asked to make provision for sheltering passing pedestrians. Motorists are being asked to curb their cars in this alert but may remain in them.

Asked about the refuge rooms, designated in each university building for

WEATHER-MAN CARRIES ON

There is no shortage of rubber balloons at the Meteorological Office on Bloor Street. The Department of Transport, Air Service Branch, at Ottawa, of which this office is a part, made certain early in the war that the manufacturing company in the United States would fill all Canadian needs.

Since the beginning of the war, there have been more balloous floating over Toronto than ever before. A part of the meteorological staff is employed in training girls of the R.C.A.F. The fourth class of about 25 to be thus trained is at the Office now. Each day, as part of their training, the girls observe and follow the flight of some five or six balloons. Each ballon contains approximately 23 grams of latex rubber. By an extremely rough estimation, about four ounces of rubber float away each day, never to return; or, it would be well over a year before enough rubber had drifted away to make a complete set of tires for your car.

Actually, the balloons don't just 'drift away'; they serve an extremely valuable purpose. The information that is computed from the action of the balloon in flight is used in the long-distance forecasting of weather. This information is teletyped to all Service Flying Schools and to all Ferry Command airports in Canada. From this report and from similar ones from Meteorological Offices in the United States and Canada, and from their own observations, the Air Force meteorological staff can govern their aircraft flights according to the weather, for days in advance.

Again, this training of the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. is a valuable aid in the alleviation of the manpower lack. When the girls graduate from their five weeks' course, they are posted to flying stations to take the place of the men in the Met. staff.

Joan E. Griffith, an Arts graduate of '41 from St. Hilda's, is in charge of the girls in training here.

CHINA'S ART EXPLAINED

An exhibition by one of China's foremost painters, Professor Chang Shu-Chi of Nanking, was informally opened in the Royal Ontario Museum Saturday afternoon.

Introducing Professor Chang, Mr. Fung, Chinese Consul at Toronto, said "Professor Chang's true genius lies in his ability to master ancient Chinese painting and also to adapt the western method to it." Of China's art in general he commented, "The aim of every Chinese painter is to give joy to others and to himself. That is one of the cardinal points of Chinese painting."

Professor Chang demonstrated his technique in painting, completing a picture within 20 minutes. Declining to speak of his work he said, "I will use my hands instead of my mouth to express my happiness at being here."

With the war, Professor Chang was driven from his home in Nanking, where he had taught at the National Central University, and was forced to take refuge in Chungking. He immediately resumed his art classes. Several months ago at the request of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek he travelled to America as an "ambassador of art" to present his painting "The Hundred Doves" to President Roosevelt. The painting, now hanging in the White House, is symbolic of China's desire for peace.

Included in the exhibit are about 100 paintings, chiefly of birds, flowers and fish. Professor Chang usese as his medium water colours painted on silk. American paints are used except in the case of blue, where a soft Chinese shade not to be found in America is more satisfactory. Breaking the classical Chinese tradition Professor Chang uses white in his paintings. His occasional use of bright colours is rarely found in the classical tradition.

Professor Chang has already shown his paintings in Ottawa. At the close of his Toronto exhibit, which will last a week, he will return to Washington where he has arranged to show his work next.

The Hand Of The Free

Since the question of the place of the universities, and especially of the arts courses, has arisen here in Canada, it is interesting to see what their situation is in other countries, particularly among the United Nations. We have already in these columns surveyed the problems of the Chinese and Russian students, each reflecting the attitude of their country toward the benefits of education.

The Chinese, who have revered their great scholars since the time when we dressed in wolf skins and painted ourselves with woad, have continued their pursuit of learning in the face of the terrible opposition of the Japanese invasion. The Russians, who have emerged from illiteracy in the last twenty-five years, and who know the need for educated and trained men to develop the immense natural resources of a huge young country and to protect the land from its Nazi invaders, are studying if they can and fighting if they are needed in their district.

The situation of the Americans is roughly similar to our own. They are also at war and they have also inherited what might be called a middle aged culture, not so old as that of the Chinese, nor so youthful as that of the Soviet, but similar to both in that it is very strong.

The American universities and colleges are at present grappling with a much larger, more fundamental question than at present faces us; who is going to run the universities, the army, the navy or the civilian educators?

This question has come up to be answered as a result of the Act of Congress lowering the draft age to 18, which answered the question of who would go to college—it will now be only the men in uniform, the physically unfit, and women, for the present. There has already been discussion about the status of women students since a national service act for them is already being urged in some quarters.

Militarized Colleges?

The solution for the problem offered by the army and the navy is that they should take over the colleges entirely, pick the students, allocate them to the courses they want them to take, and dispense with everything on the curriculum but the technical and the essential professional courses.

Quite naturally the present college officials objected to this plan. As an alternative the leaders of the American Council on Education proposed another: let the military authorities and the colleges jointly pick from the nation's ablest high-school graduates the members of an Enlisted Training Corps, limited by military quotas. The enlistees, in uniform and provided with base pay and a living allowance, would choose their own college and there get four semesters (about a year and a half) of a basic officers' training course under the Reserve Officers' Training Corps or under college teachers. After that, chosen men would continue advanced professional or technical training and the others would go directly into the armed forces.

The author of this plan is none other than James Bryant Conant, President of Harvard, who has warned the United States of the necessity of clearing up the question of university manpower, and who disagreed with the opinion of army officials that all students were destined for the army. With President Karl Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology he is stressing the need for experts in war industry.

Arts Unchampioned

It is quite natural that the head of a great engineering school would place most importance on the call for technical experts, but it is surprising, to say the least, to find the president of a great university like Harvard paying no attention at all to what has made his university great, i.e., the much slandered arts courses, which seem to be needing friends these days.

Apparently almost the only man in educational circles in the United States to champion arts publicly is Joseph Brandt, president of the University of Oklahoma, and a former newspaperman. He discards the idea that liberal education will be a war casualty, in maintaining his belief that "there will always be a place for the gentlemanly intellect."

Wartime Fashions

The war has changed everything about us . . . our lives, our futures, our immediate aims in life, and last but not least, our clothes. The college wardrobe has undergone a leveling process from which it has emerged much changed: simplified, with all the frills eliminated, restricted in colour and in fabrics, and the result as far as we can see is quite satisfactory.

The extremes of campus fashion like the tea-cozy sweater, or very sloppy Joe, long stocking caps, coloured wool knee socks, worn by the girls, and the exaggeratedly short and full coats worn by the men, were pleasant bits of trivia in the carefree years, but no one seems to mourn their passing. On the contrary, many people admit that they are pleased that these "idiotic" fashions have gone the way of everything else which obstructs war-time streamlining.

The Office of War Information in Washington has issued a list of the articles of clothing now banned in the United States by order of the W.P.B.: men's clothes must be shorter, narrower and a great deal simpler. Victory suits, topcoats and overcoats are being made without patch pockets, trick backs, trouser cuffs, belts and pleats. Vests with double-breasted suits, the extra pair of trousers, full dress coats, cutaways and double-breasted dinner jackets are out for the duration. W.P.B. has taken the frill out of fashion and has brought back the classic silhouette that is most adaptable for long and varied wear.

Here in Canada we do not feel the hand of the W.P.B., but our clothing has become simpler and more sturdy, so that each garment will last longer than a similar garment did before, in these days when all possible material is needed to clothe the armed services, and all possible money is needed to finance the war.

We can have our frills back when the war is won, if we want them. In the meantime the substitution of quality for quantity in our clothes is having a decidedly smart result about the campus.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

Greetings from the West, with, I hope, some information which might interest the students back home. I have had the last several issues of The Varsity sent to me here (you seem to be having your troubles there, too) and Rowat and myself have been particularly interested in reports of harvesting exploits in other sectors of the province, and comparing our own efforts in this potential metropolis. However, the angle in which no one has apparently been interested to date, but is nevertheless of consequence, is the position and attitude of the farmer. Anyway, here are a few of my impressions and facts gathered from farmers in this Melfort district.

If asked what they think of the harvest plan in which students here are participating, farmers and townsfolk alike, most of whom have seen harvests and harvesters for the past twenty or thirty years, will answer, "Fine; but help arrived three weeks too late!" Sometimes this varies to six weeks—it seems that on former harvest excursions the men were always here in the first or second week of September. Why in the world an inventory of men available out here wasn't made long ago and before the need was so urgent, nobody seems to know; but the fact remains that in many districts the crop stood ready to be threshed for two or three weeks (in good weather) but had to be left for want of help—as in this region—which is considered the best in the province, having never had a real crop failure.

Now the weather has broken—or I should say it broke last Monday. . . . Most of the hands around here haven't worked more than two or three days this week. We've worked one. In Saskatoon there are upwards of 100 men waiting to go back to work. I believe most of the farmers are decent enough to keep the fellows busy doing odd jobs for their keep—however there are exceptions; we met two Toronto men yesterday from University College who had been asked by their farmer "to come back in a week, when the weather is better." The Mayor of Melfort has been sponsoring eight or ten high school boys from Montreal for the last two days. Our farmer here could have used us from the middle of August, through the cutting and stooking session and right on to the threshing, finishing up before the bad weather sets in. That's the outlook of everybody I've talked to. In that way everybody comes out on top—as it is, we'll be lucky if anybody does.

You see, if the grain is the least bit damp when it's threshed in the first place, it clogs the machine when it goes through, and secondly it won't dry out in the bins and if it isn't dry in the bins the wheat pools won't accept it in their elevators. And so the cycle goes.

Another thing which caught my eye the other day was an article in the Saskatoon Star-Pheonix, about harvesters, in which the farmers were expressing such views as the harvesters that came west were physically unfit in many cases to do the work. This after the Laval boys had complained about their wages being only two to three dollars a day. Perhaps the farmers are being cheated at that. Anyway, it seems as though it would have been more practical and economical to the taxpayer to give even a once-over to each man instead of a general invitation to all and sundry. At least The Star-Pheonix thought so.

Some of the brighter spots include the friendly attitude of the western people toward the college men. As a whole, the farmers are highly satisfied with the boys, now that they're here, and are all for their coming out again next year in even larger numbers. The Mayor of Melfort claimed that they could have used 15,000 men out here at the proper time. It is predicted that the lack of men will be more acute next year, which sounds logical.

There is a rumour about that all men physically fit must stay til the crops is harvested—whether that will effect the college men or not in the face of a Nov. 9 deadline, I can't say at present. . . . They'll probably be more definite as the job gets along. The Department of Agriculture announced over the radio here yesterday that now 50 per cent of the Saskatchewan grain has been harvested. Quite a few of our boys have been sent from one small farm to another as the job at each is only a matter of a couple of days. The rest are on sizable tracts, with two or three weeks' work possible. Facilities at the farms in this district vary of course from the guest room with all conveniences, such as the one Don and I drew, to bunkhouses and pallettes of straw for beds which some of the less fortunate got. Food is unquestionably good as I imagine it must be in all sections. The boys here are doing the usual, driving teams, field pitching, spike pitching and driving the odd truck.

I hope you have assumed by this point that we are not disgruntled by the work nor the farmers by our efforts; but they feel, and we sympathize, that between the Department of Labour and the Department of Agriculture somebody missed the boat in not sensing the urgency of the situation before they did. Next year, if proper return is to be had from the expenditure of sending men out here, it should be done at a more appropriate time.

Yours very truly,

Frank Watson,

Air-raid alerts certainly can be a nuisance—nobody really minds spending a quiet quarter-hour in a Refuge Room, but it's awfully annoying to miss one's favourite radio serial. So the Champus Cat, always ready to step into a gap, today provides its readers with a soap scenario to replace the thrilling instalment they will miss.

To Be Read In The Refuge Room

Announcer (subtly soothing): And now, ladies, we pick up the threads of our soul-stirring drama—The Life and Loves of Grandma Perkins. This homely old-world lady, who sets out to prove that women can still be daily dippers at the age of 82, is in trouble. Her son is on trial for his life in the great state court-house half-way up the next block. And as we take you to the scene—a scene, ladies, which might be one in which you, too, might have to take part, if your son were on trial for his life—we find beloved Grandma Perkins speaking to old Lawyer Bungle, the homely old philosopher of Crabapple Corners, who is defending her boy against the accusations of the rascally state prosecutor, David Dillwhistle. Grandma speaks.

Grandma: I can't go on, lawyer. My boy's on trial for his life.

Lawyer Bungle: There, there, gal, you have to go on—for your boy and me, and all the homely folks in Crabapple Corners that know your boy is innocent.

Clerk: Orderinthecourt, orderinthecourt.

Grandma (in a peircing whisper): The Jedge is coming in.

Bungle: Yump.

Gandma: He's sitting down.

Bungle: Yump.

Judge: Case of the State versus Wilfred Perkins will continue. Now Mr. Dillwhistle, will you please continue your prosecution.

Dillwhistle: Your Honour and gentlemen of the jury, it is my intention to prove—

Bungle: Dang his hide.

Dillwhistle: — that Wilferd Perkins did wilfully murder—

Grandma: Dang his city-slicker hide.

Dillwhistle:—Ezekiel Dogwood with a hatchet.

(Slight outcry in the court, and sobs of "No sech a thing!" from Grandma.)

Clerk: Orderinthecourt.

Judge: Quite so. With a hatchet.

Dillwhistle: Exactly. And it is my intension to prove—

(Slow organ music, followed by the announcer's analgesic voice once more.)

Announcer: And so, ladies, we leave Grandma for today. Will she be able to carry on in the face of all this trouble she is in? Will old Lawyer Bungle think of some way to help her out of all the trouble she's in? Be sure to set your dials to this station tomorrow to find out. And in the meantime, be sure (here he becomes vastly coy) to keep 'em dipping!

ART and MUSIC

A Good Beginning

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

It is strange how much of this world may be divided into three parts. Violinists are no exception. There is the violinist who plays all his notes with remarkable facility and undoubted precision, but whose playing is dull and unemotional; there is the man who neglects precision for the broader effect of the music, who puts his expression first and his technique last; finally there is the extremely rare individual who is a combination of the best

Blue Squad Wins Track Meet

Varsity Team Leads Scoring By 65 Points Over Ontario Agricultural College and Air Force Entries

BURGESS SENSATIONAL

Hec Phillip's Varsity Track squad won their first engagement of the season yesterday, triumphing over O.A.C. and No. 31 S.F.T.S. of the R.A.F. in a triangular meet. Varsity garnered 96 points while O.A.C. grabbed off second position with their total of 31. The Air Force trailed with 25. The Pigeons were somewhat handicapped by the small number of their entries; having only ten men on their team compared to a couple of dozen each from Varsity and O.A.C. However, even allowing for their lack of numbers the R.A.F. team certainly didn't live up to their advance reputation.

As expected the "Big Blue Team" was paced by the sensational performance of Cam Burgess, Trinity's one man track team. Cam won the hundred yards, the low hurdles, the shot put and the javelin, and came a very close second in the 220 yards. In fact it looked to a lot of spectators as if Burgess and Matton of O.A.C. had run a dead heat; but the judges finally decided Maton the winner. Altogether Cam picked up 23 points, around a quarter of Toronto's total.

The best performance of the day was Burgess's 10.2 seconds for the hundred—very fast indeed for these weather conditions. Varsity runners showed marked superiority in the distance events, grabbing the first three positions in both the mile and two mile jogs. The Toronto boys also cleaned up in the high jump, Kerr, Jackes and Claxton finishing in that order. The javelin was still another all-Varsity event. The R.A.F. scored vistories in the half mile and broad jump. O.A.C. took first position in the 220, 440 and the discus. The rest of the events went to the Blues.

qualities of the two.

Joseph Szigeti is that rare individual. His playing is a polished perfection that leaves nothing to chance; his musicianship is deep and shows itself in a scholarly understanding of the music he is playing. He made even the Chausson Poeme sound interesting and comparatively unhackneyed.

The Mozart A Major Concerto was music of a deeper quality, and its emotions were not of the obvious kind. Mr. Szigeti's phrasing and expression were in complete harmony with the music.

Though nothing has been said yet about the orchestra, it is not because that body was undeserving. Their backgrounds for Mr. Szigeti were never obtrusive or heavy.

The music which the orchestra did alone was not of such an impressive nature. Weber's Euryanthe was efficiently done, but that was to be expected. The Holst Somerset Rhapsody is extremely dull—a carefully worked out piece of mathematics.

Tschaikowsky, in spite of his sentimentality, was the orchestral leaven. Francesca da Rimini at times achieves a real impressiveness, in the clarinet solo with pizzicato accompaniment near the end, or, in spite of their triteness, the closing chords.

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra, as this column remarks from time to time, has reached a stage of real perfection. For many years to come it is impossible to conceive of Toronto having a very much better organization. That it has been able to keep itself at this remarkable peak for so long (this is at least the third season of excellence) reflects not a little credit on every member of the organization and particularly Sir Ernest MacMillan.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

AND NOW McGILL . . .

Quite a while ago the decision was made by those nebulous characters, THE-POWERS-THAT-BE, that intercollegiate sports were to be abolished to the realm of the dodo bird for the duration. It was decided that it was more important for the Universities' athletes to learn to execute an About Turn on Saturday afternoon than to indulge in such frivolities as football. All well and good—after all we're certainly not one to stick out our draft number by criticizing anything remotely connected with THE WAR EFFORT. Just in passing we might however point out that after one hundred and ten hours repetition even such a thrilling tactical manouver as the About Turn begins to lose some vital part of its intrinsic appeal to our sensitive natures! (You, the reader, and we didn't make "reader" singular by accident—will have to pardon us for a moment while we reconstruct the sordid facts of our plot; at this time of the morning our eyes become so affectionate they look at each other for minutes at a time, which makes it rather difficult to mull over what we have written—since there is no one else present to read it to us except the editor, and of course it is common knowledge that he can neither read nor write!)

As we were saying, Varsity has not only lived up to the spirit of the regulations, they have practically lived down to the same spirit of the same regulations. The only bright spots in an otherwise absurd sports picture have been the exhibition basketball games and a few isolated track meets. Western, Queens, and McGill have unquestionably lived up to the spirit of the regulations, but at the same time have managed to keep a University sports program. Last year Western had an ace rugby team which played exhibition games, at Western, with various American colleges. And while we have no definite knowledge on the point, we would hazard a guess that the boys at Western can do as snappy an "About Turn" as the boys at Toronto. Queen's has had a rugby team which has played in the Kingston Defence League for the past two seasons, as has their hockey team—and they tell me that Queensmen are real sharpies at the "About Turn."

And now we come to McGill, which place the heading would have led any gullible people to believe was the subject of this piece of whimsy. McGill has a University football squad this year which is scheduled to play an Army team this coming Saturday and the Air Force the next Saturday. Think of it — Saturday! And the C.O.T.C. band will be there to provide the necessary jive! Furthermore it has just been announced that Dr. Bobby Bell has been retained to coach the McGill entry in the Montreal Hockey League this winter. Bobby Bell is one of the greatest hockey coaches that ever mentored McGill teams. He coached the Red team from 1933 to 1938 and in his first season guided the Redmen to the Allan Cup finals. Throughout the remainder of his reign the McGill team kept a firm grasp on the Intercollegiate Championship.

I AM ASKING YOU!!

And now for the sixty-four dollar question. Why can't the University of Toronto at least follow the example set by the others? After comparing the football talent in the interfaculty teams with that displayed by the "sand-lot" teams of the Senior O.R.F.U., we think that a Varsity team would look mighty good in that league. Think of what a backfield made up of say, Don Grosskurth, Glen Munro, Jack Plaxton, Herb Strickeh and Ralph McIntyre, could do to such a team as the absurdly garbed Indians. And the Varsity line would be equally as strong as the backfield. But we are willing to concede football to the dodos just to please the Saturday afternoon boys. After all the chances of having a Bib Blue team this fall are not what you would call immense.

However, what about a hockey team? Hockey games are not played on Saturday afternons. It seems perfectly plausible to us. Varsity has a handy arena to practice in. They have abundant talent. A coach would be readily available. We're sure the student body would back the team enthusiastically. There would be no breach of the straight-laced regulations. As for a league to play in, what about the Defence League, about whose composition we have only a hazy idea, but we think it contains Army, Navy, Air Force and Research Enterprise teams. If that fails there are two good Mercantile loops in the city.

Betty Barzin Speaks On German Propaganda

Betty Barzin, author, journalist and acting press attache of the British Embassy in Brussels for eight years, said last night at the opening meeting of the U. C. French Club, that the most active resistance in oppressed countries of Europe is seen among university students. Speaking on German propaganda Mme. Barzin dealt principally with propaganda outside of Germany.

She stated that propaganda is promoted in two ways—by conscious and unconscious agents. Of the two, unconscious propaganda is the more subtle and dangerous, being spread unknowingly by ourselves, as when we say that "We are not fighting the German people, but the Nazis, who are not representative of them," or that "the Treaty of Versailles was too harsh, and thereby forced the Germans to go to war." Mme. Barzin decried both these arguments and urged that university students in this country be more active in recognizing and overcoming such propaganda.

Following Mme. Barzin's address, Professor Marcel Barzin, formerly of the University of Brussels, speaking on the peace terms after the war, said that unless the Germans are forced to make reparation, we will have another war within 20 years. He spoke of the weaknesses of the Treaty of Versailles, saying that it was morally but not politically sound. That is, it was a just peace but was not enforced.

Big Brothers Whip Juniors In Rugby Tilt

Junior School Defeated By Seniors in Yesterday's Rugby Game, in Season's Second Straight Loss

SCORE 7-3

By Pete Aykroyd

Senior School forged ahead into a first-place tie with Meds in Group I by defeating their partners in crime, Junior School, in a hard fought contest, 7-3. The luckless Juniors, foiled by the fickle finger of fumble, went down to their second straight loss this season.

It was anybody's ball game right up until the third quarter when seven Plaxton to Graham or Plaxton to Seymour passes clicked and left the ball deep in the Junior School territory. Big Truck McIntyre rolled the ball over on his first try to score the game's only major. Mac's plunging was a feature of the struggle as time and time again he would crack the Junior line for eight or ten yards.

Herb Stricker played a standout game for the Junior School and he was showing his old form last night when he hurled pass after pass to Bill Lawrence, bringing back memories of the famous Stricker - Jakabouski combination of 1939. When Herb finds a man like Lawrence who can run just like himself, he doesn't mind hurling the ball around.

The Senior School line deserves commendation for the protection which they gave their backfield. Ken Gow, Harold Page, Doug Zimmerman, Keith O'Donnel and Shames showed up exceptionally well.

"Weed" Quinttenton, flashy little inside, was in on every play on the gridiron yesterday; his tackling was a joy to behold and undoubtedly, if it hadn't been for him, more Junior School end runs would have functioned properly.

The Junior School quartet of Al Glover, Ken and Walt Sharpe and Phill Cross played 100 per cent 60-minute football. Little Al Glover, not afraid of anyone, handled men six times his size and if he didn't knock 'em over Ken Sharpe did.

A brief commentary on each quarter follows:

FIRST QUARTER

Senior School kicked off to the Juniors and Herb Stricker was brought down on his 20 yards line by Tom Webb. Quittenton stopped Waldon's first plunge after a gain of eight yards and after another attempted plunge Stricker kicked the ball 45 yards for a single. Senior School started a march down the field with two plunges by McIntyre, both for yards. Two incompleted forwards followed and then a towering boot by Plaxton put the Juniors with their backs to the wall. A fumble on their first down was recovered by Tom Webb of Seniors. Then Senior School, only seven yards out, failed to click on three downs and so the ball went to Junior School on their own 25 as the whistle blew.

Score—1-0.

SECOND QUARTER

Junior School opened the quarter with a lovely Stricker to Lawrence 30 yard end run. On the next two downs Tom Waldon plunged through for yards and Stricker kicked short to the Senior 25. McIntyre went through for 15 yards and ended up with seven men clinging to him. Seymour's kick went out of bounds on the Junior 40.

Booth took the ball through for Junior School and gained eight yards. Stricker's kick sailed through the breeze for 60 yards and Lawrance smeared Plaxton on the play. The Seniors made no gain on the next three tries and when Junior School again got possession they marched down the field until Stricker was able to hoist for one.

Score—2-0.

THIRD QUARTER

Orlando was in on the kick-off and brought down Stricker in one of the neatest tackles of the day. Weed Quittention broke up the next two plays and on a "no-yards" penalty against the Juniors the ball was in the Seniors possession on the 50. A Plaxton to Graham pass went for 25 yards, followed by another to Seymour. A placement went wide but scored one point.

Junior School's next kick was blocked and McIntyre rumbled over the line for a major which was converted by Graham.

FOURTH QUARTER

Stricker was injured on the first play and was replaced by Evans. Young George clicked on four forwards and ended up on the Senior 4 yard line. After two futile bucks the Juniors tried a placement which failed, leaving the score at 7-3.

This was the first game played on Little Vic in years and the field was in none too good condition. Jr. School now resides with Vic in the cellar of Group I.

We hate to keep talking about the weather—but did you feel it yesterday? The icy chill it carried in its winds was enough to daunt even the most enthusiastic of tennis players—so we'll just have to wait and hope—as if we were in an Albertan wheat field amidst the mean snow. Last year there was some talk of resorting to playing tennis in fur coats and mittens. Well, we may have to take such drastic measures yet; but, meanwhile, let's go indoors and talk about the most talked about campus sport we know.

Basketball practices are getting underway in all the Colleges and are quite well patronized—but there is always room for more players. Last night, from dinner time on, Little Vic gym was bustling with activity as the Vic Freshies and the P.H.E. Juniors went through their paces. The latter team is being admirably coached by Betty Mortimer and has a great deal of drive. The Freshies of Vic and those of St. Mike's, are turning out in goodly numbers; which makes we oldsters very happy indeed.

Speaking of people being happy—everyone concerned would be very much happier if they were to look over the basketball schedule as drawn up by the various College representatives just the other day. You never know when you might get your dates mixed up, so please keep these in mind—and we will notify you of any change—if such there be.

Meds Defeat Vic Gridders

The first sprinkle of snow, a slippery gridiron, and a fast moving, opportunist ruby squad from Meds, combined to rub in a 9-0 defeat for Vic Seniors, last year's interfaculty champions.

In the first quarter, the Vic team started marching from the first down. Bundy ripped through large holes in the Meds line, while Vic grabbed three first downs in a row. Then Meds dug in, held along the line, and profited from some costly Vic fumbles. Taking the wind behind their backs, consistent plunging, steady kicking, and a good fighting spirit turned a seesaw battle into a slight margin for Meds. Two attempted placements and a long hoist behind the goal line resulted in three single points. The ends, particularly, stood out by preventing extensive runbacks from the Vic safety men.

Glen Munro, injured in Friday's game with School, appeared in the second half but his passing was ineffective—due to a tricky cross-wind. Then Meds put the finishing touche on their first half stand, George Lewis running a touch some 85 yards through a broken field. A pass for the convert was grounded. The final point came in the fourth quarter, a single, kicked into touch being the goal line by Jake Spence.

The Meds teams played well as a unit and took advantage of the breaks. George Lewis did some sparkling running. Vic looked most favourable from the hard hitting game played by the freshmen, Neale, Burwell and Jones.

The teams:

Vic — Neal, Shugart, Fitzgerald, Bundy, Burford, Donee, Carson, Saunderson, Ibey, Guthrie, Jones, Burwell, Wichwau, Crang, Wilson, Austin, Harris, Muro, Fullerton.

Sr. Meds. — MacMillan, Arnup, Spence, Lewis, Turner, Darte, McNicl, Parker, Quinlan, Newman, Beatty, Bryans, Watts, Solomon, Giardini, Virtue, Cody, Irwin, Parrot.

Medicos Win At Soccer

Meds waltzed to an easy 5-0 victory over Victoria College yesterday afternoon on the back campus. Both teams lacked a few regular players and as a result play was rather ragged at times. Vic held the fast-moving Meds forwards to one goal in the first half, Art Boyd being the goalgetter. The last half saw the complete disintegration of the Vic defense and Meds scored four more goals. Art Boyd added three to his bag to give him the first hat-trick of the season. Johnny Wilford, Meds outside left, tallied the remaining counter. For the losers Ron MacKenzie and Dick Richards played well.

The teams:

Vic—W. Tonge, M. Dedrick, L. Pickering, J. Paton, R. MacKenzie, D. Lattimer, W. Thompson, M. Rutledge, F. Hoeniger, C. Maxwell.

Meds—J. Cuthil, A. Boyd, J. Wilford, G. MacHattie, P. Allan, E. Robertson, G. Stranks, J. Fyfe, D. Stuart, H. Nikaido, M. Jocef.

Campus Holds Air Raid Alert

the accommodation of all students during the 15-minute alert, Mr. Butlin said that no special safeguards have been constructed in them.

"The aim in this alert," observed Mr. Butlin, "is to remove all persons from rooms with outside windows and potential exposure to flying glass. In general ground floor or basement corridors will serve as refuge rooms. No students must remain in classrooms or laboratories during the alert."

Students are to be advised of the location of their particular refuge room at the beginning of the 10:30 lecture, and, upon the sounding of the alert—a wavering siren note—between 10.55 and 11 a.m., are to be directed there. Laboratories, with the exception of those engaged in essential war work are to be evacuated. Persons whose duty compels them to remain in labs are expected to know that lying prone on the floor beneath a table is the approved method of dodging bomb-hurtled fragments.

Mr. Butlin explained that members of the armed forces attending classes in the University, such as the R.C.A.F. men in the Physics building, do not come under his jurisdiction. He stated that their participation in the alert was at the discretion of their commanding officer, and in the past they had seen fit to give the fullest co-operation.

"All Clear," a steady two-minute siren wail, will signal resumption of normal university and city-wide activity at 11:15.

Reporter-Harvester Returns; St. Mike's Man Tells Story

when I landed back in Regina the second time and spent my money on hotel bills and food," Jim recounted, "but the situation was better in Saskatoon. They had railway cars on a siding for us, and we were told the railway officials there were much more co-operative."

Poverty of Farmers

"I changed my views considerably after talking to some of the other fellows on the return trip. They told me of the poverty of many of those farmers. One of the boys at Ernfold, John Dales, left almost all of his heavy clothing behind for the family of the farmer he was working for."

Unlike most of his companions, Jim never touched any wheat during the whole trip. He was bringing in oats at both places where he worked.

At his first farm he slept with seven other men in a bunkhouse on wheels, nine feet by six, on a straw-covered bunk. "You got used to it, though," he said, "and it was much better than the barns or stables some of the fellows had to sleep in."

Lived in Style

On the ranch Jim lived in style. A regular summer cottage, with separate rooms and double beds, housed the harvesters and they were driven to work by truck. The ranch produced almost double the average yield of oats with 4,000 bushels threshed daily. Top yield was 4,600 bushels.

Jim praised the work of government representatives in Saskatchewan. "Some of the fellows were disgusted with the way things were run, but I felt they did a swell job," he said. "The man I had to do with really put himself out, and he wouldn't even take my thanks.

"But I really think they made a mistake in letting high school boys go out. Many of theme were pretty small, and they simply couldn't do the work. I've been handling freight all summer, but I was completely exhausted after every day's work.

"We were under the impression that we were to be used as stop-gap labour, getting paid a little less but working a little less, too. Instead they expected us to do the same work as experienced men. I had to drive a team load for load with theirs."

Jim had no salary troubles. He was paid his $4 a day regularly, but still finished $10 down on the trip. "I consider it well spent," he said.

Brady Discusses Reconstruction Issues

the past three years there has been no satisfactory adjustment of parliament to the new war-time conditions.

Urging that parliamentary committees should be appointed to explore parliamentary policies before they reach the bill stage, Mr. Brady said that the members of such committees should be appointed according to their skill and knowledge rather than according to their regional or provincial representation.

"Institutional issues of Canadian democracy after the war will not be new, but will be old issues sharpened by new conditions," said the speaker. He stressed the need for co-operation between different government departments and services to avoid working at cross purposes.

Hamilton And London Harvesters Condemn Methods of Eastern Officials

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 27—(CUP)—Organization of the harvest plan came two weeks too late, Harold E. Bridge, educational secretary of McMaster University, said today, when he arrivcd home with 50 students — half of the harvest contingent from this University.

Mr. Bridge, who acted as liaison officer for the student harvesters, remarked of the excursion:

"The only thing I can see wrong is that the university parties were organized about two weeks too late. Our boys—or at least some of them—had just got into the swing of the thing when the snow came."

Generally speaking the McMaster University men had fewer "beefs" about the trip and working conditions than students from other Eastern universities. One youth of the class of '45 said the McMaster group was the best organized, adding, "But there did not seem to be work for all of the students." On the averages most of the contingent "broke even" on the deal, although a few youths went "in the hole."

London, Ont., Oct. 27 — (CUP) — Criticism of the manner in which student-harvesters were placed on Saskatchewan farms was voiced here today by Byron Boughton, 20-year-old third-year artsman who returned here yesterday.

"I do not blame Western farmers," he said, "but Eastern officials, who were in charge of the excursion to the West, showed a sad lack of knowledge of the needs of individual farmers and districts."

While admitting he "roughed it" during his brief stay in the West, Broughner praised the hospitality of Saskatchewan farmers and said memories of prairie farm life could only be happy.

The London youth returned after his stay on a Northern Saskatchewan farm terminated with the farmer's decision to complete threshing next spring. Bad weather was responsible for the postponement of the threshing.

Anxious to serve more than five days in the fields, Boughner applied to the Selective Service officer in Saskatoon for more work. An indefinite assurance was the best he could obtain and, faced with a prolonged period of inactivity, he caught the train home.

Broughner said he and another Western University student, Jack Winterbottom, bunked with ten horses and a couple of cows in a stable in the West.

A pile of hay was his bed and a couple of horse blankets, borrowed from the farmer, covered him. He admitted it was a little draughty during cold Western nights.

The food made up for any deficiencies in the sleeping accomodation in Broughner's opinion.

Bearded, Be-Ribboned Laval Students Visit Campus

Happy Harvest Delegation Pay Visit To Grounds, Attend Council Meeting

Colorful Quebec Students Sing French-Canadian Songs with S.A.C.; Tour Hart House, See Quints During Hectic Day of Sight-Seeing While Homeward Bound from Western Canada

ADDRESSED BY PRESIDENT CODY

By Michael O'Mara

A contingent of 50 student-harvesters from Laval University paid a flying visit to this campus yesterday and took it by storm.

The cane-flourishing, beard-sporting group—apparently more pleased with their experiences in the Saskatchewan harvest-fields than the men of other universities—spent a hectic three hours in the company of Toronto students. Into that short time they crowded an address from Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, a quick trip over to Maple Leaf Gardens to see the Dionne Quintuplets, a tour of Hart House, and participation in a wholly unprecedented meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, featured by singing of French-Canadian folk songs and delivery of college yells. Sandwiching their campus visit into a hectic day of sightseeing which included a tour of the Parliament Buildings and a meeting with the Junior Board of Trade, the Laval men arrived at the University at 2 p.m. They were met by S.A.C. and Varsity representatives and whisked up to Hart House, where President Cody, hastily summoned from a luncheon engagement, spoke to them in the Music Room.

Addressing the men from Quebec as "gentlemen of the ancient and famous University of Laval," the President welcomed them to Toronto and expressed pleasure at the opportunity that they had for gaining a better understanding of the people of Ontario and the West.

Members of a Great Family

He said that there was no basic difference between students of any part of Canada—that they were all "members of a great family searching for the truth, which Our Lord said alone can make us free."

He praised the Laval boys for volunteering to help hard-pressed western farmers when they were in grave difficulty.

Mentioning the Quebec provincial motto, "Je ne souviens," the President said he hoped his guests would remember all they had learned in their western trip, and would also remember their brief visit to Toronto.

Gordon Bell, VI Meds, Vice-President of the S.A.C., also addressed the visitors, expressing regret that their stay here was so short that it would be impossible to discuss problems of common student interest fully with them.

After Bell's brief speech of welcome, the boys from Laval grabbed up their canes from which gay ribbons jauntily fluttered, and were off to Maple Leaf Gardens to see their French-Canadian compatriots, the Dionnes.

Escorted by Varsity mastheaders and reporters who had been pressed into service as emergency campus guides, they arrived at the Gardens in time to catch the act which the Callander Kids put on, and stayed to see a demonstration of commando battle-tactics which Active Army men staged as highlight of the Victory Loan show.

Back to Hart House

Then it was back to the campus, where they were conducted through Hart House, expressing surprise at the size and magnificence of the buildings. "Just like a medieval cathedral," said one. "But where do they study?" asked another.

Regular fortnightly meeting of the S.A.C., scheduled for 4:30 p.m. in University College, was delayed while its members moved over to Hart House en masse to chat with the Laval harvesters.

Here, in the Music Room again, the boys from Quebec began to feel at home. They were having a beautiful time. They surrounded the co-ed members of the S.A.C. and gesticulated happily as they displayed all the gallant Gallicisms that are expected of French students. They gave cheers for Dr. Cody, for Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Acting General Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C., for Gord Bell, and other members of the Council.

Alouette

Then they started to sing. They sang Frere Jacques and led the Toronto students in a rousing rendition of Alouette. Their voices rang true in the Music Room, with the late afternoon sun slanting through the western windows, and created something new in collegiate atmosphere there. It was a hearty, lusty, rousing scene in which Toronto students lost their reserve and joined.

And the Laval men stood at attention—and the few of them that knew the words joined in—when we returned the compliment by singing "The Blue and White.' And their "Rippety-rappety" was nearly as loud as ours.

They really wanted to stay longer—but they had an engagement with the Junior Board of Trade and had to hurry away. But they copied addresses assiduously into notebooks, swore they would write to their new friends as soon as they got home. Before they left for downtown, the whole group—harvesters and S.A.C. and stray Varsity reporters by the dozen—posed for a picture taken on the hill south of the old Observatory.

The student group was headed by Roland Mercier, the man who sported the finest, blackest beard of the lot. In charge was Dr. Arthur Leblond, Dean of the Laval School of Commerce, and a party of five staff members.

One of the most intriguing things about the visitors was the canes they carried—stout walking-sticks with gold-and-black ribbons—School of Commerce colours—tied to the handles. Others had pennons attached. Most of the boys were weighed down with western

Queen's Editor Says Ottawa Issues Order

By Ken Phin
Editor, Queen's Journal

Kingston, Oct. 28—(CUP)—Student harvesters will not receive credit for C.O.T.C. time lost during their absence, according to an order issued early this week by National Defence Headquarters, it was announced here tonight. The Order stated that all students must put in the required 110 hours of military training during the academic year.

(C.O.T.C. authorities at Toronto announced they had received no such order from Ottawa and declined to comment on the Kingston report.)

Queen's authorities commented that although this is an official order from Ottawa affecting all universities in the region, they hoped the universities might arrange some reconsideration and achieve a settlement more suitable to all concerned.

It was further pointed out that assurance was given before the harvesters embarked that they would receive leaves of absence for all drills missed.

Leaves Promised Prior To Departure

A. B. Fennell, University of Toronto Registrar, announced two days before departure of the Toronto harvesters that permission had been given by the Department of National Defence that the C.O.T.C. would be authorized to grant leave of absence from military training from Saturday, Oct. 10 to Monday, Nov. 9, inclusive, to all members going to Saskatchewan.

Training Exemptions

The Committee on Military Training has agreed that students in the Second and higher years in the Faculties of Medicine and Dentistry should not be required to attend parades for at least the three weeks preceeding the commencement of their final examinations, and dates were set in accordance with the following schedule:

Year and Faculty	Date of Commencement of final examinations	required parade Date of last
II Medicine	March 23rd, 1943	February 27th, 1943
III Medicine	December 15th, 1942	November 21st, 1942
II, III, IV Dentistry	March 23rd, 1943	February 27th, 1943
V Dentistry	March 2nd, 1943 approximately	February 6th, 1943

Barber Recalls Former Harvest

"Dick" Morrow, one of the four barbers in the Hart House shop, was recalling the old days when he went west to help with the harvest. He said that years ago, the western provincial governments used to make the same sort a plea for harvest help and when the easterners arrived there would be two weeks' work for them instead of the five or six promised them.

Morrow didn't have much success in the harvest field. He said the situation this fall was probably identical to that when he was out there.

He got a job in Brandon, Man., when he quit harvesting and liked it so well he stayed for eight months. Incessant thirty below weather finally drove him back east in February.

Kindness Of Westerners Impresses Quebec Men During Harvest Excursion

High Cost of Living, Lack of Jobs Force 50 Laval Students to Leave West in Body; Feel Need of Greater National Unity In Canada, Opportunity to Meet English-Canadians More Frequently

MOST ARE COMMERCE STUDENTS

By Helen Bannerman

The group of 50 students from the Laval University School of Commerce, who visited this campus yesterday afternoon on their way back to Quebec City from the Saskatchewan wheat fields, all stated that while they got no tangible gains from the trip but eallluses and aching muscles, the journey had been invaluable in showing them other parts of Canada.

"I do not think that there is a real national unity in Canada, except possibly in Ontario and Quebec," stated Raymond Chalifour, First Year student. Admitting that his statement might seem surprising in the light of the constant controversy between some sections of the two provinces, he explained that he had gone to schools in both Moncton and Ottawa before entering Laval, and that his trip to the western harvest had shown him the Prairie Provinces.

"I have lived with English and Scottish families," he said, "and I can say heartily that they were fine people, perhaps better than we French in some respects. And after seeing other parts of the country it seems to me that Ontario and Quebec have more in common than the other provinces. It is certainly a pity that we can't meet our fellow countrymen more often. This trip has given us a fine chance to practise our English and to see more of the country."

Great Generosity Shown

George Adam, Third Year student in the Laval University School of Commerce, and Administrator of the Commission of Debates of that university, voiced the opinion held by most of the boys about their trip to Saskatchewan. "The food was good, the work was hard, and the people were wonderful to us."

"The thing that pleases us most," he continued, "is the kindness and friendship shown us on our return trip and also on the trip out. We have had every kind of help to make visits to industrial plants and offices in Saskatoon, Regina and Winnipeg, which we are naturally interested in since our course is Commerce. We visited the Winnipeg Grain Exchange among others. The authorities of Frontier College have been extremely kind in arranging these trips. Here in Toronto they even got us a private street-car."

Cost Prevented Staying

This group of students worked 10 days in the grain fields, instead of the scheduled month. The bigh cost of living prevented many of the amateur harvesters from staying longer.

Cyprien Picard, First Year student, related how he had worked eight full days but had been paid only six. "A number of the boys had to wire their families for money to get home, but even so the trip was well worth it," he said.

"It has been a wonderful experience for me," said Hubert Clement, who although not a student, went with the boys. "The horses in the West are fat and the men are lean," he continued. "I think that the land needs an aqueduct system, but I think that it would be nearly impossible to irrigate 1,500 square miles of territory. There are a great number of Russians and Germans there, who, although they retain their racial characteristics, are very good Canadians."

15-Hour Day

Other students repeated variations of the same theme, but one and all stressed the kindness of the Westerners, and the hard work. A 15-hour day was the rule, the boys rose at five a.m. and did not stop work until eight p.m.

"We were so tired that we didn't care about outside events or even about food; we just rolled into bed when the day was done," said another young harvester. "Some of the boys are on such isolated farms, with no telephone and many miles of plains between them and civilization that they do not know yet that the harvest special has returned home."

Drama Committee Defers Fall Show

There will be no University Drama Committee productions in Hart House Theatre during the Fall term it was decided at a luncheon meeting of the Committee in Hart House last Monday. Mr. M. Nichol, manager of the theatre, told The Varsity that it was felt that such activity would interfere with the various College presentations. The theatre has been reserved by the Committee for the evening of February 9 when four one-act plays will be presented. The evening of March 9 has also been reserved.

As Good As Their Word

Word was flashed over CUP wires at midnight last night that harvesters from Queen's University, returning from their labours in the Saskatchewan wheat-fields, would receive no dispensation from their C.O.T.C. drills. Such dispensation was to have been granted by the Department of National Defence under the general agreement with National Selective Service under which the volunteers boarded the Harvest Specials Thanksgiving week-end.

No parallel order has yet been received at our own C.O.T.C. headquarters, but one assumes that unless the editor-in-chief of The Queen's Journal is in grave error—and he is a reliable reporter—it will come through shortly.

Students went in large numbers from the universities of Ontario and Quebec to join the fight to save a bumper grain yield—and the fact that the fight was begun several weeks too late and have proved considerably short of completely successful is in no way their fault.

They went at the urgent request of the federal government—and the federal government included in its request suggestion that students would receive wages of "four dollars a day and up." This promise was broken; in fact there was apparently no attempt made to carry it out, since Saskatchewan farmers received no blanket wage instructions from either the provincial or the federal governments. And most of the student-harvesters have accepted that broken promise without overly-bitter resentment. They took the financial loss; but we feel they should not take this blow to their military status without vigorous outcry.

Last night's news would seem to come as the result of over-organization at Ottawa. It is the wont of National Selective Service to make promises which they cannot fulfill, because co-operation is not always forthcoming from other government departments. Right hands and left hands seem singularly unfamiliar to one another, and the result is often disastrous to the total integrity of the organization.

If orders reported from Kingston last night are allowed to stand, it will constitute an ignoble and damaging breach of faith.

See Canada First

Yesterday this university was treated to a visit from a group of student-harvesters from Laval University in Quebec City, who were on their way home from helping with the Saskatchewan harvest. Most of the Toronto students who met these men knew very little about Quebec; the visitors readily admitted that they in their turn knew little about their fellow students in Ontario. The visit gave both groups an all-too-rare chance to find out about another part of this huge country by the only practical method, that of meeting those who live in another district.

Our visitors from Canada's most venerable seat of learning have visited other Canadian universities in the course of their trip. They were entertained at the University of Manitoba and at Saskatchewan University. In each they found many friends and also different attitudes. The real worth of their trip to themselves, they said, was not the work they did but the chance they had to see a large area of Canada which they had not known before. This attitude seems to us to be well worth encouraging.

We Don't Get Together

The root difficulty behind many of Canada's problems over the years and at the present time is provincialism. Too few people have seen the rest of the country and the others are all too prone to think in the narrow groove of opinion in their own province or locality. Thus we have the sight of Ontario and Quebec accusing each other of a great many things which in actual reality probably do not exist, of the Maritimes and the Prairie Provinces disagreeing with Ontario and Quebec and of British Columbia crying that it is the forgotten man, "a million miles from Ottawa." The sight of so much bickering is depressing to anyone who cares at all about the present and future of Canada, not of a section of it, but of the whole country.

No amount of talking or of listening to speakers from another province can fill the gap in knowledge between the sections of our Dominion. The knowledge so acquired makes a fine basis for later understanding which can be rounded off only by visiting our fellow citizens or having them visit us.

Barriers Eliminated

The barriers of distance and, not least, of language, stand always in the way of understanding. However, in the case of our visitors yesterday the distance bogey was eliminated at least for a short time, and both guests and hosts managed to overcome the language difficulty quite satisfactorily with a mixture of a good deal of English and some halting French, combined into an understandable whole with mutual good will and tolerance for each others' limitations.

As a result the hosts found that, as far as their guests were concerned, many of the stories they had heard about the French-Canadians were happily untrue. With true French gallantry the visitors expressed themselves delighted with their visits, both here and in western Canada. They considered this opportunity to see how the rest of Canada lives as one of the most fortunate strokes of luck that had ever befallen them.

Means of continuing inter-province visits, and of perhaps making them a regular feature of university life came into the discussion, and most of the students agreed that the sending of delegates from one college to another, while feasible, was not a great deal of use since only a few picked students could benefit by this scheme. While the student delegates broadened their views and returned enthusiastic, the mass of the students heard about the trips at second hand and as a result were not much impressed.

Scholar Gypsies

A possible solution of the problem with which we agreed was enlargement of the systems of Youth Hostels, which exist over most of Southern Ontario, to give young people the chance to visit other localities cheaply. A wide organization of "Wander Vogel" or Scholar Gypsies in Canada would do much to help inter-provincial relations in the future.

In the early days of universities travel on foot was necessary for scholars since they were poor and had to go long distances to find their teachers. We can take a leaf out of their book to help toward understanding our fellow countrymen.

All Clear

Yesterday's air-raid alert was generally agreed to have been a success. Certainly, to the strolling reporter, equipped with his press card and the good will of the campus police, it looked like a success from the outside. Students and passing members of the outside public were hastened into cover within short minutes after the sirens first screamed; and there were few minor disturbances to mar the exterior proceedings during the quarter-hour test.

The efficiency with which the campus functioned under its first daylight alert test is a credit to the work of Mr. Butlin and his staff at Simcoe Hall A.R.P. headquarters; and it also is a credit to the spirit of co-operation displayed by the students of the university. Words of commendation should be passed out all around.

It is admitted that there were a few rough spots in yesterday's show. They will be ironed out in future tests. The fact which stands out is that the university machine is a controlled one, ready to gear itself to almost any type of action when the need arises.

Not Enough Corpses Says A.R.P. Head

Somewhere in a Shell-Hole, Oct. 28.—(CUP)—Fact that yesterday's cataclysmically destructive events on the campus of the University of Toronto were all merely part of a Practice Air-Raid Alert was revealed at a late hour last night by A.R.P. authorities.

Destruction of university buildings and loss of 300 lives was all part of a pre-arranged plan laid down by headquarters to accustom campus air raid wardens with the actual conditions of blitz warfare, A.R.P. director A. Rae d'Allert told survivors of The Varsity staff.

"Arts buildings and Artsmen were earmarked for destruction several weeks ago under special orders from Ottawa that only unessential materials be wasted in the demolition demonstration," said Mr. d'Allert.

"We experienced some difficulty in persuading medical men to give adequate attention to wounded Engineers," he chuckled, "but we soon remedied that by suggesting that a platoon of Schoolmen be assigned to blow up the Medical Building."

The success of the demonstration pleased Mr. d'Allert, but he repeatedly stressed that it was far from the real thing. Trinity College and parts of University College are still standing," he pointed out, "and even Victoria has not been entirely demolished. And casualties among the Artsmen were pitifully low."

The next alert will be more thoroughly carried out, he informed The Varsity's sole remaining masthead member, but tactics employed in yesterday's demonstrations can be taken as a clear indication of government policy.

"STUDENTS IN A NEW LAND"

Reprinted from an editorial in The Sheaf, Oct. 23, 1942.

This has been an exciting fall for university students especially those from the East, who with a youthful zest for adventure and romance came West to help gather in a rain and snow stricken crop. Given an epic send off, greeted heetically en route (train schedules were upset at Winnipeg we understand), they arrived in Saskatchewan, where at various points they were finally received by employment officials. It is unfortunate that the students of this university were unable to welcome in some way or another the eastern students who arrived in Saskatoon, but we too were busy with the crop.

As the harvest season draws to a close, these students are filtering back to the East through various ehannels. There won't be much adventure and romance left in their souls. There is nothing particularly adventurous about twelve hours work per day, a team and a pitchfork. There is nothing particularly romantic about a wheat field on a hot or windy day, or a small prairie town. And these students have also things to complain about. Arriving here they found in many instanees, being inexperieneed, they were not wanted, that for large numbers jobs were difficult to obtain. More than that the wages they had been promised had not in all cases been forthcoming. Behind all the headline publicity there is, it seems, another story—an unpleasant one of unexpected confusion and inefficiency. Did the Saskatchewan Harvest Labour Board find this sudden influx a little too much for it? And are our western farmers justified in complaining about inexperienced help under existing circumstanees.

We are eagerly awaiting a flood of Eastern exchanges. Rapturous expostulations concerning the great and open west will be lacking in the editorial comment of the eastern scribes. Sizzling condemnations are expected. But not until all the facts are known, until all factors and circumstanees are taken into consideration can a final judgment be pronounced. To obtain this a complete investigation and report is essential. Without this we will righteously term the whole affair a scandal.

Nevertheless, these students did journey into a new land. For a short time they lived the life of the west. A broader understanding and a greater knowledge of Canada should result. A particular way of living and thinking did not perhaps become apparent to them. It is not apparent to many students of the west themselves. But in summing up, Canada is a large nation. Migrations of large numbers such as this assist in, are almost essential to its cultural development. It is true, that complaints and mistakes such as are apparent in this instanee give rise to sectional differences. May they be forgotten, however, in a recognition of the deeper significanee of the oceasion.

May Restrict S.P.S. Enlistment

Allocation Of Engineers To Essential Positions Said Government Plan

Order-in-Council Embodied in Wright's Speech; Clears Up "Misunderstandings" Caused by Predictions

"TALENT SCOUTS" BARRED

The Globe and Mail in a newspage story yesterday said an Order-in-Council now before the Dominion Government provides for the allocation of graduating students in science and engineering to the armed forces and essential industries. Voluntary enlistment of these students will be restricted, though not abolished.

The story said the new order was embodied in the undelivered speech by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, in which he predicated changes in the government's policy regarding university students.

"Missunderstanding," arising from Mr. Wright's speech is expected to be cleared up by the order, which does not contain any regimentation of curtailment of courses, the story said.

(The speech had predicted that students might be forced to enter courses fitting them for technical posts in the armed forces or key positions in war industry.)

It was revealed by "a reliable source" that the order implemented recommendations made by Canadian university heads to government officials at a conference last May, the story continued.

These recommendations provided that new graduates in science and engineering be distributed between the navy, army, air force and essential industry according to their training and the existing demand.

"Talent scouts," which the three services and industry sent out to the universities each spring to recruit the graduates in advance, will be forbidden. Instead, the technical branches of the armed services and all essential industries will give advance notice of their requirements to the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel, a divison of Selective Service.

These will be closely checked and the students placed according to the priority ratings of the applicants for their services. The students will be given an opportunity to state their preferences before being placed.

The conference of university, military and Government officials agreed that the students should be left free to volunteer in some technical—with emphasis on the technical—branch of the armed services. This the order will allow, it is understood, but with the provision that, if the number of volunteers should exceed the specified requirements of the army, navy or air force, the surplus will be turned back into war industry.

Graduating students would only be allowed to enlist in branches of the armed services for which their training qualifies them.

Speaking Of Sport

By Pete Aykroyd

This column was subjected to the squeeze play today and subsequently the Rev. was unable to get started on anything with true meat in it. However a few things of importance are at hand and here they go.

REQUEST

Everyone appreciates the tremendous task that confronts Mac McCutcheon and his Intramural Sports Staff in organizing schedules and successfully running off athletic contests. Close to one hundred teams are now functioning in the sports' loop and with the winter season approaching, bringing with it School's 1,000 baseball teams and 500 basketball teams, the sports program should become more and more congested.

Few team managers realize the complications that arise from withdrawals and defaults. Opposing managers must be notified immediately, referees must also be given notice, the game must be postponed to a future uncertain date, all the records have to be altered and a general chaotic state results. If the managers would think twice before giving notice of default and analyze their situation, they would find, no doubt, that they could carry on, albeit with a handicap.

Consequently, in the interest of our over-taxed program and our industrious sports staff, managers and captains are requested to "play ball" with the rest of the crew and not back out unless an exceptionally serious obstacle presents itself.

CREDIT

The galloping ghosts from Meds have a black sheep hidden in their rugby roster. Young George Lewis, 160-lb. running half has entered the senior company this fall and in his first try on Tuesday made a sensational 85-yard run to score the Medsmen's only major. This character is an old hand at running and has seen the tape first in dozens of track events. His agility with the boxing gloves has kept him physically fit the year around and consequently he is a well developed ball player.

With George in there, Meds' chances look better than ever. In fact they look good.

Having been pursued about campus since Monday by numerous young ladies in various stages of betrothal brandishing meat axes, we were quite relieved to be able to take cover today, if only for 15 minutes.

Of course this alert business today was a very, very preliminary sort of thing indeed. It was sort of the testing of a machine without any load on it of course, so batant realism was not even felt desirable. The President and the Superintendent of Buildings were discussing the way the whole business had been run and expressing approval of the functioning of the mechanism. "D course," they said, "in the real thing we'd have the control room moved downstairs." And of course this and of course that, if it were the real thing. "And of course," added the President, "in the real thing you and I wouldn't sit next to a window."

ME EITHER!

During our alert this morning an anxious refugee in the Park Plaza Hotel (lightest refuge room in the city with plate glass windows all around—adv.), asked an officer, "It is all right to smoke in this blackout?"

But that's not so strange. This one came out of the real thing. It was during the fire blitz on London that a Canadian newspaperman was standing observing a tremendous holocaust which illumined the night sky for miles around. He paused in his observations to light a cigarette. A hand descended on his shoulder and a very wardenish voice indeed commanded, "Put out that damn light!"

The general impression of the visit of Laval students to Varsity yesterday was one of general bonhonmie and exuberance of spirits, but it was inevitable that with a poor command of English on the part of the Laval harvesters and even worse command of French on the part of our Varsity intellectuals that complete understanding should fail in some points of conversation.

For instance, one Lavalite asked his Varsity companion, "Could you tell me where I could find a Doctor of—how you say?—Dbstetrics? I've got to get my glasses fixed."

But then, lack of comprehension extended to more than linguistic matters in one Manitoba town. There they gave their now famous yell beginning "Carabin Ziska, Carabin Zoska . . ." and ending with three lusty "Laval's." An irate Airwoman asked a railway official "Why don't they lock up these ?':&) Vichyites?"

One lad, happy to be back from the wheat fields, queried this tired reporter on local night clubs. "Sorry, old man," we had to reply, "but we've been so busy this term that we'll only be going out for the first time this Friday."

"Dh," returned our Canadien friend, impressed,, "you are studying medicine then?"

School Natators Swamp Vicmen

School served notice yesterday that they were going to pick up where they left off last year in local swim circles. Led by Fred Sansom, who won the 50 yd. backstroke and was a member of both winning relay teams, and Ken Gilbert and Bill Lockhard, the Junior School swimmers collected a possible in scoring 30 points against Vic's 3. The best time of the day was Ken Gilbert's 33.4 second victory in the 50 yd. breaststroke.

Emmanuel and Trinity, in the second half of the swim double-header, had an evenly matched contest with Trinity finally dunking their rivals by 19-14. Brock Brace led the Emmanuel squad to victories in both relays and the 50 yd. backstroke, but Trinity scored the necessary margin by taking the first two positions in the 50 yd. breast-stroke and 50 yd. free style.

Dents Upset St. Mike's With Second 1-0 Victory

Yesterday afternoon Dents registered their second consecutive 1-0 victory. A hard-fighting St. Mike's team were the victims.

The first half was fairly even with no serious scoring threats from either team. There were several fumbles in the first quarter by both teams, but from there on the game was up to mid-season standards. The kicking in the second half was above average, with Dents' Hambly having a slight edge. The ball was in St. Mike's possession on the 49 yard line at the start of the fourth quarter with still no score. A poor snap and a fumble on the first play combined to give Dents the ball, and set up the only scoring play of the game. Dn their first down Hambly booted an end over end kick that rolled over the line, and Mancini was rouged on a picture tackle by Jack Cummings and Johnny Hughson.

St. Mike's came right back fighting, and Tom Jacob made the first of his last quarter break-aways good for 40 yards. A few more plunges brought St. Mike's in position to tie up the game, but Joe Aegro's long rolling kick rebounded from the Dents' goal-post and St. Mike's were penalized for no yards on the play. Another penalty eased the pressure on Dents and except for a 25 yard breakaway by Tom Jacob, Dents were in no further trouble. The game ended with Dents in possession after completing two consecutive first downs.

Jacob's offensive play for St. Mike's, and Tony Bruno's and Ray Finnan's defensive efforts were the stand-outs for the Double Blue. For Dents, Wilf Fergueson gave further evidence that he is one of the outstanding plungers in interfaculty rugby this year. Dents were without the services of Bob Marshall, their regular kicker, but his chores were ably handled by Bill Hambly.

School Lead Track Race

At the stadium yesterday afternoon the interfaculty relay championships got under way. As the meet is being run in three sections, the following results and standings are tentative. The second and third sections will compete today and tomorrow at 4 p.m.

Teams that better the time turned in yesterday will of course receive the points and thus will change the standing. At present S.P.S. maintain a three point lead over Meds and are in first place with 16 points. Trinity, with 12 points, placed third just one point behind Meds. The medical boys are running again and are quite confident that they can beat School out.

All races were four man relays and here are the official results:

440 yds.—S.P.S., 48.8; Meds, 49.8; Trin. 51.9.

880 yds.—Meds, 1.41.8; S.P.S. 1.42.8; Trin., 1.52.4.

2 miles—Meds, 9.6; S.P.S., 9.12.4; Trin., no entry.

1 mile—Trin., First (only team to compete).

Medley, 440-220-220-880—S.P.S., 4.1.8; Trin., 4.12.

A.R.P. CLICKS IN CAMPUS DAYLIGHT ALERT

Report Only One Incident Of Non-Co-operation In 15-Minute Raid Test

Sirens Barely Audible Indoors but Wardens Move Students Away from Windows into Basement Rooms; Outdoors Hushed as Latecomers Scurry to Cover in Nearby University Buildings

SUSPICIOUS WARDENS CHALLENGE REPORTERS

By Rex Wilson

Warning for Toronto's first daytime air raid alert was relayed to University students and staff by siren, whistle, word of mouth and one very large Chinese gong. The sirens sounded just before eleven o'clock yesterday morning, but they could scarcely be heard indoors. Wanderers on the campus went to shelter quickly and those already indoors were informed of the warning by members of the Univcrsity Air Raid Precautions organization and moved away from windows into halls and basement rooms. Visitors to the Royal Ontario Museum were informed of the alert by the crashing of a great Chinese gong on the third floor landing.

Human outdoor noises were soon hushed and the only sound which could be heard after the sirens stopped was the cawing of crows in Queen's Park.

Only one incident was reported to control headquarters in Simcoe Hall when a motorist refused to stop when signalled by a warden in sector 118, Victoria College. No artificial incidents were planned, A. J. Butlin, University Sector Warden, explained, as the 15-minute period was too short to allow it. The main purpose of the practice, he said, was to test the communication systems and protect people from flying glass. Widespread attempts at realism were not made.

Central Control

While most of the University was affected by the alert for only the official 15-minute period, activity started at 10:20 in the central control headquarters in Simcoe Hall, and the staff there did not go off duty until 11:30, a period of one hour and ten minutes.

In the early part of this period last minute details were checked and queries from the sector wardens in the 12 sectors of the Campus were answered by telephone by Mr. Butlin. Action started at 10:36 when the centre received the yellow warning from division headquarters. This warning signifies the approach of enemy aircraft, destination unknown. It was relayed immediately over three telephone lines to the 12 sectors of the University.

This relay was completed at 10:42 and five minutes later sectors 119 and 120, the Meteorological Bureau and Museum sectors respectively, reported all posts manned. These posts include patrols in the buildings and outside and one member of the A.R.P. organization at the telephone. For the most part there were no roof watchers as the A.R.P. organization in the Toronto area has not developed that far generally. Some buildings, however, had roof watchers, and the Royal Ontario Museum was found to have developed its internal precautions to a high degree.

Action Signal

While the sirens were wailing the action signal at 11:03 the last sector reported all posts manned. The staff of the building superintendent's office next door to control beadquarters had to be told to evacuate to the halls as the siren could not be heard in their department.

At 11:04 seetor 115, Hart House, reported themselves alert and ready for action. A steel helmet appeard on the warden's desk, President H. J. Cody arrived to observe the nerve centre in action, and the staff of four, the section warden, three wardens at telephones and one checking sector reports, settled down for the tensest part of the practice.

With only one minor incident reported however, the staff had only routine reports to complete. Chief fault observed by the warden was that one sector failed to report All Clear after the signal had sounded and is still, technically, standing to action stations.

At 11:28 the division warden phoned in the green signal indicating that the danger was past, and the staff left their posts.

General opinion of members of the A.R.P. organization all over the campus was that the alert was a successful one. A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, admitted that it had revealed flaws in the organization, but pointed out that that was the purpose of the alert. The co-operative spirit of the students was praised.

Campus Cleared

Meanwhile collegians and visitors to the University area had fled the campus and classrooms, leaving the campus outwardly in a state of suspended animation for 15 minutes.

Observers reported a general scuttling for shelter when first the siren sounded, but after the first reaction pedestrians took cover quietly. Traffic on the arteries around and about the university stopped almost immediately. Two mail trucks which showed proper credentials were allowed to proceed in the University area and the postman went about his duly appointed rounds.

An ambulance and an army truck were not stopped. Another exception to the general rule was the C.O.T.C. headquarters, at 119 St. George, where military status enabled business to be carried on as usual.

Elsewhere routine was abruptly interrupted as students gathered in places of refuge. There they amused themselves variously, reading The Varsity, studying, knitting, and in one case, actually continuing a hot discussion in logic even though they didn't have to. Engineers sang new and old engineers' songs in front of the Engineering Society store in the School building while a Fine Arts class, 98 per cent feminine, remained in their darkened lecture room above by special dispensation and looked at slides.

Touches of Realism

A touch of realism was added as heavy smoke from a leaf fire drifted in an open window at the Economies Building. At Trinity there was another when volunteers were called for to man a stirrup pump. There students played cards, billiards and ping pong. At the Museum a varied group of students from the University, the Ontario College of Art and two of the city's public schools, as well as other visitors and the staff of the building were conducted to the theatre in the basement. The children entertained themselves and the others with songs under the direction of a member of the Museum staff.

Two co-eds arrived breathlessly in front of Hart House just in time to be caught there by the action signal. A warden motioned them inside and they were taken down a spiral staircase in front of the Great Hall to a refuge room between the kitchens and the Tuck Shop. Here the women of the staff were gathered along with a lone male officer from the C.O.T.C orderly room who said he was looking for a sandwich.

In the Anatomy Building which contained 500 students yesterday, students were told to cover their specimens, remove their lab cats, wash, put on their suit coats and go to the refuge room in the basement.

Outdoors, except for the cawing of the crows in the park and the usual sounds from the Conservatory of Music, all was still. Police and wardens patrolled their posts, and Varsity reporters, equipped with special authorization to be abroad at this time, roamed the campus. One reporter, who observed a lone woman being hustled to cover at 11:02 was later accosted three times—once by a policeman, once by a warden, and once by three men who converged on him from all sides, took down the details of his credentials and declared they would be investigated.

Another reporter, possessed of no credentials whatsoever, was assigned to C.O.T.C. headquarters, but when nothing happened there he left, and wandered all the way down to Hart House, where he loitered about trying to look official, and was never challenged once for his pains.

Museum Safe In Air Raid ---McIlwraith

According to the building warden, T. F. McIlwraith, the Royal Ontario Museum possesses in its basement theatre the best air raid shelter in the city. The auditorium supplies those in it with the protection of four concrete floors above it, and can be completely blacked out.

Besides this more or less natural protection, the Museum possesses the most highly organized Air Raid Precautions organization on the campus. Across from the theatre in the basement is a first aid station which may be manned by any of the 50 members of the Museum staff who have passed their A.R.P. and first aid examinations.

Protection of the valuable objects in the building is a problem not yet entirely solved. In the event of a raid they would be moved back from under the skylights. Incendiary bombs coming through the skylights would burn the wooden floors, but their progress would be halted by the concrete subflooring.

Under the skylights are wooden slats which may be removed in ease of a raid to lessen the hazard of fire. Boxes of sand are always ready and buckets are also on hand.

The copper roof of the museum presents a landmark form the air and undisclosed measures are to be taken to make it less conspicuous, The Varsity was told.

Happy Laval Harvest Delegation Pays U. of T. Flying Visit

souvenir-buttons clinging to their lapels. One harvester remarked, "I bought one cane in Saskatoon, one in Regina, one in Winnipeg, and I am going to buy one in Toronto."

But most of the boys started the trip fully equipped with canes. Apparently it's an old Laval custom—once discarded but revived this year—to carry canes. Their utility was demonstrated yesterday, both as impromptu conductors' batons, and as instruments with which to attract attention by hooking a fellow-harvester about the neck.

Premier Patterson Pleased With Easterners' Help In Saskatchewan Harvest

Bad Weather Returns 1,500 Volunteer Harvesters to Their Eastern Canadian Homes Before Anticipated Dates

VOLUNTEERS STILL TAKEN

By Vernon Lang
Varsity Staff Correspondent

Regina, Oct. 29 — (CUP) — Nearly 1,500 of the volnteer harvesters are already returning eastward. The recent bad weather lasting longer than usual, has caused the work to stop in most places.

Students from McGill University are required to return by November 2, unless they are delayed by train connections. Some 150 of these are now on their way.

About 100 High School students from Toronto and Quebec have already been sent back, as most of them were too young to stand the arduous work of harvesting.

In a sepcial interview, Premier W. J. Patterson of Saskatchewan said: "Men are still out on farms and those just leaving since the weather is worse are the best evidence that the scheme for bringing emergeney help from the east has been satisfactory both to those who came to work and to the farmers who employed them. "We want everyone baek East," he continued, "to know that we are pleased. The weather and the lateness of the harvest were against us.

"The major improvement next ycar will be more careful selection in the East," concludes Premier Patterson.

DISTRIBUTION NOTICE

Students are requested not to open any tied bundles of Varsities placed outside the north door of the Press. Recently, bundles marked for certain buildings have been untied, making it impossible for anyone to determine for which building the bundle was intended.

There is always a pile of loose Varsities outside the Press for individual students.

Harvest Leaves Create Confusion

No official statement has been relcased from the University of Toronto C.O.T.C. Headquarters concerning the denial of leaves for student harvesters.

It was announced at Queen's University Wednesday, that National Defense Headquarters had issued an order early this week stating that student harvesters would not receive credit for C.O.T.C. time lost during their absence.

(A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, announced two days before the departure of Toronto harvesters that permission had been given by the Department of National Defenee that the C.O.T.C. would be authorized to grant leave of absence from military training from Saturday, Oct. 10 to Monday, Nov. 9, inclusive, to all members going to Saskatchewan.)

No Denial at McGill

Montreal, Oct 29—(CUP)—Dr. Cyril James, President of McGill University, holds an undated letter from H. F. G. Letson, Adjutant-General of the Department of National Defence, stating leaves of absence will be given student harvesters who miss military parade.

The letter reads: "The Department of National Defence will give students who proceed on harvest work, leave of absence from normal military parade in connection with the University compulsory training scheme. Any parades missed through absence on this war work will be credited towards the total 110 hours required under the existing syllabus."

President James today announced that the above decision also applies to the University Air Training Corps.

Health Service Cares For Injuries Sustained In Campus Athletics

Students training for or participating in athletic competition do so voluntarily and assume the risks incident thereto, the University Health Service declared recently. Neither the University nor the Athletic Directorate has any legal responsibility or obligation to meet the expense of caring for the injuries sustained by student athletes because of athletic training or competition. Neither the University nor the Athletic Directorate assumes such responsibility for students who enter into such training or competition.

The University Health Service, however, has found it possible to provide for a measure of finaneial assistance towards the cost of the eare of students injured while engaged in the required physical training classes or in recognized athletic activities on the campus.

Such assistance is available only to students who pay the Health Service fee and who have satisfied the requirements of he Athletic Directorate in regard to athletic eligibility.

It will be provided solely on the authorization of the Director.

The amount of assistance that it is possible to provide in any case is of necessity very strictly limited. It is realised that the total cost to a student of an injury may not be covered, nevertheless, in the majority of cases, the amount provided will be sufficient to take care of a fair proportion of such costs.

Provided the injured athlete first secures the authorization of the Director, the University Health Service will pay: 1. The cost of necessary diagnostic X-rays; 2. Anaesthetists' fees at W.C.B. rates; 3. Surgcons' fees at W.C.B. rates; 4. Operating room fees in charged by a hospital; 5. Hospitalization costs to the extent of $2.00 per day for a mixmum of 30 days.

The University Health Service will not meet the expenses of students who are not eligible to receive such assistance. It will not meet the expense of treatment of injuries not reeeived while actually engaged in recognized physical training elasses or athletic activities. It will not meet the expense of treatment for which no official engagements have been made with the Director prior to the end of the academic quarter in which the athletic injury occurred. Students who secure unauthorized service do so on their own responsibility. The Health Service will not pay for costs other than enumerated above. In any case involving questions of eligibility fees, hospitalization, etc., the decision of the Director is final.

Last Rites Held For Dr. A. Baker

The funeral of Dr. Albert Baker, former professor of mathematics in the University, was held yesterday. Dr. Baker died Tuesday.

Honorary pallbcarers were: Sir William Mulock, Sir Robert Falconer, President Cody, Principal M. W. Wallace of U.C., Professor A. DeLury, professor emeritus of mathematics at the University; Professor S. Beatty, Dean of the Faculty of Arts; I. R. Pounder, professor of mathematies; S. H. F. Chant, professor of psychology; J. D. Loudon, assistant professor of medicine; and E. F. Burton, professor of physics.

"Professor Baker was one of the outstanding figures in the life of the University for the past 60 years," said Dr. Cody. "He was profoundly interested in all university matters and was a prominent member of the senate. He was one of the few surviving figures that linked the university of the present with that of the learly days."

Barzin Says Voters Need Education

In an open lecture yesterday on "Causes of the Decline of the Demoeratic Idea in Europe," Professor Marcel Barzin, formerly of the University of Brussels, said the fundamental source of hostile feeling toward democracy in Europe was a certain distrust in parliamentary government, which came through disappointment when elected representatives did not keep their pre-election promises.

Parliamentary candidates were forced to make promises before elections which they knew they could not keep, but there was no possibility for them to be perfectly honest. The enlarged electoral body did not have suffieient intellectual preparation not to make impossible demands of the candidates, said Professor Barzin.

In all the European democracies, the people felt that those in authority were being unjust. They did not trust the government, and did not expect to make any sacrifice for it.

In addition to this gap between government and nation, there was a wide gulf between the different parts of the nation. When two great sections in a country, the capitalists and the working people, each under the impression that the other is being favoured by the government, plaee pressure on it, it is difficult for the government to carry on.

In considering the changes necessary to make democracy rcally effective, Prof. Barzin said that he believed a citizen should come up to a certain minimum educational standard before being allowed to vote. If such regulations were made, the people, who in general respect knowledge, would make an effort to get the knowledge necessary for them to become conscious eitizens.

"With some changes we can retain in democracy the suppleness it must have to be resilient, to give the people of Europe hope of better conditions which they did not previously have, and confidence in the democracy for which we are fighting." he said.

Heads Of Universities Agreed To The Allocation Of Graduating Engineers

Navy, Army, Air Force and War Industries to Receive Specifically Trained Science and Engineering Graduates

CAREFUL SELECTION IN '43

The Order-in-Council now being considered by the Dominion Government providing for the allocation of graduating students in science and engineering to the armed forces and essential industries embodies an agreement reached last May in a conference of the heads of Canadian Universities, Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, told newspaperman yesterday.

The conference recommended that graduating men from these courses be distributed among the navy, army, air force and essential industries, according to the training they had received and the existing need for men in those fields.

Advance notice of requirements of technically-trained men will be given by national defence authorities and industrial heads to the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel—a division of National Selective Servce — under the proposed arrangement.

Such notiee will be checked against lists of graduating students. The students will be placed according to priority manpower ratings of applicants for their services, although in certain cases they may be allowed to state preferences for the type of work desired.

It is believed that the Order-in-Council, if promulgated, will leave students free to vlunteer in some technical branch of the armed forces; but it is probable that if quotas in such branches are surpassed, the surplus of volunteering students will be sent into war industries.

Graduates from science and engineering courses will probably be allowed to enter only those branches of the armed forces for which their university training has specially fitted them.

School Debates On Arts Value

"Resolved that the Artsman is a more valuable member of society than the Schoolman" is the subject of a debate in which the S.P.S. Debates Club challenges the debaters of Victoria. The debate will be held at the regular meeting of the Engineering Society on Monday at 3:30 in Room 22 in the Mining Building.

The affirmative is to be upheld by the experienced team of Barbara McNabb and Vic Butts from Vic. Ron Scott and George Nixon of School will take the negative. This is the first time in many years that School has ventured to challenge an Arts college.

Although it will take place at a regular meeting of the Engineering Society, Vic men and women will be welcome.

Varsity Flyers Drill Saturday

1. ALL candidates for enrolment in No. 3 (University of Toronto) Squadron of the University Air Training Corps, R.C.A.F., irrespective of whether their registry originates through the 1st Bn. or the 2nd Bn. of the C.O.T.C., or in any other way, are to parade at the South end of the North campus at 1330 hrs., Saturday, 31 OCT.

2. Wherever reasonably possible, candidates who have already passed an R.C.A.F. medical examination and still have on charge any C.O.T.C. uniforms, publications or other supplies drawn during this term should return these to 119 St. George Street today or tomorrow morning, and bring a clearance receipt to produce on parade tomorrow afternoon.

3. Candidates should bring to parade tomorrow their national registration certificates and, wherever applicable and possible, their birth certificates or any other documents for which they may have been asked and which they have not already produced.

Boot Shortage Only Temporary

"There is a definite shortage of certain equipment," Capt. C. H. Johnson, Quartermaster of the C.O.T.C., told The Varsity today. "Boots, sizes 8 to 9½ are especially hard to obtain, and men drawing their uniforms now may be required to wait a few days until the equipment is available. However, supplies are coming through all the time, and the delay will not be long."

The C.O.T.C. is supplied by the R.C.O.C., and is only a small part of the military forces which draw their equipment from those stores. The shortage of boots, accredited to lack of labour and materials, is not serious, and the available goods are being evenly distriubted among the fighting forces of this area.

Student-soldiers are warned that they must be careful with all equipment issued to them, for much of it is irreplaceable. In former years, damaged or lost goods were replaced from stores when payed for. However, this year due to many shortages, each member of the C.O.T.C. will be personally responsible to the C.O. for all equipment issued to him.

Ailing Students Accomodated By Health Service

The Univedsity Health Service now has in operation an Infirmary for Men and an Infirmary for Women.

The Infirmary for Men is situated on the third floor of the west wing of Hart House.

The Infirmary for Women is established, through the co-operation of University College, in connection with the University College Women's Infirmary in the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street.

Graduate nurses are in charge of both infirmaries, and medical supervision is provided by the Health Service staff.

These infirmaries are intended for students with minor illnesses requiring bed care for a period of a few days to a week and are primarily for students in residence or lodgings for whom such care is not otherwise readily available. They are not intended for serious illness or injury requiring hospitalization for longer periods nor for students living at home where bed care is available.

Students will be admitted to the infirmaries on the authorization of the Director or assistant-Director of the Health Service. While in the infirmary, a charge of $1.50 per day, payable to the Bursar of the University of Toronto, will be made to cover the cost of meals, laundry and routine medication.

Sense Of Proportion

A feeling of discouraged futility accompanies the news that many students on this campus have expressed the thought that if a university dance is not formal, it is not worth attending. Such opinions have, in effect, been expressed by many on this campus, both directly, and also indirectly, by tacitly refusing to buy tickets to attend such affairs. This attitude, in times like these, coming from supposedly the more intellingent section of the community, is to be deplored and dreaded.

In view of the fact that many universities, most notably Princeton, have banned for the duration all but a few of their annual campus social functions, and in the face of the President's plea to all university organizations to keep their social outings as unostentatious as is possible, such an attitude is not only inexcusable but nearly unbelievable.

While we do not wish to appear to be crepe-hangers and killjoys, we do believe that a more serious and sensible attitude on the part of such students is to be expected. It is undeniably a privilege for us to be permitted to complete our education or technical training at this time, and the least that can be done to demonstrate appreciation of this privilege is to refrain from extracting from this privileged position every last gain of selfish personal pleasure.

Such an attitude on the part of some students is indicate of a degree of irresponsibility to their university and to the community. If such men to be leaders in our society, as they probably will be, their attitude must mature and become more responsible to themselves, or they will be dangerous to all.

To End Isolationism

At Barnard, women's college at Columbia University, a revolutionary experiment in the teaching of history has had a successful trial under the leadership of Professor Eugene Hugh Bryne, innovator in a course of "de-isolationized United States history." The basic idea behind the experiment is to stop the teaching of "American history in a vacuum." Professor Byrne describes his course as "an exercise in historical imagination."

The purpose of the course is to present the United States to its students as one of the world's nations, and it examines American background in Europe and as far back as the Middle Ages, and the influence of the different nationalities on American history and development.

Of particular interest in this country is the fact that the course includes the study of the development of Canada and of Latin America parallel to that of the United States.

Of particular interest on this campus is the fact that the course includes among its texts the works of Jacques Maritain, great French philosopher who is at present a professor of philosophy at St. Michael's College.

This far-sighted course, termed by sophomorish TIME "unusually sophisiicated for undergraduates," also includes the works of Harold Laski, Archibald MacLeish and Machiavelli on its list of required reading. Two of the documents in its texts are the Resolves of the First Continental Congress, provisionary government during the first years of the American Revolution, and John Dickinson's Letters of a Farmer in Pennsylvania.

Professor Byrne's laudable aim in organizing his unusual course should be more widely recognized and followed, in order to do away with the isolationist attitude in the teaching of American history, or as he says, with the teaching of this history in a vacuum.

Outdated And Inaccurate

Last Monday we had the temerity to chide one of our King Street contemporaries on a matter of story placement which we believe constituted a considerable distortion of news. That item concerned the student-harvest situation in Saskatchewan and highlighted the inanities of an Alameda editor with a flare for overstatement.

Today we are mildly pleased to be able to quibble once more at The Globe and Mail, a journal which we beilive was guilty of actual inaccuracy yesterday morning. It ran a by-line story from its Ottawa correspondent, the intrepid Oakley Dalgleish, under a headline which said in part, "Some Students Were Found Unfit, but Only 47 Returned Home to East Ahead of Time." "Ahead of time" is defined in the story as prior to Oct. 31; we submit that several hours before the downtown presses rolled a party of 50 harvesters from Laval toured this campus—on Oct. 28.

All of which was indubitably inaccurate but perhaps excusable, inasmuch as Mr. Dalgleish's story had been written from Ottawa, a town not always the source of unimpeachably accurate information. What was not excusable in The Globe and Mail's harvest coverage yesterday was the fact that buried beneath the Dalgleish story was a Canadian Press dispatch from Regina which quoted W. W. Dawson, secretary of the Saskatchewan Harvest Labour Committee, as saying that "one-third of the harvesters who travelled from eastern Canada to Saskatchewan early this month to help in the wheat-fields have now returned home." This Regina story was apparently not available for the early edition in which the Dalgleish story first appeared; but when it hit the Metropolitan Edition it was allowed to run under the misleading headline we have mentioned.

We fail to understand why the deskmen on The Globe and Mail staff seem to prefer to leave their staff stories in juxtaposition with press service reports which outdate them; nor do we condone such haphazard headline-writing as that in which they not infrequently indulge.

Accurate and unbiassed presentation of controversial news is a wartime duty of newspapers which seems not to concern The Globe and Mail unduly.

Further Discussion

Another campus debate on the general position of the arts student in wartime will be staged Monday afternoon in the Mining Building with the Debates Club of School challenging representatives of the Victoria Debating Parliament to uphold the resolution that "the Artsman is a more valuable member of society than the Schoolman."

Considered by a more diverse body of students, the whole question of the status of the humanities in wartime will probably be overhauled more thoroughly than it was in last Monday's debate at Newman Hall. And by constant thought, discussion and even argument along these lines, we may finally arrive at some definite understanding of the present problems—the value of non-war courses in a world which is now, although it will not always be, involved in the bitterest of all wars.

ART & MUSIC & Drama

. . . And Then Impressionism

James Rosselino

At a recital given by James Rosselino, tenor, in Hart House Theatre last evening, it was proved to me, at least, that we of this generation are definitely spoiled. The best in almost all art—but particularly in music—is constantly available. For this reason we seem to demand perfection; and if we do not get it in a performance, we simply feel like walking out.

But last night I didn't walk out, by a tremendous effort of will. Mr. Rosselino was given the benefit of the doubt, and whether we of the audience were rapidly become 'acclimatized' of whether the singer was actually improving, the performance seemed to get much better. This was probably due, in part, to selection—for this particular taste, at any rate.

The first was a Handel group, and according to the program was partly in English, and partly in French. I found that I could not distinguish which Mr. Rosselino was singing for the few opening bars. This might, of course, have been due to my ignorance; but might also have been due to the fact that I was suffering keenly from the stab-like off notes (mostly flat) which where frequently piercing the musical souls of those present.

The next group was also medieval in type—consisting of some Scarlatti, a melodic Sarti, and an old English air by Purcell, this latter arranged by Healy Willan. These merely left me with a strong impression that the accompaniment should be played on a clavichord rather than a modern Heintzman piano.

Two Italian numbers constituted the third group, and these Mr. Rosselino sang with much gusto, repeating the second for an encore. Yes, an encore! After intermission, the gentleman returned to sing an Aria which most Europeans would have enjoyed if only he hadn't hit the last flat falsetto. However, Mr. Rosselino did himself proud in the next, the Volga Boatmen as arranged by Sir Ernest MacMillan, which I considered the high point of the performance. A couple of French Canadian folk songs were quite pleasing too.

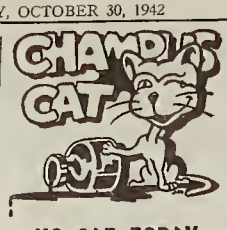
The performer concluded on a brave note showing the fine quality of his voice, which was definitely better in his upper range. So with this final note of appreciation, perhaps all cannot be viewed futile in a concert of this sort.

JANET BRYCE.

A Critic's Life

Dr. Walter's Lecture

Although the title of Dr. Arnold Walter's regular Thursday evening lecture at the Conservatory was Impressionism, the greater part of it was taken up with the post-Wagnerian Austrian and German composers.



Dr. Walter began the lecture by playing records and commenting on the music, illustrating with passages on the piano. The first records were the exposition of the first movement and the beginning of the second movement of Bruckner's Fourth Symphony. Dr. Walter showed that Bruckner's harmony was essentially Wagner's, enlarged by "mediant relationship." Mahler's most important contribution to technique, as exemplified in the same pare of his Second Symphony was his return to tontrapuntal writing, separate melodic lines rather than blocks of harmony, and his extension of contrapuntal practices, such as using figures and even chords as pedals. Strauss' Neo-Classicism was exemplified by recordings of the last duet of Der Rosenkavalier. These three composers have in common the point that their harmony is a development of the harmony of Tristan.

Now coming to the original subject of the lecture, Dr. Walter traced the word "impressionism" back to its origin in French paining. Debussy, the composer with whom this paper was concerned, abandoned all that the three preceding centuries had accomplished as mere tradition and prejudice. He discarded form and melodic repetition producing something unparalleled and unparallelable, as many young composers looking for an easy way to composition have discovered.

All Students Invited To Wymilwood Concerts

Sunday evening, Nov. 1, marks the opening of the current season of Wymilwood Musicales, sponsored by Victoria College. A series of concerts on alternate Sunday evenings has been arranged, featuring the best that Toronto's musical circles can offer.

The first artist to be presented will be Miss Nellie Smith, L.R.A.M., contralto soloist of Deer Park United Church, well known for her work with the Albert Whitehead Singers. Her accompanist will be Dr. Chas. Peaker, F.R.C.D., organist and teacher, perhaps best known to University students as conductor of the Hart House Glee Club.

The directorate wishes to emphasize that students of all faculties are invited to these Musicales. Members of the Army and Air Force stationed at the University are also welcome.

Meds Show Power While Trinity Fumbles; Spoone and Cleland Spark Juniors to Their First Win

CELLAR DWELLERS STELLAR

After dropping their first game to Dents last week, Meds came back with a surge of power yesterday to whip the Trinity rugby squad 14-1. It was the second straight setback for last year's finalists who only last Monday dropped a game to U.C. Meds were slow to start but took advantage of Trinity fumbles to move into a scoring position.

Meds kicked off and Trinity settled on their own 20. A series of end runs brought the ball to the Meds 25 where Norm Beatty kicked. The ball landed behind the Meds line and Paterson was rouged before he could cross his own line. That however concluded scoring for the Red and Black team.

Aghast at the sight of their own blood, the potential doctors began to turn on the power. Recovering a fumble on the Trinity 40 they launched a series of plunges which put them in a scoring position. An end run put the ball in the capable hands of Bill Paterson who crossed the Trinity line for a touch. Spoone made the convert. In the second quarter Trinity threatened seriously but were stopped by the hard tackling of Hugh Cleland.

Spoone kicked off for Meds to open the second half and lifted the ball into Trinity's end zone. A Meds tackler came in fast and dropped Johnny Brooks behind the line to give Meds another point. Play slowed down for the remainder of the quarter and it was not until the third quarter that more excitement was stirred. Spoone kicked on a third down for Meds and once more placed the ball behind the Trinity goal posts. Hugh Cleland recovered the ball for Meds and chalked up the second touch. Spoone passed to Cleland for the convert. Final score: Junior Meds 14, Trinity 1.

The young medical students are a much improved team compared with the team which dropped a 1-0 game to Dents last Tuesday. The addition of Cleland to the lineup has put a double charge of extra power in the team. Mills, Aird, Brooks and Beatty, the kicking maestro, were the standout players for Trinity's squad.

Junior Meds—Spoone, Clement, Cleland, MacIntyre, Paterson, Breneton, Toogood, Blanchet, Kofman, MacKinley, Hardman, Fielding, Slemon, Scott, Green, Salter, Wilson, Jeffs.

Trinity—Mills, Aird, Beatty, Brooke, Hatch, Smith, Sheppard, Spence, Livingston, Michel, Mathews, Davies, Lawton, Stinson, Crawford, Campbell, Sommerville, Gibson, Hickman.

S.P.S. Relay Men Take Safe Lead

The annual interfaculty relay championship, which this year has been extended over a period of several days, has already practically been won by the Engineers. After taking the lead in the events held Wednesday, School came back yesterday to take the mile relay to give them a decisive lead over their closest rival, Meds.

U.C. also turned out and running against time gained third place in the half mile team event. Meds, until today, had a chance to defeat their S.P.S. track rivals but lost that opportunity in placing second in the 880. Several events have still to be run this afternoon at the Stadium.

S.P.S. II Take 3-2 Win Dents Give Close Game

School's second soccer team is evidently that in name only, because at Little Vic field yesterday afternoon it edged out the more experienced Dents outfit by three goals to two. The game was evenly contested and its outcome doubtful until the final whistle. Jung played a sound game at inside left for S.P.S. and garnered two goals for his cause. This boy doesn't play an aggressive game but he makes some very nice moves that are pretty to watch. McNair and Adams, who netted the last goal, both turned in good games for the winners. For Dents Ed Johns and Don Clee were a tower of strength on the defense.

Dents—Smyth, Clee, Scott, Schwalin, Johns, Abitnov, Chapman, Feasby, Crouch, Bakalinsky, MacCartrey.

S.P.S. II—Crawford, McCowan, Frost, Geary, Turner, MacDonald, McNair, Jung, Honeyman, Dunford, Adams, Wilkinson.

JUST A PIECE OF PAPER

It appears that some students, the majority from first year, regard their University Registration Cards as just another piece of red tape that one has to put up with. Evidently a number of students value these little cards lightly, for latest reports indicate that more than 50 have been confiscated for the year because of illegal used. In all probability this infringement has been caused by ignorance rather than intent. So it may not be out of place at this juncture to emphasize their importance to the individual for his own good.

Apart from the compulsory use of the card—such as an admittance to lectures—many privileges are extended to these card holders. One of the first is that of participation in any Intramural athletic contest. Then you enjoy the facilities of the Gymnasium Wing and Swimming Pool in Hart House each evening until 10 o'clock. Further, admission to all scheduled rugby games at the Stadium (not including play-offs) is free for card holders, as is admission to all interfaculty hockey games at the Varsity Arena. During the colder months (in the not too distant future) your card permits you to skate every afternoon and certain designated evenings at the outdoor rink in the Stadium. For the fairer sex (and yes, even for some of the stronger) figure skating instruction is given. Reduced greens fees are charged at the Woodbine Club—scene of this year's tourney—for card holders. Those interested in riding will be glad to hear the Glen Mawr Riding Club and Kingsway Hunt Club both offer reduced fees. Likewise a bowling club gives reduced fees to the women students. The Varsity Ski Club out at Newmarket and all its acres are for the accommodation of the students. And this is only the start of the list.

So, it can be seen that if you want to make use of the opportunities you really do get a lot of good for those so-called 'incidental' fees that you dished out unknowingly at the beginning of the term. But to receive the benefits you must have your Registration Card. It doesn't do you a bit of good if you loan it to someone who is challenged and subsequently loses your card for misrepresentation, as many unsuspecting students have found. For instance, one person with a beard and aged countenance was naive enough to try to gain admittance to an O.R.F.U. game with a freshman's card. Another, on the demand of one of the stalwart gate-keepers spelt his name wrongly. And a third person didn't even know whose card he was trying to use. Of course, these were only a few of those cases of confiscation. So—the moral of the story is that as we have payed our fees we should get as much as possible for them by employing our Registration Cards in their legal use.

NO FOOLING THIS TIME

We realize with much chagrin that we called 'wolf' one week ago but we wish to announce that the Junior Harrier will positively be held tomorrow. The time for the start is set for 10 o'clock in the nice brisk morning, but Hec Phillips wants the many entrants to turn out beforehand to get their numbers and entrance. All contestants must register today in the Athletic Office and to date a large number have signed. As an added attraction No. 31 E.F.T.S. from Kingston is sending up a small contigent to join in the fray. So we expect quite a spectacle when upwards of a hundred will take the three mile jaunt around the campus to win points for their faculty. As entrance requirements are not stringent—all you need is a pair of running shoes and shorts—even those who have never run in competition are welcome to try their luck—and wind.

As a result of our research, we found out that all the second round had gone by the boards. The last match in that round was in favour of Jean Herwell, I Meds, over Aileen Smith by the score of 7-5, 6-1, which shows some good playing on both sides.

The third round is well on its way to the time honoured semis about this time. In it, M. Finlayson of P.H.E. fame defeated B. McLean to the tune of 6-4, 6-2. So now it's on to the races for her since she is next scheduled to play none other than the one and only Yvonne Baillie.

Virginia Rapelle MacLeod of Vic is a champion entering the semis as well, having triumphed over Barbara Conway in two good sets which ended up with a score of 6-2, 6-3. Ruth Carelton, of P.H.E., will meet her in her next match—since Ruth emerged victorious 6-0, 6-1, when she tested rackets with Nora Graham last Wednesday afternoon.

Two more contestants have worked their respective ways out of the third round as well. Here they are so you can take your pick of the finals, co-eds. Marg. Alexander, Trinity's mainstay, is one of them—since she defeated Connie O'Connor in two trick sets yesterday round about cocoa time. Their score read, when the match was all over, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4. The other possible tennis queen is last year's ambidextrous runner-upper in the finals—Virginia Kitto of P.H.E. Early yesterday morn she defeated Miss Eastman to the tune of 6-3, 8-6, in her own inimitable way. There they all are—and after a week-end of even fair weather we ought to be well into the finals come next Monday. If you're interested in tennis tournaments, do let us know in a concrete way and drop around anytime today to cheer the girls along. There's nothing like a cheer or two, you know, especially on a chilly afternoon. How about it?

U.C. Wins Soccer Match Pharmacy Ousted 2-0

Scoring goals in each half the Red and White shirts of U.C. defeated Pharmacy by a score of 2-0. Most of the play was in the Pharmacy end of the field except for occasional sorties by the druggists. Klaus Rothfels, outside left for U.C., scored the first goal on a pass from Kreisel. The second Royal College goal came in the second half from the toe of Frank Bailey, likewise from a clever passing play. At centre half Rod White played an outstanding defensive game for the winners. Pharmacy could only field eight players for the game and under a new ruling of this year U.C. played with the same number, the extra men being used as substitutes. With a full turnout and a little more practice the Pharmacy boys should come up with a good team.

Despite Rationing Tuck Shop Thrives

Time was when the manager of the Hart House Tuck Shop had nothing to worry about except the possibility of the counter breaking under the pressure of trade during the noon hour rush. That was before rationing. Now he glooms over the empty candy showcase in his idle time and devises means of supplying the demands of his clientele.

Biggest current worry in this line is the chocolate situation, Don Caton, the manager, told The Varsity. He is now able to satisfy less then half the demand for bars. To help ensure fair distribution he has recently adopted the plan of dividing his small quota and putting a few bars on sale at different times of day.

This rationing arrangement will probably have to continue for the rest of the year, as two dances in the House this month have annihilated the reserve stock built up during the summer. The grimness of the situation was illustrated by Mr. Caton's pointing out that he recently ordered 110 boxes of chocolate bars from two companies. He was promised 20; the normal rate of consumption for the period (one week) is 200.

A grimmer, but less worrisome shortage is in the case of eskimo pies, of which he is allowed four dozen a day. These are usually sold in less than ten minutes.

These facts, the manager hopes, will allay a growing suspicion that bars have been withheld to promote the sale of sandwiches. These are plentiful still, however, he says, except that the traditionally lethal salmon type is missing from the selection.

The shop has also been alloted sufficient rationing units of coffee to supply normal needs.

Only 70 per cent of last year's stock of soft dinks is now available, although the usual varieties may be had. An exception is the case of Mandalay Punch and lime rickey which are restricted because of the large amount of sugar used in their manufacture.

Cigarettes are not rationed, but are sometimes unobtainable because overseas orders are supplied first.

"We will show them that University students are of a superior calibre," said a student on the train out to his farm. "We will put some finesse into our work — do everything with just that extra amount of efficiency." Herewith is a prize example of this expertness.

One lad had a team of horses to use and look after. So when he topples into the stables after his first day's work, he carefully undoes every last buckle on the harness and hangs all the straps up neatly on a nail. Comes the next morning in the dark about 4:30, and you can guess whether or not he could get the stuff together again.

Another young easterner with a yen for efficiency and a fairly strong dislike for hard labour was rather vociferous on his first farm in his denunciation of the way that farm and its neighbouring ones insisted on first cutting and binding the grain, then stooking it, then pitching it onto wagons, then pitching it off the wagons again into the threshing machine. "Why not," he says, "use a combine that does all those operations at the same time?"

So the weather grew colder and he finished up on that farm and went south to a great big farm that used combines. There was only one man on that farm who could operate a combine and he was about to leave because of illness. The boss was desperate for a man who could run a combine so finally he let the student follow the man who was leaving once around the field and then take over the job for the time being.

"At last," thought the student, as he swung the huge machine around a 100-acre field of flax," at last I am farming as farming ought to be farmed in this great western country!"

But the afternoon wore on and the wind blew fiercer and colder. The student asked himself: "Is is worth-while in this zero weather to farm in this efficient way? In fact it is really so efficient to risk pneumonia this way when you could be keeping yourself warm and happy working 12 hours a day of hard labour for twice as long?" The thought of higher wages flitted through his mind as he clutched the cold iron levers, and that thought braced his comemrcial mind to endure the bitter weather. Yes, he would wear three pairs of socks, four sets of underwear and two overcoats and he would stick it out day after day until the combine was snowed under.

Just then a grinding crashing noise interrupted his reverie, and he realized sharply that fixing up this combine and running any combine would be (thank God) a job for an expert, a better man than he.

One morning after dawn, for a change, a student-harvester woke up. No one else was in bed, and this puzzled the poor conscientious worker. Grabbing his pants he rushed downstairs and accosted the farmer's daughter with a "why wasn't I wakened up?"

"Oh, you'd better ask Dad," she replied with a yawn.

"Where is he?" came the distraugh rejoinder.

"Gone to town to get some more parts more for the shrd thingótcs ri parts for the threshing machine."

WON'T THESE MACHINES EVER STOP BREAKING DOWN?

One student finished up the work on his farm rather early. On his way in to the labour office to find a second place to go, he met the daughter of the solicitor of the local newspaper. So having printer's ink in his blood as well as barley in his beard, he gets an introduction to the paper's editor. Arriving later at the harvest labour office he finds it rather overcrowded with easterners looking for second farms. The officials there are finding it that way too, so when he mentioned this journalistic contact, they gave him a permit to work there quick-like-a-flash, and now he is writing the editorials for the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix!

Temporarily unemployed student-harvesters roam the streets of Saskatoon these days, noticing various odd signs about the streets, signs which through uniqueness amuse and cheer up the jobless wanderers. The best known is that in the window of the barber shop just near the station: "Clip Joint, Come in and Be Trimmed by an Expert." Also in Saskatoon is painted up the startling remark, "Say It with Pets," over the door of (oddly enough) a pet shop.

But the prizewinner for English students is the sign in a Chinese restaurant in Kelvington. It goes: "We Serve Ourselves Better by Serving Others Best."

And then there is the story of a couple of unemployed student-harvesters hitch-hiking their way to another job. It seems that a car passed them, as cars are wont to do in any country, and then suddenly stopped. The driver had not intended to pick up the boys but on his companion's suggestion he was seized with a kind impulse and finally did stop. Said he to the two when they were in the car: "Didn't realize you wanted a lift; thought you were waving me on faster."

If you see an easterner standing at one of the main interseetions in Saskatoon laughing his head off, he is probably just expressing naive amazement at the way the streetear motormen of that town stop and punch time clocks instead of cheeking their times with inspectors.

There's a story going around about the eastern lad with a team of horses which he could never tell apart. He tried knotting the mane of one of them but the knots always eame undone. All day he had to look at those horses; the harnesses were different but he could never tell which horse was which when he eame to putting them on in the morning. Finally he realized that the white horse was one hand higher than the black one.

(b) Battalion parades—by Commanding Officer.

4. SOLICITING OF RIDES IN AUTOMOBILES

District Order No. 1165 dated 22 Oct. 42 is published for the information and guidance of all concerned.

DISCIPLINE — SOLICITING OF RIDES IN AUTOMOBILES

The soliciting of rides by personnel of the Canadian Army is undignified and inconsistent with the wearing of the King's uniform. There is, however, no objection to the acceptance by soldiers of transportation when such is offered voluntarily by the public.

In addition to the above, the provisions of Section 44(2) of the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario are drawn to the attention of all ranks, the said provisions being as follows:

Section (44)2. No person shall, while on the travelled portion of a highway, solieit a ride—from—the driver or operators of a motor vehicle other than a public vehicle.

The penalty for violation of this subsection is not less than $5.00 and if persisted in on more than one occasion it may amount to as much as $50.00.

It is stressed that not only will offenders render themselves liable to disciplinary action but also liable to be prosecuted by the civil authorities for an offenee against the law of Ontario.

Just in case you like a lot of good elean fun unhampered by too mueh plot, don't miss this one. Ann Sothern slinks quite passably through 80 minutes of not-too-torrid Central American scenery, with Red Skelton and two pals doing a good job of lampooning the United States Navy's men — but don't get us wrong—it's funny. The plot, such as there is, conecrns the old business of the gal from the south side of the tracks who finally makes good and marries the guy from t'other side. As a sideline Skelton et al corrall several very nasty Nazi gentlemen who are spying on Uncle Sam's favourite gutter. There is some very fine byplay by a deadpan comedian singer whose name we didn't catch—but anyway she's good. Alan Mowbray as a sedate English butler pleading with a mule is his usual self. Along with innumerable short subjest the bill adds up to some good entertainment.

LOEW'S "PANAMA HATTIE"

Bomber erew crash lands in the heart of Germany and off they go on a five-man commando raid to Berlin and back!—A screaming screen-shaking once-in-a-lifetime adventure!—So reads the advance publicity. Personally it reminded me of an Abbot and Costello thriller without Abbot and Costello. I suppose the war has produced some almost fantastic adventures but none can compare with this tale. If you like slam-bang pictures with Nazis chasing British airmen all over Germany, O.K.—But if gun fire and noisy background music give you a headaehe —Stay away. Errol Flynn and Ronald Reagan are the dashing heroes of the piece, while Alan Hale makes more than a good job of his humorous part.

IMPERIAL "DESPERATE JOURNEY"

In the short subject Walt Disney and Donald Duck get together to explain how simple it is to pay your income tax early and thus help to win the war.

Future Plans Being Made For Medical Instruction Internes And Students Told

Brigadier J. C. Meakins, Ex-Dean of Medicine at McGill, Tells Convention All Doctors Will Play Important Role

WESTERN SCENE OF PARLEY

London, Ont., Nov. 1—(CUP)—Plans are now being formed whereby strong teaching staffs may be maintained in Canadian Medical schools, and special training facilities may be arranged for medical men in the armed forces who show aptitude for study in particular fields of medical science. This statement was made by Brigadier J. C. Meakins, former Dean of Medicine at McGill University, when he addressed the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes during their convention at the University of Western Ontario Medical School over the week-end.

Thirteen delegates from the University of Toronto attended the convention.

In order to keep strong teaching groups in the Medical Schools, Brigadier Meakins explained, the employment of men both in uniform and in civilian attire would be necessary, each forming an equally valuable part of the Medical services.

Post-War Assistance

As well as assisting those in the armed forces with special ability, the Deputy Director-General of the Medical Services continued, assistance for those who are new to army life has also been planned.

New Wren Centre To Be On Campus

Officials of the University and the Royal Canadian Navy made an agreement early last month to convert the University-owned residence of the late Sir Joseph Flavelle into a training centre for the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service, President H. J. Cody announced Friday.

The president said he did not know when the "Wrens" plan to start training in their new centre.

The building, situated on the northwest side of Queen's Park Crescent, was built by Sir Joseph on property rented from the University on a 40-year lease. At the time of his death three years ago, the lease expired and the property reverted to the University. Sir Joseph left the building to the Board of Governors in his will.

London, Ont., Nov. 1 — (CUP) — Canadian schools, colleges and universities have a vital role to play in the war, by teaching the three essentials of effective democratic citizenship, Dr. John G. Althouse, Dean of the Ontario College of Education, said here Friday night at the autumn convocation of the University of Western Ontario. The degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa, was bestowed upon Dr. Althouse during the ceremonies.

He said that the three essentials were "sensitivity to common purposes, habit of co-operation to attain these purposes, and . . . as set of values which puts some few things so hight that it is easy and natural to subordinate everything else to them."

Examination of the temper of the people of Britain and Russia reveals these three qualities, Dr. Althouse said. The ability of the people of England to discern a common purpose enabled them "to defy the early blitzkrieg and to win for world democracy a respite for recovery and reorganization."

Canada Can Fail

"What had Britain in the early days of 1940 that France had not? . . . France fell, if we are to believe the French themselves, because she had lost the faculty to recognize common purposes sufficiently important to unite the whole nation. . . . Canada too can fall unless she can find common purposes compelling enough to unite her factions."

Schools could prevent the possibility of Canada's "fall" by teaching students the elements of good citizenship and the folly of factional quarrels.

"The plain fact is that as long as men of evil intent know more than men of good intent . . . the evil will prevail. This is a grim lesson much better learned than ignored. The children of Poland and China have had to learn it the hard way, our children may still learn it an easier way and they are ready to do so."

Other Corps Expected To Receive Orders Kingston Officer Explains To Journal As Queen's Men To Make Up Hours

Toronto Authorities Decline to Comment on Whether They Received Orders from the Department of National Defence Similar to Those Made Public by Lt. Col. R. O. Earl, C.O. of the Queen's Contingent C.O.T.C.

NOTE REAO TO CLASSES "PRESUMEO" STUOENT LEAVE

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 1—(CUP)—All universities in Eastern Canada participating in the harvest scheme will undoubtedly be affected by the government ruling—word of which was received here last week—that student-harvesters will be required to make up their full 110 hours of military training for this year, Captain W. H. Agnew, Adjutant of the Queen's University Contingent, C.O.T.C., told The Queen's Journal today.

"Apparently Queens' was the only University to make formal inquiry of the Department of National Defence regarding the policy to be adopted by the C.O.T.C. toward the harvest excursion," Capt. Agnew said. "Others will undoubtedly receive the same orders from Ottawa through their own military districts."

The inquiry, dated Oct. 13, was made to headquarters of Military District No. 3 at Kingston. District authorities replied that the full number of training hours would be required fo returning harvesters.

Parades Credited

(Dr. Cyril James, President of McGill University, made public last Thursday a letter he had received from Brigadier H. F. G. Letson, Adjutant-General, stating that leaves of absence would be given harvesters who missed parades while in the west, and that they would be credited with attendance at parades missed.

(A.B. Fennell, Registrar of the University of Toronto, announced Oct. 8, two days before the departure of 284 Toronto harvesters, that the Department of National Defence had given assurance that the C.O.T.C. would be authorized to grant leaves of absence from Saturday, Oct. 10 to Monday, Nov. 9 inclusive.

(Toronto C.O.T.C. authorities declined to comment last week when asked if they had received orders from the Department of National Defence similar to those made public at Queen's.)

Commenting on the order, Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal of Queen's University, said that it "came as a complete surprise," and that he boped it would not be final.

Fifty Harvesters Back To McMaster

Hamilton, Nov. 1—(CUP)—Fifty of the 90 student harvesters from McMaster University arrived home from the west last week apparently happy about their excursion.

The harvesters, who worked nearly a week in the Gull Lake, Moose Jaw, Swift Current and Morse districts, were appreciative of the effort of the Saskatchewan government on their behalf and of the hospitality of most of the Saskatchewan farm women.

"Very few of the boys lost money," said Harold B. Bridges, in charge of the Hamilton delegation.

Mount Allison President Resigns From Uuiversity

Board of Regents Announce That Dr. George J. Trueman's Plans to Take Effect in May 1943

NO SUCCESSOR YET

Sackville, N.B., Nov. 1 — (CUP) — Resignation of Dr. George J. Trueman, president of Mount Allison University, was announced at the fall meeting of the Board of Regents, Friday. The resignation will take effect in May, 1943.

A committee under the chairmanship of Dr. W. M. Tweedie will recommend Dr. Trueman's successor Dec. 1.

The president made it clear that he is resigning on personal grounds and not because of matters pertaining to university policy. "There is no reason for the move except that I have been teaching for 50 years and feel I could make a greater contribution in a less strenuous position."

Dr. Trueman expressed the view that change is inevitable after the war and predicted the university world would undergo considerable revision.

Research Council Deplores Lack Of Social Workers

Developing shortage of trained social scientists and younger men in training in the universities was discussed at the second annual meeting of the Canadian Social Science Research Council in Hart House Friday and Saturday.

"Government departments have drawn particularly heavily on economists, the armed services on psychologists," said Prof. C. A. Dawson of McGill University, past chairman of the council. "Such demands seem likely to continue even into the post-war period, while the sources of supply are drying up."

R. H. Coats, Lecturer in Economics, was elected chairman of the council succeeding Prof. C. A. Dawson of McGill University.

Grants to T. F. McIlwraith, professor of Anthropology and C. B. Sissons, professor of Classics at Victoria University were confirmed by the meeting. Mr. McIlwraith's grant is for publication of his research on British Columbia Indians and Mr. Sissons receives a grant for completion of his work on Egerton Ryerson.

Regulations For Returning Harvesters

The attention of students in the Faculty of Arts, who were granted leave of absence in order that they might assist in harvesting wheat in the Province of Saskatchewan, is drawn to the following regulations approved by a special committee of the Arts Council:

(1) that leave of absence, from October 10th to November 9th, 1942, be granted to students in the Pass Course and in Honour Courses in Groups A and B, provided the application of each student was approved by his College Registrar;

(2) that special instruction be provided for these students by the Departments concerned, commencing on November 9th and continuing for three weeks;

(3) that each student, immediately upon his return to the University, report to each of his instructors in order to be informed of the arrangments for the special instruction to be provided under the preceding section;

(4) that the examiners in the Honour Courses and the Revising Committee be authorized to give special consideration to the students concerned when the results of their final examinations are being determined.

Explanations Needed

Today the news columns of The Varsity carry the prediction of the Adjutant of the Queen's University Contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Course that all Eastern Canadian universities will receive orders similar to those reported last week from Kingston to the effect that students who went west to harvest Saskatchewan's wheat will receive no consideration with regard to the parades they missed.

It seems from Captain Agnew's statement that Queen's University was the only institution participating in the harvest scheme which made formal application through its C.O.T.C. to the Department of National Defence for guidance of policy with regard to treatment of returning harvesters. It is at least known that no other C.O.T.C. Contingent has reported that it made such inquiry, and no other Contingent has announced receipt of similar orders.

The situation, in common with other dealings with Ottawa authorities regarding the harvest scheme, is tangled in red tape. It may yet be that the announcement which government authorities empowered the Registrar of this University to make—that student harvesters would be granted leave from Oct. 10 to Nov. 9 inclusive—will hold good. The President of McGill University has made public text of a letter from the Adjutant-General making such promises specific. And the whole present furore may conceivably be the outcome of lack of inter-departmental co-operation in the windy corridors of Ottawa.

This in itself is scarcely praiseworthy, but it is a kinder explanation of the situation than that the government, with all Departments involved in the administration of the scheme acting in concert, has reneged on its promise.

Late and Hasty

That promise was given when the Government, anxious to save Saskatchewan's biggest crop since 1928, and acting several weeks after it had become obvious to western farmers that the labour shortage on the prairies was extremely acute, called for fast action on the part of the Universities, and hurried the volunteers away on special trains without even taking the precaution of having them given proper medical examinations. Under these circumstances it would seem too much to ask that Ottawa authorities co-ordinate the action of their departments so that National Selective Service, the Department of Labour and the Department of National Defence could decide upon a common policy in regard to the excursion. But they have so far failed to do so, although it may yet prove that after further consultations and conferences the whole matter will be cleared up.

Such, as we say, is the kinder explanation. It is also conceivable that the expedition—never organized along really efficient lines—will we climaxed by a most blatant and shocking governmental repudiation of a guarantee.

Local C.O.T.C. authorities have not yet informed The Varsity of any steps they have taken in the matter. Whether or not they are wise in not taking the University into their confidence, as has been done at Queen's, is a question which can only be answered when the outcome of the affair becomes evident. They may have been wise is not touching off an explosion while further negotiations may still be in progress. They may have been cautious in not making public facts which affect so many of their trainees vitally. And again, they may be taking no action in the matter, and be merely marking time, awaiting word from National Defence authorities, in which case their silence is natural enough.

It Is Vital

Some may question our statement that cancellation of leaves for harvesters would affect trainees "vitally." We believe the remark is justifiable. Consider the fact that the men who went west were guaranteed leave from approximately 35 hours of drills and lectures. Spread those 35 hours—slightly less than a third of the 110 hours prescribed—over what remains of the year. And consider that students returning from Saskatchewan will be expected to catch up on their studies in approximately the same ratio. If their studies are not caught up successfully, regulations laid down in Order-in-Council P.C. 8343 state that "any physically fit student who . . . fails to pass any term or yearly academic examination . . . shall be called out forthwith." The majority of students who went to Saskatchewan from this University—171 of 284—were drawn from the first two years of the Arts Courses. As a direct result of the latest move attributed to the government they may be forced to drop out of those courses.

Perhaps—if the men who carry the nation's war plans about behind their majestic foreheads could be accused of thinking six months ahead—it might be considered all part of a plan to implement some of the predictions embodied in the speech prepared for delivery to the Alumni of Queen's University two weeks ago by Mr. Wright of National Selective Service.

Welcome Visitor

Last night into the newsrooms of The Varsity strolled a visitor from Montreal, via the wheat-fields of Saskatchewan. He was Fred Kerner, former Editor-in-Chief of The Georgian, student weekly of Sir George William College. And he stayed around all night, as a glance at the night editor's names for this issue will assure the reader.

Co-operation of Kerner in turning out one of the regular 100 issues of The Varsity last night marks another step in the advancement of friendly feeling among the members of the Canadian University Press. The fact that editors of college papers can be, upon occasion, interchanged without the issues involved suffering in technical worth bring home the idea that their duties and problems, although naturally differing in detail from campus to campus, are not so very dissimilar; that the major collegiate papers of the Dominion, linked together by the wire and mail services of the Canadian University Press, have a great deal in common.

Kerner edited The Georgian for two years, 1940-41, and 1941-42, following a year as news editor. It was in his first year as Editor-in-Chief that The Georgian became a weekly journal and gained full membership in the Canadian University Press. He was one of two Georgian delegates to the Montreal conference of the C.U.P. last Christmas.

He went west with the harvesters last month and collided on one of the Harvest Specials with Vernon Lang, Assistant Managing Editor of The Varsity, and head of this newspaper's detachment of westbound newsmen. They met again in Saskatoon, following short stays on separate farms, and have moved back east together, dropping in on various C.U.P. officers of the college papers en route. While in Saskatoon, Kerner for a few days was editorial writer for The Star-Pheonix.

So today a hasty but hearty hello to one of the more capable of the young men who are graduating yearly from the collegiate press of Canada.

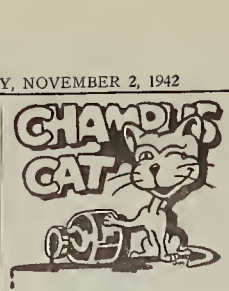
Art and Music

A Bit of Co-operation

Wymilwood Musicale

Sympathetic understanding between soloist, Miss Nellie Smith, and accompanist, Dr. Charles Peaker, made this season's first Wymilwood musicale an outstanding performance, Sunday evening.

Miss Smith's voice, a rich contralto, was confined to a rather limited range, due perhaps to difficulty in producing high notes; but her enunciation was excellent, and her technique a pleasure in perfection. She displayed constant control in all her singing, giving her hearers the impression that she was leashing her magnificent volume of sound.



Dr. Peaker showed himself to be the perfect accompanist, supporting Miss Smith with technical skill and imagination.

The program was varied and well balanced. There was tranquility in Handel's I Will Magnify Thee, and fancy in the Feast of the Lanterns. Scope was given to Miss Smith's dramatic qualities in Purcell's Mad Bess and in the everlastingly engaging Somerset folk song, Oh No John. Pure beauty was in the religious offerings, Brawla! Brawla! Bloor St.!

Once again last Friday night the October moon shone over a Varsity Party at the Old Swill, on the banks of the Humber River, out past the end of the Bloor St. car line, just inside the Manitoba boundary. There was the sound of deviltry by night and once again brave women and fair men danced and danced and danced. (What else can you do at the Old Swill?—Ed.). Once again the Party Committee had to wash dishes. Once again a strongarm squad broke up the Party at an early hour.

The purpose of the party, as usual, was to provide the Catitor with some material for a Cat, and, as usual, it did. Four hundred members of the Masthead and all eight reporters attended the party, which was acclaimed a great success, though a finacial flop. "I lost $50 on the deal," said Slim Tatum, returned harvesters and soccer writer, "and I consider it money well spent."

"What did you think of the shindig?" we asked Mr. Hexx Nilssen, famed reporter and news editor of The Varsity.

"Well," he replied, "I'll tell you:

The pause that refreshes
Is really a thrill
If the cokes, one confesses,
Have come from a still."

The Editor-in-Chief, Shamus O'Malley, caught between the dance floor and his hideaway under table 13, allowed himself to be quoted to the effect that:

"Though Jesse James is killed,
His spirit still remains,
In waiters (scum), who take the bill,
And pocket all the change."

It was learned from usually well informed quarters that only the usual number of reporters were undergoing treatment in various hospitals about the city as a direct result of the party. When these people have recovered sufficiently, another party will be held, and so on, until a total of four or five parties and Masthead dinners have been perpetrated. Following this, those reporters with the severest ulcers, as determined by X-ray and all other modern methods, are arranged in order from above down. Opposite their names, then, the incumbent editor-in-chief writes, in order, the positions to be filled on the coming year's Masthead, and so all the trouble of electing people to these positions, or choosing them by lot, is avoided. "It's really the only logical way to choose an editor-in-chief," O'Malley commented. "After all, could you write editorials every night if you were perfectly healthy? Eh???"

Partial substantiation of this report was obtained from the Catitor, one Omega, who suggester that there would be no Cat at all, following the next party. "That's going to be whee of a do!" he excluded, with a wolfish gleam in his eye, as he left for the dance floor.

which they did because they felt it a national service and that they were needed," Dr. Wallace said.

"They undertook a hard job of their own free will expecting certain compensation. It seems only fair that such compensation should be carried out.

"This is the attitude the University has taken and the attitude we hope to see the government take.

"However, since the Department of National Defence has charge of the military training of students, we cannot guarantee that our recommendation will be adopted."

Dr. Wallace announced he would communicate with Ottawa as soon as possible to obtain clarification and also reconsideration of the orders.

"Presumed" Leave

"This venture was carried out under the Department of Labour. The military aspect also concerns the Adjutant-General and the Department of War Services. It is possible that trouble may have arisen out of the lack of understanding among these three concerning the harvest excursion. We hope that this misunderstanding may soon be cleared up."

Lt.-Col. R. O. Earl, Officer Commanding the Queen's Contingent, C.O.T.C., pointed out that what Dr. Wallace told the harvesters before they left was only that he presumed the government would grant leave from C.O.T.C. parades. A note emphasizing the word "presumed" was read to all arts classes and at the faculty meeting.

"Leave was not definitely promised," Col. Earl explained, "for at that time the Department of National Defense had made no statement at all. The Queen's Journal printed a story, which The Varsity later quoted, implying that leaves were definitely promised. This was not correct."

Professor T. McIlwraith Talks on Race Concepts

The Allied Nations must take upon themselves the responsibility of changing the outlook of generations to come of Germans, Italians and Japanese after the victory is won. This was the conclusion reached by T. F. McIlwraith, M.A., F.R.S.C., professor of Anthropology of the University of Toronto, and associate director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archeology, in his presidental address to the Royal Canadian Institute. The meeting, opening the ninety-fourth year of the Institute was held in Convocation Hall, and Professor McIlwraith spoke on "Race and Race Concepts."

The one gleam of hope in this direction is that those peoples' cultural developments do not rest upon a heredity which is unalterable, but upon a culture which can be altered by intelligent education.

"All man is of the same species," stated the professor. "A biological and mental unity. The differences, both in likes and dislikes, are based upon cultural differences which are due to education and the changes of history." He traced attempts to classify man as far back as the ancient Egyptians who used colour as their principal criterion, they considering themselves red-brown.

"Aristotle," he went on to say, "used the observations of Herodotus and Hippocrates along with his own to place man among the animals." In the days of Rome, the classification was whether the individual was a Roman citizen.

Sir Robert Falconer, thanking the speaker, said prejudices must be checked at this time and that broader vision must prevail. He concluded that it was difficult to uproot prejudices from the hearts of men.

U.C.'s Shackelton Wins Three-Mile Harrier Race

Trinity Takes Junior Championship with 37 Points; University College in Second Place Followed by Emmanuel

R.A.F. TEAM ENTERED

By Gordon Mack

Last Saturday's bleak and dismal dawning scared away many potential "harrierer's," but a select 25 ventured the three mile course around Hart House, Queen's Park and the Front Campus. U.C.'s versatile Phil Shackleton ran a brilliant race to capture top honours. His chief competition was Al Smith (Air Force half mile champion), but Phil gained a long enough lead in the first two laps to give him a comfortable 20 yard margin at the finish. Smith held a similar lead over Jim Brown (S.P.S.) who finished third. Two Trinity men battled for 4th and 5th positions with Frank Fordyce sprinting past Dave Kirkwood in a close finish. Ken Brown of Victoria was sixth.

The time this year was 17.15 compared with the winning 17 minutes, 57 second that took first place last year over approximately the same course.

In the interfaculty race, Trinity supplanted U.C. as Junior Harrier Champions. In the previous two years, U.C. had ruthlessly conscripted all able-bodied freshmen for the 3 mile grind as part of their initiation, but this pratise was abolished this year. Trinity finished with 37 points, led by Fordyce's 4 and Kirkwood's 5. U.C. finished second with 47 points, composed of Shakleton's first, Baxter's 8th, Sports Ed. Conant 16th, and a 22nd. Emmanuel came third with 60 points.

Led by well-known Freddie Rowell, a five-man R.A.F. team was entered, which if considered as a faculty won the event by a single point. If the various faculties are considered as a single unit, a Varsity team, they dedeated the Air Force 12 (1, 3, 4, 5) to 36 (2, 9, 11, 23).

Co-ed interest was evident as usual. Several girls expressed anxiety over the fellows catching cold, but a callous few thought that whole thing was too silly. A St. Mike's lassie was startled at seeing so many men running around the campus, but it didn't seem to upset her. In fact she confided to your Uncle Claudius that she'd be willing to join in on the last half mile if a suitable specimen should come along. Another girl, speaking for a group, approved of the shapely underpinnings on some of the runners. Putting the nylon on the other foot, as it were. A few runners were tempted by two enterprising taggers, but before they could become gentlemen first and trackmen afterwards, the unfriendly arm of the law dispelled the girls.

Next week is the Senior Harrier, won last year by School. It will be held at High Park in conjunction with the invasion of the Buffalo State distance men. All athletes interested should get in touch with Hec Phillips as soon as possible.

Sportswoman

By Beryl Pollock

We believe that we can omit the weather foreeast from this column today, and enter a clime far wetter than any that has delayed the tennis tournament for the past few weeks. It is time that some interest was aroused in swimming, for it is a sport well worth cultivating.

While you freshies are trying to get in the required number of P.T. eredits, we suggest that you also try to get something to show for those hours you put in at the Lillian Massey pool. If you have such a goal in view as Bronze, Silver or Instructor's Certificate for which to work, you may forget, for a while at least, that the temperature of the water is close to zero (especially on Thursday and Friday) and that your hair is getting soaked.

Miss Baxter, who is in charge of the swimming in the L.M. pool, is organizing Bronze, Silver and Instructor's classes in lifesaving. Lists are posted up at this building for those interested to sign by Nov. 6. The bronze classes are for those wishing to learn the Royal Life Saving Society's method of what to do for a drowning person, useful information to have in cases of emergency. The work for this award can be covered in six to eight periods by those who have some knowledge of the breast stroke. Those who wish to get their instructor's are the leaders of these classes and must get three-quarters of their group through, and also hold the bronze certificate themselves. The silver candidates are also holders of the bronze award. Miss Baxter gives help to any of those who wish it, and helps swimmers to perfect their strokes.

Come on gals, get yourself a fancy certificate to hang up on the wall as evidence of your prowess at life saving, and give someone a break, and help her recruit a class for bronze in order to get her own instructor's certificate. The cost is small—90c for Bronze, 65c for Instructor's and $3.00 for Silver.

The hours for swimming are from 2:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. from Monday to Friday, and Tuesday from 11:30 to 12:30. Special periods for beginners are held every Tuesday morning, and on Mondays from 4:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

U.C. Juniors are asked to note that there is an extra basketball practice for them this evening in Little Vic gym at 8:30 p.m. The other practices for the week are on Wednesday at 6:30 in Little Vic, and on Friday at O.C.E. again at 6:30.

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

A NEW ORDER

The conscription of freshmen, or anyone else for that matter, for the Junior Harrier is evidently a thing of the past. For the past two years at least, a number of the colleges have made it a practise to make entry in the Junior Harrier part of the initiation of the freshmen. Consequently huge turnouts—upwards of a hundred—have featured the annual event. But in those days the so-called harrier was comparatively a farce—with the entrants walking the course dressed in all garbs imaginable, from coonskin to lab. coats. In past years the whole event had an air of levity—only reason for completing the course—however the speed or manner—being that of garnering entrance points in the Reed Race.

But we note with satisfacton that, for the most part, last Saturday's harrier was a real race—and run by athletes interested in running—with the thought of entrance points and Reed Trophy points far from of primary importance. Of course the paucity of starters might be attributed to other reasons—harvesting, stiffer timetables, or even an imminent route march. But if those were the reasons—and not that of some addition to the common sense of some of the Athletic Directors—we still think it is a turn for the better. For the harrier has a definite place in the sports program on this campus. And we are glad to see that this year at least, that place has been ably filled. The challenge of the R.C.A.F. delegation to the Varsity entrants was a welcome addition and coach Phillips must be congratulated on attracting Freddie Rowell's squad to compete here. It was a tough grind (praise the course and pass the liniment) if one hasn't had too much conditioning. But after all that's what the harrier and the whole Keep Fit program is for—to get as many students in as good condition as possible.

WE'RE NOT ALL INFALLIBLE

With the re-visit of the Kingston airmen on Saturday came a few pointers that we had pied up the names of their winners. For instance—Truelove was mangled into Trulone and Tomelone. Thornhill was spelled differently twice and the bossman—P.O. Rowell himself was quoted as Ramett. We extend our apologies to anyone so maltreated by our sports writers. But we also hasten to explain that the sport staff—considerably weaker in numbers than in former years—finds it hard pressed to take in all games. Thusly some of the names and line-ups have to be copied from the referee's list. So mistakes are easily made by our reporters—especially if the referee was not a good penman. So—we are not making excuses, but declare that we are sorry to make mistakes in the spelling of the many names that are printed each day on page three. But the reporters being so rushed, coupled with poor lists from the referees may, and sometimes do, make mistakes every day.

Female Fullback Football Fiend

Sackville, Nov. 1—(CUP)—Mount Allison University in New Brunswick claims to be one up on Varsity and McGill. They may boast of their female engineers, but neither has an engineeress who plays fullback on the Engineers' football team.

It began when the lineups were announced for the annual Flounders Game between the Engineers and the University Girls' Residence. Announced as fullback for the Engineers was that sole and stalwart plumberess, Dorothy "Thunderer" Heartz, the only player on the Engineers' team who lasted the full game. In the second half she made a brilliant 80-yard run for a touchdown behind skilful interference. To prove that it can happen here, the Engineers proceeded to do something they have never done before, to win from the U.G.R., 13-3.

Vivacious and versaltile, "Do" is also an accomplished pianist, and a member of Mount A's negly-organized all-girl orchestra.

The Conservatory Quartet

Yesterday afternoon the Conservatory String Quartet gave the first of a series of recitals at the Art Gallery. These concerts, for the officers and men of the armed services, will be presented on Sundays at 3 p.m.

The quartet began with Mendelssohn's Quartet in E flat, a work especially suited to an informal concert. The first movement showed that the group thinks of itself as a quartet, not as four soloists, or, even more dangerous in Mendelssohn, as one soloist accompanied by a string trio. The famous Canzonnetta, which usually suffers from being over-interpreted into a "thing of rare beauty," was given a good straightforward performenc. No string quartet could make the finale sound convincing — the dashing triplets and de-minished-seventh fortissimi are beyond the limitations of the combination—but in the truly poetic coda, which recalls themes from the first movement, the quartet gave an appropriately restrained interpretation.

Following in the spirit of the concert, the quartet next played two arrangements of popular pieces, the Schubert Moment Musical and the Brams Waltz in A. On the subject of arrangements, it is doubtful whether double-stopping violin solos are appropriate in quartet music. The only unfamiliar work on the program was an Allegro from a little (in fact, to the reviewer, never) heard quartet by Schubert. It is a pleasant enough little piece in Rondo form, but it does not make one wonder why it has not gained greater fame.

The concluding group was the second and fourth movements of Schumann's Piano Quintet. The fifth member was Sir Ernest MacMillan, who did his usual efficient job at the piano. The slow movement, the most effective of the quintet, was imaginatively played, although a little more viola, especially in its solo in the agitato section, would have increased the effect. In the last movement this quintet displayed the common weakness of all piano quintets—the piano overpowers the strings, and makes one wonder just what the weaker brothers are doing anyway with such great exertion. This, however, can hardly be attributed to the performers, since it is one of Schumann's faults to overload the piano part in his chamber music.

Tie 2-All Friday In Theolog Soccer

Down two goals Wycliffe came back Friday afternoon to tie Emmanuel two all. From the kick-off Emmanuel hemmed Wycliffe in its end of the field but could do everything but score. Creswell, Morewood and Mackenzie had numerous scoring chances but were repeatedly beaten by burly Ed Abbott, Wycliffe's star full back. A foul against Wycliffe just outside the penalty area gave the Bear Cats their first goal. Singh passed to Creswell instead of shooting and that worthy gave the goalkeeper no chance.

A few seconds later Ben Morewood took a shot from a melee in the Wycliffe goalmouth, the ball struck the crossbar and glanced down into the net. Just before half-time Wycliffe broke loose and Harris kicked in the rebound of Dickinson's first save.

Half-time—Emmanuel 2, Wycliffe 1.

The second half continued at the furious pace of the first half with play ranging from one end of the field to the other. The Anglicans nearly knotted the count from a corner kick but the ball hit the post and bounded out. They finally untracked themselves two minutes from time up and Dave Thompson came through with a waist high shot that caught the corner of the net. Wycliffe pressed hard for the remaining time but couldn't overcome Emmanuel's early goals. The game was one of the better games so far this season.

Final score—Emmanuel 2, Wycliffe 2.

The teams:

Emmanuel — Dickenson, Cumming, Gibson, Waugh, Singh, Daynard, MacKae, Wanless, Morewood, Creswell, Mackenzie, Morgan, Henderson.

Wycliffe—Abbott, Thompson, Park-Taylor, Morley, Hilchey, Taylor, Kelsick, Lyall, Doolan, Harris, Fry.

Meds Are Victors In Track Relay

With a finish that took everyone by surprise the Meds Relay Track Team squeezed School out of the championship by one point late Friday afternoon.

The meet was organized this year by Hec Phillips to be run in three parts on time basis. So. due to time facilities for the competitors, 19 teams were entered in the meet. This is the best turnout in years and goes to make with the other track events this fall one of the best seasons every enjoyed on this campus.

School had led the meet from the beginning last Wednesday and was looked upon as a sure thing to cop top honours. But the Meds medley team evidently had been bolding out on everyone and burned the cinders with a 3.59.3, beating the School team who had clocked it in 4.1.8. The Doctors were: Delaney, Fielding, Wilford and Lewis, while the vanquished Engineer team was composed of McDonald, Brown, McDonough and Foulis.

There's a woman reporter on The Varsity staff who apparently takes a pessimistic view of the manpower situation too. Varsity parties are arranged on a draw basis, in case you didn't know. That is, the party committee pairs off the couples from a sheet on which preferences in partners are stated by the would-be merry-makers. Well, as it came out last Friday, it was quite a party, but at the time of pre-prandial signing his little lass tremulously asked for "Anything that's still warmish." COLLITCH BOYS ARE A DISAPPOINTMENT DEPT. One of our cohorts was working up in Quebec this summer on a big engineering project. One day he was sitting reading a book when a greasy looking individual in almost stiff overalls approached carrying a wrench, and interrupted his intellectual pursuits to inquire in a thiek accent, "Pardon. You go to college?"

"Yes," replied the intellectual, proudly.

"Would you help me out?"

"Certainly."

"Good. Could you explain to me, please, the first law of the mechanism of the will?"

The intellectual, in some embarrassment, said no, he was afraid he couldn't.

"Oh, then maybe you could explain for me the first law of the mechanism of desire."

Our friend had to pass that one up too, and the greasy individual gave him a contemptuous you-sure-owe-me-a-set-of-the - Encyelopedia - Britannica look and wandered off.

C.A.M.S.I. Told of Proposed Program To Maintain Strong Medical Teaching

tion of medical men," declared Brigadier Meakins in reply to criticism in this directions. "It is the fault of opportunists who have taken advantage of the situation when skies looked dark and foreboding."

Financial aid will be given them to find a place in civilian life after the war is over, the Deputy Director-General told the delegates. However, he warned that war "does not provide opportunities for inefficiency" and vigorously objected to any slackening of ambition which might tend to result from the shift of financial responsibility from the student to the Gederal Government.

An army medical man's first responsibility, Brigadier Meakens told the convention, is to make and keep every soldier a perfect fighting unit morally, physically and mentally.

Mentally Defectives

Speaking on the psychiatric phases of medical services in the armed forces, Captain G. E. Hobbs stated that in M.D. 1 since last June, nine percent of all recruits tested by the medical services have been found mentally defective.

"To absorb military training, a mental age of 12 years is required," explained Capt. Hobbs. According to statistics compiled, three percent of Canada's population are below the 12-year level of intelligence.

Psychiatric tests are given to aid in the selection of the right recruits, and to prevent mental ills or neuroses.

"It is not the cities, but the rural districts which are suffering from the shortage of medical men," said Dr. Stanley Ryerson, Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at U. of T. "The cities can do with fewer doctors, and it is my personal opinion that the government will have to assign doctors to rural areas," he stated.

Socialized Medicine

Dr. B. T. McGhie, provincial deputy minister of Health, speaking at a banquet given in honour of the delegates to the C.A.M.S.I. Convention, charged Ontario with wastage of public funds by duplication and competition among hospitals and lack of efficient public health doctors. He declared that the change which is due in the practise of Medicine will likely bring a kind of socialized Medicine.

Criticizing medical men who oppose state medicine because they say that physicians placed on salary will loss initiative and interest, Dr. McGhie stated, "I think such a statement is a reflection on he profession as a whole group not willing to give service for payment rendered." Dr. McGhie then elaborated on the system of socialized medicine, expressing the hope that under such a system it would be not only economically possible, but legally necessary for the practising physician to take a refresher course at least every five years.

Honours Awarded B.C. Year Book

Vancouver, Oct. 28 — (CUP) — "The Totem," year book of the University of British Columbia, has for the second time in succession been awarded "All-American Honour Rating." The 1941-42 edition which is the last one for the duration won the award at the twenty-second National Yearbook Critical Service of the National Press Association.

The competition is among all colleges on the North American continent. The Totem is the first Canadian university annual to be so honoured.

Out of 226 college annuals judged, The Totem was one of seven given the award in the class of Universities with from 1,000 to 2,499 students.

In speaking of the editors of the prize-winning Totem, the judge said, "Congratulations on a well-framed and executed book. It gives a real picture of your University during war time, and should be treasured in years to come. I hope you can start publication again in the near future."

For the duration The Totem will be replaced, to a lesser degree, by the Graduation Issue, a much less expensive publication.

HALLOWE'EN FROLICK IS HARD TIMES PARTY

Gay informality was the characteristic note of the Newman's Club hard-time party on Friday night. This year a record crowd took part in the annual Hallowe'en festivities of the Club which was decorated for the occasion with orange streamers, dangling apples, smiling-faced pumpkins, black cats, and an artistically ornamented barrel of cider.

There war variety and originality in the costumes, and especially sensational was Bill DesRoches, draped in an Indian blanket with a head-dress of feathers. In the grand march, Jim McCardle, IV St. Mike's, and Jean Cleak, II Household Science, were chosen as the couple who best carried out the "hardtime" theme.

Novel dances, and refreshments of apple cider, candy and doughnuts were also features of the evening.

McGill Workshop Aids Victory Loan

Montreal, Nov. 1—(CUP)—McGill Radio Workshop produced an original Victory Loan play, written by Norma Morris, and under the direction of Stan Eidinger. The recording of this production were made at station CFCF under the supervision of Mr. James Shaw. The necessary equipment was supplied by the station and included the use of the whole sound effects library, the newest studio, and the engineering staff of CFCF. The sound effects group also aided in this production.

This enterprise which McGill has labelled the Radio Workshop is making progress. Within the next two weeks members of the organization will take part in a professional audition under the direction of one of Montreal's outstanding producers. Those chosen after this audition will have the opportunity of appearing on regular radio broadcasts.

Dominican Consul At Spanish Club

The Varsity Spanish Club Thursday held its first meeting this year, which, according to Bernice Bricker, president, was a huge success.

Mr. J. U. Gareia, consul for the Dominican Republic, talked of his country, which, he said, had increased the number of its consuls to Canada, not only for trade reasons, but also to put the Anglo-Saxon spirit in contact with the Latin spirit.

He talked of the sixth-column propaganda which gives a wrong impression of South American peoples and quoted as examples J. Gunther's "Inside Latin America." "This propaganda," he stated, "points to us as an island of negroes living in semi-African conditions. But we are not savages," he continued, "and Mr. Gunther forgot to mention that in spite of 20 years of occupation by his own countrymen the people of San Domingo still retain their Spanish culture."

the world's pulse

By W. J. Bramoh
Secretary, League of Nations Society

On Oct. 7, when President Roosevelt declared that severe punishment would be inflicted upon "war criminals," meaning Axis ringleaders, he wisely distinguished between the people of the enemy nations and their leaders.

Meanwhile London, acting upon the co-operative principle in psychological warfare, was engaged in compiling a list of Nazis and Quislings who have been responsible for inhuman mass murders and other injustices. One unfortunate consequence however, occurred on Oct. 15, when Soviet Commissar Molotov, although in complete agreement with the proposals, demanded that immediate punishment be inflieted upon any such criminals as are already in Allied hands. He claimed that Rudolph Hess fell into this category. Hess, who has been held by Britain since before the German invasion of Russia, was described by the Soviet press on Oct. 19, as "a criminal subject to trial and punishment or a plenipotentiary representative in England of the Hitler government whe enjoys inviolability."

It is apparent that an Allied attempt to punish Nazi leaders at this particular time would undoubtedly bring immediate response from Hitler, making his threats of retaliation a reality. In short, thousands of Allied prisoners would be subjected to further Nazi "treatment." Hitler's hope that he can disrupt the confidence existing between the United Nations by his usual methods must not be allowed to influence Allied activity in any way.

Even now Mr. Molotov and the Russian people need only to examine the treatment of Allied prisoners to dispel their desires concerning the Hess affair.

The insistence of his immediate punishment may reflect a suspicion in Moscow that circles in Britain and the United States fear Russia as much as Germany, and if Hitler and his associates were to surrender their power, these circles might with an immediate agreement with Germany.

To divert our energies any further in the discussion of what we intend to do with the German criminals is not serving the Allied cause. Roosevelt's declaration has done it's work in telling the German people and those in the conquered countries of the Allied plans.

Mr. Molotov would be well advised to drop the whole matter rather than bring about a division in Allied relations.

A more vivid example of the United Nations psychological warfare is evident in the address given recently by Attorney General Biddle of the United States.

Italy is the weakest link in the Axis chain, there is increasing evidence that conditions in that country are becoming more acute, and that the Italian people are tired and disgusted. Mr. Biddle undoubtedly had this situation in mind when announcing that the United States had adopted a new policy towards Italians in America because of the loyalty which they displayed towards the country of their adoption.

Italy's activity in the war has been characterized by continued reverses in Greece, Ethiopia and Libya, and Mr. Biddle shows foresight in his concentration at the present time upon this weak Axis partner.

Letter From Trinity Men Tell of Harvesting Still

Fillmore, Sask., Nov. 1—(CUP)—Temperature of 20 degrees failed to put a crimp in the harvesting style of three Trinity students who early last week were still bringing in the sheaves in the vicinity of this town in southeastern Saskatchewan.

The three are Doug Breithaupt, Bob Inglis and Geoff. Gordon and at last reports last week they were working 12 hours or more a day on the farm of Louis Raczynski, having a "whale" of a time and enjoying amazingly good food, particularly "Victoria Raczynski's marvellous pumpkin and raisin pies."

Gordon, a Trinity freshman, said they had been working hard and steadily all but a couple of days since their arrival at Fillmore about two weeks earlier.

"We have taken to wearing our pyjamas for underwear," he wrote, "and with the legs tucked into our socks—well, it makes an unbelievable difference. It seems we've struck as good a bunch to work for as we could, that is after comparing note with the rest of the gang. The food comes in abundance."

Allegiance Oath Taken By Airmen

Saturday afternoon, after forming up on the rain-sodden north campus, the first members of the University Air Training Corps were marched up to the Debates Room in Hart House and there took the oath of allegience.

All those thus attested had previously been medically examined, had completed the R.C.A.F. classifieation or "I.Q." test, and signed their honorable intention to go on Active Service on the completion of their college courses. They became fully-qualified members of No. 3 Squadron, University Air Training Corps, a reserve unit of the R.C.A.F., on a par with the C.O.T.C. Although number of recruits to be sworn in is indefinite, it is expected the full-time strength of the Corps will be close to 200.

Each night this week, at 4 o'clock, an R.C.A.F. truck will take about 25 of the new recruits from Hart House to Manning Depot, where they will be outfited in regulation R.C.A.F. uniforms. If possible the truck will make the return trip.

Commencing this week, Air Corps members will parade with the unit, on the same night as the C.O.T.C. of their Faculty.

if I did not retire."

The president declined to name probable candidates for his post, saying that such predictions might place the Board of Regents in a difficult position.

A spokesman for the Board of Regents said that Dr. Trueman had intimated that he wished to retire last spring but that the time had been inopportune then. There was now a pressing need for a new men's residence to replace the one destroyed by fire last December, and the Board agreed with the resigning President that the added responsibility of campaigning for funds would be too great.

He added that the Board appreciated the fact that Dr. Trueman had resigned while his services were still valuable, and that it was "harder to resign now than when his active career was over."

Student, Interne Problems Discussed By Delegates At C.A.M.S.I. Convention

Survey to Be Made of Facilities Available to Canadian Medical Students Regarding Diagnosis, Prevention, Treatment; National Interne Chairman to Be Appointed; Hospitals to Set Up Interne Committees

HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL MEETING SAY REPRESENTATIVES

"We consider this a very successful conference," was the opinion of Murray S. Acker, Medicine VI, one of the Toronto delegates, and Bob Cosgrave, Senior Medical student from the University of Manitoba, one of his University's delegation, to the CAMSI convention held at London, Ontario last weekend. "Problems concerning students and internes were discussed, and definite action will follow the discussions we held," they continued.

One of the problems which has been discussed at every convention the CAMSI has held was that of student health. It was decided that a survey should be made to assess the facilities available to medical students across Canada at their various universities, with respect to diagnosis, prevention, and treatment. The result of this survey will be published in the forthcoming issue of the CAMSI journal.

Another result of the convention will be the appointment of a National Interne Chairman, who will be separate from the Interne Board, operated by the Association. He will sit on the National Executive, and will co-operate with local councils. It was also decided that an interne committee be set up in each hospital, and that the chairmen of these committees would constitute an interne council for the particular city. These councils will deal with such matters as internes' welfare, internes' pay, and the matter of increasing the educational facilities insofar as becoming medical officers is concerned.

Local CAMSI committees will be urged to co-operate with projects aiding the armed forces of Canada and the other United Nations. Assistance will be offered to the Red Cross blood banks both by obtaining blood donors, and by offering technical assistance in the typing and taking of blood from the donors. They will also aid local organizations supplying medical assistance to

Will Await Word Of Ottawa--Cody

No action would be taken by University authorities regarding the reported cancellation of C.O.T.C. leaves for volunteer student-harvesters at least until official word of such cancellation was forwarded to this University, Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, said yesterday afternoon.

"We understood from the Department of Labour that the matter would be duly arranged with the Department of National Defence," Dr. Cody said. "On that basis we proceeded and on that basis we shall continue to proceed unless we receive direct orders to the contrary from Ottawa."

Fox Upholds Guarantee

London, Ont., Nov. 2—(CUP)—Dr. Sherwood Fox, President of the University of Western Ontario, said this morning that he believed the government assurances received here last month that harvest leaves for C.O.T.C. trainees would be granted would be carried out. Guarantee of such leaves was made before the harvesters left for Saskatchewan by local C.O.T.C. authorities.

Vic, School Debate, Unable to Decide Merits of Arts vs Scientific Courses

Two distinct speaking styles tangled yesterday at an Engineering Society meeting when the Vic team of Barbara McNabb and Vic Butts met the S.P.S. team of Ron Scott and George Nixon in a no-decision debate on the subject: "Resolved that a liberal education is of more benefit to society than a scientific education."

The polished, intellectual style of the Vic debaters contrasted with the direct, informal manner of the Engineers. Miss McNabb, first speaker for the affirmative, set forth that science is a servant to humanity and must be controlled by the liberal arts to make it most effective. Science makes more leisure time for social life but the liberal education teaches how to make use of that leisure for the betterment of humanity. The Battle of Britain would have been lost and Stalingrad would have fallen if the scientific attitude had prevailed rather than the human qualities.

Scott, first speaker for the negative, deplored "the sentimental twaddle" that lecturers give out to Arts students. "Most modern thought arises from scientific ideas," he said. "The Arts student is crammed with other people's ideas while science students are taught to think for themselves."

"Education must have a relation to the social system in which it organizes," said Butts. "If we are to find what educational system we want, we must choose what civilization we want. Engineers may have won the last war for us but they did not have the right education to win the peace. Arts teaches the ability to judge, an open attitude toward life, not the mastery of a subject."

The second speaker for the negative, Nixon, stressed the impractical nature of an Arts education and condemned arts knowledge as "a collection of facts from which you can derive no conclusion." He suggested that most students enter the Arts courses to give themselves prestige in the eyes of others —to impress public opinion rather than to serve humanity. Literature and fine arts are made possible by those engineering activities which make social life possible, he said.

OTTAWA SAYS INQUIRY UNDER WAY

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 2-(CUP)–Reported denial of C.O.T.C. leaves to student-harvesters "must be a mistake", Brigadier H. F. G. Letson, Adjutant-General of Canada, informed Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University tonight.

He added that the order issued through Military District No. 3 headquarters last week, stating that harvest volunteers would have to complete their full 110 hours of military training for the year, is being investigated.

(This order was received by the Queen's University Contingent, C.O.T.C. early last week, and announced by military authorities at Queen's last Wednesday night.

(No C.O.T.C. Contingent at any other university participating in the harvest scheme reported receipt of such an order, but Captain W. H. Agnew, Adjutant of the Queen's Contingent, predicted Sunday that they would "undouhtedly receive the same orders from Ottawa through their own military districts."

(Prior to the departure of harvesters to Saskatchewan, assurance was given to university authorities throughout eastern Canada hy the Department of Lahour that the Department of National Defence would authorize C.O.T.C. Contingents to grant leaves of ahsence from parade to men taking part in the harvest excursion.)

Special Classes To Be Held For Returning Harvesters

All Colleges and Departments Anxious to Co-operate in Giving Special Instructions to Students Returning from West; Late-Hour Lectures or Individual Tutorial Lessons to Be Given, Depending on Numbers

Student harvesters will be given special instruction either by late-hour lectures or individual tutorial lessons, depending on the number of absentees from each class, heads of University departments told The Varsity yesterday.

At University College classes will commence Nov. 9 and if necessary continue for three weeks.

Prof. W. R. Taylor, head of the Department of Oriental Languages, said he had prepared mimeographed summaries of each lecture to be distributed, but only two student harvesters had reported back to class.

"Our department is prepared to repeat lectures and do anything possible to fit in with the tutorial requirements of student harvesters," said Prof. F. C. A. Jeanneret, head of the U.C. Department of French, who reported 25 students missing from U.C. French classes. "At a meeting of the various departments in a week's time, it will be probably decided to have uniform instruction in special classes," he said.

Dr. G. Norwood, head of the U.C. Classics Department, and Prof. B. Fairley, German Department head, both declared teachers would deal with absentees as the individual cases require.

Although no harvesters had reported back to classes of Ancient History, Miss M. C. Needler, acting head of this department, said, "When they do indicate their return, we will help them as much as possible."

Prof. J. Finkelman of the School of Law said all but four of the 22 Law students who went west had already returned to classes, and that it would be necessary to wait until all were back before additional lectures could be arranged. He added that during the past three weeks, lectures in Law had been adjusted according to the number of students present.

Prof. R. M. Saunders of the History Department commented, "If necessary we can arrange to have students who were present during lectures prepare special notes for those who were absent." He said the department may have extra classes but plans had not as yet been drawn.

The Geography Department announced that students from all years will meet Nov. 8 to make arrangements suitable to the tutorial needs of absentees.

At Trinity College, W. A. Kirkwood, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, said department heads were willing to comply with requests of student harvesters for assistance in any classes missed.

Prof. C. Lewis, head of Trinity's German Department, and German professor for Victoria College, said only two students so far had reported from Saskatchewan, "If necessary, we will prepare lectures after hours," he said.

At Victoria College, department heads were willing to help, too. Prof. M. Woodside, Associate head of the Ancient History Department, said, "We will consult the individual student and make doubly sure that he catches up his studies."

Rev. B. F. Sullivan, Registrar of St. Michael's College, said he had advised Dr. L. Shook, head of the English Department, and Dr. L. Bondy, head of the French Department, to make suitable arrangements with returning harvesters. "We will do all in our power to help them," he said.

Lasting Benefit Derived From East-West Excursion Says Varsity Mast-Header

Harvesting and Threshing of Wheat Crops, Chief Purpose of Excursion, Has Been Accomplished as Far as Possible; Stresses Educational Value of Trip for Students Personally and as Future Citizens

SEVERAL STUDENTS ARRANGE TO RETURN NEXT YEAR

(Vernon Lang, Assistant Managing Editor of The Varsity, recently returned after three weeks in Saskatchewan, was able to keep in touch with the Saskatchewan Harvest Labour Committee and other government officials while at work in the wheatfields. Following is his survey of the harvest excursion.)

By Vernon Lang

Four thousand miles of travel, eight days of hard work, and contact with people with a completely different mode of living from that of our eastern cities—all that in three weeks—sums up only partly the addition to one's education made by the east-west harvest labour excursion.

The chief purpose of the excursion, the actual harvesting and threshing of crops, has to all intents and purposes been accomplished: what remains undone would have been completed if help had come from the east even one week earlier, according to those in charge of the actual distribution of emergency labour throughout Saskatchewan.

The work involved was long and hard, from before dawn until after sundown. There were cases of both unsatisfactory farmer-bosses and unsatisfactory student-labourers. but these cases are those which came to light early on in the scheme: those who are coming home now that the weather has broken for a while, and those who are still there awaiting the possibility of more work, are our evidence that students and others who responded to the call have fulfilled their function adequately.

The organization of such a mass migration was something old to the west and new to the east. The harvest excursions of the old days were not

Theological School to Haunted House, Old Knox College Has Seen Changes

By Betsy Dodge

Back in 1874, when College Street bordered a wood, and the University of Toronto campus was entered by a path leading from a Yonge Street gate, Old Knox College was built on the city outskirts at the head of Spadina Avenue.

The new yellow brick building was erected at a cost of $120,000 and the late Dr. Warden, Principal Caven, and other professors and friends of the College gave time and effort for collection of the sum. Purpose of the new college was to accommodate the rapidly increasing number of young men who wished to train for the Presbyterian ministry.

Came city expansion; and the street car lines swept up around the college to enclose it in the "devil strip." Milk trucks and street cars clattered past constantly. The site was fine for observing the world going by . . . but hardly one that inspired academic study. Furthermore, the need for complete renovation of the building, and the erection of a new fire-proof library became more urgent. When opportunity for a new College site on the University campus was offered, the Board of Management decided to abandon old Knox, and begin anew.

In 1912 the late W. A. Mitchell bought the complete property for $225,000.

For a time during the last war, several charitable organizations made Old Knox their headquarters in money-raising; but when wounded began to trickle back into this country from overseas, the place was tranformed into a convalescent hospital, predecessor until 1920, of the famous one on Christie Street.

At this time, the provincial government was having difficulty in providing office space for its numerous departments; the former College building solved the problem, and the departments of Labour, Health, and Vital Statistics took over temporarily until the Whitney block was completed and equipped for them. And Old Knox had its name changed to "Spadina House."

Although possession of the yellow brick building changed to the Keystone Investments Company, the provincial government still held a lease; and for its remainder, they sub-let to the Dominion government; and the old structure was transformed into a barracks for non-permanent local militia.

The year 1935 saw Spadina House vacated; and for the past seven years it has remained so.

Theological College, charity headquarters, hospital, government building, armories, haunted house . . . this has been the history of Old Knox College.

A Mistake?

Latest major development in the C.O.T.C. harvest leave situation is receipt of word by the Principal of Queen's University from the Adjutant-General of Canada to the effect that the denial of leave—issued last week through Military District No. 3 Headquarters at Kingston—"must be a mistake."

The news from Queen's last night, therefore, is of a more cheering nature, especially for the 284 men on this campus immediately concerned, than any received here since the report of leave-denial was published Thursday.

It also serves to clarify, to some extent at least, a set of circumstances which was placing government authorities in an extraordinarily unfavourable light. Yesterday we suggested that the affair was the result either of "lack of inter-departmental co-operation" or of "a most blatant and shocking governmental repudiation of a guarantee." It would now appear, in the rapidly-shifting situation, that the former was the case.

The government, therefore, may be considered cleared of the more serious of these two charges; and The Varsity is heartily glad that this is so. But the fact remains that in all probability the former accusation may be levelled with complete justice.

Three weeks elapsed between the time when the Department of Labour assured university authorities that the leaves would be forthcoming through the Department of National Defence and the time when Military District No. 3 officials issued the order which, in the minds of many, created serious doubt of government integrity. Surely three weeks is an ample period in which to allow memoranda from one government branch to another to filter through the official sieves which apparently retard federal action. It did not take students that long to volunteer for emergency harvest work when their government made a hasty and urgent appeal for labour relief in Saskatchewan.

The Adjutant-General is reported to have informed Dr. Wallace that an investigation of the circumstances surrounding the issuing of the Kingston order will be undertaken. We would recommend that such investigation be thorough.

The Ready Man Is . . .

One of the much discussed questions of the times which has been again brought into the limelight by the present controversies about the status of universities and students is the perennial query: What is the purpose of a university?

The most obvious purpose is naturally to train capable persons to fill positions where mental work as opposed to manual work is of first importance. Brain-work is out of popular favour today since the pendulum has swung to a veneration of the manual worker. But what would the man who works with his hands find to do if there were no thinker behind it all to plan new work. The world must have both kinds of workers in order to function smoothly.

Along with Mark Twain who once said, if our memory does not fail us, that the only thing better than lying under a tree with a book was lying under a tree without a book, we feel that a little free time to stand and stare or to sit and discuss is a good thing for everyone, particularly for all students and for those whose work is brain-work in which imagination and ingenuity have an important place.

Informal discusion, bull sessions, and general exchange of ideas have long been important features of university life, but we hear less and less of them. The war has taken its toll of our time to devote it to other matters of more immediate necessity.

In these times of strain and hard work it is well not to forget the prime purpose for which we have come to university: to get an education from textbooks and lectures and to learn how to think, which we may very profitably do by exchanging our ideas with others. Bacon put it neatly when he wrote that reading makes a full man, writing an exact man and conference a ready man. Let us not forget the last point.

. . . No Man Of Leisure.

In past years we have talked at some length on the subject of the best utilization of a student's spare time. This year we cannot in all fairness do so, since more and more students are coming to the realization that what little spare time they have free from lectures and war work must be used for studying. We are not trying to be facetious by that statement. We believe that we are stating what is unfortunately the plain truth of the matter.

The general public believes, and always has believed, that the college student is a man of leisure, who devotes his four years to the pursuit of pleasure, and only incidentally to the pursuit of knowledge. This may certainly have been the case with the more conspicuous students in the Mauve Decade of the 20's, but the university scene changed considerably in the 30's; in the 40's it has changed even more. The 1929 crash of the stock market ended the era of wild gaiety and brought with it ten years in which many students found financial difficulty in staying at the university or even in coming at all.

The present war, starting in 1939, has brought added responsibilities to the student and increasing calls on his time, with accelerated and more difficult courses, C.O.T.C. and war training and voluntary work he may undertake. It is certainly to be hoped that the present situation does not follow the preceeding ten-year pattern and last until 1949.

The students do not complain seriously about their increased responsibilities; there is a fair amount of good-natured grousing and a large percentage of the university's population have taken to marking mystic symbols on their time-tables in order to remind themselves of their regular extra-curricular duties. The extra work is not impossible; it can be sandwiched neatly in between the hours of lectures and the hours of study, and all the work lumped together does not come to much more than one heavy full-time job.

But the difference between a full-time job and the university man's work is obvious: the job is one continuous piece of work, and the student is being asked to do several jobs. Where he loses time and energy is in changing from one job to another.

We are not asking that the burden of work be cut down, far from it. We know that many others are working just as hard and some even harder. What we are trying to impress on the public is the fact that university students are really busy, and are working hard, in their own field, at winning the war. Those who constantly criticize the students should take a look at their daily papers, which continually urge the public to realize the fact that we are engaged in total war, and to contribute to an all-out war-effort. In many ways it looks very much as if some with guilty consciences are making the university student into a whipping-boy, or, at the least, that they are theorizing ahead of their data.

Wheat Warms Winter

Harvest to Be Burned in Place of Rationed Fuels in All Government Buildings and Private Homes

NO FUELIN'

A final solution of the problem of the Canadian wheat surplus has been reached, it was announced in Ottawa yesterday, as a direct result of the discovery made recently by a S.P.S. Professor.* It is understood, that Dr. Hiram N. Firem (see cut), of the Department of Mining Engineering, has been interested in the fuel shortage, and that as a result of continued research he has found a new fuel which will alleviate the scarcity of coal and oil.

PROFESSOR FIREM

Demonstrating the fact that water seeks its own level.

Professor Firem's new fuel is nothing but wheat. "I am confident," he said in an interview, "that our domestic wheat supply will be sufficient to supply heat for all Canada during the coming winter. Of course this is based on a mean monthly temperature of (Censored — weather department secret — Ed.) and makes no allowance for any change in the atmospheric gradient."

"Canada has wheat to burn," said Professor Hi Finance of the Department of Political Science and Economics.

Although the nature of Professor Firem's experiments was still kept a closely guarded government secret, The Varsity Secret Service has discovered that other materials tested were old saddle shoes (of which there is a plentiful supply at Whitney Hall) and air from the Hart House poolroom. The latter, while combustible, cannot be supplied steadily in the proper consistency for use in a heating plant.

"This is not really anything new," the professor went on. "Everybody knows that wheat has a high heating value, particularly when it is first made into a mash, fermented and distilled. Furthermore, this discovery is not in a class with some of my other ones. Back in 1877 when I was appointed to the staff of S.P.S. I patented a yo-yo; and, of course, you must surely remember the pinnacle of my achievements in 1936 when I perfected a new, cheap and effective substitute for water." The worthy professor modestly refused to hear any praise for his scheme. "I got the idea," he commented, "when I burned my tongue on a wheatcake."

"The chief virtue of the plan," he concluded, "is that now we will be able to dispose of the surplus of wheat that exists as a result of the patriotic efforts of our heroic student harvesters."

Comments from the harvesters were loud, but mainly unintelligible, and the rest was unprintable.

Canadian Talent Not Appreciated Charges Atkins, Art Gallery Exhibitor

Culturally Canada is dead, Caven Atkins, noted young Canadian artist, stated in an interview with The Varsity. Mr. Atkins, who directed the Art Classes in Hart House in 1940, is the exhibiting artist in the Art Gallery at present.

The coming exhibition of the Canadian Armed Forces, he maintained, is a step in the right direction. "It encourages the men and women in the Forces to keep art in their lives, and will result in the production of pictures which if it were not for their initiative would be lost forever." Mr. Atkins pointed to the success of a similar exhibition held in Detroit not long ago. "It was received enthusiastically, which proves by implication, that drawings concerned with the war effort, have immense morale-building qualities in arousing public interest."

He then went on to explain that due to government sponsorship art in the United States has received an impetus which has caused the American people to recognize this art as native to their country. On the other hand, "Canada suffers from the tradition which has been built up about masters from across the seas. Artists are strong in this country, and even possess vigour which cannot be rivalled in Europe, yet very few artists can make a living with art as a profession. We are producing good material here. Until people realize this, until they do patronize Canadian art, we will not have cultural unity."

"Without doubt, the war is making us conscious of ourselves as Canadians. In the past, we have become accustomed to accepting standards from outside." He then expressed the conviction that the government should do something to commission artists to mark the progress of the war effort in this country. In a great many cases paintings could replace poster campaigns, through their circulation in exhibitions, and through subsequent encouragement of the private individual to purchase these pictures.

"If this idea were carried out, public interest, through newspaper and magazine publicity, would be concentrated on a focus, so as to crystalize attention to the vastness of our war effort."

Vic Beats Junior School To Keep Play-off Chance

Suspense Sustained Until Last Minute in One of the Closest Games of the Season; Score Is 1-0

MUNRO SCORES ONLY POINT

By Don Kempthorne

Victoria College, last year's Mulock Cup winners, yesterday defeated Junior School by the slim margin of 1-0 in one of the tightest games of the season to take over 3rd place in the loop, and thus retain a play-off chance. Both teams fought their hardest on the greasy muck of the Stadium field; penalties were numerous and although Vic had the better of the play, the issue was in doubt up to the last few minutes of the game.

The single point scored by the winners came early in the second quarter, when Vic's brilliant quarter-back and kicker, Glen Munro, booted the pigskin into touch behind School's line, after a series of plunges had brought his team to the Engineers' 25 yd. line.

Play by quarters:

FIRST QUARTER

Vic kicked off to School, Munro's boot being run back by Vern Booth. The play consisted of plunging for several downs. When a bad snap went over Lawrence's head, although recovered by School, it cost them valuable yards and Vic then began a march down the field blowing wide holes in the Engineers' line. The best gain of the quarter was a Munro-Jones forward pass good for 30 yds. for Vic.

SECOND QUARTER

The frame began with Vic attacking on School's 25 yd. line. Munro's surprise kick was taken by Waldon of School well behind his line and before he could get over, he was mobbed for the single point which was placed on the scoreboard. School then stiffened and started to move. With the ball on their own 25, a pass from Evans was scooped up by Bill Lawrence for an 11 yd. gain. An end run was good for 7 yds., but another forward, which might have meant much, went over Booth's head. An offside 15 yd. penalty to Vic was nullified when a School fumble gave the Artsmen the ball on the School 40. Successive plunges by Burwell brought Vic to the Engineers' doorstep; again Burwell tried to break through, but bounced off a suddenly stiffened School line, on the second down. On the third down, the crafty Glen Munro tossed a forward to a receiver waiting unguarded well behind the Engineers' line, but the ball bounced off the goal-post, ending Vic's most dangerous scoring threat.

School then took possession on their own 25 and the half ended with some walloping tackles by Maclean and Walt Sharpe for School.

THIRD QUARTER

Vic kicked to School—Stafford doing the run-back, followed by a plunge and a Stafford-Booth end run which almost netted yards. The kick gave Vic the ball on their own 44, but gains made by the plunging halves were nullified again by a 15 yd. interference penalty. A long kick gave School the ball on their own 22; Lawrence went through the centre for a gain and on the 3rd down another offside reprimand of 15 yds. was handed to the Artsmen which called back the kick. Later Geo. Evans, one of School's best, tossed the ball to a mate on a end run who wasn't there and this, coupled with an incompleted forward and a short kick, gave Vic the pigskin at centre-field. Munro suddenly booted on the first down, hoping for another rouge, but Evans, back just in time, managed to get outside his line. Two plunges by Waldon preceded the kick on which the Engineers were penalized 15 yds. for a high tackle. The frame ended with Vic all set to advance on the School 25.

FOURTH QUARTER

A plunge, a fumble and another 3rd down incompleted forward blew Vic's only remaining threat of a major score. With end runs working better, School then took two first downs—helped by a further Vic penalty of 15 yds. As the game neared its end, Vic's stonewall line prevented any progress on the ground, thus forcing School to take to the air in an effort to by-pass the Messrs. Carson, Guthrie and Doner; as a result Vic picked up two of their opponent's forwards and the game ended with the Artsmen in possession of the ball deep in School territory.

Both teams were very evenly matched, with the Vicmen having the edge in linemen. Carson, Guthrie and Doner allowed very little past them. The Engineers were loose in the centre as long as they had 30 or 40 yards of ground behind them but always tightened in the pinches to prevent any major score.

Glen Munro, of Vic, was the spark-plug of the Vic attack, especially when close in. The first-down kick nearly caught the School halves out of position in the 3rd quarter. Bob Bundy, Jim Fitzgerald, and Fred Burford did a successful job of carrying the pigskin for Vic. Among the boys from the "little red schoolhouse," honours go about equally to Vern Booth, George Evans, Bill Lawrence, and Waldon.

S.P.S. Juniors — Evans, Waldon, Lawrence, Booth, Craibbe, Glover, Campbell, Sharpe, Cross, Sharpe, Moffatt, Bromley, Currie, Stafford, Spence, Brouse, Maclean, Boa, McConvey.

Victoria—Munro, Bundy, Fitzgerald, Shugart, Doner, Carson, Guthrie, Ibey, Sanderson, McConiskey, Jones, Wickware, Wilson, Crang, Austin, Burwell, Harris, Fullerton.

Knox-Wycliffe Soccer Ends in Scoreless Draw

Knox and Wycliffe battled to a scoreless draw yesterday afternoon on the back campus. Throughout the game, play was very even, each team having numerous opportunites to score. In the first half Knox almost had a sure goal. The Wycliffe goalkeeper, in attempting to clear, kicked the ball against a Knox forward but the ball bounced crazily over the crossbar. The last half featured brilliant end to end rushes by both teams but no goals were produced.

The teams:

Knox — MacSween, Currie, Calder, Self, Hall, Kullio, Mathews, Barr, Duke, Cunningham, Donnard, Jack, Boyd.

Wycliffe—Harris, Morley, Philpotts, Doolan, Storey, Abbott, Parke, Taylor, Thompson, Hitchey, Fry, Lyall, Kelsick.

Speaking of Sport

By Ralph Loffmark

EDITOR'S NOTE: A new departure is being inaugurated in this issue. Weekly hereafter we hope to put the S.O.S. in the hands of Athletic Directors of different colleges and other well-informed persons. By this means we hope to bring the viewpoint of the different corners of the campus into the light for all to inspect and discuss.

Today we have Ralph Loffmark, Athletic Director of University College. Graduating in Political Science next spring, his interest in athletics of the University is extensive, having competed in practically every department.

OH WOE!

The Sports Editor has just dreamed up a new system for getting out of a lot of work! Now he has someone to write his editorials and at the same time gives those over-worked and half-starved (all meetings and games seem to be held during meal time) Athletic Directors an chance to tell the world about their troubles.

Before any of the aspiring politicians throw their hats into the ring, let me tell them a bit of what they are in for—especially during the first two months of the fall term. People will want to know why they can't play on the 'Senior' team, why they can't get a locker, why they have to have a medical before they play, or why they can't get P.T. credits for playing ping-pong. The Athletic Director is expected to attend all meetings concerning athletics in his faculty. He is expected to participate in a wide variety of sports. He is supposed to know the score of every game ever played, know which teams are in which league, and know at what time the eighth volleyball team plays next week. Managers must be found. Teams must be organized. Equipment must be bought—that is, after the money has been wrung from the watchdogs who guard the budget. Then when he finally does get things organized and running smoothly, everyone decides to go harvesting. No wonder your athletic director does not know who is giving the lectures in some of his classes.

HINTS THAT HELP

But let me say something more—and this, I imagine, applies to students in all colleges and faculties. Remember that from what has been said, it is impossible for us to keep in contact with everyone and we have no effective way of knowing whether you want to participate in a sport. If you want to play on a team, find the team manager in that sport yourself and he will be only too glad to put you on a team. The athletic program is not made up for the benefit of a few star players, but for the great majority who are novices. So do not hesitate to look around for a berth on a team.

In spite of all our worries the job has its good points. Co-operation from The Varsity, the Athletic Office in Hart House and the students has been first rate. In fact most of our difficulties in U.C. are caused by the scattering of students throughout the campus and city. So, we hope this article gives our readers an idea of our problems and how they can aid us.

Dents' Swimmers Edge St Mike's

The Hart House pool resounded to lusty shouts late yesterday as the Dents natator squad edged out a challenging St. Mike's crew 20-13 and a powerful Sr. Meds team submerged U.C. B's 28-5.

The Dents-St. Mike's meet began with the Baystreeters looking tops but the Molarmen gradually came into control, clinching the meet by winning the 200 yd. relay.

The Senior Meds aggregation had no trouble with the weak U.C. team. In fact only the efforts of Rog. Beames kept the Medicos from gaining a possible.

STUDENT LABOUR CLUB PLANS BOOK DRIVE

At the Newman Club's weekly meeting, held last night in the club rooms, it was announced that the Student Labour Club is planning to set aside the week of Nov. 9 as a book week for the men in the services.

The plan is to provide our fighting men with books, chiefly technical and language books, so they will be able to continue to study even though they are in the service. There is a plan to hold a dance in Hart House to which everybody will bring a book which they think might be of interest to a serviceman.

B - 6 LACROSSE VICTORY WON BY S.P.S. OVER DENTS

Junior School, although starting slowly managed to eke out an 8-6 lacrosse victory over Dents yesterday.

Keary, netting 4 counters, sparked the Engineers who made the last two periods hot, notching seven of their tallies. The Molarmen—strong at first—got three shortly after the opening whistle due to the expert work of McCartney—faded as the the Engineers gathered strength.

Dents—Butler, Hambly 1, Weaver, McCartney 4, Currie 1, Johns, Cousins, Lind, Murray.

Jr. S.P.S.—Steele, Turner 2, Scott, Moorehead 1, Gahan 1, Keary 4, Upper, Hull, McDonough.

Baldwin to Speak On Art Exhibition

The opening meeting of the Fine Art Club will be held on Thursday evening, Nov. 5, at 8:00 p.m. in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's College.

The speaker of the evening will be Martin Baldwin, curator of the Art Gallery of Toronto. Mr. Baldwin will give an illustrated talk on the Andover Exhibition of Canadian Painting held recently in Maine.

The Exhibition, arranged by two young men, tries to give a brief summary of contemporary Canadian Painting emphasizing those artists outside our own province, with whose work we are not well acquainted.

This year the Fine Art Club is taking as its theme a survey of Canadian culture in general. The various monthly meetings during the year are being designed to stress Canadian Art, Music, Sculpture, Architecture, and possibly Drama.

All students on the campus who are interested in the Arts are invited to attend these meetings and become members of the Club. The meetings are scheduled for the first Thursday in every month.

Sportswoman

This week, the athletic "Gibson Girl," with her sailor hat and long flowing skirts, will take a gay-ninety seat as our co-ed basketballers start our season on Wednesday evening at O.C.E. Vic Freshies and O.T. will start the ball rolling at 6:30 (which will make all enthusiasts who like to dine at six very happy indeed). On Thursday evening, at 5:30, Meds will play against St. Hilda's to complete the happy week. The first team mentioned will do the honours—serve the oranges, compensate the referees, and what have you.

Our referees are gradually being lined up for active service, and we have quite a good lot of them—many of them old U. of T.ers of athletic fame. Such gals as Beryl Pollock, Flo Allen, Jean Stirling, Helen Ricker—all P.H.S. grads—and Jean Crawford of Vic 4T2, have offered their services to Ruth Virtue of Vic who is looking after basketball this year. Kay Slavinski and Janet Baillie are two additions to these capable play-watchers that we hope can be made in the near future. Phil Griffith (of The Girl and the Game fame) is too busy this year to referee more than the finals and she will be missed by us veterans of the University basketball world. Her keen eye kept the play very smooth indeed and her toss-ups when in doubt were as frequent as necessary. Her activity and interest made a real art of refereeing as nearly everyone will agree who knew her of old.

Just as our referees are apt to be quite annoyed at close checking, our athletic authorities in general and Dr. Mullock in particular are very easily annoyed at no checking (effective pun, we hope). In other words, all basketballers must have a check-up over at Hoskin Ave. before they get in the games. You never know, especially if you are new at College basketball, just how strenuous a sport it is—yes, even girls' basketball. The pace is terrific at times, especially in the finals—and if your heart starts to pounding too hard as you go racing over the floor after that elusive ball — well — you just had better take it a bit easy. Our doctors are here for our convenience and we should take early stock of the advice they give us regarding our participation in sports.

In closing, we would like to leave with you a little more friendly advice. A little bit of co-operation will go a long way (before we know it our services may be solicited for the advancement of the let's join hands movement) but we do mean it as a warning to those gals who, dare we say because of the weather or for various sundry reasons, have yet not completed the third round in the tennis tourney. This sort of thing just can't go on forever, or our hair will get very grey indeed.

Student and Interne Problems Discussed at Conference

our allies.

The National executive of the Association has been instructed to maintain close liason with the Director-General of Medical Services of the Canadian Army, and with the heads of the medical services of the other armed forces.

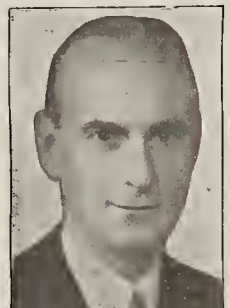
Internes

The Canadian Hospital Association, the Canadian Medical Association and the Medical Services of the armed forces will be approached with the object in view of having these bodies form a committee which would investigate interne problems, and attempt to standardize the conditions of internesship. One suggestion is that the interne quotas of all hospitals be revised.

"Something that has been neglected in the past," Cosgrove continued, "is the matter of co-operative book and instrument exchanges. At Manitoba we have a co-operative but it has charged the same prices as other retail book stores. In the future we hope to have co-operatives working together with publishers and instrument companies and thus considerably decreasing costs to the students.

CAMSI also intends to appeal to the government that the enlistment scheme now in force for male medical students in the last two years of their courses be extended to women students.

Manitoba Meds



The University of Manitoba Medical Course has been speeded up, along with those of other Canadian Universities, it was announced. "The speed-up became effective this year," Cosgrove stated, "and at first affected only senior students. The Fourth (last) academic year and the interne year were combined and shortened so that at present they cover 18 consecutive months, instead of two years as they did formerly."

Later the lower years were included in the scheme, and altogether the elapsed time between enrolment and licensing covers 44 months, instead of the 56 months previously required. "We have about 60 students in a class, and the speed-up makes quite a sizable increase in the number of doctors that graduate in Western Canada," Cosgrove concluded.

Dr. F. Gaebelein To Address V.C.F.

The Rev. Dr. Frank E. Gaebelein, M.A., Litt.D., eminent author and Bible scholar, will address a meeting tomorrow at 12:30 in Room 8, U.C., under Varsity Christian Fellowship auspices.

Dr. Gaebelein has been Headmaster of Stony Brook School, Long Island, N.Y., since 1922. A graduate of New York and Harvard Universities, he received his Honorary Litt.D. degree from Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

He is Associate Editor of "Our Hope" and weekly contributor to "The Presbyterian" and "Christian Observer" Well-known throughout America as a Bible-conference speaker and preacher, he is the author of many magazine articles and a number of other publications.

Mountaineering is one of Dr. Gaebelein's hobbies; as a member of the American Alpine Club he has achieved distinction. An able pianist also, he has played on a coast-to-coast broadcast. During his undergraduate days at New York University he was a member of the N.Y.U. track team.

best satiric manner. Every part of the play is in the same mood: not once does a breakdown into any kind of idealism occur.

The actual production is extremely well done, without a single miscast character. All they have to do is be nasty, but that must be difficult to carry out through an entire evening. Ruth Chatterton needs no praise of this critic to enhance her reputation and she lives up to the best that could be expected of her. Her divorced husband-lover, Ralph Forbes, turns in a capable performance, especially as a lover.

Private Lives will soon be unintelligible in spots to new generations of audiences. Coward dates his plays. It might be a good idea, therefore, to see it before you are too old to understand it.

The Varsity Reviews

The Last Time I Saw Paris

By Elliot Paul

"The Last Time I Saw Paris" may not be new to the general reading public, but it will be to the frequenters of Hart House Library, and consequently this reviewer has found it fitting to acquaint them of this latest, and most excellent addition to their leisure reading.

A book of reminiscences by the author of "The Life and Death of a Spanish Town," it takes its name from the popular song, and has the same amiable and nostalgic charm. But although it begins as a travelogue to the Left Bank of the Seine, it becomes a great deal more than that, and before the reader has put down its four-hundred fascinating pages, he will have come to know intimately the inhabitants of the Rue de la Huchette, and through them, the French race.

Mr. Paul is a very accomplished writer and relates his story with all the appropriate mellow humor and raciness. Hardly a chapter goes by without its pleasantly scabrous anecdote, no indication of which, unfortunately, can be given in the chaste columns of The Varsity. But he has also acquired some of the insight and delicate perception of the race he so admires, and has painted a whole gallery of remarkable characters, from chestnut-vendors to bon vivants. The best of these is Hyacinthe, an already mature and self-possessed six-year-old when we first meet her, and at the end a debonair young film-star who commits suicide when the Nazis enter Paris.

The author writes from the point of view of an American newspaperman. He deplores what passed for politics and civil administration in France and (being unashamedly American) the standard of living, but he has the warmest enthusiasm for Gallic civilization. The French he considers a people with an uninhibited zest for life, and the knack of creating a beautifully subtle pattern out of it.

The loosely-arranged sketches that make up the book date from the twenties to the fall of France. As the narrative progresses, Paul turns from an evocation of the quality of life on the Rue de la Huchette to an analysis of political conditions, until the book ends with a bitter diatribe on the men who sold out their country . . . and the thousands of Rues de la Huchette throughout it. The implication, in the end, would seem to be that the final catastrophe was brought on by the very easy-going good nature that was so typical of the Parisians.

ONE OF OUR MOST REVERED PROFESSORS SAYS: "If your girl friend's brother has hay fever, don't marry her." And another, equally revered professor says: "If your girl friend had rheumatic fever when she was a child, don't marry her."

Could it be that the worthy professors are urging us to be immoral?

And the University of Washington Daily runs a headline which says: "CHEST CALLS ON FACULTY."

Manpower shortage, eh, fellas?

KISSING ASCRIBED TO VITAMIN NEED says a headline on a story datelined from South Africa, where, apparently, anything can happen. A Professor of Acronautics (of all things) has a theory. "Primitive humans," he says, "obtained their supply of vitamin D by nibbling at themselves and one another, and the last evidence of this forgotten instinct may lie in the practise of kissing."

Hey maw, throw out that cod liver oil.

There is a drawer in the Men's Varsity Office labelled quite simply, "PROFS." Imagine the surprise of one member of the staff searching for material on certain professors, when he opened it and found . . . a slightly used cake of soap and an old hair brush, belonging to one of the Masthead.

And to aspiring young reporters on the staff we offer this one:

"In order to be able to cover speeches thoroughly," says another Professor of Journalism, at Wisconsin, "it is necessary to learn to listen with one ear and write with the other."

Neat trick, if you can do it.

There is a certain professor in a certain faculty (guess that's vague enough) who was out of town (at a convention, let us say). He conversed rather freely with Bacchus one night, and, at a late hour, returned to his hotel in a rather foggy condition. In the lobby he spied a large sized man, wearing an accumulation of gold braid on a beautiful uniform, who was engaged in conversation with a fine feathered female.

"Here," said the professor, handing over his keys, "put my car away."

"Sir, who do you think I am?"

"You're the doorman, aren't you?" the professor ventured.

"No," the uniformed man glared, drawing himself up to his full height, "I'm a Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy."

The winner of the Professors are Human prize, to our way of thinking, is one in the Department of Classics at the University of California, who says: "I am a human being, subject to asininity. If at times I talk through my hat, you may laugh up your sleeves . . . but do it quietly."

* * *

There is one Professor at this University who rather likes The Varsity. "I admit," he says, "that The Varsity is a high grade publication; but, gentlemen, permit me to suggest that during laboratory classes it cannot possibly compare with my text-book."

Okay, professor, we can take a hint.

And a propos of that, a professor of Geology at Massachussetts Institute of Technology, said: "The text book for this course was written by me, but I cannot remember its name."

That's excusable, professor, but do you remember your own name?

AND FINALLY, there is a professor of English at Dartmouth who claims, "I have never laid an egg."

Unlike your correspondent, who frequently does.

Club Hears Boyd On T. H. Lawrence

Lawrence of Arabia, as a soldier, writer, and a man who combined a clear mind and a wide knowledge, provided the subject of Dr. W. Boyd's address at the Arts and Letters club in Wymilwood last night. Dr. Boyd, professor of pathology and bacteriology at the University, described T. H. Lawrence in pathological terms as being superhuman, but in a manner which could be admired.

"As the idol of youth, Lawrence of Arabia will always remain; even Lord Tweedsmuir who admitted that he was not much of a hero-worshipper said that he would have followed him over the edge of the world." the speaker continued.

"As a soldier, Lawrence was an ideal commando leader. He enticed the enemy to strike out blindly at enemies that did not exist, so that they spent their energies against an endless desert. In warfare he was an artist in the use of material and men—his troops moved as an influence or an idea—intangible, and drifting about like gas. The Turks put a price on his head of $100,000, alive or dead. No Arab ever won that price.

"As a writer, T. H.'s greatest contribution was 'The Seven Pillars of Wisdom,' Dr. Boyd said. He was seen straining for the perfect word or clause til the sweat stood out on his brow. Describing Oxford Lawrence wrote, "it is quite an ordinary fireless town," and John Buchan's books he termed as "athletes, racing and speedy." On the desert, he cried, "the heat of the sun came out like a sword to strike us speechless, and viewing the ruins of a village in the wake of the Turks, he exclaimed, "the best of you returns to me with the most Turkish dead."

"As a man, Lawrence lived towards an ideal standard," the speaker concluded. "He stressed a superlative training of the mind to be master of its body, excelling even the Arab standards of endurance."

Dr. Frank E. Gaebelein, author and Bible scholar, will speak today at a meeting in Room 8, U.C., from 12:30 to 1:30. Come and bring your lunch.

U.A.T.C. PARADES

Effective today, Tuesday, Nov. 3, and until further notice, all airmen enlisted in the U.A.T.C. and taken on strength of No. 3 Squadron, plus all men whose applications for enrolment in this Squadron have not yet been finally dealt with, will parade on the days and at the time obtaining for C.O.T.C. parades of their respective colleges or faculties. (For example, Arts men will parade at 1545 hrs. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and at 1330 hrs. on Saturdays.) Place—South end of North Campus. Men who have drawn uniforms will parade in uniform.

Medical At-Home To be Held Friday

The annual Medical At-Home will be held Friday in the Concert Hall of the Royal York Hotel. Music will be by Forgan Thomas and his orchestra, who recently played at the Queen's Medical At-Home.

This year it was decided to return to the former system of entertainment, and give the members of the student body an opportunity to display their talents. A series of skits will be prescnted, under the direction of Tom Dixon, a sixth year man.

The Medical Society has invited members of other faculties to make up parties and attend the At-Home.

In complying with the president's request for simplicity in social functions, the Medical Society has made this year's At-Home informal, and has asked The Varsity to stress the fact that girls attending the dance are specifically requested to wear short dresses.

responses to such grave emergencies as the present one. Those who went did not go as members of institutions volunteering to do something completely new to them for the good of their country: they went as husky independent men looking for jobs. This year's crop required an appeal to patriotism to bring out the necessary labour. In some cases that appeal worked too well and those not suited for such work were seized with enthusiasm for the expedition. In such a case some selection of those who were to go became necessary, and that selection, particularly in a number of Quebec High Schools, was not made very satisfactorily.

Committee Did Its Best

But the Harvest Labour Committee in Saskatchewan did its best under the circumstances. Experienced men gave no trouble; mature university students soon learned, while younger and less husky students from universities and high schools were either given what available work they could do or shipped back home as soon as permission for an early return could be obtained from officials back east.

These last unfortunate cases have received much publicity, while the satisfied majority have not yet returned or have not felt the urge to publicize their cases. Mr. W. W. Dawson, Secretary of the Harvest Labour Committee told me that he has met several cases of boys so satisfied with their work and conditions that they have made individual arrangements to go back to the same farmer another year.

A secondary feature of the scheme (which the authorities may have in mind although not much has been said about it) has been its effect in an educational way on those who went. Many hoped to come home with sufficient earnings to help them substantially in putting themselves through. Bad weather and a late start have largely disappointed this hope, but those whom I have met seem unanimous in the view that the trip, the work and the contact are something which will be of lasting benefit to them both personally and as future citizens of a dominion that has both an east and a west.

"Shut My Big Mouth" is a rollicking saga of the Old West. Satchel Mouth Joe E. Brown decides to beautify the West with flowers, but gets mixed up with bandits and Indians instead. The job of Marshal is forced on our shy hero, who, while insisting that he is a "lone wolf," and will capture Buckskin Bill (Victor Jory) single-handed, repeatedly tries to get away from the town.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

After a series of impossible but uproarious circumstances, such as Brown disguising himself as a woman and trying to dance the bandit leader into submission, he finally captures the whole gang, makes friends with the Indians, and marries curvaceous Adele Mara. If you like this type of good old-fashioned humour, don't miss this film.

"They All Kissed the Bride" is a gay comedy about a female tycoon who is more of a machine than a women (Joan Crawford). Melvyn Douglas soon changes her ideas about men and business and she wins a jitterbug contest at her employees' dance.

The show is crammed with modern humour and is recommended for Schoolmen.

Committee Formed For War Services

A War Services Committee, sponsored by the Student Labour Club and uniting non-faculty organizations on the campus has been formed, The Varsity was informed last night. Members of the committee are appointees of Newman Club, the Co-operative Organization, the Student Christian Movement, Avukah, the C.C.F. Club and the Student Labour Club.

A similar organization has been in existence at the University of Manitoba for some time. Among the activities of the Manitoba organization is entertaining troop trains with short stop-overs in Winnipeg by organizing dances right in the station.

The Toronto committee proposes to organize a drive to supply books, Christmas packages and letters for service men in Canadian camps and stations, and homes and entertainment for them on leave.

Plans are being formulated for a book campaign lasting one week, to be held this month to supply barracks and canteens in Ontario. Each of the represented organizations is to hold an entertainment, such as a dance, with a low admission plus a book.

The armed forces have made provisions for the collection of books and magazines, and their distribution to the stations where they are most needed. Information regarding type of books most desired by the men, supplied by the military authorities, shows that technical books and texts in languages are most in demand, and it is these the Varsity students will be able to supply, a committee member said.

Varsity 'Maligns Misquotes' Speech To Queen's Alumni, L. Austin Wright Charges

In Reference to Varsity's Publication of His Speech, Mr. Austin Wright Now Claims Misrepresentations

SPEECH UNFAIRLY TREATED

London, Ont., Nov. 2—(CUP)—L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service in an interview with Bob Burns of Western University, last Friday, accused The Varsity of "misquoting and maligning my speech."

Austin Wright's accusation refers to the way in which The Varsity publicized a speech he prepared for delivery at Queen's University on October 17, in which he intimated that physically-fit young men of military age might be permitted to enter University only on condition that they take courses which would fit them to become technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry.

"I was asked to speak to the Queen's students about the National Selective Service," stated Wright. "I gave them a full account of all phases of the service, giving no accent on any particular part. Apparently the press seized on one particular part of my speech dealing with the Universities and played it up to make it look like the main part—misquoting me," he continued.

"All the statements I read were pure conjectures as to what might happen in the future. There are no definite plans, but in the near future there will be more action forthcoming," he said.

"I have no authority, nor is there any authority other than the Order-in-Council No. 8343, passed recently, which is in the hands of the University presidents, I believe, by now," he concluded.

Austin Wright is a graduate in Engineering from the University of Toronto, and was Editor of The Varsity in 1911. He received his diploma in 1910 and his degree of B.A.Sc. in 1915.

For many years he has been general

U.A.T.C PARADES

Effective from Tuesday, Nov. 3, and until further notice, all airmen enlisted in the U.A.T.C. and taken on strength of the University of Toronto Squadron, plus all men whose applications for enrolment in this Squadron have not yet been finally dealt with, will parade on the days and at the time obtaining for C.O.T.C. parades of their respective colleges or faculties. (For example, Arts men will parade at 1545 hrs. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and at 1330 hrs. on Saturdays.) Place—South end of North Campus. Men who have drawn uniforms will parade in uniform.

Harvesters Ball Planned by McGill

Montreal, Oct. 30—(CUP)—McGill University is planning a special Harvester's Ball for Friday, Nov. 6, to give the whcatfield heroes a rousing welcome back to school, as a climax to their thousands of miles of travelling, their many hours of working in the fields, and to help to readjust them to college life once again.

Since each student harvester was encouraged to sprout a whisker of some description while in the west, beards are particularly requested to be retained; harvesters with beards will be admitted for the price of one war savings stamp. Other students and harvesters without beards will pay more.

A group of co-ed judges will choose a campus king from the harvesters at the Ball, the most distinguished looking beard to be the criterion for the title.

To preserve the western atmosphere, the harvesters are being asked to wear their working clothes, plaid shirts, rough trousers, and so forth, for the evening. Decorations will depict prairie scenes, and dancing is to be interspersed with old time square dancing, complete with fiddler and caller.

Soil Erosion Described By Lecturer

Professor A. F. Coventry Describes Depreciation of Land in Southern Ontario in Fourth Reconstruction Lecture

REFORESTATION NECESSARY

The earth is the ultimate source of all wealth, but except when violent circumstances bring this to our attention, we think little about it, said Professor A. F. Coventry yesterday in his illustrated lecture on "Soil and Water." This lecture was fourth in the series of lecures on Reconstruction.

Prof. Coventry said that without fertile soil and good water life is impossible, and in the past, great civilizations have owed their decline to the destruction of the soil through improper use of the land.

Canada's settlers found themselves in a richly endowed land where supplies of timber, game, and so forth, gave the impression of inexhaustibility. However, we have so abused these supplies that we are nearly within sight of the end of some of them. The destruction of natural vegetation which is a prerequisite necessary for agriculture has adverse effects on soil and water.

Since the opening up of Old Ontario some 150 years ago, over 90 percent of its area has been stripped of forest. This, coupled with the fact that the farming methods brought from Great Britain were not suited to the Ontario climate, has resulted in severe depreciation of land.

While primeval Ontario was richly provided with streams, many now dry up in summer. Due to the removal of the forests, too much water runs away during the spring and fall floods, and this causes the failure of the streams in the important growing season.

Soil erosion is another result of stripping the land of its forests. The sandy soil blows away, and drifting

History Club Discusses Modern India

Graduate of Punjab University Now Studying Theology Here, Stresses Importance of Indian National Congress

SELF-RULE, INDIA'S GOAL

The importance of the Indian National Congress in current Indian affairs was stressed by Mr. Sugit Singh, addressing the Modern History Club at Wymilwood last night. A graduate of Punjab University, Mr. Singh is now studying theology at Emmanuel and Wycliffe.

After tracing the growth and change in ideas of the East India Company's rule to the present time, Mr. Singh showed how the proposals of Sir Stafford Cripps differed from those of the Indian National Congress. He stated that the Congress believed that the National government should be given more power in order that they could present an idealogy which would arouse the people rather than just the promise of dominion status after the war.

The position in India is no longer that of welcoming dominion status but rather one of holding out for total independence, he said, and concluded that in the Congress, Moslems and Hindus are working together for the common goal of Indian self-rule.

Assurance Given Queen's By LaFleche, Letson That Harvesters Exempt

Wallace Announces Student-Harvesters Will Get Full Credit For Parades Missed; Believe Col. Earl's Enquiry as to Leave Procedure Replied to By Official "Not Fully Acquainted with Situation"

C.O.T.C. OFFICIALS AWAIT 'FINAL, DEFINITE' ORDERS

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 3—(CUP)—Governmental assurance was received here today by Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal of Queen's University, that students who went to Saskatchewan as harvester volunteers would receive full credit for the C.O.T.C. parade-hours missed while on the excursion.

The Principal made announcement of the assurance following telephone conversations with Brigadier L. R. LaFleche, Minister of National War Services, and Major-General H. F. G. Letson, Adjutant-General of Canada, in which Dr. Wallace "put the matter strongly before the authorities."

The Queen's University Contingent, C.O.T.C., is now awaiting final detailed orders from the headquarters of Military District No. 3 concerning the manner in which leaves are to be granted and credit given.

Regarding the manor in which the order from District officials was made last week that students who had missed parades while in Saskatchewan must complete their full 110 hours of training, university officials released the following statement:

"When university authorities asked the Department of Labour that C.O.T.C. leaves of absence be granted harvest volunteers, they were assured that such leaves would be made. But in military language "leaves of absence" does not imply total exemption. Colonel R. O. Earl, Officer Commanding the Queen's University Contingent, C.O.T.C., was probably the first to suggest this through regular channels when he asked for orders on the matter by telephone from Military District No. 3 headquarters Oct. 5 District headquarters officials promised to get in touch with Ottawa authorities. Col. Earl, having had no reply by Oct. 13, repeated his enquiry in writing. The enquiry was probably passed on by District headquarters and reached some official not fully acquainted with the situation who merely replied that provision must be made to cover the full training syllabus. Since this University made the first orthodox query, the order was received here first."

Col. Earl commented today that "the affair was quite a tempest in a teapot but I am sure it will be ironed out immediately."

Bookladen Students Travelling Early Cheer Hearts Of T.T.C. Officials

With the present world situation making the motor car a phenomenon "scarce seen but wondered at," more and more people are using the services of the Toronto Transportation Commission. Interviews with war workers, university students and representatives of the Commission have revealed that almost universally Toronto citizens are keeping a sense of humour about travelling on the little red cars.

The situation is this: every street car that can be used or reconditioned is in service, and with steel at a premium for war purposes, no more electric trolley cars can be produced.

In order to serve the largest proportion of the people in the most convenient manner certains steps have been taken to stagger the hours of heavy traffic. One example of this is the 8:30 a.m. lecture which was introduced this semester to avoid congestion with the 8 a.m. business commutors. At Jarvis Collegiate a similar, but decidely less drastic step was taken when classes were put on 15 minutes. These changes may appear small, but they help in the maintenance of a reliable schedule.

Motorman 1707, referred to the little notices over the exit. The present one reads. "My wife does not go home in rush hours." This may appear humorous, but the fact is, people who are heavily-laden at rush hours (students borrowing excesively from the library, please note), slow up the service, and cause a great deal of trouble. The few seconds lost at every stop add up to slow the schedule.

Another sign shown recently urged passengers to take the next car, if the first one is full. People are forced to consider others, as the street cars carry more and more of them each day; and more commutors should realize there are others to be thought of when the conductor says, "Kindly move to the rear of the car, please."

Some 14,000 war workers have to be accommodated within two car stops on King Street. For that purpose, extra cars are put on the King route. Each

(3) that each student, immediately upon his return to the University, report to each of his instructors in order to be informed of the arrangements for the special instruction to be provided under the preceding section;

(4) that the examiners in the Honour Courses and the Revising Committee be authorized to give special consideration to the students concerned when the results of their final examinations are being determined;

University C.R.C.C. Well Underway With Drill, Basic Training, ARP Work

The Canadian Red Cross Corps, largest women's national defence group in the University, is now well launched on its year's course of work with an enrollment of 200. Training outlined at the beginning of the year has been followed in all the different sections.

"The girls are having basic training, drill, A.R.P.—which is most successful—as well as the different courses of advanced training which have been organized," Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Commandant of the University Detachment, told The Varsity.

The great majority of the girls in the Corps are enthusiastic about the work. "I'm terribly keen about it," said Sergeant Alice Evans, a member of the Transport Section, who takes map-reading with the regular Red Cross Transport Section.

"It gives us a fine basic training," a new recruit stated, "and most of us are interested in the Transport Corps."

Three girls from University College had a suggestion to make. "It is a very good course as far as it goes," they said, "but it should be organized on a more professional basis, perhaps modelled more along the lines of the women's armed forces."

New recruits confessed they had been dreading the drill, but that "it turned out to be lots of fun." "We would like even more drill," said Lois Lloyd and Eleanor Hammond, Household Economics students who are taking the advanced course in emergency feeding. "I enjoy it all, even the drill," said Mary Allan. Others were hopeful that they might lose a few extra pounds.

Some One Had Blundered

Assurances received yesterday by the Principal of Queen's University from the Minister of National War Services and the Adjutant-General of Canada —to the effect that student-harvesters will receive full credit for attendance at the C.O.T.C. parades they missed when they were in Saskatchewan— have brightened the picture for the men returning from the west, who are already faced with the sufficiently stiff task of catching up on a month of study.

The move to give full credit for the lectures and drills is eminently fair, inasmuch as the volunteer harvesters were as actively engaged in the nation's war effort when they were working in the grainfields of the west as they could have been learning elementary tactics and battle-practise on their home campuses.

All doubt of government sincerity has now been cleared up; there merely remains the relatively minor complaint that Ottawa officialdom has once more shown itself to be a distressingly hydra-headed organization in which, apparently, less important government officials, through bureaucratic bungling, may cast discredit upon their superiors.

The Government of Canada is struggling valiantly with the huge task of conducting a nation into all-out war; but we sometimes wish that the struggle could be carried on a little more efficiently.

A Touch Of Irony

A fact we had not realized came to light yesterday when we checked through the 1910-11 files of The Varsity, tucked away in a corner of the Library stacks. Editor-in-Chief for the second half of that year was L. Austin Wright, the man whose speech prepared for delivery to the Alumni of Queen's University Oct. 17 has created so much comment in university circles.

Mr. Wright, in a recent interview with the Western Gazette, has suggested that his old newspaper is "maligning and misquoting" his speech. As Mr. Wright must realize, the remarks which were credited to him by us in our report of his speech came from the advance copy of the speech which he released to newspapers prior to its scheduled delivery. Although sometime between release of the advance copy and delivery of the speech he decided not to include those remarks in the address, at no time, to our knowledge, did he make any attempt to "kill" the advance story. Therefore, since he did not disown it, we have felt justified in assuming that he did not wish to dissociate himself from the sentiments it expressed, although, when the news that he had actually not delivered the speech was brought to our attention, we printed an editorial mentioning the fact.

So much for the charge of misquotation. As for the coupled charge of maligning the speech, we believe that we are not alone in opposing projected regulations along the lines he forecast. Immediately upon considering Mr. Wright's remarks, the heads of staff of all four Arts Colleges and the three major science faculties on this campus voiced disapproval also, while the President expressed surprise that the universities of Canada were not consulted before a government spokesman made such predictons. If voicing the views of the leading men of the largest University in the British Empire constitutes maligning Mr. Wright's prepared address, we are glad to be considered guilty.

But it would be an unkind act, in the light of our recently-acquired knowledge of Mr. Wright's journalistic past, to conclude an editorial about his present difference of opinion with The Varsity without saying that he is a man who once did us a great service. In addition to serving through what was apparently a rather difficult editorial year, in which associate editors bickered with him and contributors failed him, he was one of three men instrumental in having The Varsity changed—in the autumn of 1911 —from a bi-weekly to a tri-weekly newspaper, with the intention of paving the way for the present system of daily publication. It is ironic that the paper he once served so well is now "maligning and misquoting" him; but we venture to suggest that if Mr. Wright casts his mind back to its old ideas of the function of collegiate journalism as the forum of collegiate thought, he will agree that in this instance we have no other course.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

It is with a great deal if interest that I have noticed the fashion in which The Varsity is following rapidly in the footsteps of its contemporaries in the city. I refer to the present indefensible custom of making a good deal out of nothing—to the great confusion of the poor misinformed masses who take the trouble to read this nonsense.

The incident re: C.O.T.C. leaves to harvesters is a case in point. A chance remark by some authority at Queen's was gleefully seized upon by our embryo journalists and played to the limit. Now that your source of information has proved to be not so authoritative, you refuse to admit your mistake and cheerfully raise the issue of mischief in high places. This practise of shifting blame and confusing issues is apparently another habit you have acquired from the city editions. Undoubtedly, this is good politics but I hope, for the future of our country, that it is not yet considered good journalism!!!

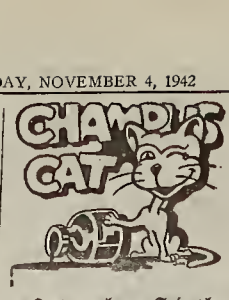
In conclusion I would only like to add that our enemies must derive a great deal of comfort from our preoccupation with such trivial matters.

Yours very truly,
(Signature)

You will probably not have enough intestinal fortitude to print this document but if you should, I must ask you to use a pseudonym as I am in the R.C.A.M.C.

Rags.
Toronto, Nov. 3, 1942.

In reply to our correspondent, we suggest that he must number himself among "the poor misinformed masses" if he believes that extensive Varsity and CUP coverage of the harvest leave situation constitutes "making a great deal out of nothing." When one branch of a government makes assurance that certain steps will be taken, and agents of another branch issue an order in direct contravention of the assurance, when the decision reached will probably affect the academic and military careers of some hundreds of university men thoughout eastern Canada, we do not consider the news trivial.



He speaks of a "chance remark," presumably Captain Agnew's prediction that orders similar to those received at Queen's would shortly be forwarded to other C.O.T.C. Contingents. It is our experience with military men speaking for publication that they do not let chance remarks drop. We may justifiably assume that the Queen's Adjutant gave the prediction as his considered opinion.

"Now that your source of information has proved to be not so correct, you refuse to admit your mistake . . ." he continues. If he cares to refer to Monday's issue of The Varsity, in which the story was carried, he may realize that Captain Agnew was not treated as a "source of information;" but as one whose opinion would be of interest and newsvalue. The prediction that leaves would be denied at the universities which participated in the harvest venture was not made by us; but under the circumstances in which it as made we still believe Captain Agnew's prediction to have been a reasonable enough supposition.

Our correspondent writes that the story was "gleefully" seized upon; that we "cheerfully" raised the issue of mischief in high places. We are at liberty to inform him that there was very little glee and practically no cheer at all in evidence during the early hours of Monday and Tuesday morning at the University Press, when the wires telling the two stories to which he refers arrived.

He mentions the "practise of shifting blame and confusing issues." Again we refer him to our files. In last Thursday's issue, we editorially blamed the leave-denial order on "over-organization at Ottawa." Monday we suggested "lack of inter-departmental co-operation," with the alternative solution that the government might actually be repudiating the assurances of the Department of Labour. Tuesday we said "the former accusation may be levelled with complete justice." Today we speak of "bureaucratic bungling." We submit that examination of our editorials during the present controversy will reveal no "shifting blame."

Finally he raises the old bogey of comfort to the enemy. To our knowledge, there are no German or Japanese addresses on our mailing list. If there were, we imagine that our enemies would derive rather small comfort through reading our columns of the war effort and the part in it which the universities play.—EDITOR.

November Sixth Nineteen Forty Two

Put away your stethoscopes,
Come on with us, get hep, you dopes!
Fie on him who sits and mopes;
We're going on a spree.

Just once a year we all let loose.
Away with books—they're too abstruse!
We'll put your time to better use—
Just come along and see.

The surgeons all lay down their knives,
Psychiatrists desert their wives,
The skin men all break out in hives,
Before this great event.

It doesn't cost so much to go:
Three bucks, including tax, you know . .
("Who owns three bucks, you so and so?
I haven't got a cent!")

Surgery's a waste of time,
Obstetrics isn't worth a dime,
And pediatrics is a crime,
So come with us, my dears.

School sophs and frosh that very night
Will all be there—and that's a sight.
I'll bet the whole bunch could get tight
On less than forty beers.

Now get a date and come along
And join the ever-growing throng;
We'll charm your troubles with a song.
Be sure that you are there.

So leave your dice and poker games
And straighten up your lazy frames . . .
Get to the phone and call your dames
And tell them to prepare.

That's all I have to say to you.
My friends and I are going too.
We're always at this great to-do
To blow away the foam.

Professors (all but the old-fashioned)
Agree, in manner most impassioned:
This year, for once, you really dassn't
Miss the Meds-at-Home.

Delayed Despatch

Healey Willan

Dr. Willan opened the thirtieth year of Organ Recitals in Convocation Hall last Monday afternoon. A tradition of fine musicianship, built up in these recitals over the years, was more than upheld.

The secret of Dr. Willan's technique is the fact that he treats his organ as an instrument of extreme musical possibilities, so dangerous if they are let out of control that they must always be kept in hand. A lesser musician would have succumbed to the temptation of the Borowski Sonata in A Major and used every stop at his disposal; Dr. Willan imposed upon this slight piece a unity of tone colour which increased its power. His effects are always effects with a purpose.

The Whitlock music, a Folk Tune and a Scherzo, are light music of an entirely different kind. Their lightness is deceitful and purposeful: they have much underneath the apparent lightness and the composer gains much of his effect by the mood in which they are written.

Dr. Willan and Bach get along so well together that it is a treat for the worshipper of either to hear them in conjunction. The Bach Prelude and Fugue in C Major was preferable Monday to the Toccata and Fugue in D Minor only because many of us have heard Dr. Willan exceed himself on the latter on previous occasions. He has set himself a record interpretation of the latter which his listeners have come to expect, and they may be pardoned for pointing out that he did not quite equal his best performances of this music.

Came The Revolution

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

Shostakovitch is regarded as the most important Soviet composer. One would expect his music to exemplify Soviet artistic principles, to prove to the world the expansive effect which his new environment can produce on his art. One would expect his music to be affirmative, full of hope and faith, and strong undistorted emotion. Actually his music is distorted, malicious, and petty. Fortunately last night we did not hear his more pretentious attempts to inflate this feeling into pompous and unpleasant aridities, which we are told represent the feelings of the Russian people. One may take leave to doubt this last assumption. Miss Hoffmann played the Shostakovitch piano concerto very competently last night at the first secondary schools concert of the T.S.O. The composer would start out a pleasant tune and then half way through twist it out of position. This proceedure was repeated in each of the movements. And, oh yes, the composer is very admirable technically. He can go on interminably without saying anything at all. The Polka from The Age of Gold gave us an instance of what B. H. Haggin has called "sledgehammer wit." One highly amusing fact, however, is that this satirical piece was originally meant to represent a disarmament committee at Geneva.

After all this stuff it was very enjoyable to hear the free emotional and imaginative power of Tschaikovsky's Fifth Symphony. Sir Ernest gave a direct and satisfying interpretation of this work. Many exeellences of the first movement which I had never noticed before became apparent. The famous cantabile with its eross rhythm was played with a simple clarity that is not often encountered in this day of feverishly morbid interpretations of a composer whose sanity is flagrantly under rated. I say that Sir Ernest's conception and interpretation were exeellent. The orchestra was not always able to follow him. The cellos in particular and the strings in general were good, although the violins often lacked clarity and saliency of phrasing. But the woodwinds played in a lifeless manner. The notes followed one an-

Engineers Third Victory Gives Them Group Lead

Winning Kick By Schoolman Webb in the Third Quarter Leaves Meds Runner-up in Mulock Cup Mile

CONTEST VERY CLOSE

Senior School leaped into sole possession of first place in Group I of the Mulock Mile yesterday by turning back Senior Meds 3-1 for their third consecutive victory. This broke the tie for first place between Meds and School and left Meds in the runner-up position, ahead of Vic and Junior School in that order.

The Engineers' winning margin was the result of a third-quarter placement by Chuck Webb. Beefy MacMillan scored Meds' lone counter on a second quarter punt. Outside of these two scoring plays, the contest was very close and neither team was able to get into scoring territory.

Meds opened the scoring near the end of the first half. Little Georgie Lewis took the ball on an end sweep at the School 40 and sped to the 25 before he was pulled down. Bill Arnupp carried the mail to the 20, where School rallied and stopped the advance of the Red and Black horde. On third down Beefy MacMillan hoisted one over the line to Brian White, who was tagged in the end zone. School broke out with a flurry of passes in the remaining moments of the half, but made no headway despite completion of a 15 yard Plaxton-to-White aerial.

After the second half kick-off by Meds neither team could get their attack rolling and an exchange of kicks took place. Meds suffered a penalty and MacMillan kicked from his own 30. His kick was partially blocked and School recovered the ball near midfield. Jack Plaxton fired a pass to Hal Seymour who rambled to the 30 before being smeared. Big "Truck" MacIntyre then took charge of the advance and blasted the Meds line for 15 yards in three attempts. The Skool attack halted here and Chuck Webb, the Engineers' starry end, dropped back and booted a lovely placement between the uprights for three lovely points—three!

From then on the game slowed down, if possible, and neither team threatened in the fourth quarter. The game ended with the ball, and the victory, in School's possession. MacIntyre and Plaxton were standouts in the Engineers' advance while Weed Quintenton and Chuck Webb closed Medical traffic around the ends. Bill Arnupp played a lovely game for Meds, ably assisted by George Lewis. Polly Parrott and Jake Spence led Meds' smashing defence.

Research Work Aids War Effort

Sackville, N.B., Nov. 3 — (CUP) — Mount Allison University's Biology Department is contributing directly to Canada's War Effort through the research work done by Professor Roy Fraser and his staff on the use of bactericidal light in operating rooms.

Some idea of the importance of this work may be judged by the fact that the University obtained priorities on one hundred guinea pigs for research purposes at a time when even hospitals are pressed for enough of these animals to carry on research work.

Although Bactericidal light has been used extensively in some operating rooms, it has not yet been fully developed to a point where it could be fully utilized for military purposes—hence the necessity for further animal research before putting the process to actual use.

Records Available For B.C. Students

Vancouver, Nov. 2 — (CUP) — A "record" library is at the disposal of the students of the University of British Columbia where 1,900 classical discs have been lent.

Each interested student pays a registration fee of $1.00. He may take out five records at a time and keep them for six days.

Five cents is charged for every day they are overdue.

ANNUAL SOPH-FROSH BRAWL REPLACED BY HARVESTING

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 2—The University of California's annual Freshman-Sophmore Brawl was converted into a harvesting contest when 1,500 students turned out recently to help local farmers.

A spontaneous student mass meeting voted to scrap the traditional event and to divert the "bone-breaking energy usually expended" in the classic struggle to a competitive harvesting drive between the classes.

As the competition began, twenty Army trucks transported the student harvesters to farms where they picked sugar beets, walnuts, and grapes. Other students were taken to local canneries.

The patriotic turnout of students followed closely on the heels of an editorial in The Daily California criticizing the student body for their "colossal and humiliating failure" to co-operate with university war campaigns.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

LIQUOR IS QUICKER!

Seems that there is a character down at dear old Minnesito—you know, "Golden Gophers," world's largest college newspaper, and stuff—well, as we were saying, seems that this character spent the summer at a Ranger camp. Now before you start hearking back to your Boy Scout days, let us hasten to inform you that the Rangers are very tough men indeed, being the American counterpart of the famed Commandos. Well, our friend spent a happy few months learning the disagreeable details of "How to lose friends and behead people" as practised by the Rangers. He was very impressed with the simplicity of it all. When an opponent gets in your way, you merely commit your favourite type of mayhem, and presto—no opponent. It appears that our by-this-time dear friend is an athletic coach at dear old Golden Gopherville. So he thinks right quick like—This is what MY BOYS have been waiting for. Having come to this admirable conclusion, he proceeds to put his scheme into effect. When ready to leave the Murder Menage he makes a careful selection of such cheerful sporting goods as garrotting strings, brass knuckles, and loong sliiim knives! However, the 'Boys in the Back Room' at the Ranger Camp saw all this going on and decided to spoil his fun. Not that they really wanted to spoil his fun, mind you. There is very little they like better than a few nice killings—but considering the manpower needs of the country, they considered it best that American university campuses were not the place for such gay little pastimes.

But this character is not stopped yet. Beneath his rough exterior there beats a brain of solid—well solid! So he devises new variations of the present games—strictly from the Commando outlook, of course, The first game to come under his cold fishy stare was basketball. Thinks he to himself, what is wrong with basketball? To the obvious answer—nothing, he turns a remarkably weak ear. His other ear, his remarkably sharp ear we might add, wanders all over the place and sifts over piles of dead rumours. Finally this sharp little ear hears a dying rumours gasping its last. "It's too hard to get the *?'!:-!? ball," it says, with its final breath. On hearing this our friend, the character, brightens up. "If I only could have kept those brass knuckles, the guy with the ball wouldn't have a chance," he muses, absent-mindedly picking up imaginary corpses which had fallen before his bonecrushers.

Pouring himself out a flagon of vulture's blood, he continues his meditation. Slowly it dawns on him. The boy with the ball usually has both hands occupied in holding on to said ball. He would obviously be a sucker for a good left hook—even without the brass knuckles. So his "great idea" is hatched. Basketball will continue under its present rules with one exception, if any player makes himself obnoxious by hanging on to the ball and attempting to score, the opponents will have the privilige of bashing hell out of him while his guard is down!

Now of course, this new innovation had to come up before the faculty. And Minnesota's faculty, being a safe(?) and sane(?) faculty, decided to modify these new rules. "We will make them wear two ounce boxing gloves," suggested Vulture V. Vulture. "Think of the danger of someone cutting his hand on a splintered bone protruding from a face." The faculty agreed to this somewhat conservative suggestion and the new pastime has now been innovated at the home of the Golden Gophers. And it seems to be making a real hit. "You would be surprised how our boys take to this game," remarked the Dean, descendant of a long line of Roman gladiators, as he officiated at a mass burial for the first two teams to indulge in the new recreation!

Seriously though (we're kidding—of course) the new sport seems to have definite limitations. Frankly we have just two visions of what this game will develop into. The first is a vision of ten wary men circling about a basketball till they all drop exhausted. Of course that way they would probably live, even though they wouldn't put on a crowd-pleasing spectacle. The other vision is that of a poor forlorn basketball lying neglected in the corner while out on the floor two rugged groups of individuals cheerfully knock hell out of each other. Meanwhile our friend, the character, is probably devoting himself to bigger and better extensions of his idea. We can see him now, busily engaged in imbedding flame throwers in the ends of all the University's hockey sticks, muttering, "My, this WILL be fun!"

Lost Ear Muffs And Love Letters Make Clutter In College Offices

Found—tubes of lipstick, compacts, powder puffs and inspirational looking cosmetic bags. Owners, male or female, may have same by claiming them at the Lost and Found Departments of various colleges.

Found articles if not claimed after a certain period, are sent to the University Settlement. "They are grateful for the opportunity of receiving these useful togs of the co-eds," stated Mr. Scott, superintendent of University College. The collection of articles at this college include ear muffs, exotic jewellry, books, and unregenerately cluttered purses.

At the Household Economics building the lost and found department displayed a set of false teeth, a cook-book and a hand-book recording dates in chronological order, and phone numbers of unattached campus bachelors. The array also contained love letters handsomely bound with pink ribbon. In the Library interesting academic books reveal fantastic etching lost in their pages.

Victoria College boasts few lost articles. A very interesting item found after a lecture this week was a ball of pink baby yarn, four knitting needles and two inches of accomplished production, probably completed during a very stimulating lecture.

At present there are at Victoria College five different places where lost articles are kept, but in the future the five departments will be amalgamated under the supervision of the Victoria College Union Office, it was learned.

Our cohorts of S.O.S. mentioned the other day the athletic value of those white, yellow, pink, or blue registration cards of yours. But more must be said for the benefit of our readers. It seems that the authorities are anything but pleased at the number of athletic privileges that have been necessarily taken away because of misuse of these precious cards. In other years, this situation has been bad—but this year, especially over Thanksgiving week-end—it was deplorable.

The only way it can be remedied is by every girl considering her registration card as personal property of value, not to be parted with at all. Perhaps many freshies have not been told of the consequenees of lending their cards to others to go to rugby games and, later on, to go skating at the Stadium. If, out of the kindness of your heart, you do this, the authorities will consider the misrepresentation very serous indeed, and will take away all the privileges for which you paid and which are rightfully yours if you know how to use them. After it is all over, you aren't very happy, your friend feels most miserable, and the authorities don't like it at all.

If every girl would consider this sort of thing to be just as serious as misrepresentation at exam time when cards must be presented, everyone would be a lot happier indeed and many unpleasant happenings would disappear from our campus. The Senior girls should be much more responsible in this regard; and to the Freshies—a word from the wise should be sufficient. This sort of thing must stop!

Noted Author Speaks to V.C.F.

"It is essential to go to the Christian faith on which human freedom, in its deepest sense, rests," stated Dr. Frank E. Gaebelein, M.A., Litt.D., at a V.C.F. meeting yesterday in Room 8, U.C. His subject was "The Gospel of Emancipation."

Dr. Gaebelein, noted author and Bible scholar, illustrated his theme from St. Paul's letter to Philemon. This he termed a masterpiece of letter-writing and sound psychology. "In 25 verses it contains more hints on how to win friends and influence people than Dale Carnegie's work," he said.

It is written against the terrible background of slavery in ancient Rome, where a slave who commited a crime against the master was fearfully punished, unless one could be found to intercede on his behalf. Onesimus, one such slave, fled to Rome, where Paul led him to Christ. He then returned to his master Philemon, with a letter from Paul.

In the epistle Paul offered to repay all of the slave's debts, and put the promise in his own handwriting, so that it constituted an actual promissory note. This speaks to us of the sacrifice of Christ, who wrote the pardon for our debt of sin in his own blood. The speaker added that unless we accept this pardon personally, we cannot be freed from the sentence.

"This personal grip on God through Jesus Christ is the most important thing in life," he concluded.

Old Vic Termed "Lovely Lady"

Way up in the northeast corner of the campus about a mile from Baldwin House, lies a group of buildings known as Victoria College, or "dirty old Vic" as Schoolman. Properly it should be called Victoria University since it comprises Victoria College (Arts), federated with the University of Toronto, and Emmanuel College (Theology) which together make up Victoria University.

Oldest of the group is the stolid main building of Victoria College built in 1892 when Victoria University moved from the "Old Ontario Strand" down at Cobourg to become part of the University of Toronto. Opinion seems to vary on its architectural merits—it is sometimes called a "monstrosity"—but legend has it that a student coming up from Cobourg for the first time was so impressed by the new college and its beautiful surroundings that he called it "a lovely woman in evening dress." This building, with its Norman-Roman arch flanked by an enormous square tower on the right, is an example of an attempt to develop a distinctly North American style of architecture. Other examples of this type are the Ontario Parliament Buildings and the old Union Station.

Since Dr. F. Louis Barber, superintendent of the Victoria buildings was a student of Victoria at the turn of the century he has seen the college expand from the one building accommodating perhaps 300 students to an institution with an attendance of nearly 1,000. It now includes Emmanuel College, the Library, Victoria men's residences, Wymilwood Women Students' Union, Annesley Hall, and a number of smaller women's residences on Bloor Street. One of these, Oaklawn, was once the Chancellor's residence and it was considered a very high honour by "Vic" students of 1900 to be invited to tea of a Sunday afternoon.

TIME WAS when we used to write the funny old Hither dayafterdayafterday and we found then that one of the best ways to gather up items was to wander about the campus allowing the ears to flap in the breeze, and listen to the snatches of conversation carried on by passing pedants as they floated down-wind. . . . It's a long time since we had to do this sort of thing for a living, but a while year of it seems permanently to have distended our aural lobes beyond all hope of ever regaining normalcy. . . . We still hear these passing remarks as we wander about the campus, and some of them still amuse us a trifle.

AN EARNEST CO-ED, whizzing along the path which runs along to the east of Whitney Hall, came into our ken the other day, saying to her saddle-shoed companion, "Whenever I write one of those inspirational essays, they never have anything in them. . ."

WE DIDN'T HEAR this one personally, but two of our sharpest CUP operatives popped into the office off the Winnipeg train one night and related how they had been strolling along a Saskatoon street minding their own business when a woman went by saying to an interested companion, ". . . and so I asked him to give me back my dime . . ."

AND ONE OF OUR NITE-EDITING CONFRERES reports breathlessly that he once heard a passing gaitered bishop remarking to one of his clerical cronies, "and then the wife and I play a little poker in the evenings for relaxation . . ."

IT WAS LAST YEAR way down in the depths of the Hart House Pool Room (we used to frequent the den but the new lighting hurts our eyes) that we heard a character who had just been hooked cruelly behind a looming black-ball turn to his leering opponent and cry out like a tortured soul in the darker passages of Dante, "This is more than mortal can stand, Gillespie!"

AND WAY BACK LAST SPRING we overhead two august members of the faculty, the thin one of whom was standing alternately on right and left foot and mumbling, "Yesyesyes . . yesyes . . . yes," while his fat companion orated, "Publication in whole or part is tantamount to publication. . . ."

GEM OF OUR PRESENT COLLECTION of eavesdroppings concerns two silly little freshies walking down Yonge Street early last month. . . . They were carrying on a most animated conversation about Their Men, and this impertinent reporter could not forbear to cock his tired old ear at these remarks . . . Comment on Universities in Wartime Made by W. Pidgeon in Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Oct. 30—(CUP)—"Universities in wartime? Of course they have a place, but only for the student possessing a high seriousness of attitude and pursuing courses immediately revelant to the war effort." So spoke Walter Pidgeon, movie actor, in an interview with The Manitoban recently.

"It's not that I am in any way opposed to education in any form. If the last war hadn't broken out, I'd probably be sporting initials after my name too. It's just that now, with so much at stake, and with our very way of life being weighed on the battlefields, that I feel the university must be relegated to the background, temporarily."

Mr. Pidgeon was definite in his opinions about the college student, and had much to say about universities both in United States and Canada. "There are far too many men and women attending colleges because it happens to be the correct social thing to do. It always annoys me to think that these people are being privileged in this way, not because of academic merit, but because their parents have money."

Speaking of art in Canada, Mr. Pidgeon felt its greatest hindrance was a lack of organization. "Get organized. You've got loads of talent here. Give it a proper financial support and you'll be amazed at how quickly your art will flourish." His advice to aspiring thespians was that it was better to have Hollywood seek them than for them to seek Hollywood.

"When we're not making pictures in Hollywood we're on tour promoting government bonds and loans. I suppose most of the actors are out campaigning at least four months each year." Mr. Pidgeon said.

ANNUAL "DUBBING" PARTY HELD BY ST. HILDA'S

In an initiation flash-back, Sophs again baited Freshies at the annual "Dubbing" party at St. Hilda's Monday night.

Ninety-four costumed Freshies were subjected to traditional "secret rites" after which they entertained the Sophs with a fancy dress parade.

Outstanding among the costumes were a skeleton, "a fierce animal," Winkin,' Blinkin' and Nod, "The Last of the Hildonians" — two grunting freshies garbed in blankets and feathers —and even a "before and after representation of what the Du Barry success course can do for you."

After the parade two skits were presented by the Freshies. Refreshments in the Common Room concluded the party.

Mt. Allison Co-eds Enjoy Breakfast Abed

Sackville, N.B., Oct. 31—(CUP)—The domestic scene at Mount Allison University has recently undergone some radical changes, according to the Argosy Weekly. An insurance policy has come into effect as a result of the fire of last December, which destroyed the men's residence with several casualties. This insurance policy has been taken out to cover personal effects of all Mount Allison University resident students.

Breakfast in bed, a college girl's dream, has become a reality in Allison Hall on Sunday mornings. The girls elbow their way through the crowd to tables set up at strategic points in the dining hall. Each girl supplies her own dishes, and after acquiring a fair share, goes back to bed for breakfast. Some, they say, can now do this without waking up. The only trouble with the scheme, it is felt, is that it is limited to Sunday morning.

Another successful addition to the life of Allison Hall, the main girls' residence at Mt. A., is the preparing by the 'Home Eccers' of one meal a week. This occurs every Thursday, "the maid's afternoon off, y'know." The results of this enterprise convince the Home-Eccers—to say nothing of the rest of the co-eds—that they can really cook.

JOHN PECK TO DIRECT U.C. DRAMA PRODUCTION

The forthcoming U.C. Players' Guild production, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," has been called the swiftest exhibition of verbal parlor-tennis since ping-pong began. More acid witticisms are tossed off in the Kaufmann and Hart comedy than in any five Noel Coward plays. The New York Times called it "the funniest comedy of the season," and Time, "the biggest smash hit in the past ten years."

The play is to be under the direction of John Peck of the Belmont Group Theatre, which has been undertaking a revival of drama in Toronto during the past year. During the summer the group presented William Saroyan's "Hello Out There!" prior to its successful New York premiere by Eddie Dowling. Recently they revived Ibsen's "Ghosts," which was directed by John Peck.

Vic to Present Shavian Drama

The Vic Dramatic Society will present Bernard Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" in Hart House Theatre on Dec. 3, 4 and 5. The play has been in rehearsal for the past three weeks under the direction of Earle Grey, well-known player in CBC dramatic shows.

The play is a costume show of the Revolutionary period in the United States. It is an intense melodrama, yet full of Shavian wit. The story is that of Richard Dudgeon whom the Puritan community in which he resides has dubbed "the devil's disciple" and who finds his true station in life only when the British under General Burgoyne, a character drawn from life, are about to hang him as a rebel. It is then, too, that he finds his love for Judith Anderson, wife of the local Presbyterian minister.

Old and new members of the Club appear in leading roles. Richard Dudgeon will be played by Garth Legge, while Judith Anderson will be played by a freshie, Katherine Campbell. Tom Nixon, the winner of the men's acting honours at the University Drama Festival last year, will play Mrs. Dudgeon; and Jack Coleman will appear as General Burgoyne.

The total cast including extras will number 45. The five settings are being designed by Ralph Hicklin, and Miss Kathleen Coburn of the Vic English staff is supervising costumes.

Reserved seats go on sale at the V.C.U. office in Vic next Monday morning.

Reconstruction Speaker Describes Soil Erosion

sands crawl over fertile lands and engulf buildings. In heavy soils gullies are produced by the action of the water. More serious than these is sheet erosion of the whole surface of the land; when the infertile subsoil comes to the surface as the other soil is washed away, crop production is decreased.

A cure for this situation is possible by stabilizing or increasing the water supply, taking steps to retain what is left of fertile soils and restoring the cover of the soil, continued Prof. Coventry. The necessary reforestation must, however, be fortified by water engineering, in the construction of dams to retain floods. This is a scientific problem and the province needs an advisory board of experienced men to deal with its wide aspects, he said.

The need for co-ordination in the administration of natural resources in Canada is just as necessary as in industry. Successful reconstruction involves intelligent co-operation between government and people and between different communities.

"The earth will not go on pouring out crops if it continues to be neglected," said Prof. Coventry. "The way in which this Dominion has organized for war shows that the country can co-operate. Canada's future depends on this co-operation."

A Czechoslovakian co-ed in Dentistry said, "In many European countries women are taking over the job of operating the street car systems." That this may become a fact in Toronto is not too remote, for recently it has been reported that women may be used as conductors, but not as motormen.

Marg Banting, I Vic, likes to "swing and sway on the handle bars," but thinks that "the cars stop too suddenly." Margot Booth, a graduate, approves of the "musical gong in the newer cars," and says, "The back seats are definitely the most fun."

Kaye Young, I U.C., reflected the general opinion among the co-eds upon street cars as the mode of date transport. "Under the circumstances, we have to be patriotic."

Dora Barnett, who is taking Art, gets on the street car every morning with a huge portfolio. But she finds there are compensations. "What we don't learn about other people's business," she laughed. As for street car dates: "They are more fun."

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY NEEDS MORE MEMBERS

The newly organized University symphony orchestra conducted by Victor Feldbrill is shaping into a competent musical achievement. Members hail from every course on the campus and are not necessarily interested in music professionally.

According to present plan the first concert will be given in January. The only stumbling block is a dearth of the more specialized instruments. Any stray cellists, trombonists, trumpeters, basoonists, violinist and French horn players on the campus are asked to join the orchestra.

C. A. M. S. I. Helps Solve Meds' Problems

In Monday and Tuesday's issues of The Varsity the C.A.M.S.I. Convention rated front page head-lines, arousing campus-wide interest in the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes.

The story behind the headlines begins 'way back in 1938, as the brain-child of three U. of T. medical students, whose plan was to form an association whereby some of the pressing problems facing medical students could be solved. Their idea spread rapidly from campus to campus, backed by the need of closer inter-university co-operation. When the first convention was held at Toronto, the association was well represented by nation-wide delegates.

One of the first problems of this national association was that of interne allocation, and as a result the Cana-

The Varsity Reviews

The Trinity Review
Autumn, 1942

The current issue of the Trinity University Review is not an easy thing to criticize. It's too good to be treated purely destructively, yet reason asserts that it cannot be perfect.

The contents seem well balanced. They include four short stories, all worthy of mention here; seven non-fiction articles, a couple of them obvious filler; five bits of verse, one a very formidable bit, indeed; and one which, in our harried course through it we didn't quite comprehend. A dozen or so pages of news items seem excess baggage to non-Trinitarians, but their value is underlined by an illuminating letter from a graduate on active service in Libya.

A very promising bit of poetry is "A Cycle" by M. T. Wilson. This is the very large bit of verse referred to above—it extends over four pages. First view of this poem made us feel a little ill, but closer examination proves it to be a work not to be passed over lightly. The ill feeling was caused by

McGill Newman Club To Be Convention Host On Coming Week-End

Representatives from Toronto, Queen's, Western and O.A.C. Will Attend; Clubs in East and West to Send Reports

TO DISCUSS WAR PROBLEMS

The Newman Club of McGill University will play host to all the Newman Clubs of Canada at their annual convention this week-end.

Representatives will be present from Toronto, Queen's, Western, and Ontario Agricultural College. Written reports are expected from the Western and Eastern Clubs — Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Dalhousie — which are too far away to send delegates.

The aim of the Convention is in accordance with the general purpose of Newman Clubs, namely, to provide a rallying ground for Catholic students in non-Catholic colleges and universities.

The Convention will consist of a series of sessions to discuss matters of urgent importance to Newmanites. The chief one concerns the Catholic aspects of the war, post-war social problems, and the organization of study groups.

The Toronto delegates are Paul Dandaneau, IV S.P.S., president of Toronto Newman Club, Arthur Maloney, III Osgoode, and Kay MacLean representing the alumni of the club.

The delegates will be introduced to the McGill Newman group at a reception which will be given in their honour on Friday evening. The major event will be a speech given by Mr. Grattan O'Leary, famous editor and orator, who will speak on "Youth Leadership."

DALHOUSIE DEFAULTERS STRUCK OFF STRENGTH OF C.O.T.C. CONTINGENT

Halifax, Nov. 4 — (CUP) — Three students from Dalhousie University have been struck off the strength of the C.O.T.C. for failure to attend the required number of parades, it was announced at headquarters of Military District No. 6.

These students will not be exempted from the military draft, the District Headquarters has notified the Department of National War Services.

Pipers Skirl In Observatory

The pipes skirled again Tuesday night in the Observatory for the Pipe Band was blowing out. Under the combined tutelage of Pipe Sergeant George Ross, who is also a technician in the Anatomy Building, and his brother Hector Ross, a demonstrator in the Department of Metallurgy, the student pipers have been practicing at least twice a week since C.O.T.C. parades started.

The Acting Drum Instructor is Pte. George Parks of the Orderly Room Staff.

Pipe Sergeant Ross stressed that experienced pipers are needed, for last year's talent has graduated into the 1st Battalion. The band is open to all members of the 2nd Battalion.

There are now twenty-four men practicing the swirly Scotch airs—with a dash of Idaho on the side. Practice chanters, pipes and drums are supplied by the University, so that there is nothing to deter the ambitious lad with too much blow.

Wright To Be McGill Speaker

Montreal, Nov. 3 — (CUP) — L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, will be guest speaker at the Engineering Undergraduate Society's annual banquet at McGill University Friday, Nov. 20.

As it is customary for the Society's speaker to present world problems in relation to the work of engineers, this year's topic stresses Selective Service and how it will affect engineers.

Mr. Wright has previously addressed a group at Queen's University on the status of college men in regard to military regulations. "It is expected that his coming speech will serve a similar function for McGill students," said a member of the executive in charge of the banquet.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Fifty single tickets which will admit men only to the concert to be held at 9 p.m. in the Great Hall of Hart House on Sunday next, Nov. 8, will be issued from the Hall Porter's desk after 12 noon today. These tickets are available to undergraduate members of Hart House, members of the R.C.A.F. University Detachment and members of No. 1 Canadian Army Course at the University.

PAINTINGS ARRIVE FOR FORCES' SHOW

Some 150 pictures—oils, watercolours and chalk—have been received at the Warden's Office in Hart House from men and women in the services for the Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition. The selection committee has been agreeably surprised at the response and the uniform quality of the entries, Warden J. R. Gillcy reported yesterday.

Many of the pictures are done by men and women with little or no experience, but for the most part they have the realistic turn which results from life in the forces. Incidents in army life, airplanes, colourful portraits all go to make up the number. Some of the pictures have been set asides as suitable for cuts for future publication.

Word was received yesterday that the director of the National Art Gallery in Ottawa would be in Hart House to open the exhibition on Nov. 14. It is expected that the pictures will be sent from Toronto to Ottawa to the National Gallery when the present show is completed at the end of November. During that period of time, special visitors' days have been arranged for Sundays, open to the general public. At all times the members of the Forces will be welcomed to see the exhibition.

A special catalogue is being arranged under the direction of Professor Charles Comfort, which will contain some reproductions of the work. Matting teams are being set to work on the big task of getting ready the pictures for the exhibition. The Art Gallery will be closed for the week prior to the show.

Invitations have been sent to all the entrants, various Commanding Officers, and representatives of the services, all the organizations which have assisted in making the exhibition possible and to the Art Committee which has sponsored it. The invitations are to a dinner to be held in Great Hall on Saturday, Nov. 14, the day the Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition is to begin.

EMPLOYMENT FOR MEN

Male students who are free to work on Saturday, Nov. 7, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., may obtain further information at the S.A.C. Office, Hart House.

Classics M.A. Makes Escape From Nazis

Reaches England After Escape From German Internment Camp Near Paris, Brother Learns

SCHOLARSHIP STUDENT

Frank H. D. Pickersgill, M.A., in Classics of the University of Toronto, has just reached England safely after having escaped from a German internment camp near Paris.

This information was received from him by his brother, John Pickersgill, private secretary to Premier King. Frank Pickersgill came to Toronto University in 1936 with a B.A. and several scholarships from the University of Manitoba. He obtained his M.A. in 1938.

Adventurous and enterprising, he crossed the Atlantic in 1939 to study in Europe. Before the collapse of France he was in Paris and when the Nazis occupied the French capital he was put into a civilian internment camp near Paris. Helped by the easy familiarity of the classical scholar with the exploits of fugitives of antiquity as well as a good knowledge of French and German, he made a getaway to unoccupied France. From there he managed to reach Lisbon and finally England whence he will shortly return to Canada.

Soil To Be Bennett Topic

Dr. Bennett, B.S., LL.D., Sc.D., will lecture on "Soil Conservation Goes to War" in Convocation Hall Saturday, Nov. 7, at 8:15 p.m.

Dr. Bennett was soil scientist in the United States Department of Agriculture 1903-33. He then left this department to become Director of Soil Erosion Service in the U.S. Department of the Interior. In 1937 he took the position of Consultant at the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard.

He has participated in many agricultural expeditions for the U. S. government. In 1909 he was sent to the Canal Zone and later in 1914 he was in charge of an expedition to Alaska. He became soil specialist for the Rubber Commission in Central and South America 1923-24. He was also Special Investigator of Soils and Cane Culture with the Tropical Research Foundation in Cuba 1926-28 and 1930-32.

RUSSIAN GIRL SNIPER PAYS VISIT TO McGILL

Montreal, Nov. 3—(CUP)—Lieutenant Liudmila Pavlichenko, famous Russian girl sniper, paid an unofficial one-day flying visit to Montreal yesterday. The staff photographer of the McGill Daily photographed her at the hotel where she was stopping.

Accompanying her on her visit were her two colleagues, Vladimir Pchelintsev, and Nikolai Krasavchenko, leader of the Moscow Youth Organization.

Lieutenant Pavlichenko, who fought in the defence of a number of Russian cities, instructed a school of Russian snipers, and was awarded the Order of Lenin, came to America two months ago. She was a guest at the White House in Washington, and attended the International Student Assembly there. She was present at a mass meeting in Toronto last month, where she was awarded a Canadian rifle to show the admiration of Canadian soldiers for her gallant work in Russia.

During her unofficial visit to Montreal, Lieut. Pavlichenko was not in her uniform with her officer's cap and medals in which she usually appears.

Second Front Approved As Victoria Loses Debate To Osgoode Hall Team

Consider in All Aspects Resolution that Second Front in Best Interests of the United Nations

LONG DECISION

The conclusion that a second front should be opened as soon as possible was arrived at yesterday afternoon, when the Victoria College Parliament debating team lost to the Osgoode Hall team.

The resolution, "Resolved that it is in the best interests of the United Nations that a second front be opened in western Europe at once," was considered in all aspects—military, political and economic. The Osgoode team of Darrell Braidwood and Jack Reessor upheld the affirmative side against Charles Scott and Bob Sedgewick of IV Law at Victoria.

In brief, Osgoode's reasons for a second front were:

(1) Germany is the "head" of the Axis octopus. "Let us attack Germany now, for Germany is the very heart and key centre of all Axis powers. If we wipe out Germany, the legs of the octopus will crumble without her support."

(2) A second front is possible and needed now because the 40 to 60 mobile reserves in Britain are sufficient to attack the weakened defences in Occupied Countries. Such an attack would relieve Russian and also enable Russia to attack Japan with her millionman army on the Siberian front.

The Victoria College team countered with a well-prepared series of technical facts and figures that made the judges consider long before they arrived at the decision.

Charles Scott, the most forceful speaker of the afternoon, made several pointed questions to refute the need of a second front. Have we the manpower? Have we the quantity and quality of supplies? Have we the shipping space? "Let us wait," he said, "a little while for an increase in shipping, supplies and manpower and for the "invasion season" next year. Let us wait a little while; then our victory will be complete."

One lawyer spectator suggested that The Varsity should have been excluded from the debate because the opposition's viewpoint might be labelled "seditious." The two Victoria men, though, handled their arguments with finesse and showed no signs of sedition or defeatism whatsoever.

STAFF LEAVES INCREASE WORK

Members of the University of Toronto staff are providing experienced aid in various fields of the war effort, for throughout the world today may be found men and women on leaves of absence from staff duties at the University, occupying key positions in the armed services and on civilian war organizations.

Most departments of the University have been hard hit and professors and lecturers are today doing more arduous duties in the form or more lecture hours and instruction to larger groups.

The Economics and Physchology departments were particularly hard hit. Professor Kemp and Plumptre of the Economics department are with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Professor Coe is with the U.S. Treasury. Other members of the staff are with Canadian economic organizations and in the armed services, and some have been lent to other Canadian Universities which are having staff difficulties due to loss of personnel.

The Economics department has found it difficult to obtain junior instructors and assistant instructors; and the remaining members of the staff have frequently been called upon for various official jobs. They have been aided by Dr. Coates, recently retired Dominion statistician, who has returned as a visiting professor.

Professor Bott, head of the Psychology department is now in England, serving in an advisory capacity to the Air Ministry. Five other members are with other organizations, but have all been replaced and the department's staff, though depleted, is carrying on.

In University College the French and English departments have suffered most from staff shortage, and extra work is being done by the remaining members.

In the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering all staff members are being called upon to assume heavier duties because of the increased enrolment, more arduous courses and absent staff members who are on leave of absence. Another factor is the great amount of research work being done by the staff which leaves them few leisure hours.

Medicine and Dentistry also face a shortage of personnel in various labs and many temporary appointments have been made.

But despite all this depletion of staff in nearly all departments of the University no lecture courses have had to be cancelled, even though changes in personnel have been made, sometimes with very little advance notice.

Be Prepared In A.R.P.

Yesterday we heard of a happening on this campus which shocked us deeply. An A.R.P. lecture on methods of handling incendiary bombs was scheduled for 4:30 in the Biology Building and only FIVE PERSONS were interested enough to come. The lecture was cancelled.

Our complaint is not directed toward the students, since the lecture was apparently being held for the benefit of the staff and employees of the University, and anyone else who was interested. The students were not notified.

That such a situation could arise in the fourth year of a ruthless total war in inconceivable. In the first year, when few people realized the seriousness of the situation, it might have been forgivable. At the present time it is not. It merely shows that many people who should know better are still as blind to danger as they were in the days before the war.

Their argument is undoubtedly that enemy bombing raids on Toronto are impossible. There are two answers to that question. One is that in a war like the one in which we are fighting nothing is impossible. The other is that there are other ways of spreading incendiary bombs besides raids by hostile planes.

The excuse offered by those who knew something about the subject, who perhaps had attended previous lectures on bombs, was probably that they had taken it before and why should they take it again. If they have taken A.R.P. lectures at all they should know the reply to that question themselves: all A.R.P. methods are constantly being changed and improved; what was taught six months ago is now out of date. Granted that those engaged in A.R.P. work are in for a period of weary waiting, but only by following the Boy Scout's motto and being constantly prepared can they hope to be of any use in a possible crisis.

Toronto is one of the many cities in Canada which has been asked by the Dominion Government to organize an active Civilian Defence Committee (A.R.P.) It is up to us to do everything we can to co-operate with the Toronto Committee and to have an active and alert A.R.P. organization ourselves, and that cannot be done by neglecting the lectures in A.R.P. work.

Music Hath Charms . . .

One of the many fine organizations which we are privileged to have on this campus is the University Symphony Orchestra, which is now in the process of organization for the coming year.

The question of how the young amateur musician is to practise his leisure time profession is a difficult one to solve. In the past two years the Music Committee of Hart House has partially solved the problem by sponsoring a series of informal noon-hour recitals by the student musicians among the members of the House, but this solution gave performing scope only to those who felt themselves competent enough to give a one-man concert. The many student musicians who lacked the necessary confidence or the necessary time for practising to perform by themselves, and this group includes all the women music makers on the campus, got no chance to follow their hobby through this arrangement.

The University Symphony Orchestra provided an outlet for these musically minded persons. In a group and with the encouragement of the others in the Orchestra each member can make music to his heart's content without feeling conspicuous. The response to the call for musicians playing all kinds of instruments has been answered by an inspiring number, which proves the need for such an organization and also encourages the expectation that this year the Orchestra will outdo its previous record of providing music regularly for its members and a yearly concert for the students and the public.

This year the Orchestra is under the capable baton of the noted young violinist, Victor Feldbrill, who made a name for himself while still in High School as leader of the second violin desks in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and as the concert master of a number of groups, in particular the All-Ontario High School Symphony. At present Mr. Feldbrill is studying orchestration and conducting under Ettore Mazzoleni, of the Conservatory of Music. From their gifted leader the University Symphony members are receiving renewed inspiration to put their best efforts into their much appreciated work.

. . . To Soothe

One of the University's most popular and praiseworthy amenities, which is daily attracting more and more students, is the Record Club, which holds its meetings in the Women's Common Room of University College every week day from 3:45 p.m. to 5:30. No praise can do justice to the records and players given to the University by the Carnegie Corporation last year. The 600 records made a great contribution to the life of campus music lovers last year. This term their enthusiasm, far from wearing off, is even greater than before, and most attend the recorded concerts regularly.

We have all been told at some point in our lives of the benefit of music in soothing jangled nerves and in making for pure enjoyment. This recorded music, played by the world's greatest orchestras, does just that. The student audience can forget its cares for the time the music is being played and emerge from the concert refreshed and better able to deal with its problems.

Our thanks again to the Carnegie Corporation for its far-sighted and kind-hearted contribution to our life, and our invitation to all those who have not yet heard the recorded concerts to hear one. Those who have attended them will need no further invitation to go to as many more as they possibly can.

Art of Music Drama

Worth Waiting For

Hart House String Quartet

The Hart House String Quartet redeemed a bad pre-intermission performance with an excellent job of the Beethoven Quartet Opus 59, No. 3. It was as if every energy had been saved until the last in order to put the difficult Beethoven "express train" fugue across. The rest of the program fell down badly through lack of technical efficiency, but the Beethoven was all sweetness and night.

The first quartet of the evening, Schumann's in A Major, was quite fair in its first half. The quartet itself is extremely interesting in form and in treatment of themes in the first three movements. The last is, or seemed to be the way it was played, a mere jumble of unrelated ideas strung together for the requisite length of time. The third movement, perhaps the pleasantest of all, was marred by extremely bad intonation by the viola. Mr. de Ridder is too easily made nervous by his solos.

The Waldo Warner music was definitely not immortal stuff, but it was interesting, and well done. The Suite in the Olden Style was the more interesting.

When the quartet got around to Beethoven, it really excelled itself. The best player of the four is, of course, Boris Hambourg, who is the supreme example of all a player should be. But in this selection the whole quartet was good: everyone played with a remarkable precision and real feeling for all the nuances of expression.

It was well worth wainting for the Beethoven.

Night Editor Harassed By Scavenger Hunters

Sometime early yesterday morning The Varsity night side had it labours rudely disturbed by the sudden appearance of two lads on a scavenger hunt.

The night editor's fingerprints (autographed) were the prime object of their scarch, and the girl on duty was only too willing to oblige.

The second of their strange requests was for 50 pounds of Varsities. Night side was a little leary of giving away such a large quantity of copies of Canada's other great newspaper, but a pile was eventually found of copies which certain faculties had failed to collect.

Which all goes to show you that every faculty should make sure that arrangements are made for some one of their members to pick up their bundles (not for Britain) every day.

U.C. Gridders Shut Out Dents

Dent's Aerial Assault Fails Against Red & White

Winners Pile Up Points By Kicking Alone as Wade's Toe Proves Accurate Asset to Royal College

MURRAY STARS FOR DENTS

By Bill Nicholls

Coach Folwell's U.C. gridders drilled through the Dents' team for six points to pull their second straight shut-out, at the Varsity bowl yesterday afternoon. The Red and White played a hard-hitting and sensible game while Dents tried to keep up an ineffective air barrage.

U.C.'s total was amassed from kicking only — major scoring plays turned into one field goal in the third quarter, and three single points. Wade, who handled the kicking department for the winners, booted 'em high and far and seemed to be able to place them where he wanted them.

Dents, who took U.C.'s kick-off deep in their own territory, started their forward pass feature. Jimmy Bitove intercepted one, Stillman crashed right through the centre, but the molarmen came out of a tight pinch by blocking a kick.

Towards the end of the first half Hambly got away a short boot which gave U.C. possession on Dent's 35. A long hoist back of the goal line gave first blood to the Red and White on a rouge. Following up immediately, Bitove clipped off 20 yards, shaking free of Dent's tacklers, then he took a 15 yard pass from Wade which put his team on the 15 stripe. U.C. fumbled, then Dents returned this gentlemanly act. Two fast passes were knocked down and Wade kicked in for a sure point. But Murray outfoxed the U.C. tacklers and kicked out. U.C. lined up on the 20 with seconds to go. Again Wade kicked and U.C. tacklers surrounded Murray who pulled the same trick—twice leaving U.C. ends in mid-air as the ball soared back out over the goal-line as half-time blew.

Half-time score—U.C. 1, Dents 0.

Shortly after the second half began Hambly hoofed the ball to the centre of the field. The U.C. back misjudged the ball as the afternoon sun glinted onto the gridiron; it caught his foot and rebounded to the Dent 35 where U.C. took over. Both teams took to the air, but everything that went up, came down. The Red and White again started to roll when Stillman crashed through the middle for 15. U.C. kicked to Dents' 15 where Cutler dropped his tackle. Chance, which seemed to be the 13th man on the U.C. team, gave the artsmen possession on a fumble. The Dents centre dug in for two downs. Foiled on a major attempt, Tartaglia the quarter called for a placement. Bill Wade did the trick between the uprights putting the pigskin the labelled space. The quarter ended U.C. 4, Dents 0.

Never feeling particularly safe with their lead, the U.C. strategy called for two bucks and a kick. Dents went into the air and passes rained like bombs. Play gravitated to their end and when a punt reached Wade on the 40 he took a running kick. Murray was nailed deep behind the goal line for a single. The ball stayed on the 205 as Dents threw three passes, thus hauding the ball to U.C. Five plays later, on the 10 yard line, Wade was forced to kick again, scoring the final point.

Tempers started to rise in the remaining time, and for a while it looked as though the molarmen were going to demand their tooth for a tooth. A final desperate pass sent Dents up the field, but the rally was too late, the game was for the books: U.C. 6, Dents 0.

It is hard to pass out orchids to the victors for it was team-work and each man at his job, that did the trick. Wade scoring the 6 points definitely starred. Tartaglia at quarter played a heady game, and strategy is one of the finer points of rugby. Stillman and Bitove were the chief stick-movers, moving quickly and breaking well. Warren and Nesbitt did a good job in preventing any sensational runs, and it is to their credit that Dent's passes were grounded. Bucky Zierler and his linemen put up a tight, strong wall.

The losers played well and never really let the game get out of hand. Murray was tops—kicks from behind the goal at the end of the first half showed timing and level head. Hambly and Ferguson were always threats, and the whole line had moments when it could definitely assume the proportions of a stone wall—especially in the tight spots.

U.C.—Tartaglia, Dickson, Pohl, Zierler, Goodman, Bronsten, Warren, Nesbitt, Wade, Smith, Stillman, Bitove, McNulty, Sturgess, Morton, Nicol, Cutler, Paskaloff, Amell, Garrett.

Dents — Boyd, Websters, Wright, Turners, Jenkins, Ferguson, Hambly, Marshall, Murray, Green, Woods, Cummings, Hughen, Corcoran, Faulkner, Nolan, Allman.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Last night about 6:30, we wandered over to yonder gym at O.C.E. to see the first basketball game of the season. It was a pleasing sight indeed for these tired old eyes of ours. O.T. and Vic Freshies did the honours and O.T. came forth from the fray superior—21-13. For a game so early in the season, the plays were very tricky. O.T.'s passes were working admirably and Vic wound their way about them quite well and often to great advantage —being much the lightest team. Flo Allan refereed and managed to keep the gals in check, whilst getting quite a bit of exercise, following balls and girls and such and blowing her whistle vociferously.

The first half was a bit slow and the score was only 16-7 at half time with O.T. in the lead. Ruth Thompson, their strong centre forward was high scorer and leading play-maker for the evening, but O.T.'s guards were right in their fighting as well. Valerie Wilmot was outstanding for the Searlet and Gold team who really made a strong comeback in the last half—having partaken of a few neatly cut oranges, and having had a bit of a rest. On the whole, considering that very few of these girls have ever played together, the brand of basketball was very good indeed and quite interesting to watch—as most of the half dozen some odd spectators would, no doubt, agree.

Meds and St. Hilda's are still scheduled to play this evening at 5:30 —so come on out and cheer for them if you like basketball. The schedule "in tota" has had to be revised because U.C.'s Juniors find it impossible to carry on without enough players. It will be published real soon—so watch for it and hang it upon your wall, gals.

It seems that O.C.E.'s big gym is being used today and tomorrow for a bazaar; so all practices scheduled for these days will carry on it U.T.S.'s gym—just down the hall and to the left of the main door. Here's hoping you don't get lost and end up at the Bingo Booth and forget about your dear old Alma Mater—and basketball practice!

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

A CHEER FOR U.C.

If yesterday's encounter is any criterion, the second division for the Mulock Cup looks to be headed U.C.'s way. The Red and White have come through their first two games with nary a point against them—and Coach Folwell still has a couple of aces left up his sleeve in the person of a couple of unreturned harvesters. But as the teams were yesterday there was no doubt about the winner. Practically from the kick-off it was U.C.'s game—and it was only some clever and sometimes spectacular playing of Murray that kept the score down to six. The Whole U.C. line was in top form and presented a formidable obstacle to the Dentists. Thus a great improvement has been affected in constant practices since the Trinity game. For in that game the line developed holes at times while the backs missed the timing of a large number of plays.

But now the team has really found itself and is working as a unit. Bill Wade, scoring all points, displayed some real class and should make up, when and if Stu Scott returns, a very potent point catching department. But the Dents were far from outclassed. Murray pulled a clever stunt in the dying minutes of the half to return two behind-the-line kicks. And on the whole the molarmen put up a stiff fight—at least they didn't allow a major score. But they themselves had practically no scoring chances, despite their attempted aerial attack. So, in reality, the championship of the second group was perhaps decided yesterday. Dents were on top with two wins but now the Royal College is on top with two wins while Dents have two wins and a loss. So, excepting surprises (and there are always plenty), U.C. seems to be headed for the playoffs. How they will survive the finals with Meds, School or Vic, is a moot question—one capable of plenty of conjecture.

A TEAR FOR U.C.

For the first time in many years the Red and White of U.C. has been withdrawn from the Lacrosse League. Because of graduation of all last year's semi-finalists and the influence of harvesting, scattered students, C.O.T.C. and for many other reasons the athletic authorities of the College have deemed it impossible to field a team. This necessitated changes in the grouping. As first drawn up the league showed in one—Sr. S.P.S., Pharm. A, Vic; in two—Jr. S.P.S., Dents and Meds; in three—St. Mike's, S.P.S. III, U.C.; in four—Forestry, Pharmacy B, S.P.S. IV. But on notification of the withdrawal the league was broken down to two groups of four and one of three. So the latest groupings are set out by the Athletic Office as follows: Group I—Sr. S.P.S., Pharmacy A and Victoria; Group II—Jr. S.P.S., Dents, Meds, S.P.S. III; Group III—Forestry, Pharmacy B. S.P.S. IV and St. Mike's. Thus it is with pangs of regret that we watch one of the habitually strong contenders for the Dr. W. A. Dafoe Cup withdraw completely. Although U.C. is not the only Arts Faculty to be unable to floor a team this year—Trinity being in the same position—we are loath to see a lessening of a particular sport's popularity. For, instead of withdrawals we should be noting additions to the groups at this time. Why such large colleges as U.C. and Trinity can't field a team while Pharmacy is able to put two teams out on the floor is not a too easily answered question. However, we suspect the respective Althletic Directors have canvassed the situation to its fullest extent. But we do hope that the ancient Indian sport gains a little more popularity by next fall.

let's go places

Watching Fay Bainter and Edward Arnold struggle through "Mrs. Hadley" was like partaking of a bride's first cake. The acting, like the cake, was overdone in many places. The picture UPTOWN "MRS. HADLEY" didn't seem to live up to the advance notices; but at the same time there is sufficient "meat" in the story to make the picture intelligent entertainment.

It is natural for a reviewer to compare this picture with the other "Mrs." —"Mrs. Miniver." As in Miniver, Hadley gives one the impression that these are just Hollywood actors and actresses going through motions set down by a Hollywood writer. In "Mrs. Hadley" one gets an excellent portrayal of several American reactions to Pearl Harbour and to events that follow. Spring Byington supplies some light comedy relief through the film. Edward Arnold, as an important munitions official in Washington, has an important role in the story and handles it with his usual adroitness. Richard Ney, as the son (as in Mrs. Miniver,) was confusing because his portrayal in this picture was so similar to the Vin in Mrs. Miniver.

A grade B musical with a solid Ozzie Nelson's band and a talented singing trio jiving through an almost plotless story will entertain you musically if you are in the mood. Pete Smith's fans will like his "Victory Vittles" technicolour short which fills out a well balanced program.

G. E.

"The Thousand Days" is the title of the latest war-information short feature that will be in every Toronto theatre next week. The film, twenty minutes in length, is a new departure in entertainment. Rather than "THE THOUSAND DAYS" connect a hodge-podge of newsreel scenes together and add an impersonal soundtrack, the producer has interspersed dramatic sequences through the pictorial story of Canada's manpower and production record during "the most important thousand days of the world" — from Sept. 3, 1939 to the present time. This "rhapsodic" treatment, plus some pertinent facts and figures that few people know, make "The Thousand Days" excellent entertainment.

Go and see this stimulating picture and you'll feel more than proud of Canada's war record.

VIC SUBMERGES MEDS IN 19-1 LACROSSE GAME

The Red and Gold of Vic completely submerged the Pharmacy A lacrosse squad yesterday to the tune of 19-1. The issue was never in doubt as the Artsmen swept up the floor time and time again to make easy mark of the druggists' defence. It was the first real workout for the Pharmacy squad and they looked it as Malcom Dedrick and Glen Munro, each with a half-dozen tallies, continued to bulge the twine. Spence was the only Pharmacy player to make the score-sheet.

Pharmacy A—Hill, Lebowitz, Spence 1, Davlin, Cameron, Watson, Walker, Fox.

Victoria—Patrick, Dedrick 6, Munro 6, McKenzie 4, Rutherford 1, Bridgeman, Waugh 2.

Occupational Therapy Product of Last War

Tucked away in one corner of U.C. are some of the rooms of one of the least known Departments of the University—Occupational Therapy.

During the last war, a short course in Occupational Therapy was started at the University, and in 1926 the course was broadened so that now it extends two years. Upon graduating the students spend six months as internes in a hospital.

The purpose of the course is to train young women to act as Occupational Therapists in mental, general and orthopedic hospitals and similar institutions. Occupational Therapy is the means by which active exercise, cultural interests, hobbies, crafts and various industrial activities are scientifically applied to the treatment of physical illness, mental disfunction, and social maladjustment under the guidance of the physician or surgeon. The fact that this treatment shortens the length of illness, renders the patient more comfortable and responsive to treatment has made it an essential therapeutic agent today.

The Occupational Therapist uses as treatment, under the guidance of the physician, in mental, surgical and medical cases, any occupation, mental or physical that may contribute to or hasten recovery from disease or injury.

Last year there were 53 graduates, and this year there are 42 students in first year and 33 in second. The curriculum ranges from anatomy and physiology to book-binding and metalworking. The students spend a large amount of time in the various Toronto hospitals during their undergraduate days.

Upon graduation, they may enter hospitals, curative workshops, etc., or may enter into private practice.

District Order No. 1165 d-22-Oct-42 is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

DISIPLINE—SOLICITING RIDES IN AUTOMOBILES

The soliciting of rides by personnel of the Canadian Army is undignified and inconsistent with the wearing of the King's uniform. There is, however, no objection to the acceptance by soldiers of transportation when such is offered voluntarily by the public.

In addition to the above, the provisions of Section 44(2) of the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario are drawn to the attention of all ranks, the said provisions being as follows:

Sec. 44(2)—No person shall, while on the travelled portion of the highway, solicit a ride . . . from . . . the driver or operator of a motor vehicle other than a public vehicle.

The penalty for violation of this subsection is not less than $5.00 and if persisted in on more than one occasion it may amount to as much as $50.00.

It is stressed that not only will offenders render themselves liable to disciplinary action but are also liable to be prosecuted by the civil authorities for an offence against the law of Ontario.

hither and yon

with rex wilson

Corny routines aplenty have wafted out onto the campus from the windows of The Varsity's smoke-filled eyrie up in Hart House. A recent maize-ridden monstrosity follows:

Said a mastheader, noting the spiffy new corduroy slacks on a colleague, "Jeez, nice new whistlebritches you got."

"Yunh," was the reply, "but whatdayamean, whistlebritches?"

"They go 'wheep, wheep' when you walk."

"Oh, that's because they're made outa whcep-cord."

Then there's the reply that left us laughing but wondering why. The back of a departing trench-coated reporter revealed a large blob of something red on the coat tail.

"Jeez, man," shouted a nearsighted mastheader, "you got blood on the back of your coat."

"Blood?" asked the reported, examining the garment, then with collossal scorn, "Nahh, that ain't blood, that's bubble gum."

Other reporters have a correct and less lofty attitude. In fact, actual humility has been found among the lads. A telephone call came the other day from an ex-masthead man who asked for various higher-ups on the paper and finding none of them available, asked, "Well, isn't there anyone there?"

"No," came the paradoxical reply.

"But what about you?" the ex-mastheader asked.

"Oh, I'm only one of the reporters," was the meek answer.

Another baunt of slightly more slapstick routines is a women's union on campus where the wooing of that noxious weed, tobacco, is forbidden. At a dance there recently a poor innocent male was smoking a pipe cheerfully, when a young lady spied A Person of Authority approaching.

"Duck the pipe," she hissed.

The poor young man, only vaguely comprehending the situation, shoved the pipe into his pocket, and then, diverted by the company and the dance, forgot about the smouldering menace.

It was just when they were about to play "The King" that a strange odour was noticed as tweed, and peat, and plain ten-cent tobacco mingled their aromas of combustion in the chaste hall. There was a yelp of pain, a scuffle of feet, and the combutible gallant was deposited outside in the best manner recommended by the A.R.P. handbook.

Two other lads came out a little better. By means undisclosed they were one night cosily ensconced in the library of the same building, enjoying untrammelled access to Time, Punch, Life and other current journals. Their shoes were off and toes twiddled in a relaxed manner as they puffed fags and deposited the ashes in their footgear. Suddenly a step is heard. "Cheese it, the Dean," hisses one. Cigarettes are butted in the heels of shoes and feet are thrust in upon the smouldering remains. Waving at the drifting smoke the lads mutter vaguely about "Seance . . . ectoplasm" and hobble painfully out on their self-administered hotfeet.

Women, no matter how they confuse, appal, bewilder and otherwise harry and muddle the male writers of this column, have their champions, among them Helen Taft Manning, Dean of Women at Bryn Mawr, and herself a woman. When asked if all this war work by women will destroy femininity—will the female sex still attract men? she replied, "Well, I don't know where men would find another sex."

Be that as it may or may not be, we don't know what we'd do without the writer of tomorrow's hither who keeps journalistic watch and ward over The Varsity's flock of women reporters, our friend and editorial better-half, E. Jean Southworth, Women's News Editor.

The Trinity Review

the irregular appearance of the poem on the page. While we still take issue with some line divisions, there's much to commend the technical organization of the piece. The short-line stanzas in which Wilson makes very interesting use of rhyme are very good. His imagery is apt and often cruel, climaxed by the particularly noteworthy description of a welfare worker:

"Her face is paved with good intentions."

"Idle Thoughts," by A. Gibson, is a sonnet which will find a warm spot in the hearts of all those who understand pines and clouds. "The Queen's Story," by R. V. McCormack, is the verse we don't quite comprehend. "Furlough," from the same pen, seems like just an adequate sort of verse until its subtly-introduced elegaic mood creeps up on the reader and makes its force felt.

After "Furlough," "When I Go to Heaven," by shy E. H. is a lightsome relief as some irreverent soul plays a boogy-woogy obbligato to the conventional conception of heaven.

Turning to the short stories, "Lash," by R. B. Howard, is red meat just seared enough to make it palatable. Starting strongly with the sentence, "Everything good in Lash died when his mother kicked off, which she did when he was born," it carries the mood through successfully without slump or incongruity to reveal the ultimate fate of Lash as told by a dipsomaniac mobster with a micabre sense of humor. Few student writers could have handled this at all successfully. Howard has done it well.

"To Love and Cherish," by Lynn Howard, is in quite a different mood. A portrait for the "people we have known" gallery, it delineates with more fidelity than satire an utterly incompetent married woman of 45. "The Birthday," by Margaret Hogarth, is an adequate little vignette of proud poverty and short-changing. "All Our Yesterdays," by Arthur Gibson, is well-written, but its psychology of the elder generation in Nazi Germany, while hopeful, lies beyond our present capacity to judge. It is to be hoped that he is right.

An award of some sort is in order for the writer of this month's editorial which leaves "the war and the reconstruction of this world to mightier pens."

REX WILSON.

SWIM PENNANTS WON BY JUNIOR MEDS AND U.C.

Jr. Meds and U.C. carried off the pennants in the Interfaculty Swimming Meets yesterday. The powerful Meds, though they won every event, had formidable opposition in the spirited and hard-fgbting Trinity team. Score 26 to 7. Providing keener rivalry, U.C. and Vic battled in a point-to-point race, with the derby going to U.C. 17 to 16.

In the Medley melee, Meds' trio finished almost one length ahead of the Artsmen. The 50 yard backstroke showed more fight with McHattie, Rubenstein and Fraser in a photo-finish. Rosen for Meds chopped through the 50 yard free style to win the fastest event of the match.

150 yard Medley — Meds: McHattie, Spooner, Fielding—1:58.9
50 yard Back—McHattie (M.), Rubenstein (M.), Fraser (T.)—:40.2
50 yard Breast—Rosen (M.), Hardman (M.), Fraser (T.)—:34.0
50 yard free style—Rosen (M.), Hardman (M.), Bailey (T.)—:30.4
200 yard Relay — Meds: McHattie, Green, Toogood, Rubenstein—2.30.7

In the second splash event the half dozen spectators in the gallery saw the two teams in pitched battle for the sceptre of the waves. Fighting as only Artsmen can fight, the U.C. men won three events to Vic's two. U.C.'s big three, Beames, Balmer, and Salter, figured in every event. The team managers attributed the small turnout to the fact that swimmers do not receive P.T. credits. U.C. took the Medley, the Back and the Breast; Vic won the Free Style and 200 Relay.

150 yard Medley—U.C.: Beames, Balmer, Salter—1:44.4
50 yard Back—Beames (U.C.), Beharriel (V.), Dunlop (V.)—37.6
50 yard Breast—Balmer (U.C.), Graham (V.), Dunlop (V.)—37.9
50 yard Free Style — Craing (V.), Balmer (U.C.), Salter (U.C.)—26.3
200 yard Relay—Vic: Beharriel, Tilston, Dunlop, Craig—2.05.7

dian Interne Board came into being. This board provides for the placement of internes in suitable hospitals as also for profitable interning.

In Toronto, the C.A.M.S.I. also helps its students financially by providing co-operatives residences and exchanges for books and instruments. Every since its inception an aggressive policy has been pursued to raise the standards of student health facilities in medical schools, by the association.

This organization has contributed considerably to the war effort through its aid to the local Red Cross as well as supplying blood donors. It also gives financial aid to refugee students who are interested in medicine.

The conventions of the C.A.M.S.I. are held annually. Next year it is to be held in Toronto and the following year in Montreal. At the convention this year local projects of the past and coming years were discussed and it was decided to make a survey of the medical curriculum in the coming year.

Hart House Library Adds New Books

Many new books have been added to the shelves of the Hart House library recently. The list—largely non-fictional—includes: The Last Time I Saw Paris; They Were Expendable; Falling Through Space; They Called Me Cassandra; Stalin; The Unknown Country; The Socialist Sixth of the World; The Year of the Wild Boar; Victory Through Air Power; Conditions of Peace; My Friend Flicka; The Mortal Storm; Bright to the Wanderer; The Song of Bernadette.

Another new feature of the library is the added seating capacity made possible by rearranging the furniture. The round table where used books are to be placed now may be found by the door instead of in its former position in the centre of the room.

Senior Meds Gridders Top Junior Schoolmen 13-7 To Erase Play-Off Chance

Arnup and Lewis for Doctors, Booth for Engineers, Star in Stadium Battle Played in Rain

SCHOOL GAMBLE FAILS

By Gordon Mack

A light drizzle and a powerful Meds team combined yesterday afternoon to quench Jr. School's last mathematical chance at a play-off position. Lacking the services of Herb Stricker, who starred in the first game against Sr. Meds, the Engineers were crushed by the Doctors in the first half, but rallied and were still fighting at the end of the game, which ended 13-7 for the Doctors.

Meds opened the scoring immediately. After kicking off and retrieving a School fumble on the 25 yard line, George Lewis took the ball around end for 15. An S.P.S. off-side advanced the ball to the 5, and Bill Arnup charged through centre for the first major. Frank Giardine converted. Play seesawed around mid-field for the rest of the quarter and it ended 6-0 for Sr. Meds.

The second quarter opened with Meds in possession on their own 40. Three bucks brought it to the 50 and an Arnup to Bryans pass tacked on another 20 yards. From there George Evans was rouged on Owen Gray's rolling kick behing the line. Their thirst still being just whetted, the Doctors continued pressing. Bill Arnup intercepted a School forward at their 40 and made the play of the day in a 30 yard broken-field run. This gain was temporarily nullified by a Meds fumble 8 yards from pay dirt, but the resourceful Meds pulled a rabbit out of the hat to give them their winning margin. After fumbling the School kick around the 40 yard line until it began to resemble a soccer game, Jack Newman gathered in the ball and roared down the side-line with it for 35 yards, crossing the line standing up. Pete Turner converted to end Meds' scoring.

The boys from Toike Oike Tech started the second half with a lot of that never-say-die School spirit. An exchange gave them the ball on Meds' 43. From a pass formation Waldon broke loose for 10. Seconds later, Bill Lawrence, failing to locate a receiver, moved the sticks on the same play. Two bucks brought the ball to Meds' 10, but a gambling School failed to capitalize. A "knock-on" and two grounded passes meant the loss of the ball and a penalty. But School was not to be denied. Sweeping end plays featuring Lawrence, Waldon and Jack MacLean brought the ball back to the Meds' 25. Bryan threw one play for a loss when he rushed in from end to down the passer, but on the next play Vern Booth kicked to the deadline. The quarter ended 13-1.

Vern Booth started the last quarter with an 18 yard gain on an extension play. A penalty to Meds, a long kick and a medical fumble gave School the ball on the 12 yard line. A buck and

Buffalo State Men To Meet Harriers

The annual Senior Interfacutly Harrier Race tomorrow will this year be an intercollegiate event. The cross-country team from Buffalo State will arrive tomorrow morning to attempt a repeat of their victory last year over the Blue and White. The team selected by Coach Hec Phillips to wear the Varsity colours is made up of T. Barnett, R. Foulis, G. Lorimer, B. Delaney, J. Feldhans, P. Shackleton, J. Brown, G. Parke-Taylor, Jeffery, F. Fordyce and D. Kirkwood.

Buffalo last year, led by Don Munson, had a very formidable team which completed a stiff season undefeated. Varsity, however, has a stronger team than last year.

Top flight in said squad will probably be Foulis, Lorimer, Delaney and Feldham, who have come through the track season to date with a host of victories to their respective credits.

Runners are urged to dress warmly, to wear a light jersey under their Varsity vest and even a pair of light woollen mitts. The aforementioned Varsity squad may pick up their team uniforms from Hec Phillips today.

It is hoped that the intercollegiate contest will not interfere with the intramural nature of the race. Each faculty is urged to field as large a team as possible. The Varsity runners will also snatch points for their faculty.

Above all, make sure that all runners meet at Varsity Stadium before 9:30 a.m. A chartered street car will provide transportation to High Park.

MEMBERS OF HART HOUSE

Members of Hart House are requested to watch the special Hart House Bulletin Board on page 2 on Mondays and Thursdays for notices regarding Hart House activities.

Medical Exams Urged Before November 14

Appointments should be made for medicals as soon as possible, Dr. Ian Urquhart stressed yesterday in an interview with The Varsity. Already 2,500 of the University's male students have been examined, but there are almost 1,000 left.

After Nov. 14 the 14 extra doctors who have been employed by the Health Service to aid in the examinations are to leave. This will reduce considerably the number of individuals who can be looked after each day. Unless many of the students have their examinations now, the service may have to be continued until Christmas which would be unsatisfactory to all concerned.

University Women Train For Work In Day Nurseries

Many University women are taking their compulsory war service training in the form of a course in child care. This training will fit them for voluntary work in day nurseries, with children under five years of age.

"An untrained adult is of no benefit in a day nursery," said Miss Marjorie Poppleton, secretary of the Institute of Child Study. The Institute has taken over the training of university women in this field.

Lectures in child psychology are given to those enrolled in this course every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon. Each girl is taught the proper method of handling the young child, and what action to take in case their charges become unruly.

All over Ontario local committees are investigating the need for such nurseries, and although at present there is only one nursery in Toronto, buildings have been located, and plans are being made to open several more centers.

As a result of this action there will be a great need for trained voluntary workers. University women who are really interested in this work have been enrolled in the Women's Voluntary Service Corps, to work in the nurseries.

Eleanor Sinclair, III Arts, U.C., remarked enthusiastically, "I think it is a fine idea. So far it appears much more interesting than any of the other courses."

Annette Stewart, also of U.C., echoed this opinion, adding, "I don't see why they waste such good professors on us."

In an opposite vein, Agnes Futterer, III St. Mike's, complained, "We want to see the children. Lectures are of no benefit without practical experience, and up to now the course seems like a waste of time. But," she added hastily, "the lectures are stimulating."

Regulations For Returning Harvesters

The attention of students in the Faculty of Arts, who were granted leave of absence in order that they might assist in harvesting wheat in the Province of Saskatchewan, is drawn to the following regulations approved by a special committee of the Arts Council:

(1) that leave of absence, from October 10th to November 9th, 1942, be granted to students in the Pass Course and in Honour Courses in Groups A and B, provided the application of each student was approved by his College Registrar;

(2) that special instruction be provided for these students by the Departments concerned, commencing on November 9th and continuing for three weeks;

(3) that each student, immediately upon his return to the University, report to each of his instructors in order to be informed of the arrangements for the special instruction to be provided under the preceding section;

(4) that the examiners in the Honour Courses and the Revising Committee be authorized to give special consideration to the students concerned when the results of their final examinations are being determined;

(5) that each student, immediately upon his return, must report to the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, in order to inform the Registrar of the date of his return to the University.

Registrar.

FRENCH CLUB FEATURES MAUPASSANT'S 'LA PARURE'

The presentation of De Maupassant's "La Parure" was the feature of the meeting of the Trinity French Club at St. Hilda's College Wednesday night.

The play was directed by Professor R. K. Hicks and the cast included Mary Manning, Ann Davidson and Peter Boyd Bowman.

Year representatives were elected at the meeting, with John Blake as the successful candidate for second year and Ann Davidson for first year.

Dancing and refreshments concluded the evening.

DAVIDSON DF EMMANUEL TO CONDUCT SERVICE

Dr. R. Davidson, Principal of Emmanuel College, will conduct the University Service to be held in Trinity College chapel this Sunday evening at 7:30. The service is the second in the series "The Student, the University and the Modern World," which is planned by the Student Christian Movement.

The aim of the series is to provide a basis for prayer and fellowship for students and staff at the University. Representatives of the student body assist in these services, and all University students and their friends are invited to attend.

Thompson of Saskatchewan Expects Early Call-Up Of Non-Science Students

Sees Possible Post-War Lack of Economists, Political Scientists, But Stresses Immediate Need of Manpower

'GREATLY TO BE DEPLORED'

Saskatoon, Nov. 5—(CUP)—Dean W. P. Thompson, acting-president of the University of Saskatchewan, said here recently that in his opinion the universities would not long be able to defend students taking courses other than the scientific and technical ones contributing directly to the war effort.

Dean Thompson expects that in a short time all students other than those taking such courses will be called up. "This is greatly to be deplored," he said, "when we think of the tremendous need there will be for economists, political scientists and other experts in social subjects in the post-war reconstruction period, but in view of the very great immediate view of men for winning the war we shouldn't try to prevent it."

"If we don't win the war our social experts will have nothing to say about the reconstruction period—if there is one," he continued. "The National Selective Service is the body to decide whether the immediate need outweighs the long term requirement and to apply the decision equitably in individual cases."

The acting-president's views on the importance of the arts course in wartime are not in complete accord with recent statements on the subject by university heads throughout Canada, notably Dr. S. E. Smith, President of the University of Manitoba, and D. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto.

Controversy on the subject arose when it was predicted by L. Austin Wright, assistant-director of National Selective Service, that able-bodied men would be restricted to university courses which would fit them to be technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry. Mr. Wright made this prediction in a speech prepared for delivery to the General Alumni Association of Queen's University, last Oct. 17.

Acting-president Thompson, who graduated from the University of Toronto Biology Department in 1910, is relieving President J. S. Thomson, of the University of Saskatchewan, now temporarily on leave as general manager for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Blue and White Seeks Revenge

Vanquished by an R.A.F. team from Clinton last week, the Varsity rugger XV will seek revenge on another R.A.F squad, this time from Picton, down Kingston way. The Picton outfit have scored one close victory over the Clinton R.A.F, but the Bules are quite confident that they can win this one. A few organized practices have been held since the last game and the team play has improved considerably.

Representatives Called To Discuss Colleges' Role

A meeting of representatives of student societies, organizations and clubs to discuss the possibility of calling a campus-wide conference to consider the functions of the university today will be held at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Mary Mothersill, III U.C., chairman of the convening committee of the University of Toronto student-staff council, announced last night. Place of the meeting will be announced later.

An invitation is also extended to all individual students who wish to disruss problems arising out of present university status, she said.

Other members of the committee are: Murray Acker, VI Meds; Carl Birchard, II Social Work; John Wood, IV U.C.; Don Rohr, IV St. Mike's; and Diane Chefetz, II Social Work.

Schoolmen Whip Medicos, Tie U.C. In Interfaculty Soccer Squabbles

Two closely contested soccer struggles yesterday afternoon, gave a 1-0 victory to S.P.S. over Meds on the slippery back campus, and a 2-all tie between S.P.S. 2 and U.C. This is the second time Meds bave lost to the Schoolmen—and both times it was the same score. There was little to choose between the Royal College and S.P.S. , and it was by far the most colourful game to watch.

During the first half of the Meds game the hall never left the doctors' territory. Towards the end of the half, Art Riguero slipped the only goal of the tussle behind Bob Delaney from a close-in scramble. Defaney had his hands full a good part of the time. Boyd, Fyfe and Nikaido were the bnlwarks of the tight Meds defence. Seymour and Riguero helped to force the play, and Hibbard broke well for the winners. Final statistics—S.P.S. 1, Meds 0.

The lineups were:

S.P.S. 1—Riguero, Thompson, Knelman, Clarc, Mackenzie, B. Seymour, Roberts, H. Seymour, Hibbard, Kaufman, Currie, Martin, Capper.

Meds—Allan, Wieford, MacHattie, Cuthill, Ford, Boyd, Fyfe, Nikaido, Stranks, Delaney, Joseph, Baird, Stewart.

In the game at Vic a great deal more spirit was displayed than on the back campus. Play ranged from one end to the other, there was more combination, and tougher tactics. S.P.S. opened the scoring in the first half with Honeyman slipping one past U.C.'s Barney Apple.

The Red and White came to life when Rothfels went is on the school goal. Biding his time close in, he shot one past the goaltender to tie the score. Both teams then opened up and U.C. forged ahead when Ross Skinner took a pass close in. Not to be denied, S.P.S. pressed close and finally tied up the score when Jung booted one away. The final score—S.P.S. II 2, U.C. 2.

The lineups were:

S.P.S. II—Jung, Crawford, Frost, McCowan, Glary, Turner, Adams, Deaford, Williamson, McDonald, Honeyman, McNair, Sanclemente.

U.C.—Apple, Fingold, Socks, Pershad, Fox, White, Rothfels, Blackstone, Kneesel, Graham, Skinner.

Blue and White to Field Soccer Team In Contests With Service Squads

Arrangements have at last been completed for a series of exhibition games for the Varsity soccer club. Two games are definite and a third is almost certain. The first scheduled game will be against the No. 2 Military District Depot Army team and will be played Saturday, Nov. 7, at 10:30 a.m. at Stanley Barracks, Exhibition Park. Future plans indicate a possible game with the Royal Norwegian Air Force on Saturday morning, Nov. 14 and also an engagement with an R.A.F. team from Port Albert the following Saturday.

Judging by the record of the Army team the Blues might well have their hands full. Two weeks ago the army boys were crowned champions of the Garrison lcague and they also hold decisions over the Norwegians and Manning Depot, both of whom are outstanding teams of the Senior City League. However, the 1942 edition of the Varsity team is every bit as strong as the last inter-collegiate championship Blue tcam and the latter defeated both the champions and the runners-up of the first Garrison lcague. Also it is rumoured that the army team has lost three or four key players via postings.

A Varsity practice will be held on Friday at 4:30 p.m., to select the team and also to brush up on team play. The following are particularly requested to turn out and also any other players who would like to try out for a position: Thompson, H. Seymour, Hibbard, Riguero, Currie and Knelman of S.P.S.; Baird, Boyd, Todd and Fyfe of Meds; Clee and Johns of Dents; Bundy and Paton of Vic; Abbott of Wycliffe; McIver of St. Mike's; and Creswell of Emmanuel.

For Saturday's game uniforms (no boots) will be issued at Hart House locker room at 9:30. A truck will lcave at 10 a.m. for the Park and will return at noon.

Although our auditory organs may not be quite so sensitive to drifting fragments of silly chatter as those of some of the more seasoned Hitherandyonders, we are not entirely unoblivious to what goes on around and lately a few scattered incidents have struck us as having a quality which might inspire something approximating a feeling of amusement.

We heard recently about the proud mother who, speaking of her son to the woman who was helping with the housework, informed the latter that the youth was in FOURTH YEAR MEDS.

You know, occasionally (very, very occasionally, you must remember) Varsity reporters eat. Try to visualize the feelings of one female staffer who, slumping down at the nearest table at a restaurant down College Street way and reaching for the menu was confronted with this:

This Is YOUR Concern

Since early in the term we have urged that students of the University take serious stock of their present position here, both as individuals and in relation to the nation at war. We are now glad to learn that action of a concerted nature has been taken in calling together representatives of various student bodies to formulate a definite understanding of the role of the university and the function of students in total war.

The convening committee of the University of Toronto Student-Staff Council has called a meeting of representatives of student societies, organizations and clubs for Tuesday evening. The representatives should come prepared to offer some definite opinions of their own regarding the present and future status of the university as a training-bround for the technicians of today and the leaders of tomorrow. And the invitation also goes forth to students who have already formed such opinions, and are interested in expressing them.

It is not the intention of the convening committee that Tuesday's meeting should attempt to lay down in one evening any "master-plan" for university participation in the war . Rather it is their desire that students there assess the undoubted problems with which the universities are now confronted and consider the advisability of calling a conference fully representative of the students and staff of this campus to discuss means of increasing the contribution which universities are now making to victory.

Students are concerned with present problems of what constitutes the plans of the university in a nation now gradually coming to the realization of what total war means. They discuss them in informal groups; they have staged more thon one debate on certain of their aspects; they hear professorial reference to them in lectures. The projected conference may do much toward correlating and crystalizing university thought. And never have universities been in more serious need of self-examination.

Suffused With Blushes

We wrote ourselves into a state of indignation in yesterday's issue over the alleged fact that an A.R.P. lecture in the Biology Building Wednesday afternoon was so poorly attended that it was decided to cancel the affair. Our intentions were blameless, indeed commendable; our zeal was unquestionable; but our information was incorrect.

We were informed yesterday morning by A. J. Butlin, University Sector Warden, that the lecture was held, and that it was attended by approximately 80 persons. He explained that we must have received our faulty information from one of the five persons who went to the wrong room—110 instead of 101—through a mistake on the part of one of the local wardens.

We are glad, therefore, to retract our remarks of yesterday. The attendance-figure indicates that staff and employees of the University engaged in A.R.P. work are still as enthusiastic as ever—willing to learn new methods of combatting possible enemy action here—eager to follow up the successful Air Raid Alert of last week with further displays of efficiency.

We apologize for any embarrassment that our editorial error may have caused; although we strongly suspect that those who suffered the most embarrassment through it are ourselves.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity,

Dear Sir:

I am one out of a group of 20 who had excellent luck on the western excursion.

We were met on the train by a Saskatchewan labour representative and assigned to Estevan, Sask. When we arrived there, we were taken by chartered bus to Portal on the United States border. Three of us violated international laws to step over the boundary line to say we had been in North Dakota.

Ten of our group were placed on farms near Portal, and the other 10 returned to Estevan aboard the same chartered bus. While waiting for further orders here, we enjoyed the hospitality of the Saskatchewan Government, sleeping at the best hotel and eating at the best restaurant.

When our labour representative met us, we were subdivided again and three of us went to Moose Jaw, on a farm two and a half miles from the city. The evening we arrived there all offices were closed and we had no place to stay. As a last resort I phoned the Salvation Army and by a stroke of superb luck I dialed the wrong number and found myself speaking to a girl. I explained our predicament and the fact that we were from the University of Toronto. Fifteen minutes later, along she came, bringing two of her friends, met us at the station, and escorted us to her private residence. We were amply fed by her mother; given a lovely bed and breakfast next morning before starting work.

We lasted one hour pitching sheaves, and were asked to stop. Our employer seemed dissastisfied with our type of work. Really, the labour shortage wasn't very acute on this farm.

So we returned to the Harvest Office in Moose Jaw and two of us obtained jobs on a farm three miles west of the city. Our employer was an 80-year-old graduate in medicine from Northwestern University, who had interned for two years at Vienna. I worked driving a two-ton truck, hauling grain from the combines to the granary, and shovelling it in. The fellow with me—Dick Sully, III C. & F.—helped out considerably when I had a stiff neck for a couple of days.

The third of our party accepted a job in Assiniboia, 75 miles south.

Dick and I managed to get 10 working days in before bad weather broke the harvest. Dick returned to Regina, and I went to Moose Jaw, where I washed windows for three days.

On the trip I grossed $65 in three weeks and netted $50. The food was excellent and the sleeping quarters were nothing to kick about.

Sincerely,
Jim Busbin,

ART-MUSIC-Drama

Trimmed With Ermine

Seitz of Toronto

To a plush audience of stiff bosoms and sable Ernest Seitz last night played the first recital of the Canadian Concert Series at Eaton Auditorium. Mr. Seitz is a pianist and a technician of virtuoso calibre. His reading of the Galuppi Sonata in D Major was a study in nonchalance; the Maestoso a metric march of chord and arpeggio; the Presto passage just a landslide of glissandi. The two Intermezzi of Brahms, were, to coin a phrase, poetically conceived and cerebrally achieved. And the less said about Dohnanyi the better.

I think when Bach wrote his Prelude and Fugue in A Minor, he meant the Prelude as mere window-dressing for the galaxy of counterpoint which follows it. In this version, glamorized by Liszt, Mr. Seitz did his best, but never quite achieved the monumental scope we all awaited.

The rest of the program was interesting: some Russian, a splash of Fauré, that Neo-Impressionist. The Liszt group was pointedly program-filler. I think two-thirds of the audience came for the encores, with which he was generous. Debussy's La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin was limpidity itself. To me, the most refreshing aspect of the whole affair is the utter detachment with which this man walks through a program. Mr. Seitz has sang-froid.

BROCK BRACE.

Lesson Seven

To show that even the sports department knows there is a war on, and to show you how a good sports story should be written, we offer today's lesson of the series:

The Varsity In Six Easy Lessons

Special to The Varsity and the Vichy Freeze Press

By Kind Permission of the Gestapo

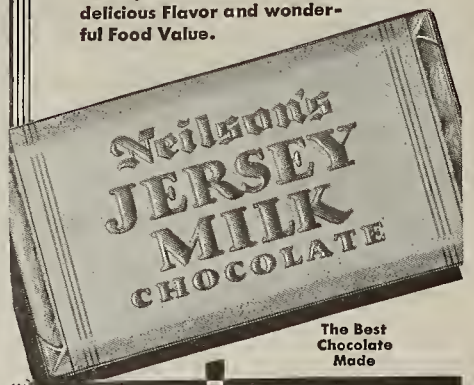
Vichy, Germany, Nov. 5—(SCUP)—Yesterday afternoon, before a cheering, arm-waving, regimented crowd, the F.F. (French Fascist) rugby team outclassed, outlasted and outshot a challenging Colab team, representing Local 694 of the Collaboration Union.

In a thrilling first quarter the F.F., showing true New Order spirit, scored a touchdown after storming a few trenches on the right wing. The convert, however, was blocked by a bayonet charge.

Early in the second period, the Colabs staged a break through in the F.F. line by using band grenades, and their star halfback, LcQuiz, galloped for 50 metres. A touchdown appeared inevitable but the ball-carrier had his throat cut on the F.F. 10 yard line. On the next play the Colabs were penalized for drawing knives before the whistle had been blown. The F.F. boys came right back and with the aid of land mines they scored another touchdown, as the crowd screamed: "Heil Hitler and Pass the Ammunition!" The convert was forestalled by a sniper in the grandstand.

FINAL BOX SCORE	F.F.	COLABS
Killed	7	9
Wounded	6	12
Prisoners	2	5
Missing (and presumed dead)	4	7
Missing (and presumed escaped)	3	2

At intermission the Category E-2 crowd ate black bread and ersatz peanuts and listened to a short three-hour speech by Marshal Petain, in which he discussed the importance of youth and virility. The audience exuberantly shouted 'V' for Vichy after each statement. Then Premier Laval spoke briefly on fair play being carried into matters of politics. By this time all the corpses had been removed from the field and stands, and play was resumed.



In the third quarter (ed. note—22 lines deleted by censor).

a pass lost a yard, but on third down, Bill Lawrence completed one to Jim Bromley down in the corner for School's major. Vern Booth converted for the seventh and final point.

The more you see the talented Meds, the more they remind you of the local Balmy Beachers—power is there, but too many fumbles keep them in hot water. Bill Arnup's plunging was an outstanding individual highlight; combining with George Lewis they moved the sticks in every quarter. For School Vern Booth's play was of the best. Even in the disastrous first half he held an edge in the kicking, and his punting and running on extension plays was a bright spot for the Blue and Yellow. Several important gains were made by School from the field-wide extension plays that organized when receiving a kick. These clicked better in the second half.

Dentists, S.P.S. Take Swim Events

Swimming contests in Hart House yesterday afternoon gave team decisions to Dents and S.P.S. 3 over Knox and Emmanuel. In the first meet, Knox splashed through in the 150 yard relay to take the event. After that Dents took over to snatch the other four events, outswimming their rivals on the scoresheet to the tune of 21-12.

S.P.S. III managed to take the margin of points in all but one event to outclass Emmanuel's swimmers. The 220 yard relay gave Emmanuel their only glimmer of success. All in all the Schoolmen managed to dunk a classy set of fin experts.

peared to have weakened noticeably through malnutrition but did manage to score a placement despite all interceptor attempts of the Luftwaffe. During a time out a parade was held to obtain recruits for the Crusade against Bolshevism, shouting such slogans as "Join the German Army and Get Three Square Meals a Week." Toward the final whistle the F.F. followers gained the upper hand and with unusually light casualties pushed acrosse two major scores, At the end of play R.A.F. bombers came over and the crowd was quietly dispersed.

Eighty minutes in a mad-house! No matter what your mood, you can't help getting a kick out of this one. A couple of gals from the sticks of Ohio come to the big city and hold open house in a basement garret in New York's mad village. Thus starts a threering circus that keeps you in stiches. Rosalind Russell proves herself again one of the screen's foremost comediennes. Her dry humour and frozen faces are terriffic and Janet Blair as the sweet and innocent Eileen —well—unquote.

You'll find every type of humour accounted for. If you missed the play don't let the picture get away from you.

Up at O.C.E. last night history was made, when Meds defeated St. Hilda's Freshies "A" 25-18. It was the lady doctors' first win in—well a long time. Natalie Staran (II), and Ruth Albright (10) led the attack, with Mary Hollington and Lois Davies playing well on the defensive. M. Chappell did some very effective guarding for the Freshies and M. Flecher and J. Murray were really putting the ball in the net. Both teams showed a fine spirit and were in fighting from start to finish, and so fouls were plentiful. However, both teams show promise.

At long last the basketball situation is settled (we hope, we hope). St. Mike's have found it necessary to drop one team, their Junior to be exact; but happily St. Hilda's have enough for two Freshie teams, so the makers of the schedule were saved a headache. Yesterday U.C. thought they would have to withdraw their Juniors, but last night's practice saw ten girls pivoting and passing, so the Red and White will still carry three teams. Zoe has asked that the Juniors please turn out—the whole team—tonight at 5:30 at O.C.E., and Wednesday at 6:30 at Little Vic.

The grouping for the season is as follows: Group I—U.C. Srs., I P.H.E., St. Hilda's Freshie "A", Meds; Group 2—II P.H.E., U.C. Jrs., St. Hilda's Srs.; Group 3—P.H.E. III, Vic Srs., Nurses; Group 4—U.C. Freshies, Vic Freshies, St. Mike's Srs., O.T.; Group 5—St. Hilda's Freshies "B", Vic Jrs., Physio.

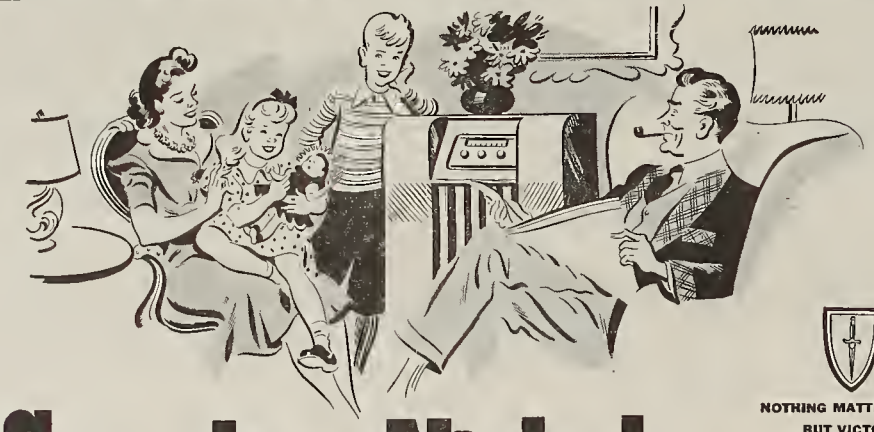
SPEAKING of SPORT

By Roger Conant

HALF A LOAF . . .



Yea swischen den Lyceen! It may only be a temporary substitute but this Saturday will see the old Blue and White giving battle with outside and challenging powers. For three years we have been restricted to the odd exhibition basketball game at several Athletic Nights in the spring. And last year we had an all-star 'V' for Varsity soccer team complete—likewise a few rugger enthusiasts got themselves all blue and black for the Blue and White. And then some local and distant track teams were inveigled into visiting this campus. Realizing the need for all-University expression and representation plus the experience given the best athletes of the University the sport supervisors in Hart House have elaborated their program for extra-collegiate games. And this Saturday, said program is triple threat.

Some of the lads will get their first taste of Stanley Barracks tomorrow at ten-thirty when they challenge the soccer squad of the No. 2 Military District Depot Army. This is the first of a projected series for the Varsity all-stars and no doubt the hardest. None too many practices have been held, they will be playing away from home, and their opponents are reputed to be one of the best in this district. The advertising department having put the squeeze on us today we have only room to say that the Army team will soon realize that college men are no pushovers.

Back on the back west campus—you know the hunk of turf on the other side of the path from Whitney—the U. of T. rugger squad plays host to an R.A.F. aggregation up from Picton. If you happened to see the goudge-match two weeks ago when Clinton came down you won't miss the affair tomorrow at twelve noon. The combination rugby-soccer-basketball and rasslin' has a definite crowd appeal. It may be pity for the martyrs out there with no pads or perhaps just a desire for the unexpected. For in the latter case, one is mystified by the ability of some to make long passes and kicks on the full run. So during your lunch hour before drill we advise you to wander over for a gander.

Then out at High Park the Senior Interfaculty Harrier will take place over rolling swards of the reserve. Beside the interfaculty nature of the race will be the challenge of a delegation from Buffalo. Last fall the visitors nabbed the top spots in this same race. Consequently some of the Varsity men are eargerly awaiting tomorrow's jog for the double reason of points for their college and of defeating their guests. Hec Phillips has rounded out an unusually strong squad this fall which will give the American friends something to think about as they wend their way back to their airplane plants.

So we close this preview of coming extra-collegiate games and while congratulating the authorities in bringing visitors to the University, we express the hope that in lieu of an intercollegiate program as many games with outside teams be played as is feasible for the hard-houred University athletes.

Newman Convention Votes To Sever American Ties And Foster Home Relations

McGill Is Host to Delegates from All Provinces; Science and Medicine Are in Majority

AFFILIATION IS CANADIAN

"The Canadian Newman Club Province has today been replaced by the Canadian Newman Club Federation," stated Paul Dandeneau, President of the Toronto Newman Club, in an interview yetserday when he returned from the Newman Convention which was held at McGill University this weekend.

The new Federation will not be affiliated with the international organization as the former Province was. "We intend by thus breaking our American ties, to make the Canadian organization a more integral group," he continued in discussing one of the main achievements of the Convention.

The two Toronto delegates were Paul Dandeneau, 4th year Electrical Engineering, and Arthur Malenoy, 3rd year Osgoode; these were accompanied to the Convention by 12 other members of the Toronto Newman Club. Delegates from other Universities included two each from Queen's and Western, and one each from the University of New Brunswick and the Ontario Agricultural College. Written reports were sent from western and eastern clubs which were too far away to send delegates.

"The Toronto delegates were very pleased with the spirit shown by the MiGill Newman Club," Dandeneau continued. "They treated us royally; we were especially impressed by the feeling of friendship and co-operation displayed."

The Convention began Friday evening with a reception at which the McGill Club were hosts. Saturday morning the Presidents of the various Canadian Newman Clubs represented gave outlines of the Newman activities on their own campus. In the afternoon McGill gave a demonstration of the principles governing discussion groups. This was followed by an outline by Art Maloney of the principles governing the direction of social groups. After dinner in the Queen's Hotel, Toronto gave a practical demonstration in the form of a dance, following Malloney's outline.

On Sunday, following Mass, a Communion breafast was held. Mr. Grattan O'Leary, editor of the Ottawa Journal, addressed the Convention on "Youth Leadership." "The text of his talk was

Follies Tickets Now on Sale

Special tickets for this year's version of the U.C. Follies admitting holders to all entertainment except the show in the theatre go on sale in the U.C. Lit. office today.

These special tickets for the Follies which are being presented in Hart House Friday, Nov. 13, will admit purchasers to dancing to the music of three orchestras, to the entire upstairs program, including the water show in the swimming pool, and entertainment in the debates room, and to supper in the Great Hall.

A small number of tickets is being reserved for harvesters who did not return in time to sign for them themselves. This year, as well as last, features Bob Shuttleworth's orchestra playing for dancing in the big gym. This year however the orchestra will be performing under the baton of Harold Shuttleworth taking the place of his brother who has gone on active service.

In the music room Jack Evan's orchestra is to give forth. Instead swing addicts are to get their jive "in the flesh" from the band of Bill Saila, each member of which is a reputed swing soloist in his own right. This attraction is to be found in the East Common Room.

Magic by Rex Slocumbe, magician, and monologues by Jimmy Good, are features of the Debates Room entertainment. The program here will also include movies, among them pictures in colour taken at C.O.T.C. camp this summer.

(Signed) A. B. Fennell,

The attention of returning harvesters is called to Section 1 of the 1st Bn. U. of T. C.O.T.C. Part I Orders (No. 40-42) as printed on page 4 of today's Varsity, and to the similar section (section 4) of the 2nd Bn. U. of T. C.O.T.C. Part I Orders (No. 50-42) also printed today.

Campus to Hold Service On Remembrance Day

Wednesday, Nov. 11, the traditional Remembrance Day service will be held on the front campus of the University. This service is under the direction of the University of Toronto Alumni Federation and the military units participating do so at the request of this organization.

This year five units, representing active and reserve organizations of two services will take part. The service participants are as follows: No. 1 Canadian Army Course, both battalions of the U. of T. C.O.T.C., No. 23 Detachment, R.C.A.F., and No. 3 Squadron University of Toronto, University Air Training Corps.

The C.O.T.C. will be honoured in that its Commanding Officer, Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, V.D., will command the parade and its Regimental Sergeant-Major, A. Andrews (W.O. 1) will be parade sergeant-major. This was also the case last year.

Both C.O.T.C. Bands will take part in the service, the Brass Band playing all units past the saluting base following the service and the Pipe Band leading the entire parade.

The saluting base will be on the steps of University College past which the parade will march in column of route. The salute will be taken by the Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario.

Hutton House Girls Entertain Airmen

The girls in Hutton Huse, University College, entertained forty airmen from the wireless course on Saturday night.

Music was supplied by a wurlitzer and several varieties of tag dances, Paul Joneses, and elimination numbers were run off under the direction of M.C. Esther Macdonald. One highlight of the evening was the lighting of a cake in honor of birthday-girl Mary Ferguson. This was followed by refreshments and a sing-song. Dancing broke up at twelve o'clock with both girls and airmen agreeing that we ought to do this more often.

Skating Instructor Needed by Club

Canada's manpower shortage threatents to curtail the activities of the University Skating Club this year, as instructors are hard to find. In former years, it has been customary for a professional skater to instruct both senior and junior classes, but this year, Jack Eastwood is on war-work, and can spare time only for the senior group. Mrs. R. N. McCormack will supervise the juniors, but there will be at least 130 of them, and she feels that an assistant will be needed.

"There must be several students at the University who can skate well," she said. "Surely one of them would like to earn some money on the side, in a type of work he enjoys."

The Skating Club will open at Varsity Arena in the middle of the month, and lessons for the junior section will be given five hours a week, on Tuesday afternoons, and Saturday mornings.

MEMBERS OF HART HOUSE

Members of Hart House are requested to watch the special Hart House Bulletin Board on page 2 on Mondays and Thursdays for notices regarding Hart House activities.

OTTAWA OK'S TRANSFERS FROM C.O.T.C. TO U.A.T.C.

Ottawa, Nov. 8—Present members of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps who desire to join the University Air Training Corps will be permitted to do so, Defense Minister Ralston announced Friday.

The announcement specified that such students would be permitted to take their discharge from the C.O.T.C. and to enlist in the U.A.T.C., subject to the concurrence of the military committee of the university concerned.

Such discharges from the C.O.T.C. will be permitted up to and including Dec. 31, 1942, but after that date such discharges will not be permitted, Col. Ralston stated.

Education Conference To Hear Principal Wallace On 'A Way In The Future'

Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen's, to Deliver Opening Address; Conference Is Hemispheric

BROADCASTS ARRANGED

The opening of Education Week in Toronto will be marked by a speech by Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen's University, in Convocation Hall at 8:15 tonight. His subject will be "A Way in the Future."

Dr. Wallace is known for his work in educational circles by his book, "A Liberal Education and the Modern World," published in 1931. He is a member of the Dominion Government's committee on Post-War Reconstruction and in 1940 he served as Chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Overseas Children.

Education Week is hemispherical in its scope, being observed by teachers in both North and South America. In Toronto a program has been arranged covering six days of this coming week, with arrangements sponsored jointly by the Toronto Teachers' Council and the Board of Education.

Most Toronto schools will be open on Thursday evening, Nov. 12 for visits by the public. A series of radio programs for each day in the week have also been arranged. Today's broadcast will be on the topic "Schools of Yesterday and Tomorrow" over station CKCL from 10-10:30 in the evening.

Tomorrow's program over station CBY from 8:05-8:30 p.m. will be on the topic "Earning a Living."

VARSITY NEWS LECTURE

Varsity staff members are reminded that the fourth in the present series of News Lectures will take place in Room 11, University College, at 4:30 p.m. The subject will be "Reports" and points of news style will be taken up in some detail.

Staff members are asked to note the change in time of the lecture. Those unable to attend are asked to sign their names and reasons for absence on the news book.

Property Man Has a Puzzler

The Players' Guild is having a time getting its long list of stage properties for its production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" at Hart House, Nov. 26, 27 and 28.

Kauffman and Hart are noted for the madness of their situations, but in this comedy they have outdone themselves. Convicts, choir-boys, radio technicians, glamor girls, movie stars and expressman conveying everything from penguins to cockroach-colonies are on stage at one time.

Consequently, the stage properties will include such diverse items as handcuffs, a Christmas tress, surplices, microphones and radio equipment, and—an Egyptian mummy-case! A wheelchair and a luxuriant growth of beard are required for the Man Himself, Sheridan Whiteside, portrayed by Murray Davis.

The supporting cast includes: Meg McLaughlin as the secretary Maggie; Frances Louks as Lorraine, the oomph girl from Hollywood; Vincent Blockley as Bert Jefferson, the juvenile lead.

School and Medsmen Frolic at Royal York

Shouts of "Epistaxis, Prophylaxis . . ." mingled with the possibly better known "We are, we are, we are the Engineers. . ." all across and back along the spacious Convention Floor of the Royal York hotel, last Friday night, as the Concert Hall, at one end, was taken over for the annual Meds-at-Home, and the Convention Ballroom at the other end was commandeered for the School Soph-Frosh.

While the Schoolmen and their ladies danced to the music of Jack Evans and his orchestra, the Medsmen swung their partners to the strains of Morgan Thomas' music.

Between the twin ballrooms, a caricature hung from the balcony, depicting the future doctor (a skeleton complete with white-tie and top hat) and a green-tied engineer, burying the hatchet over plans to demolish the schoolman's famous forty beers.

About midnight the watchers were removed from the doors at both ends of the floor, and schoolmen mixed with medsmen, and medsmen mixed with schoolmen, as each tried to outshout the other with their cheers.

Intermission of the meds at-home was featured by a skit, directed by Tom Dixon, Meds VI, which was a parody on the woes of the medical students, and a take-off on several of the professors. Highlight of this skit was the point at which one of the professors was publicly thanked for loaning his raccoon coat to the boys, for use in the skit in which he was lampooned.

U.A.T.C. Meeting Held for Harvesters

1. For the benefit of "Harvesters" interested in Air Force Training, an organization meeting will be held on Monday, Nov. 9 at 1945 hours (7:45 p.m.) in Room 25 Engineering Building. There they will be given details relating to training in the University Air Training Corps and those requiring classification tests will then proceed to Room 38, of the same building, for this purpose and for the purpose of arranging an R.C.A.F. medical examination in any instances where this may not have been already arranged.

2. The syllabus of training in the U.A.T.C. calls for instruction during the academic year in subjects which include Mathematics, Navigation, Signals, Drill, Aircraft Recognition, Airmanship, Theory of Flight, Theory of Engines. Station Familiarization and Practical Flight, etc. This training involves no examinations, but is followed by a two-week Summer Camp at an R.C.A.F. Station of which four hours are scheduled for examinations. Syllabus and other details are available in the U.A.T.C. Orderly Room, located immediately East of the Debates Room in Hart House.

4. Whereas the meeting referred to above is primarily for the benefit of "Harvesters," it should be attended by any other students who have recorded their interest in Air Force Training but have not yet been on parade with the University of Toronto Squadron of the U.A.T.C.

In addition it may with profit be attended by men who have already been given appointments for R.C.A.F. medical examinations, as it will enable them to have a classification test at the University and thus save time when they are having their medical examinations at 200 Bay Street.

Distinguished Visitor

A distinguished visitor to our campus tonight is Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen's University. He will speak in Convocation Hall on the subject, A Way in the Future. His speech will mark the Toronto opening of Education week, to be observed throughout this hemisphere for the next six days.

Dr. Wallace is one of the Dominion's premier educationalists, and whatever he has to say will be of interest to staff and also to students. Thus we advise attendance at his lecture. And there is a further reason. It would be discourteous in the extreme for this University not to attend well an address to be delivered by the leader of another of our great Canadian universities. We are now in need of solidarity among the cultural centres of the country, and we can demonstrate both good judgment and good taste in being present in large numbers to hear Dr. Wallace.

War Waifs

Following article by John A. Maguire of the School of Social Work was submitted recently for publication in The Varsity.

Recently, in concurrent issues, The Saturday Evening Past published two reports on care of children torn away from normal parental relationships as a result of this war. One dealt with the United States, the other with Great Britain. Comparison at once seems essential to this pertinent problem. By this means we may be able to give a more intellingent answer here in Canada.

The problem of child-care in the United States has, to this point, been met in a namby-pamby fashion. Now that it has reached enormous proportions, our southerly neighbours are alarmed. England is too, but to a limited degree. The answer suggested is twofold—a more mature social security system in Great Britain and a wider acquaintance with total war.

Britain's problem was immediate. A not-too-late cry of indignation came from citizens seeing the devastating outcome of the Hun blitzes. The public was shocked. And the government did something about it. The American problem largely arose out of a mass migration of workers and the rapid shifting of centres of industrial population. Men were attracted by rumours of higher wages elsewhere. Only to find they were tricked; the pay was not adequate and their wives were forced to work. The American government failed to offset these malicious tales of fancy. Their people sought solutions along makeshift individual lines; the British along government-supervised social lines.

This is not meant to be arm-chair criticism of child-welfare planning on the part of the United States. The phases of her attempts at constructive answers are various. Canada has more to learn from the south than from across the seas, for she faces substantially the same kind of problem.

Pre-school age children present the greatest worry. In all the States there are too many "unlicensed, uncontrolled commercial day nurseries," manned by untrained social workers. English mothers engaged in munitions-making are able to leave their children from 7 in the morning to 7 at night at day nursery schools or residential nursery schools. "Poor children (in the motherland) are today the richest and luckiest. Rich children have always had nurseries." Charity is frowned on: mothers pay a shilling a day. And thrify matrons have found it takes "only threepence a day to feed staff and charges." Even there the waiting list is long. Furthermore both countries must come to grips with a military necessity: the Army has had to take over public playgrounds for purposes of training. Small tots are then denied recreation places and are seen roaming the streets of London and Detroit in far too large numbers.

American sore points in housing accommodations have so far been restricted to construction areas where housing is pretty much left to individual efforts. Britain has met it better, though there is still much to be asked. But unequivocally she did, at once, see that permanent housing must be left till after the war. Toronto communities should profit by quickly realizing the same thing. Debate is meaningless in this concern.

English children are given priorities on milk and fruit. They are thankful to the Americans who have exported canned and powdered milk so that fresh milk may be released to the children. Orange juice, also, is reserved for them. Children of all income brackets equally share in essential food distribution and immunization from disease. The wives and children of American construction-workers show physical as well as mental strain and often have no protection from disease.

American and British sociologists are unanimous in the opinion that the child's own home is the best in which he or she should be raised. Adoption should be left till after the war. Though not peremptory, relatives have the prior rights to adoption. The child's happiness and welfare are of first importance. To insure this, the British government has taken the safe step of paying foster parents.

In the United States there are 13 million women already working and estimates indicate that by the end of next year there will be 5 or 6 million more. Accordingly, this problem of child-care is only beginning. It must be handled now, and handled effectively. For in the short run, our children are the fighters of tomorrow. In the long run, they are the citizens and parents.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

I was much interested in the indignant reply you made on Nov. 4, to a letter from one of my confreres, who suggested that certain stories appearing in our college newspaper were hardly in good taste.

In spite of the ease with which most of the statements in "Rags'" letter were, apparently, refuted, the fact still remains that The Varsity derived a great deal of news material from an event which actually never took place!!! Admittedly, a notification was received at Queen's University to the effect that no C.O.T.C. credits would be given to those students assisting with the western harvest. However, no such notification was received by other universities, which should suggest immediately that the denial was a mistake and certainly not a formal order. In view of this I think that the proposed accusations against our government could have been withheld until the situation became clear.

I make no defence for the mistaken order issued to Queen's University, nor am I willing to excuse such mistakes. In this case the error was straightened out before any difficulty arose to those concerned, but I can not attribute any part of this rectification to the streamer headlines in The Varsity!! We must remember also that such outbursts as we have just seen are not likely to gain us much favour in Ottawa at a time when the fate of many University courses hangs in the balance.

Let The Varsity fill its columns with reports of the work of our students and graduates in the present war, and I am sure that we will all receive just and fair treatment. In spite of the validity (or not) of our remaining at University, we are privileged in being able and allowed to continue our education. Let us not abuse these privileges!!

Sincerely yours,
One of the minsinformed masses.
Toronto, Nov. 5, 1942.

We are glad to receive comment — even adverse comment — from our readers, and we hope that publication of replies to their letters does not give anyone the impression that we believe the we are infallibly correct in judgment and resent the suggestion that we might possibly be wrong.

But in the matter of our handling of the story of

YOU DON'T SAY

Somewhere in Canada, Nov. 8, 1942—CUP) — (Delayed) — A Varsity reporter, disguised as an R.C.A.F. wireless student, has intercepted a message broadcast from United Nations' Headquarters in Asia. The message was addressed to the University of Toronto Medical Society, and was in standard army code.

As received, the message read:

"我們大衆抗敵致勝利呢"

or, in English: "HIT THE ROAD, BUMS!"

(Signed)
Tu Yung,
Minister of Manpower."

The Varsity secret service pored over this mystic cypher for many hours, and at press time they appeared close to a solution.

"It looks bad, boys," said a spokesman of the committee working on the message.

(What does this mystic message mean? What will happen to the Medical Students? What will the poor nurses do? . . . See this newspaper tomorrow.)

ART of MUSIC Drama

Pianist Extraordinary

Hart House Concert

A brilliant pianist is Margaret Parsons, one of Toronto's best. Addicts of the Hart House Concerts remembered her previous perfect performances and turned out en masse. They were not disappointed.

The key of Margaret Parsons' art lies (outside of an absolutely astounding technique) in her ability to submerge her own personality in that of the music she is playing. The consequent is a recital in which no two pieces sound the same, in which everything is played perfectly in harmony with the mood of the composer. It is seldom that one hears on the same program Bach and Frank Bridge, both played perfectly.

The opening group contained two brilliant arrangements of Bach, the second, I call on Thee, Lord, familiar to most of the audience. Arrangements

Tid-bits from the College Papers

He spoke of one McGill man who stood in front of the horses and politely asked, and I quote, "Come on, please." If only the harvesters would be that courteous to the coeds it wouldn't be so bad.
McGill Daily

The root difficulty behind many of Canada's problems over the years and at the present time is provincialism. Too few people have seen the rest of the country and the others are all to prone to think in the narrow groove of opinion in their own province or locality.

VARSITY HARRIERS DEFEAT BUFFALO

Harriers Edge Buffalo State By One Point

Blue and White Clinch Six of First Ten Positions; Buffalo's Don Munson Finishes First

HEC PHILLIPS ELATED

Revenge was the keynote last Saturday morning as Varsity took a very close 29-28 victory over the harrier team from Buffalo State. First to cross the finish was Don Munson of the visitors, who led the field for the better part of the four and a half mile course. Finishing time was 23 minutes, 15 seconds. Toronto men packed well, taking third, fourth, sixth, seventh, and eighth, in the persons of Roy Foulis, Johnny Feldhans, Gord Lorimer, Bob Delaney and Phile Shackleton. Tom Barnett, finishing ninth, actually won the decision over Buffalo by cutting out the loscrs' potential tieing point if a Buffalo man had finished in that slot.

The visitors placed men in first, second, fifth, tenth, and eleventh positions.
